Bluewater complex, built 22 years ago, will get extensive renovation

Federally-subsidized apartments get $125,000 HUD grant

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

Janis Robinson walks through the grounds of Bluewater Garden Apartments, almost giddy as she discusses the future of the complex.

Of course, with a $125,000 grant in hand for repairs and improvements to the facility, Mrs. Robinson might have reason to be excited.

After all, what the manager of the 132-unit federally-subsidized apartments has in mind for the money from the Department of Housing and Urban Development represents the most extensive renovation and remodeling project for Bluewater Garden since it was built in 1974.

The grant -- which was announced this past week -- represents a fundamental shift in the philosophy of HUD, she said.

"HUD," she said, "has finally come to realize providing subsidy housing is not the answer to quality of life."

The original goal of HUD subsidized housing, she went on, was to "provide a safe, affordable place for someone to live through a hard time," not a permanent dwelling place for people dependent on the government.

"We're going to take our money and we're no longer going to provide just housing. We feel there is a personal worth here," she said.

Her plans for the complex, located in the 600 block of Irving, are designed to begin lifting people out of their dependence on subsidies to a place where they can move out of Bluewater Garden and into private housing.

Bluewater Garden is owned and managed by Murray Management Inc.

of Holt, Mich., which employs Mrs. Robinson to manage the complex.

Under its affiliation with HUD, low-income residents pay 30 percent of their income, with HUD picking up the rest of the tab.

Officially, the grant for which Mrs. Robinson applied is part of the HUD Drug Elimination Grant Program.

It was, she said, the only grant awarded through HUD's Fort Worth district office -- meaning Hereford was awarded its money while cities such as Dallas, Fort Worth, Lubbock, Amarillo, Wichita Falls and El Paso got nothing.

In her grant application, Mrs. Robinson noted that her mission is "to create a drug free environment at Bluewater Garden Apartments. A drug free environment will reduce crime-related activities, improve family relationships and provide a safer community in which to live. All involved parties must work together to reach this goal. The approach we use must involve youth and adults in positive activities and alternatives."

"The first thing we are going to do is put up the flag pole and fly the American flag," she said.

Then, she said, she plans to develop a Bluewater Network Center in a four-room apartment within the complex.

This center is projected to include a computer room for children to use on after-school programs, a police substation with exterior entrance, a library and a community room with telephone for the use of residents.

More than five dozen residents of Bluewater Garden have already committed their time to work in the center, as have representatives of the judicial system, local civic clubs, churches and social services agencies, Mrs. Robinson said.

When the more than 300 children living in Bluewater Garden get home from school, Mrs. Robinson said, there will be someone there to meet them and work with them, as needed, in the facility.

The learning center will offer tutoring for students, a library, field trips to Amarillo and Canyon and more.

Congress set to adjourn after agreeing on budget

WASHINGTON (AP) - House and Senate budget negotiators, in marathon talks with White House officials, reached agreement Saturday morning on a wide-ranging spending bill for the new budget year and on toughening immigration laws, paving the way for adjournment of the 104th Congress.

The accord will let the House vote later today on the spending and immigration legislation - combined into a single bill - and go home for the year to campaign for re-election, said Michele Davis, spokeswoman for House Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas, and other House aides. A Senate vote seemed likely before Monday.

Negotiators shook hands on the accord shortly before 7 a.m. With fiscal 1997 beginning Tuesday, the agreement will allow dozens of federal agencies to operate without a replay of last year's federal shutdowns.

"The president is obviously pleased both with the nature of the agreement in restoring these funds that he thinks are crucial for the future of the country but also with the fact that we were able to work this out in a cooperative bipartisan fashion," said White House spokesman Lawrence Haas. "He thinks it is important for the country and it says something important about what we can achieve when we work together."

end the duplication in federal programs," they said.

The agreement gave President Clinton virtually all the extra $6.5 billion he had demanded for education, high technology, anti-terrorism, drug fighting and other priorities. The spending is to be funded mostly by auctioning spots on the broadcast spectrum and using a fund that insures financial institutions, plus from the Pentagon's budget.

The final dispute negotiators resolved involved U.S. aid to organizations providing family planning services overseas. Under a compromise, the president will be able to trigger a vote in Congress next year on whether to speed distribution of those funds, aides said.

In other loose ends, a Democratic-sought provision will not be included that would have required doctors who belong to health-maintenance organizations to disclose all treatment options to patients, even if it is not offered by the HMO.

And Boston Harbor will receive $75 million for pollution control, $35 million more than had been provided in earlier legislation. Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., and his challenger, GOP

Gov. William Weld, were both seeking the extra money in a competition over who could take credit for it.

A Democratic provision outlawing gun possession by people convicted of domestic crimes will be included but has been modified, aides said. Under today's accord, the prohibition on possession of firearms would apply to persons convicted of domestic crime misdemeanors instead of those convicted of "minor misdemeanors."

Davis said that as part of the accord negotiators agreed to limit the degree to which legal immigrants would be susceptible to losing certain benefits after a year on welfare. The White House had demanded that the limitations on legal immigrant benefits be dropped entirely.

A projected dispute between the White House and Republican congressional leaders over the immigration issue had complicated the talks, clearing the way for adjournment. The legislation tacked onto the giant spending bill was aimed at stemming the tide of 300,000 illegal immigrants entering

Clinton starts campaign tour in Lone Star state

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) - Pressing her way through thousands of East Texans, Billie Roberts waved a Clinton-Gore sign at the president as he shook hands and signed autographs Friday to kick off his Lone Star state campaign tour.

"I had this in my front yard in 1992 and I'd love to put it back there with his signature on it," the 68-year-old Longview woman said.

About 18,000 people crowded into a downtown square to hear a message that hit the right notes for Ms. Roberts: social programs and care for the elderly.

"I liked all of it," she said, "including the Medicare, Medicaid and Social Security. I don't believe I could make it at my age if they were cut out. They are the only benefits I have to fall back on."

Mixed among the crowds who heard Clinton speak in Longview and Fort Worth were Republicans who said they were curious about the president's message.

"He's going to get up there and say whatever appeals to Texans," said Bettye Reynolds, 73, who called herself a supporter of GOP hopeful Bob Dole. "In general that's what I think he does everywhere."

"I'm a Republican," said Ash Huzenab, a 20-year-old Tyler resident who endured a chilly afternoon at a downtown Fort Worth square to attend Clinton's address there.

"I just wanted to hear what Clinton had to say. I want Dole to win, but it looks like Clinton might actually have this wrapped up, so I'm preparing myself for that."

Recent polls have shown Clinton and Dole in a dead heat in Texas despite the state's increasingly conservative bent.

In the heart of the famed East Texas Oilfield, the president confidently outlined his next four-year economic plan, which relies on high employment, low inflation and deficit control.

Clinton told the crowd of cheering supporters, some waving blue-and-white-banners and signs reading "Four More Years," that Texas has the lowest unemployment rate in more than a decade.

"You have a clear choice in 39 days," Clinton said, flanked by former state treasurer and Longview mayor Martha Whitehead and other state Democratic leaders. "Will we build a bridge to the past or to the future?"

The president repeated his economic message during an afternoon stop in downtown Houston.

"We're in better shape than we were four years ago, and we are on the right track to the 21st Century," Clinton told more than 3,000 people gathered in a light rain at Sam Houston Park.

Back in East Texas, Bob Florence of Kilgore noted the president's goal of making community college degrees as prevalent as high school diplomas by the year 2000.

"I appreciated what he had to say about the value of a college education. That is very important," he said.

Newborn quint gets scholarships

LEVELLAND, Texas (AP) - When the time for higher education arrives, the newborn Taylor quintuplets will have at least one junior college beckoning.

South Plains College said Friday it will provide scholarships to the five children born Sept. 21 to Brent and Deshonna Taylor of Snyder.

"We're very excited about the first quintuplets born on the South Plains," said Pat McCutchin, development director at the 6,000-student Levelland junior college.

Kenedy, Jacob, Jonah, Zachary and Aleks Taylor were delivered a week ago at a hospital in Lubbock, about 30 miles east of Levelland and 80 miles northwest of Snyder.

Planning for the future

Janis Robinson, manager of Bluewater Garden Apartments, shows off an empty unit similar to one that will be converted into the Bluewater Network Center, which will provide a learning center for children, lounge area with telephone for adults and police substation. The center will be constructed and staffed through a grant received from the federal Department of Housing and Urban Affairs.

Say what? Even the eloquent president can trip over tongue

HOUSTON (AP) - Say what? After a long day on the campaign trail, even the eloquent President Clinton can trip over his tongue. Though it obviously was not his intention, the president raised the prospect Friday of having the U.S. Olympic team going naked.

Let's rewind.

He was repeating his old riff about the diversity of America. For the umpteenth time, he said 197 countries competed in the Atlanta games this summer - and people with roots in 150 of those nations live in Los Angeles County alone.

Normally, this is where Clinton points out that the U.S. Olympians, a team of many colors and ethnicities, could come from any of the nations that competed in Atlanta.

But he put it a little differently Friday.

"When I looked at the American Olympic team, it occurred to me that if they took their uniforms off, we wouldn't know where they come from," Clinton said.

The slip of tongue drew guffaws from reporters, though the partisan crowd didn't seem to notice.

Prison beds in Texas on rise as inmates decline

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer
 AUSTIN (AP) - A decrease in crime coupled with one of the largest prison construction projects in history will keep Texas from exceeding prison capacity until late 1999, according to a state report released Friday.

But beginning in August 1999, the prison capacity of 145,000 is expected to be exceeded by 1,350 prisoners and by 4,950 prisoners as of August 2002, according to the report by the Texas Criminal Justice Policy Council.

"Texas is the only state in the country with adequate correctional capacity to meet its incarceration needs, and do so with no prison or jail overcrowding," Criminal Justice Policy Council Executive Director Tony Fabelo wrote in the report.

Texas Department of Criminal Justice spokesman Glen Castlebury said the Legislature already has authorized the construction of up to 8,000 additional beds to meet anticipated demands.

But Castlebury said state leaders are looking at options that may not require more prison construction, such as leasing space from county lockups.

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock has said serious consideration should be given to leasing space from counties as opposed to building additional prisons.

Fabelo said with three years lead time to tackle any new capacity demands, there is no rush.

"We should not have a crisis in the next two to three years, so we are in the unique position of having enough capacity and enough time to plan for what to do next," Fabelo said.

That's a far cry from the state's prison situation as recently as five years ago, when Texas prisons were controlled by the courts and were paroling violent offenders early because there was no room.

Texas has completed a massive $1.5 billion prison expansion that increased capacity from 50,000 to 145,000. Currently, the state's prison population is 131,559.

In March of 1995, Fabelo had projected to the Legislature that the state would need an additional 8,000 beds as early as August 1997, prompting lawmakers to approve the funding for such an expansion.

But factors such as a decreasing crime rate caused Fabelo to project in March of this year that only 3,067 additional beds would be needed by August 1997. Now, no new beds are projected as being needed until August 1999.

"Criminal justice policies, along with a strong economy are having a more positive impact in reducing crime and reducing the growth in correctional populations than previously projected," Fabelo wrote.

"Reported crime in Texas has continued to decline in 1995 and in early 1996, impacting a stabilization in the number of new convictions, a decline in parole revocations and a decline in the number of offenders sentenced to prison," he wrote.

Migration season begins in Texas

BUFFALO LAKE NATIONAL WILDLIFE REFUGE -- The fall migration is under way and an increasing number of interesting birds are passing through the area, according to Lynn A. Nymeyer, refuge manager.

Several species of warbler are present, as well as kingbirds, flycatchers, hawks and sparrows.

With water from July and August rains filling Stewart Marsh, a number of water birds have been spotted as well, including ducks, herons, ibis, sandpipers and plovers.

Nymeyer also announced he is available to provide wildlife information and education throughout the area.

Teachers, clubs and organizations are invited to contact him at the refuge, (806) 499-3382, about a talk and slide show on the refuge or the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

On Oct. 1, Nymeyer announced, the refuge will shift to its winter hours, with public entry hours from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., unless visitors are camping in designated areas.

All areas including the picnicking area and the tour road are closed to public activities after 6 p.m.

O.J. victim's father disobeys court, holds television news conference

SANTA MONICA, Calif. - Despite a gag order, Fred Goldman called the Larry King show, held a news conference outside court Friday, and rejected the view of some jury prospects that he's obsessed with punishing O.J. Simpson.

The actions brought a quick rebuke from Judge Hiroshi Fujisaki, who criticized Goldman and threatened to impose unspecified "draconian" sanctions if his order is violated again.

"I don't think I'm obsessive," Goldman told reporters earlier. "I think I'm doing what I need to do."

Goldman said he felt compelled to phone CNN's "Larry King Live" show Thursday night to dispute the suggestion in the new book "Killing Time" that his son Ronald Goldman, rather than Nicole Brown Simpson, may have been the target of the June 12, 1994, slayings.

"I'm not willing to remain quiet when I hear someone suggest that my son may have been responsible and caused his own death," said Goldman, who conceded his comments may have violated the gag order. "Killing Time," an investigative project by historian-playwright Donald Freed and computer scientist Raymond P. Briggs, concludes that the murder case is unsolved and should be probed further by police.

Simpson, who was acquitted of the killings last October, also has suggested others committed the crimes.

Goldman spoke on the courthouse lawn during a break in jury selection for Simpson's wrongful death civil trial. And as soon as court resumed, Simpson's lawyers complained that a prospective juror may have seen it.

"If they are going to violate the order, I don't think monetary sanctions will be sufficient," Fujisaki said. "It is my intention to seek an appropriate remedy to the situation which I think is going to be somewhat draconian and that is an understatement."

Attorneys in the case had been abiding by the letter of the judge's gag order, walking briskly past reporters without commenting on the case. Simpson, who attended two early court sessions, also abided by the ruling.

But Goldman said during his news conference that he felt compelled to speak out to verify that money solicitation letters going out nationwide were indeed from his family.

"My law firm has gotten hundreds of phone calls suggesting there is some fraud involved in the Ron Goldman Justice Fund," he said. "Let me clear the air by saying there was a direct mailing ... organized through my family's efforts."

Goldman's statements overshadowed a day when the pool of jury prospects continued to grow slowly, with minority representation much larger than had been predicted in predominantly white Santa Monica.

Of the first eight prospects summoned for questioning Friday, seven were black and one was white. Simpson was acquitted by a predominantly black criminal trial jury.

Once again, prospects revealed fairly strong opinions about the case, with one theme emerging repeatedly: doubts about the fairness of the second trial.

Debate group argues that Perot cannot sue his way onto stage

WASHINGTON (AP) - Ross Perot may not like it, but objective facts indicate he has no real chance of winning the White House, the Commission on Presidential Debates told a court in arguing that Perot cannot sue his way onto the stage.

"There is no First Amendment right to participate in a debate," the commission's lawyers said in papers filed Friday in U.S. District Court.

responsibility. In addition, Mrs. Robinson said, "the Residents' Association has agreed to phone the police department" to report criminal activity in the complex.

"We're going to start policing ourselves," she said. Bluewater Garden has policies in place to ensure residents stay in line with the law and with the complex rules.

Mrs. Robinson said the city's teen curfew has been extended to cover all residents of Bluewater Garden. In addition, each resident on entering the complex must agree to abide by the rules. Residents found in violation of rules are given three chances, she said. After that, violation means eviction from the property.

Also, she said, any resident who is arrested on any criminal charge is evicted and given a criminal trespass warning not to return to the property.

The only exception, she said, would be if a resident arrested for a criminal offense agrees to participate in a rehabilitation program and goes through that program.

Aside from his duties enforcing the laws, Mrs. Robinson said, the presence of a police officer around the facility will serve a positive purpose.

"We want these little guys to learn our policeman is a family man," she said, adding that she wants the residents to build trust with the police, rather than just seeing officers as people who drag loved ones off to jail.

To further the security of the residents, Bluewater Garden is planning to use grant money to install new doors on all the apartments and to install bright lighting throughout the exterior of the complex.

The new doors, Mrs. Robinson said, will have keyless dead bolt locks on the inside, plus peepholes to allow residents to determine who is at the door.

The impending work is a continuation of improvements Mrs. Robinson has already begun at the complex.

She said she recently spent $96,000 to have new stairs built by Poarch Brothers and installed in every building.

Another $248,000 went to replacing all the roofs.

The apartment owners, she went on, have already committed to working next spring on the physical appearance of the complex.

"We're going to replace all the rotting lumber and repaint the whole complex," she said.

After that, the focus will turn toward the adults.

"We have a second phase to this. After one year we are going to implement what they call 'neighborhood networking'," she said.

Neighborhood Networking will include programs for adults including job skills training, instruction on writing resumes and seeking employment, as well as preparation for taking the GED exam.

That, she said, will in turn have an impact on recent welfare reform legislation, which requires individuals receiving such assistance to find work or get training toward employment.

All-in-all, Mrs. Robinson said, the changes are designed to change the image of Bluewater Garden.

"We are going to make this the place to live in Hereford," she said confidently. "We're going to make Hereford proud of us again."

them altogether. The privately funded, bipartisan commission banned the Dallas billionaire from the debates on grounds he did not have a "realistic chance" of being elected.

"The commission has determined that its voter education goal is best achieved by limited debate participation to the next president and his or her principal rivals," it said. "The realistic chance (to win) need not be overwhelming, but it must be more than theoretical."

Perot's lawsuit contends that the commission violated Federal Election Commission rules that require it to use "objective criteria" in determining who has a chance to win.

Perot, making his second bid for the White House, argued that he meets the commission's truly objective standards - such as access to federal campaign funds and a spot on all 50 state ballots. The conclusion that he has no real chance to win is subjective, he said.

But the commission responded that it is allowed to use "some subjective judgment," which in this case was based on polls, national interest in Perot's campaign and other reasonable information.

The criteria "may not be to plaintiff's liking," but they are "entirely lawful, reasonable and fair," the commission said.

The first debate is scheduled for Oct. 6, in Hartford, Conn.; the second on Oct. 16, in San Diego. Vice presidential candidates Al Gore and Jack Kemp will face off Oct. 9, in St. Petersburg, Fla.

All three 90-minute debates are to begin at 8 p.m. CDT and will be televised nationally.

Shelters get $3.2 million in grants

AUSTIN - Victims of domestic violence, homeless persons with AIDS and homeless youth are a few of the many groups that will benefit from $3.2 million in grant awards announced on Tuesday by the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs.

The funds have been awarded to 54 organizations statewide through the federal Emergency Shelter Grants Program.

"These funds will help provide emergency shelters and services to benefit homeless persons and families throughout Texas," said Larry Paul Manley, executive director of TDHCA.

Victims of domestic violence in Deaf Smith County are placed in Amarillo shelters.

Panhandle Community Services in Amarillo received $40,000 and the City of Amarillo was awarded $52,000 from the grant.

The grants may be used for renovation, major rehabilitation or conversion of buildings for use as emergency shelters for the homeless. Funds may also be used for operating costs, such as maintenance, insurance, utilities and furnishings.

Within certain limits, funds may be used to provide essential services for the homeless and homeless prevention efforts.

The funds were awarded through a competitive application process among the 107 proposals the department received.

Proposals for funding were reviewed and scored by TDHCA staff according to the proposal's merit in identifying and addressing the needs of the homeless population, as well as the organization's capacity to implement the project.

Victims of domestic violence are considered homeless when it would be unsafe to return them to the home where the abuse occurred.

CONGRESS

the country each year. The lengthy talks became necessary because Congress had been unable to complete action on all 13 regular appropriations bills needed to pay for the operations of the government's departments and agencies in the new budget year starting Oct. 1.

Although there had been some talk about the possibility of a government shutdown, neither side seemed inclined to let that happen with the election only a little more than a month away.

The bill under negotiation provides roughly $245 billion for the military and $200 billion for foreign aid, federal courts and the departments of Treasury, Labor, Health and Human Services, Interior, Commerce, Justice and State.

Negotiators also agreed to include a study of the feasibility of using taggants, a kind of marker, to trace the origin of explosives used in bombs. Republicans wanted to exempt black and smokeless powder, which are popular with muzzleloading enthusiasts but also is the most common choice for pipe bombs.

Meanwhile, negotiators killed an ambitious federal parks bill that the administration had complained was riddled with dozens of anti-park provisions. The administration refused to accept it and Republicans declined to attach a stripped-down version to the spending bill.

Focus on Your City

By BOB JOSSERAND
Hereford Mayor

As I'm sure most of you are aware, we are operating on our fall and winter schedule at the Aquatic Center. The schedule this year is somewhat different from last year's since we have tried to adjust the hours to correspond with use of the facility.

As you probably have noticed, we have eliminated the early morning lap swimming since we had very few participants. However, Sandra Kilanowski tells me that it takes only six full-time users to pay for the lifeguard, so if several of you do want early morning swim time, just get together and let Sandra know.

One of the other unique things that Sandra is able to offer is to open the pool for special birthday parties and other functions. If you have a special occasion coming up for which you would like the use of the pool, please make contact with Sandra.

Let's really turn out and use the Aquatic Center this winter for our enjoyment as well as our health. We should have several new, exciting programs to offer you as the season progresses.

Switching from the Aquatic Center to more mundane items, I've mentioned to several of you how great a bargain we have in our sewer and water costs. I thought perhaps a number of you would be interested in knowing how we compare to our surrounding neighbors.

Hereford's fee per 5,000 gallons of residential water is $9.10; compared with our neighboring communities on an equal 5,000 gallons basis: Pampa, $14.51; Plainview, $12.75; Canyon, $11.85; Borger, $14.65; Littlefield, $12.20; Levelland, $11.80; and Amarillo, $8.99.

Hereford's sewer costs per 5,000 gallons are $6.50 for residential sewer while Plainview comes in at $8.20, Pampa $9.01, Canyon $7.00, Borger

$17.75, Levelland $7.13 and Amarillo $6.79. We truly do have a bargain in both our water and sewer rates when we compare ourselves to surrounding communities.

You might also be interested to know that in cities the size of Hereford throughout the State, the average residential sewer cost per 5,000 gallons is $12.00, with a low of $4.47 in Sweetwater and a high of $27.86 at Mineral Wells.

I haven't had a Breakfast with the Mayor meeting in quite some time, but didn't feel the need to get you all up for a 7 a.m. breakfast since I hadn't heard from any of you that you had questions or suggestions about our City government.

The recent passage of our operating budget for 1996-97, which maintained the same tax rate we have had for a number of years, is certainly an effort on the part of your city employees to provide quality service at a very reasonable cost, so I didn't think you probably wanted to discuss that so early in the morning.

If any of you would like to get together, please let me know and we'll join for breakfast, or even lunch.

I'm thrilled about working with our Chamber of Commerce to provide exciting happenings for the Christmas holidays. It's also exciting to have Terri Johnson, or City Secretary, take over the city's portion of the lighting of Mother's Park to provide just a bit more festive decoration for everyone during the holidays.

I think it will be great fun to celebrate with our friends and neighbors at a city-wide tree lighting ceremony.

I'm sure that Terri would appreciate your help and suggestions.

As always, please don't hesitate to let me know your feelings, and I always welcome your comments about your city and its government.

Omnibus bill heightens fears of nuke shipping

By MICHELLE MITTELSTADT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Fearful of a last-ditch maneuver in the waning days of the congressional year, opponents of a proposal that would allow Maine and Vermont to ship their low-level radioactive waste to Texas went on the alert this week.

With lawmakers impatient to adjourn so they can hit the campaign trail, much of Congress' unfinished business is being crammed into one huge bill.

Because that omnibus measure includes money necessary for the operation of dozens of federal agencies beyond Tuesday's start of the new fiscal year, it's on a fast track for congressional and presidential approval.

That has made the bill, being finalized this weekend, a magnet for all types of pet projects that didn't get accomplished this session.

And foes of the Texas Low-Level Waste Nuclear Compact were fearful this week that supporters would try to sneak the agreement into the spending bill, having lost a House vote last year. The Senate didn't take up the pact.

Congressional approval is required before Texas, Maine and Vermont can consummate a trash-for-cash deal allowing the Northeastern states to ship their waste to Texas.

Although the compact is silent on the location, the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority wants to build the dump near Sierra Blanca, 90 miles east of El Paso.

Two dump opponents, Democratic Reps. Ron Coleman of El Paso and John Bryant of Dallas, alerted White House chief of staff Leon Panetta this week that an attempt might be made to roll the compact into the spending bill.

And members of the Sierra Blanca Legal Defense Fund and their supporters began a telephone, fax and postcard campaign to warn lawmakers.

"We are just real nervous that this is the nuclear industry's number one priority now, that it will be put on this omnibus budget appropriations bill that has to pass," defense fund board chairwoman Erin Rogers said Friday.

But a nuclear industry representative and a spokeswoman for Rep. Henry Bonilla, R-San Antonio, said the congressional Republican leadership has made clear the compact won't be put into the bill.

"I understand that the leadership has decided that they will not address that this year and will wait till next year," said Paul Genoa, staff director for Organizations United, a Washington-based nuclear industry group working to get approval for low-level radioactive waste disposal sites.

"It needs to be fully debated," Genoa said, expressing confidence the compact would gain congressional approval. "It doesn't need to be attached as a rider to anything."

But Ms. Rogers, who is based in Austin, said the compact has proved so controversial that backers would be happy to get it rolled into must-pass legislation.

"Even if they don't put it onto the (spending bill) they'll wait till after the election and sneak it through right after the session starts," she said.

Dave Lackey, a spokesman for compact supporter Sen. Olympia Snowe, R-Maine, said she will resume her efforts next year to obtain congressional approval.

Supporters contend the compact protects Texas from being forced to accept waste from many other states. But critics argue there are environmental, diplomatic, financial and racial reasons against locating a dump in West Texas.

Dallas first-graders have diverse feelings when it comes to kisses

By JULIA PRODIS
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) - Dusty was walking down the hall to kindergarten gym class, his hands folded obediently behind his back, when a pretty little girl in a sunflower dress came up behind him and planted a kiss on his cheek.

"I felt like I was going to shoot like a rocket!" 6-year-old Dusty recalls. "Then my eyes started to pop out."

The little blond boy with gaps between his teeth has been chasing girls on the playground ever since. Stolen kisses in the schoolyard may be as much a part of childhood as scraped knees and cookies and milk - only rarer.

"Yuck!" says Sarah, crinkling her nose and exposing her missing front teeth. If any boys kissed her, the Dallas first-grader says, "I'd slap 'em with my lunch box and make their nose bleed."

In Lexington, N.C., Southwest Elementary School may be forever remembered as the school that punished a first-grader for giving a girl a peck on the cheek.

The boy, Johnathan Prevette, a 6-year-old with blond hair and Coke bottle glasses, was separated from his class - and missed an ice cream party - for violating the school's sexual harassment policy, which bars "unwelcome touching." Johnathan said the little girl asked for the kiss.

But at Dan D. Rogers Elementary School in Dallas, first-grade boys and girls are more likely to get caught swapping kisses than stealing kisses.

In first-grade, it's clear, some kids don't know the meaning of a kiss, much less sexual harassment.

("When you kiss on the mouth, you have to get married," 6-year-old Edwin says.)

These kids are more concerned with riding their bikes, staying inside the lines in the coloring book and learning the days of the week.

Marina is waiting until she's 17 to kiss a boy. But if she's caught by surprise by a boy before then, "I would tell a teacher because sometimes I don't like boys because they're ugly. But if they're cute, I'd kiss him and not tell and keep it a secret because the moms might not let you be friends."

Dusty still hasn't kissed a girl yet. Kaitlyn, who gave him his first kiss, moved away last year. But that hasn't stopped the chase. He has a new girlfriend, although he confesses he doesn't yet know her name.

"Every time I see her I just want to jump up and chase her like a wolf," he says.

Sarah quickly grows tired of talking about "this mushy stuff." "It makes me want to barf."

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creeks says as you grow older, what matters most is not the way it was, but the way you remember it.

Most new parents don't realize that labor pains can last 18 years or more.

We read, with much interest, about the birth Saturday of quintuplets to a Snyder newsman and his wife. We are personally acquainted with the parents--Deshonna and Brent Taylor.

Brent formerly was a newsman at Littlefield, and he made numerous trips to Hereford to have his paper printed here. He reported the mother and babies are doing fine, but the quints may stay in the hospital for about 10 weeks.

The babies--three boys and two girls--were born Saturday in Lubbock and are believed to be the first set of quintuplets born on the South Plains. Some old timers in the coffee shop this week recalled the doctor's fee for the first baby in their families ranged from $25 to $50. One paid the doctor for his delivery fee with two hams, four chickens, and a watermelon.

An estimate on the hospital and doctor bills for the quints, with prenatal and post-natal care, is reported to be $1.5 to $2 million!

Deaf Smith County carries the unofficial title of "Cattle Feeding Capital of the World." Texans can claim bragging rights to a number of "firsts."

State Comptroller John Sharp has developed a list that shows Texas is No. 1 in the number of cattle and calves (and value, too); first in farm and ranch land and number of farms; first in cotton, hay, sorghum grain, wool and pecans; No. 1 in cash receipts for livestock; first in sheep and lambs; and No. 1 in crude oil and natural gas production.

Texas is also No. 1 in the number of operating public elementary and secondary school districts and public elementary and secondary school teachers.

The state also has the highest percentage of U.S. exports to Mexico and in the total value of exports to Mexico.

But Sharp didn't quit while he was ahead.

Texas is also number one in: --Adults under state parole supervision per capita.

--State prisoner incarceration rate. --Prisoners executed since 1977, when the death penalty was reinstated by the Supreme Court.

--Percent of children without health insurance coverage.

While not leading the way, Texas is second in population, second in prisoners under death sentence, and second in adult prison population.

Texas ranks third in: the number of fatalities from alcohol-related deaths, the gross sales of products; the number of U.S. military installations, and in the number of veterans residing in the state.

We're fourth in birth rate, cumulative number of reported AIDS cases, number of Fortune 500 companies, and the percent of population living in poverty.

And for the record, we're next to last in number of nurses per 100,000 population, and in per-capita spending by the state government.

Another reason why some folks are no longer Democrats:

"When you take public tax dollars...and move them over into the private sector, that is harmful." --U.S. Secretary of Education Richard Riley on Bob Dole's plan to offer opportunity scholarships so parents can use their tax dollars to choose the best school for their children.

It seems to me that Riley's quote is saying: you dumb citizens don't understand...public tax dollars are for the government, not for the public!

A surefire way to halt hiccups? Some one tipped us off years ago that the way to stop hiccups was to drink water from the opposite side of the glass, bending over and taking a few gulps. It's always worked for me.

But according to "Physician and Sportsmedicine" magazine, here's what you should do:

Briefly apply ice cubes to the sides of your neck, at the level of the larynx. That's it! No one yelling "Boo!" or standing on your head. The article says it works by interrupting the reflex nerve signals that cause the spasmodic contractions of the diaphragm that we call hiccups.

Dole's effort to label Clinton as old-style liberal is hard to sell

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) - The L word is back.

But Bob Dole's effort to label President Clinton an old-style liberal is going to be a hard sell against a Democrat who has carefully charted his way to the center.

Liberal labeling worked for the Republicans against Michael Dukakis in 1988, when he eventually accepted the description. Not this time, Clinton dismisses it as an unfounded charge, saying his record proves it isn't so.

His terminology tells how far the political spectrum has turned since the New Deal and Great Society Democratic eras. In those days, most Democrats didn't consider it a charge to be called liberal.

Dole now contends that Clinton is a closet liberal, or perhaps a rampant one, just waiting to spring big government plans and higher taxes in a second term.

The Republican challenger said Wednesday in St. Louis that he can't wait for the first of the two presidential campaign debates, on Oct. 6, so that he can go after "liberal, liberal, liberal Bill Clinton."

It has become part of his GOP campaign script this week. He told Illinois voters to beware "this liberal in the White House who now talks like a moderate or a conservative or a Republican."

That was the warmup. "President Clinton came to town a liberal, he's still a liberal, the only thing that stopped him in his tracks was electing a Republican Congress in 1994," Dole said later.

Then he called Clinton "an old-style, dyed-in-the-wool, big-spending liberal" who would revert to form once the spotlight of the campaign was off.

Vice President Al Gore, campaigning in New Orleans, said Dole is "dragging out this epithet, liberal, liberal, liberal" as Republicans have for 30 years.

"... They don't realize they've drained the meaning out of it and that it does not apply to the centrist approach that Bill Clinton and I represent," Gore said.

Clinton, leading in the polls, regularly ignores Dole's accusations, but he said he would "answer the liberal thing," and pointed to his record on deficit reduction, crime legislation, the death penalty, trimming government payrolls, and the welfare reform bill he signed over the complaints of other Democrats.

"The record doesn't support the charge," he said.

It is an undermining accusation in these political times. The Republicans succeeded in depicting Clinton as a big government liberal in 1994, and won control of Congress. He moved toward the middle in response, declaring the era of big government to be over, a line Republicans said belonged to them.

Clinton won in 1992 as a New Democrat, a centrist, and no liberal. That image began eroding soon after he took office, and halfway through his term, he looked like a loser. His move to the center, and his success in depicting the Republican Congress as extreme, changed that and began the revival that now has him favored for re-election.

That meshes with the polls showing that while more voters tend to lean right than left now, far more of them, 46 percent in surveys dating back to 1984, identify themselves at or near the center.

Clinton said the claim that he'd turn liberal if re-elected is convenient for Republicans but "it doesn't fit with what I did as president and as governor and won't fit with what I'm planning to do in my second term."

While Dukakis complained regularly about the liberal tag, near the end of the 1988 campaign he declared: "Yes, I am a liberal in the tradition of Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman and John Kennedy." By that time, the polls had reflected a steady increase in the number of voters who considered him too liberal to be a good president.

Ironically, Bush had his own labeling problems when Ronald Reagan chose him for vice president in 1980; ardent GOP conservatives complained that he was too liberal for the ticket. There was a fierce Republican labeling war in 1964, conservative Barry Goldwater over Nelson A. Rockefeller, the New York governor who led the liberal wing of the party, and tried to define that as the mainstream.

It wasn't. Liberal Republicans since have chosen other terms - moderate, or sometimes progressive. As the political spectrum tilted rightward, so did Democrats.

They might borrow a line from the late George Romney, who ran briefly for president in 1968.

"I'm as conservative as the Constitution," he said, "as liberal as Lincoln, and as progressive as Theodore Roosevelt."

Bad news for the future of the family

Out of the Blue

By Garry Wesner

These past couple of weeks have not been good ones for the family.

In fact, action taken by governmental and corporate entities have the potential to be among the most devastating hits the pro-family movement has taken in years.

To recap: -- News was leaked by ABC that it would be revealed on "Ellen," the show about a single woman running a book store, that she is a lesbian. ABC, as you know, is owned by Walt Disney Co.

-- Another corporate giant, IBM, has followed in the footsteps of Disney and announced it is extending health insurance benefits to the unmarried partners of gay and lesbian employees.

-- Abortion providers and pro-life activists agreed this past week that the approval of the French abortion drug RU-486 will make abortions more accessible statewide.

-- A female lawyer representing a man charged with intoxicated manslaughter asked that the charge be dropped because a baby born at 7-1/2 months gestation is not human.

-- On Thursday, the U.S. Senate failed to muster enough votes to override President Clinton's veto of the partial-birth abortion bill.

As I said, not a good week at all. There have been media reports that indicate the "Ellen" move was simply a trial balloon floated by the studio to gauge public reaction to such a move.

Still, the idea that another prime-time television show would feature a gay star is simply another sign of how far our society has fallen. (As you know, "Roseanne," "Friends" and others have, or have had, gay characters.)

Likewise with the IBM move. The corporate giant (it employs about 110,000 people in the United States alone) is among nearly 470 large corporations, governments and universities in the United States to extend such benefits.

IBM, like many of these others, does not give benefits to unmarried partners of heterosexual employees on the assumption that they can get such benefits through marriage.

Worse than the news of IBM's policy change is the assertion by gay rights groups that IBM is a bellwether of American business practices, which means even more companies will soon come out of the closet.

On the abortion front, the Senate's failure to override President Clinton's veto of the partial-birth abortion bill is a bitter pill to swallow.

American Family Radio reported the other day that the issue has generated more calls to Congress than has any other issue in history.

Millions of Americans have expressed their horror for a policy that calls for a baby to be pulled almost all the way from the womb before it is killed by having its brain sucked from its head.

Still, the Senate sided with Clinton and his anti-life (the opposite of pro-life) stand.

If RU-486 is approved by the FDA, Texans in every corner of the state will be able to get an abortion simply by visiting the family doctor.

According to the State Department of Health, 87,501 abortions were performed in Texas in 1995, with those abortions done in just 16 of the 254 counties in the state.

With RU-486, a clinic or doctor's office can kill a baby quickly, easily and relatively painlessly.

Pro-lifers and abortionists are divided over whether the drug will lead to more abortions. I think the number will skyrocket.

After all, if a girl (or woman) here wants an abortion, she must travel to Lubbock. With the drug, that service will be available from any local doctor who so desires -- and that doctor can give the drug anonymously, without worrying about people showing up to protest outside his office.

Finally, Corpus Christi lawyer Anne Marshall says her client should not be charged with intoxicated manslaughter, because the unborn baby is not human.

Prosecutors say the child was born alive, but died of injuries from the accident.

The case may be a test in Texas of when a fetus is declared a human.

As I said, this was not a good week for the family.

The sad thing is, these atrocities will continue until we stand up and demand they cease.

Editorials From Around the State

By The Associated Press

A sampling of editorial opinion from Texas newspapers:

Sept. 19

Beaumont Enterprise on Perot and presidential debates:

The Commission on Presidential Debates was absolutely correct to recommend that Ross Perot be excluded from the showdown between Bill Clinton and Bob Dole. Simply put, Perot has no realistic chance of winning in November and as such should not clutter up the stage that holds the only two men who could prevail.

Yes, we realize that the decision has provided Perot with a lifetime of material for tirades about a corrupt system that tries to keep noble reformers like him frozen out.

Yes, we realize that many Americans think Perot should be included out of some vague stab at "fairness" - even though 95 percent of the electorate has so far told pollsters they will not pull the lever for the Reform Party candidate. (Perhaps this year's lack of support for Perot could have something to do with his erratic record and bizarre personality.)

Yes, we realize that many comedians are quipping that Bob Dole doesn't have a realistic chance of being elected president, being down 20-something points in most polls. And yes, we realize that polls are not perfect and should not be used alone to determine this question.

But setting aside the "entertainment" factor of Perot's presence and even the perception of Clinton's huge lead, almost no serious observers believe that the Texan will be taking the oath of office from the chief justice of the Supreme Court on Jan. 20, 1997. The debates should be focused on the candidates who could win in November, and unlike 1992 when he got 19 percent of the vote, Perot isn't in that group this time. ...

The important thing is to let Clinton and Dole face each other one-on-one in a fair format. For many Americans, the presidential debates are the single most important factor that helps them make up their minds, and something that important shouldn't be trivialized.

Sept. 19

The Monitor (McAllen) on immigration and public schools:

Congress, at a stalemate over a wide-ranging immigration reform bill, could drop the provision that is causing such a ruckus.

The issue of contention is a stipulation granting states the power to deny public schooling to children who can't prove legal residency. Most Democrats and some Republicans are against such a measure, and the debate threatens the entire bill.

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott says the provision could be dropped to get the package passed. ...

School districts along the border are certainly aware of the challenges associated with the education of students who are illegal immigrants, or who are the children of undocumented workers. Every school year, school districts in the Rio Grande Valley absorb an undetermined number of children who are illegal immigrants, or whose parents may be here illegally.

Feelings and opinions on these sort of issues run high, as witnessed by the hoopla surrounding California's Proposition 187, which would deny illegal immigrants many forms of health care and bar their children from public schools.

Texas, fortunately, has avoided these sort of divisive measures. Texas Gov. George W. Bush and U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchinson have expressed great concerns about denying schooling to the children of undocumented workers.

Bush and Hutchinson correctly point out the obvious: Denying these children an education would be a grave mistake since they are likely to live in the United States all of their lives, and will be a greater drain on society without an education. ...

Today's schools have a hard enough time ensuring that our children are getting the education they need to succeed in their adult lives. Let's worry about that first, and spend less time worrying about whether they can produce their citizenship papers.

Chapman gets retirement honor with naming of $146 million lake

By MICHELLE MITTELSTADT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - With Congress just days away from adjournment, the 53 House members who are leaving under their own steam are being feted with speeches, dinners and other tributes.

But few are getting the send-off bestowed on Texas Democratic Rep. Jim Chapman: His own $146 million lake.

Language included at the last minute in the 1997 energy and water appropriations bill renames Northeast Texas' Cooper Lake for Chapman. Of course, the 19,300-surface-acre lake isn't being given to the Sulphur Springs lawmaker, who has represented East Texas' 1st District since 1985. But the Army Corps of Engineers lake will be officially known as Jim Chapman Lake.

In an interview Thursday, Chapman said the tribute was sprung on him by friends on the Appropriations Committee when differences in the House- and Senate-passed water bill were resolved. The resulting compromise, passed by both houses, has been sent to President Clinton for his signature.

"It was a gesture by my colleagues that I thought was beyond generous in light of the fact that so many people have worked on that project over literally four decades, but one that both makes me humble and very proud," Chapman said.

The tribute may be causing a ripple back home.

Cooper Mayor Richard Huie, whose town is three miles from the lake, told The Paris News that he disapproves of the action. "You would have thought they would have been more sensitive," he said Thursday. "Chapman certainly did a lot of work on this lake, but so did a lot of other people."

Earlier in the day, Huie told The Associated Press he was unaware of the development. "Congressman Chapman was very instrumental in getting the lake for us here," he said, declining to say whether he approved of the switch.

Although Cooper Lake is just a few years old, it has been in the planning stages since the 1930s as a means for flood control and water supply. The name itself has been floating around since the 1950s when a local high school held a naming contest.

Although Congress authorized the lake in 1955, there was little more than a name for decades. Construction began in 1958 but was halted by court order in 1971 because of disputes over environmental law. Thirteen years and numerous court battles later, all legal hurdles had been crossed. Work resumed in 1986 and was essentially completed in 1992.

The cities of Irving and Sulphur Springs, as well as the Northeast Texas Municipal District, have water rights to Cooper Lake.

Chapman's ties to the project date back to his childhood.

As an 8-year-old, he traveled with his father, state Rep. Joe Chapman, to Washington, where the elder Chapman appeared before Congress to make a pitch for the lake.

As an adult, Jim Chapman arrived in Washington just as the legal troubles were being cleared up, paving the way for congressional funding. Cooper Lake, Chapman said, "is one of the major reasons why I came to Congress. It's the reason I sought a seat on Appropriations. It was the reason I went on the energy and water subcommittee."

More than $130 million of the $146 million project was appropriated during his legislative service, he proudly noted.

Asked why his colleagues would select the lake as his tribute, Chapman said: "I was joined at the hip with this project, and they, I'm sure, got awful tired of hearing about it year after year after year."

Letter mailed in 1965 arrives 31 years later

TULSA, Okla. (AP) - A letter from friends in Houston arrived in such good shape with the rest of the mail that Lola and Lyle Montgomery suspected nothing unusual.

Until they started reading the two handwritten pages from friends in Houston and got a little confused.

Then they noticed the envelope's 1965 postmark and the eight cents worth of stamps.

"I wonder what could have happened to it all these years?" Mrs. Montgomery said after receiving the letter last week.

The letter from George and Alleen Willis was dated Aug. 1, 1965. The couples still are good friends.

Oprah sends book to top of charts with on-air mention

By BRIAN BERGSTEIN
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) - She affects cattle prices, tops the daytime TV talk ratings and makes more money than anyone in show business.

Now Oprah Winfrey is proving that her economic power also extends to those lucky enough to get mentioned on her show.

Just ask Jacquelyn Mitchard, the first-time novelist whose book has soared to the top of best-seller lists since Winfrey suggested it for her new on-air book club.

"The Deep End of the Ocean," about a Midwestern family whose child disappears, received several good reviews when it came out in June. Mitchard's publisher, Viking Books, printed 100,000 copies - a very good run for a writer's first novel, Viking spokeswoman Rachel Schnoll said.

Then last week, Winfrey cast her spell - although not the one that made cattle prices drop on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange after one of her shows earlier this year concerned mad cow disease.

At the end of her syndicated program that aired Sept. 17, she invited viewers to read "The Deep End of the Ocean," and then watch a discussion of the book with the author some time later.

"I want to get the whole country reading again," she said on the show.

With that quick plug, Winfrey, who Forbes magazine says has made $171 million in the last two years, spread some wealth Mitchard's way.

By Thursday, Viking had printed 640,000 copies of "The Deep End of the Ocean," which had moved up to No. 1 on the fiction best-seller lists of The Wall Street Journal and The New York Times and No. 3 on USA Today's list.

Just a week earlier, the book wasn't even on the lists of the Journal and USA Today. Last Sunday's Times had it ranked 14th.

"Oprah has a huge impact," Schnoll said Thursday. "She was the instigator."

Publishing analysts are watching the experiment closely. Consultant

Constance Sayre told The Washington Post that Winfrey has combined talk show with reading group and "come up with an entirely new thing."

Winfrey's fitness book, "Make The Connection," written with workout guru Bob Greene, remains the No. 1 non-fiction book on several lists.

Winfrey hasn't decided exactly when she'll tape the discussion of Mitchard's book, but she plans to have book club shows monthly, said Audrey Pass, a spokeswoman for Winfrey's Chicago-based show.

Mitchard, a 43-year-old columnist for the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel, is grateful for the help. Her husband, Dan, died of cancer three years ago, leaving her with four young children. She has since adopted a fifth.

She took nearly any writing job she could find, even writing warning labels for spray paint before she "had an idea so compelling I couldn't ignore it" and wrote "The Deep End of the Ocean."

'Crash at Crush' recalled 100 years after stunt

By MARLA PIERSON
Waco Tribune-Herald

WACO, Texas - The railroad track runs straight across Wiggins road a few miles south of West. It dips slightly near there, levels, then rises again through the fields a sleepy, silent pastureland now as it has been for more than a century.

There may be a town here some day. For one day 100 years ago, there was.

On Sept. 15, 1896, a Tuesday, thousands of people stood on the lawn of Crush, a makeshift city erected in this pasture so the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railroad could properly host a train wreck.

It was a publicity stunt, unthinkable today and riveting then. Railroad officials engineered and advertised the head-on collision to draw attention to their line.

The farmers, the neighbors, the men and women brought in by special excursion trains to witness the crash moved expectantly as a freshly painted locomotive, green with red trim, roared down a slight slope, the mirror image of a red locomotive with green trim hurtling toward it.

That roar and twist of steel when they met had been anticipated statewide and farther.

The explosion that rained metal over the crowd a moment later was not.

Two people died. A photographer's eye was gouged out.

Others were injured, some burning their hands on hot metal as they grasped for souvenirs.

But those who were there did not forget the images, more searing in a pre-television era. The legend of the Crash at Crush, also dubbed the "Famous Duel of the Iron Monsters," spread through the country.

In McLennan County, it lived through tales, surfacing at a mention of railroads or Crush.

"It was a topic of conversation for years and years," said Alfred Gerik, McLennan county fire marshal and West fire chief, whose uncle perched in a tree to watch.

In a 1959 letter to The Dallas Morning News, Kemp Plunkett, whose father took him to the crash, wrote, "Since that fateful day, I have traveled extensively. I have been in earthquakes, watched tornadoes and floods wreak havoc and witnessed explosions, but none of those has equaled that terrible crash at Crush for sheer hair-raising thrill."

The event was plotted carefully. W.G. Crush, the rail line's general passenger agent for whom the one-day town was named, convinced the company the idea would sell, that people would come to a crash.

Some stories say he heard of a staged crash in Ohio and borrowed the idea; according to others, he had witnessed a train wreck and paid close attention to the crowds it drew.

Crush asked engineers about the dangers and whether the boilers would explode when the trains hit.

All but one said they would not, and the company's board approved the stunt by a one-vote majority.

"It was the P.T. Barnum syndrome," said Mark Davis, a spokesman for Union Pacific, which merged with the Katy line in August 1988.

"You got a growing industry. Railroads, in order to get the support of communities, in order to get financial backing, would do anything, just anything," Davis said.

The promise of rail then was great. Trains delivered freight and the mail. They moved people and anchored communities.

"Everyone was a customer of the railroad. You had to travel long distances by railroad or stagecoach or horseback. The rail was the mode to get you there quicker," Davis said. In the election year fall of 1896, talk of populism and William Jennings Bryan's first run for the presidency dominated public attention.

But a Sept. 15, 1896, Dallas Morning News story said talk of Crush's crash was "laying the political question on the shelf for the time being."

Crush had the aging 35-ton locomotives, repainted for the occasion, parade the railroad line the week before the crash. Newspapers ran stories. Posters appeared on fences, vacant houses and store windows.

Crush, who was friends with Barnum, raised a 2,100-foot platform and a grandstand at the site.

A Ringling Brothers tent became a restaurant. Workers built a wooden jail officials expected to use for drunks and pickpockets; 200 constables were hired.

Engineers prepared the locomotives, making practice runs to test speeds and predict where the trains would collide.

The cars, which advertised the railroad line, the circus and the Oriental Hotel in Dallas, were fastened together tightly. Brakes were disconnected so they couldn't interfere with the speed the trains would build when their throttles were tied down.

Lengths of track were removed behind each train in case one derailed, failing to stop the other, which would have careened on without brakes or engineers.

Crush brought in eight tank cars of Artesian water for a thirsty crowd. And they began coming that morning, 33 special excursion trains depositing spectators at the scene.

Others arrived by buggy, wagon or horseback, swelling Crush's population enough to rival Dallas as the area's largest city. Some crowd estimates say 40,000 came; others contend there were fewer or more.

By late afternoon, constables and Crush had to fight to keep people from the track, even more so when the trains came into view, and touched briefly before backing up for their final run.

With the drop of a hat, the locomotives took off, steam flying and bells ringing as the engineers on board jumped to safety and the trains rumbled toward each other "like the gathering force of a cyclone," a Dallas newspaper reported the next day.

They hit: "A crash, a sound of timbers rent and torn, and then a shower of splinters."

Silence fell before both boilers exploded, filling the air "with flying missiles of iron and steel ranging in size from a postage stamp to half of a driving wheel," the story reported.

A Bremond man in a tree was killed instantly. A Hewitt man died, while the women standing on either side of him were unharmed.

J.C. Deane, a Waco photographer covering the event, lost an eye.

A half-mile away, a farmer's wife was knocked out by a flying piece of wood.

The crowd with a yell scrambled "through a brush, tearing down barbed wire fences and knocking down wooden ones in a wild attempt to get to the smoking heap of debris. Everything that could be carried away was laid hold of," the story said.

The company would pay claims, including $10,000 and a lifetime railroad pass to Deane.

Crush was quickly fired, but then rehired as it became clear the country was indeed talking about Katy and Crush's crash - and with less ire than expected. Those who were there would speak of it for the rest of their lives.

"My uncle would tell my father when you looked up in the sky, it was just raining pieces of metal... When it exploded, and you had people killed and these flying objects out of the sky, that was spectacle these people who witnessed it could never, ever forget," Gerik said.

Some who weren't allowed to go would resent it for that long.

Others had staged train wrecks before, but nothing on this scale, said Gerik, 71, who collects artifacts about the crash.

"For its time, it has to be a monumental piece of history," Gerik said.

"People around here, you mention the word Crush, and they begin talking about it. It did accomplish exactly what the railroad wanted, though not exactly in the way they wanted."

But stories today play out more frequently on screens than in the slow drawl of conversation. Even in West, Gerik concedes, the tale isn't so well-known among those who are not near his age.

Many would say the story exists mainly now in the file folders in the Texas Collection at Baylor University, where newspaper and magazine accounts flesh out the memories of even those who heard it growing up.

There is a souvenir hunk of metal; a quarter-size piece with engravings of Crush, Texas; and the date in the Railroad and Pioneer Museum in Temple, said Chris Boldt, museum cataloger. The museum sells a Waco Heritage and History piece on the crash as well.

But echoes of Crush and the crash are also in Gerik's collection of articles and memorabilia.

In memories dulled by time. In the black and white photographs framed and hanging on the wall of The Village Bakery in West and in Scott Joplin's "The Great Crush Collision March," with the sound of the trains moving toward each other and the bass chord of a hit.

In narratives fertilized by story, imagination, history and yellowed articles. And at a historical marker, placed not in the low hum of far-off farm equipment and insects by the railroad track, but beside the northbound access road of Interstate 35, half-hidden in brush and the roar of traffic.

Police find two bodies believed to be one man

MEXICO CITY (AP) - A top anti-drug agent has been found dead - apparently twice.

Nearly a week after police announced they had found the body of Jorge Garcia Vargas, they said Friday that they have found another body, also tortured and murdered, that seems to be his.

The discovery adds a bizarre twist - and raises still more questions - in a wave of murders of drug agents from Baja California, a border state plagued by narcotics trafficking.

Garcia, a federal police officer who was director of the Tijuana office of the National Institute for Combating Drugs, was the seventh senior anti-drug fighter from Baja California killed in seven months. Numerous other lower-ranking officers also have died.

An official at the federal attorney general's office on Friday confirmed that Garcia's body was found Wednesday in a car in the west-central neighborhood of Polanco in Mexico City.

Both of Mexico's national television networks on Friday quoted police agents as saying the body found Wednesday was that of Garcia, as did the Mexico City daily Reforma.

With it was the body of Miguel Angel Silva Caballero, identified as a former agent who had been fired for irregularities. The official, whose agency employed Garcia, spoke on condition of anonymity.

However a spokesman for the city attorney general's office, which is investigating the case, said police "are still not sure" if the body that actually is Garcia's was found Wednesday or last Saturday.

Police had already identified Garcia's body along with those of three other police agents or informers in another neighborhood. Police now say the man buried under Garcia's name may be an aide who resembled him.

All six of the bodies showed signs of being tortured and strangled and apparently were killed around the same time.

Officials did not say what the Baja California agents were doing in Mexico City, nor why they had been so sure initially that Garcia was among those killed.

Bulldogs turn back error-prone Whitefaces

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

The Borger Bulldogs took advantage of Hereford turnovers for four first-half touchdowns and won the District 1-4A opener for both, 40-19, Friday at Bulldog Stadium.

Borger improved to 3-1, while Hereford dropped to 1-3.

The common theme for Hereford in Friday's game and in the season-opening loss to Tascosa has been turnovers and other similar mistakes.

"It's frustrating to the kids, and it's frustrating to the coaching staff," Herd coach Craig Yenzer said. "We continue to make silly mistakes - in all phases of the game: kicking, offense and defense. Right now we're all feeling frustrated."

The aggressive Borger defense forced fumbles on each of Hereford's first two possessions, and both led to Bulldog touchdowns. Still, Hereford was in the game - trailing 14-7 - after C.J. Kubacak caught a three-yard touchdown pass from Joseph Artho early in the second quarter.

What ultimately knocked the Herd out of the game was two unforced mistakes which allowed Borger to score twice in the final two minutes of the half.

Borger punted from deep in its own territory, promising great field position for the Herd, but Henry Hernandez muffed the punt and the Bulldogs recovered at midfield.

On the second play after, Jose

Ibarra broke through the line and raced 43 yards for a touchdown. Nick Limoges' kick made the score 21-7.

Hereford threw three incomplete passes and tried to punt, but Jace West's snap sailed over the head of punter John Marty Galan, who caught up with the ball at the Herd five-yard line and was promptly tackled.

The Bulldogs took over there, and - after a holding penalty - T.J. Watson hit Colby Yeary for a 15-yard TD pass with 34 seconds left in the half. The kick failed - ironically, because of a bad snap - but Borger took a 27-7 lead into halftime.

Hereford never recovered. Tailback Stephen Cloud scored two touchdowns in the second half, but the second one came with 26 seconds left in the game.

Cloud finished with 71 yards rushing, and fullback Jeremy Scott added 35 yards, but Hereford ended the game with a net of 31 yards rushing.

That's because of two things, the first being the 30-yard loss on the bad punt snap. The second is the minus-45 rushing yards quarterback Joseph Artho had after the Bulldogs sacked him six times.

Borger seemed to be constantly stunting and blitzing. When that worked, it often resulted in a sack. When it didn't work, Artho usually found an open receiver. He threw for 168 yards, hitting on 20-of-35 with two interceptions.

Hereford moved the ball, but mistakes kept getting in the way.

"We took advantage of their stunts, and I'd find the right receiver," Artho said. "Then I'd throw an interception or something. That's the only thing that stopped us was our own mistakes."

His first interception came in the second quarter. Hereford had scored on its previous possession when Artho hit Kubacak to cut Borger's lead to 14-7.

The Herd defense stopped Borger cold and forced a punt. Hereford drove to the Borger 37-yard line, but Artho threw into a crowd and Borger's Sergio Barraza came away with the pick-off.

That was the one first-half turnover Borger didn't capitalize on, but moments later came the muffed punt.

In the first quarter, Borger's first touchdown was set up by its first sack, as Artho was hit hard and fumbled at the Hereford 17-yard line. Borger's Wes Mitchell recovered, and two plays later Watson ran a keeper five yards for the score. Richard Sierra blocked the extra point, but Borger led 6-0.

Following the touchdown, Hereford mounted an impressive drive. The Herd overcame a sack and a delay-of-game penalty with a balance of Artho's throwing and Cloud's and Scott's running.

Artho hit Kubacak for a 14-yard gain to the Borger 13-yard line, but the Bulldog blitz struck on the next play. Defenders penetrated, fouling up a handoff from Artho to Cloud.

"They blitzed right into the handoff and knocked it out," Artho said. "It was a lucky call - or a good call, I don't know which."

Borger's Gary Lilley returned the fumble 30 yards to the Herd 43, setting up a nine-play drive. Craig Alexander finished it off with a two-yard run, and Watson hit Ibarra for two points and a 14-0 lead.

Borger made a couple of long runs in the second half which kept Hereford from getting back in the game.

Watson got loose for a 36-yard run on the Bulldogs' first possession of the second half, setting them up at the Hereford nine-yard line. Two plays later, Alexander ran in from five yards out. Limoges' kick bumped the lead to 34-7.

Borger had a bad punt snap of its own which set up Hereford's second score. Kevin Jordan sailed the ball over

Tyler stops LaMarque's streak

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

A week ago, the story of Texas high school football was three long winning streaks.

La Marque, ranked No. 1 in Class 4A, had won its 50th straight regular-season game.

Sealy, ranked No. 1 in Class 3A, had tied Stamford's 39-year-old record of 35 straight Class 3A victories.

And San Antonio Roosevelt, ranked No. 7 in Class 5A, had tied a city record with 20 consecutive wins.

So guess which three teams lost this weekend?

La Marque fell, 22-0, to Tyler John Tyler; Sealy lost to LaGrange, 20-12; and Roosevelt lost to San Antonio MacArthur, 17-7.

La Marque picked the wrong week to step up in class against Tyler John Tyler, ranked fifth in Class 5A, which itself had won 23 straight regular-season games. The game in Tyler's Rose Stadium drew an estimated Homecoming crowd of 10,500.

The Cougars got beyond the John-Tyler 47 only once. That was in the first quarter, when they got to the Lions' 30 before losing possession on a fumble. La Marque had only 43 yards and two first downs in the second half.

Elsewhere, North Mesquite honored its No. 1 ranking in Class 5A with a 24-10 victory over No. 10 Richardson Lake Highlands, 24-10, and Windthorst, the No. 1 team in 1A, overwhelmed Wichita Falls Notre Dame, 46-6.

Who'll take over the No. 1 spots in Class 4A and 3A in next week's AP poll?

In 3A, second-ranked Vernon beat Burkburnett 31-16, No. 4 Crockett beat Cleveland 28-14 and No. 5 Columbus beat Needville 27-20. Weather forced a postponement of a game between third-ranked Coldspring and Hamshire-Fannett.

Hereford safety Richard Sierra (left) puts pressure on Borger quarterback T.J. Watson (13). The pressure worked - Watson completed only two passes for 18 yards - but Borger won anyway, 40-19.

Ruiz felled by Alverzo

Hereford's Jaime Ruiz was stopped in the sixth round by William Alverzo in a professional boxing match held Sept. 11 in Pensacola, Fla.

Alverzo, a superflyweight from Pensacola, knocked Ruiz down three times in the first minute of the sixth round to earn the technical knockout. Alverzo, ranked No. 8 by the North American Boxing Federation, improved to 15-2 with eighth knockouts.

Ruiz dominated early in the fight, opening two cuts on Alverzo by the end of the third round. He led on two of the three judges' cards going into the sixth round.

Ruiz, who lives in Hereford, doesn't fight full-time and is forced to coach himself.

"My last three fights I didn't train for, but I trained five weeks for this one," Ruiz said. "I hadn't been hit in 10 months - that's what did it."

Trinity gridders edge NCA

The flag football team from Trinity Fellowship of Amarillo came to Hereford to play Nazarene Christian Academy Thursday, scored twice in the fourth quarter and escaped with a 20-16 victory.

Trinity scored first for an 8-0 lead, then the teams settled into a defensive struggle.

NCA finally got on the board in the third quarter. Chayse Rives scored a touchdown, and Jeremy Williams threw to Jacob Power for the extra points and an 8-8 tie.

In the fourth quarter, Williams scored a touchdown and threw to Jeremy Gonzales for the extra points and a 16-8 lead. Trinity answered with a touchdown, though and quickly made an interception that led to its winning touchdown.

NCA (2-3) will play San Jacinto Thursday in Amarillo.

The NCA volleyball team toasted Trinity on Tuesday, winning 15-3, 15-9 in the NCA gym.

Kristen Huffaker led NCA by serving for 19 points.

NCA improved to 6-2 and will host Bible Heritage of Amarillo at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday in the NCA gym.

Dodgers claim playoff berth

By The Associated Press
With two days left in the regular season, the Los Angeles Dodgers know they're going to the playoffs and the Montreal Expos know they're on the verge of elimination.
Montreal's 6-4 loss to visiting Atlanta clinched a postseason berth for the Dodgers, either as the NL West champion or the wild card. San Diego's 5-2, 10-inning victory at Dodger Stadium prevented Los Angeles from clinching its second straight division title.

"We're still looking forward to winning this division; we haven't done that yet and that's still our goal," the Dodgers' Eric Karros said. "We've got to win one of the next two. That's what we're focusing on." San Diego needs to beat the Dodgers today and Sunday to win the NL West. One more Expos' loss or Padres' win would eliminate Montreal and guarantee San Diego a spot in the playoffs either as the division champ or the wild card.

"It's do or die for us now," Expos catcher Lenny Webster said. "It's a must-win situation for us now. We haven't quit yet."

the punter's head for a 17-yard loss, and Hereford took over at the Bulldog 29-yard line.
Hereford needed seven plays to score - the key one being a 10-yard reception by Josh Martinez on fourth-down-and-6. Martinez got the ball to the Bulldog five-yard line, and Cloud ran for the TD on the next play.

The pass for two failed, and Borger led 34-13 with 1:01 left in the third quarter.

A fumbled Borger snap recovered by Hereford's Clay Brown at the Borger 44 gave hope for a Herd comeback, but Artho went deep and was picked off by Tony Powell on the last play of the third quarter.

Borger delivered a back-breaker in the fourth quarter when Alexander broke several tackles at the line and ran 74 yards for a touchdown to make it 40-13. Until that play, Hereford actually led Borger in total offense.
"We shut them down pretty good, but then they had some big plays," Herd defensive end Zack Wall said. Wall had three sacks and another tackle for a loss in the game, totaling 45 yards in losses for Borger.

In the final minutes, Hereford drove 56 yards in seven plays. Artho hit on 4-of-5 passes to four different receivers, with Martinez making a spectacular catch at the one-yard line. With 26 seconds remaining, Cloud ran in for the score on the next play. The pass for two points failed.

Yenzer seems convinced the Herd will iron out its problems.
"I can't say enough of the kids' effort. I love these kids to death," he said. "We just have to learn to cut out the mistakes that we continue to make. We're right on the brink of being a good football team."

Rangers clinch AL West

By TOM WITHERS
AP Sports Writer
The AL West wasn't won as much as it was handed to the Texas Rangers.

While they were in the 13th inning against the California Angels, the Rangers won their first division title Friday night when Seattle lost in Oakland.

Texas eventually lost 4-3 in 15 innings, but that didn't stop the Rangers from celebrating a franchise first. After 36 years, the one-time Washington Senators were in the playoffs.

After the final out, they walked onto the field to salute a record crowd of 46,764 at the Ballpark in Arlington as fireworks boomed overhead.

It certainly wasn't the party they had envisioned, but after years of woeful records and meaningless hot summers, no one was complaining about making the playoffs.

"We didn't get a chance to jump around, but we still earned it," said Mickey Tettleton. "This was a real baseball team."

"This was a long time coming," Texas pitcher Jeff Russell said in the champagne-drenched Rangers clubhouse. "A lot of people thought this night would never come. We didn't win tonight, but we earned the championship by the way we played all year."

Elsewhere in the American League, it was: Toronto 3, Baltimore 2; Boston 7, New York 5; Chicago 4, Minnesota 2; and Milwaukee 7, Detroit 6 in six innings.

Unlike Rangers teams of the past, this version didn't melt in the blistering Texas sun. The Rangers took the division lead in early April and were only out of first place for four days.

They did make things interesting when they were swept in four games at Seattle earlier this month. But they managed to hold on and will now play in October for the first time.

"Boy, that champagne tastes good," team president Tom Schieffer said. "Winning feels good and this franchise has never had a chance to feel good at the end of the year before."

Garret Anderson's club record sixth single drove in two runs in the 15th inning off Matt Whiteside (0-1).

Pep Harris (2-0) pitched 2 2-3 innings of relief for the win, allowing only Dean Palmer's solo homer in the bottom of the 15th. Greg Gohr got the final out for his first save.

Texas starter Ken Hill allowed two runs and six hits in seven innings.

Athletics 8, Mariners 1

At Oakland, Calif., Seattle stumbled again and moved to the verge of playoff elimination with their fifth loss in six games.

Seattle needs to win its remaining games and hope both Chicago and Baltimore lose their final two to force a playoff.

Dave Telgheder (4-7), pounded for five home runs in a loss to Seattle last week, held the Mariners in check this time. He pitched 6 2-3 shutout innings and struck out five, including Ken Griffey Jr. three times.

Terry Mulholland (5-4) took the loss.

Blue Jays 3, Orioles 2

At Toronto, Baltimore lost a game it desperately needed to win and Roberto Alomar was spitting mad.

Baltimore can get the wild card by winning one of its last two games against the Blue Jays. The Mariners and Chicago White Sox must win their remaining games and hope the Orioles lose both of theirs to force a wild-card tie.

Alomar was ejected in the first inning after arguing a called third strike by umpire John Hirschbeck. It was his first ejection of the season, and after he charged from the dugout he had to be restrained by manager Davey Johnson.

Johnson wasn't able to stop Alomar from spitting in Hirschbeck's face, an infraction that could result in a league-mandated suspension.

Red Sox 7, Yankees 5

At Boston, Yankees manager Joe Torre's playoff pitching dilemma deepened when the Red Sox hammered Dwight Gooden (11-7).

Torre was considering both Gooden and Jimmy Key as his possible starter for the Yankees' third playoff game next week behind Andy Pettitte and David Cone.

But Gooden, making his first start at Fenway Park since losing Game 5 of the 1986 World Series with the New York Mets, allowed six runs and eight hits in five innings.

Aaron Sele (7-11) got the win. Darren Bragg and Nomar Garciaparra had three RBIs apiece for Boston.

White Sox 4, Twins 2

At Minneapolis, Ray Durham and Danny Tartabull homered as Chicago stayed alive in the wild-card race. The White Sox are two games back of Baltimore with two to play.

The two homers gave Chicago a team-record 193 this season, one more than the White Sox hit in 1977. They also gave Alex Fernandez (16-10) his 10th victory in 12 career decisions against Minnesota, which dropped to a season-worst eight games under .500.

Brad Radke (11-16) took the loss.

Cowboys return to site of 'Fourth-and-1'

AP Sports Writer
PHILADELPHIA (AP) - There was distinct anger in Barry Switzer's voice as he addressed last season's most infamous fourth-and-1 call. "It was fourth and a foot. Get that straight," Switzer said. "If it was fourth-and-1, I would have kicked the thing. It was fourth and a foot." Nine months later, Switzer was still animated as he discussed the most controversial coaching decision he has made in two seasons with the Dallas Cowboys.

Switzer's Cowboys jumped out to a 17-3 lead in that game, although the Eagles managed to kick a field goal right before the half. Philadelphia trimmed the Dallas lead to three points on Ricky Watters' 1-yard touchdown run and the subsequent two-point conversion. The Eagles tied the score at 17 on another field goal in the fourth quarter, setting the stage for Philadelphia's two biggest defensive stands of the season. After the tying field goal, the Cowboys got the ball on their 20. Trey Aikman threw two incompletions before he hit Cory Fleming for a 9-yard reception that left Dallas within inches of a first down. "If it had been fourth-and-1, I would have punted it, like everybody else," Switzer said. "But I felt I had to get something going. I had to make something (happen). This team hadn't moved the ball all day." When the sellout crowd at Veterans Stadium realized Switzer wasn't sending out punter John Jett, the already noisy stadium began to shake. The Cowboys chose a play they've run successfully hundreds of times when they need a yard. Named "Load Left," it's designed to have fullback Darryl Johnston, left guard Nate Newton and left tackle Mark Tuinei create a small crack for Emmitt Smith to squirt through. "That's our bread and butter," Newton said. "That's what we do in tight situations. The whole world knows what's coming, but we don't give a darn." The Eagles certainly knew it was coming, and when Smith took the handoff, he was met almost immediately by Kurt Gouveia and a swarm of Eagles who smothered him short of the first down. The crowd went wild - until the officials said the play didn't count. They ruled it began a split-second after they signaled for the two-minute warning. Given a second chance, Switzer didn't give it a second thought. "I put all my chips in the pot," he said. "I can't turn around and say, 'Oh, we didn't make it, we better punt now.' I couldn't look at those kids and say, 'I believed in you one time, let's punt it.' Hell no. I'm in for the ride, baby. You've got to go for it again." The Cowboys lined up again, and ran "Load Left" again, with the same results: a bunch of Eagles enveloping Smith short of the first-down marker. Philadelphia took over and kicked a 42-yard field goal that gave the Eagles their first victory over Dallas in seven tries. The win, which came after a disappointing loss in Seattle, moved the Eagles to 9-5. A win the following week against the Cardinals put Philadelphia in the playoffs. "Those (stops) were the trademarks of our season," Eagles coach Ray Rhodes said. "If you were to say what the biggest thing to happen to our football team last season was, that was it." It was also an important moment for the Cowboys. The loss - and the widespread criticism leveled at Switzer and his team - refocused the Cowboys. They played five more games and won all five, earning their third Super Bowl championship in four years.

Rivalry between Pittsburgh, Houston getting good again

AP Sports Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) - The cities are far apart, so the rivalry was built over a distance. It helped that the teams always were so close in the standings. Houston Oilers vs. Pittsburgh Steelers. Once the AFC's best matchup - for a time, even better than Raiders vs. Chiefs or Bills vs. Dolphins - it's getting good again after years of dormancy. Now, in a series where the biggest games normally are reserved for December or even later, the Oilers (2-1) and Steelers (2-1) will stage an intriguing and important AFC Central game Sunday, only a month into the season.

AFC Central's preeminent quarterback and the Oilers began to dominate the division. The series hasn't been very competitive since Bill Cowher took over as Pittsburgh's coach in 1992, with the Steelers winning six of eight. But Fisher is gradually reshaping his team into one that closely resembles the Steelers, even if there are considerable differences in systems and schematics. Quarterbacks Chris Chandler (Oilers) and Mike Tomczak (Steelers), for example, kicked around the NFL for years before finally landing starting jobs - Chandler with his fifth team, Tomczak with his fourth. Both teams were dissatisfied with their running games and made offseason moves to improve them. The Steelers traded for Jerome Bettis after Bam Morris ran afoul of the law in Texas, and Houston drafted Heisman Trophy winner Eddie George of Ohio State. Bettis has rushed for more than 100 yards in each of the Steelers' last two games, while George has been everything the Oilers wanted, with 267 yards and a touchdown in three games.

"He brings up the play of the people around him," Fisher said. "When they traded (for Bettis), we said, 'There goes Pittsburgh again.' They find one way or another to get a great back." Defensively, the Oilers employ variations of the 46 defense Fisher learned as a Chicago Bears defensive back. The Steelers like to experiment themselves, including defensive coordinator Dick LeBeau's ever-expanding 31 defense of one lineman, three linebackers and seven defensive backs. "The Steelers are missing some players off their defense from last year, but they're getting the same result," said Chandler, who has six touchdown passes and only one interception. "They're a very physical, intelligent defense."

The Steelers have regrouped from a distracting series of injuries and roster moves to restake their claim as the AFC Central's team to beat. The Oilers, infused with a new sense of confidence by coach Jeff Fisher, think they can do exactly that: beat the Steelers, even on the road. The lame-duck Oilers don't get much support at home as they prepare to pack for Nashville, so they've become something of road warriors. They've won five of their last nine away from the Astrodome. "It's an important game," Fisher said. "And this game is just as important to them as it is to us." The Oilers and Steelers met twice in the AFC championship game in the 1978 and 1979 seasons, back when it was Earl Campbell vs. Franco Harris and Terry Bradshaw vs. Dan Pastorini. Later, after Bradshaw retired, Warren Moon emerged as the

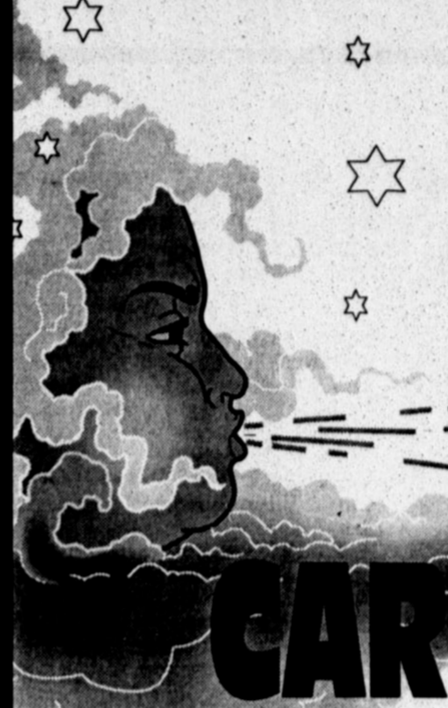

Our defense thrives on stopping the run," defensive end Kevin Henry said. "To stop Houston, we know we've got to stop Eddie George. The more disciplined we become as a defense as the season goes along, I think we'll be hard to beat." Fisher said Bettis brings a different dimension to a Steelers offense that was pass-heavy en route to the Super Bowl last season. That defense is very aware of the success Chandler has had in finding an open Willie Davis, who has a touchdown catch in each of the Oilers' three games. Of his six receptions, three are for touchdowns. "We've developed a great rapport," Chandler said. Tomczak, a onetime teammate of Fisher's in Chicago, now must try to build just such a relationship with Yancey Thigpen, the Pro Bowl receiver who has been sidelined all season with a hamstring injury. He is expected to play. "You can look for me on Sunday - and not just on the sidelines standing and watching," said Thigpen, who made 85 catches last season. Pittsburgh has swept Houston in the last two season series.

Nashville put on hold by NFL

By TERESA M. WALKER
AP Sports Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - That silence you hear is Nashville's NFL plans on hold. The city expected to see the Houston Oilers playing the 1998 season in a brand-new 65,000-seat stadium on banks of the Cumberland River. But four months have passed, and not one brick or shovel of dirt has been moved. The reason? Blame it on the Cleveland Browns. When Art Modell moved the beloved Browns to Baltimore and the team became the Ravens, legal recourses were quickly checked. One such response was drafted by Rep. Martin Hoke, R-Ohio, who wanted the NFL to compensate a jilted city with a new team or pay a bounty. The NFL has held off allowing Nashville to start construction until Congress adjourns and Hoke's "Fan Freedom and Community Protection Act" is officially dead. Until then, "We're just running out the clock..." Nashville Mayor Phil Bredesen said. Congress is expected to adjourn no later than Oct. 4, and Bredesen will be ready. There is a final round of documents to sign with the Oilers and the NFL and a pledge the city won't sue the NFL. Then Bredesen can sign a construction contract. "When those three things are done and when a construction contract is signed... then we've got a team in place," Bredesen said. Bredesen doesn't think Nashville has been held hostage, but the delays caused by Hoke's bill means Nashville's stadium will not be finished until 1999. That forces the Oilers to play in Memphis' Liberty Bowl Memorial Stadium for the first year in Tennessee. "Bud (Adams, Oilers' owner), has asked me about that and I have said it makes a lot of sense to try and develop a following in Memphis." "There were some pretty hard feelings," Bredesen said. Memphis worked 20 years for its own NFL team only to see the Oilers dropped into Nashville's lap. The wait also means that voters, who approved the relocation deal May 7, have seen little proof that Music City is joining the NFL.

Yellow and blue "NFL YES" bumper stickers are peeling and fading around town. Football fans still haven't been able to buy a T-shirt or cap. NFL Properties has not approved a logo, team colors or a new team name for the franchise. The airwaves offer the only proof that a team is coming. Turn on a television or radio, it seems, and there's Oilers executive vice president Mike McClure.

Town hopes to convert former bar into library for kids

By RENE ROMO
Albuquerque Journal
COLUMBUS, N.M. (AP) - Book lovers in this isolated border town hope knowledge soon flows where beer used to - and in quantities as great.

Plans are under way to convert the former Pancho Villa Bar, a plain white block building that federal agents shut down four years ago, into a library.

"To think of all the beer I drank in that building," Mayor Carlos Ogden said wistfully.

The bar was a favorite hangout of locals and the town's only watering hole, but federal agents seized it in October 1992 as an asset bought with the proceeds of marijuana smuggling. Last October, the Luna County Sheriff's Department turned the local landmark over to Columbus.

"I couldn't get a bar back for my poor little town, but I could get a library," said Ogden, who makes no secret of his unhappiness that the community has been left dry.

"Probably the two places I've spent the most time in my life."

Library officials say Ogden and a few thirsty residents wax nostalgic for a town saloon - the nearest bars are in neighboring Palomas, Mexico - but most understand the need for an expanded library.

For one thing, schoolchildren need one. After sixth grade, children are bused 30 miles to Deming. Immediately after school, the children are bused back to Columbus, where the library's resources are limited and there are no personal computers to use.

"Kids get discouraged," said librarian Jeane Canfield. "We want to make it a little easier for them and give them a little more pride in their homework, so they can get the grades to inspire them to go on to college."

The current library is housed in a cramped, 900-square-foot room appended to the equally tiny town hall. The library room was once the garage for the town fire truck, Ogden said.

Pressure to move from town hall also is coming from the mayor, who wants to convert the current library into a place where the Village Council can meet and where the municipal court judge can hold his weekly hearings.

Compared to the onetime fire truck bay, the 3,200-square-foot Pancho Villa Bar one block east and across the street from the town post office is sprawling. The former dance floor will hold book stacks, a children's section complete with a short table, and a work area for the librarian.

The library will get the swamp cooler and bathroom it now lacks, along with some major new additions - a copy machine and a bank of computers provided by New Mexico State University with one year of free access to the Internet.

"We are going to teach them (children) the information highway," Ogden said. "That's the way to bring the world to a real isolated place."

The bar area will be converted into a community room where classes can be held for preschool children and for adults seeking their General Equivalency Diploma, said Canfield.

"I think most of the townspeople here kind of relish the idea of turning something that was habitually drug-related into something that would further the education of the children in the community," said Paul Le Marble, owner of a linens manufacturing plant and a writer.

The estimated cost of moving the library ranges from $5,000 to open one side of the bar up to $40,000 for a complete renovation of the building, including major repairs to the roof.

Canfield said an Aug. 9 auction of goods, many of them bar items seized by the Justice Department, raised about $9,000. Luna County has pledged $9,000 toward repair of the bar roof. Most of the work is being done by volunteers trying to build up what most communities take for granted. Town officials are trying to figure out how to come up with whatever the renovation balance may be.

The cash-strapped library probably could not expand were it not for the federal giveaway. But then, the little library has always depended on the generosity of others, said Canfield, herself a volunteer.

Much of the library's original inventory of books, Canfield said, consists of donations. Some of the shelves were donated by a grocery store; the card catalogue is a hand-me-down from the Deming Library. The fiction section is dominated by paperback Westerns, mysteries and Harlequin romances.

"There's a place for Harlequin romances, but they shouldn't be the focus of a library," Canfield said.

The Deming Headlight newspaper provides a free subscription. And most of the periodicals are an eclectic selection of freebies dropped off by local subscribers: Bird Talk ("Dedicated to better care for pet birds"), Family Motor Coaching, and The Horsemen's Voice ("New Mexico's All Breed Horse Magazine"). Even the library's edition of Books in Print, a cornerstone of most libraries, is a 2-year-old bit of charity from the Hatch Library.

Canfield said the town provides about $800 per year for book acquisitions, enough to buy about 40 new books. Canfield plans to slowly build up the library's selection of Spanish-language books and books on Hispanic culture, as well as literature of the Southwest, fiction and nonfiction.

The library board of directors is working on specifications for the roof repairs. Under one scenario, the library could be operating out of the bar by mid-October, Canfield said.

As odd as it sounds, moving into the Pancho Villa is quite fitting, Canfield said. The turn-of-the-century Mexican revolutionary was a strong believer in education and funded several schools in Mexico, Canfield said.

"We enjoy imagining that Pancho Villa came back to visit us in spirit," Canfield said. "The Pancho Villa cantina is turning into an institution of education."

Operator of tourist town has seen many famous visitors

By DAVID FLICK
The Dallas Morning News
DALLAS - For a fake town with no population, Old Fort Dallas has seen a lot of action.

Kenneth Johnson, who runs the fabricated ghost town in southern Dallas County, will give up ownership in an Oct. 5 auction. After that, Johnson, 66, will retire, travel with his wife and treasure his memories of the Interstate 45 curiosity.

In the five years since he took control of Old Fort Dallas, he said, he has witnessed oilman Ray Hunt operate a dunking booth at a company picnic, officials of a New York bank herd longhorn cattle down the main street, and members of the heavy-metal band Metallica don Western wear.

He has met Troy Aikman, Nolan Ryan, Willie Nelson, Vince Gill and Chuck Norris. He has rented out the facility for children's birthday parties, the Cattle Baron's Ball and photo shoots with the Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders. This year, more than 20,000 rock fans came to Old Fort Dallas for the Lollapalooza concert.

And there were weddings, too, of course.

"People like to have weddings here. They don't have to dress up, they can come in blue jeans," he said.

He remembered one wedding in particular in which the couple was already married, but the bride wanted to restage the event for her mother, who was from England. The couple wanted to show her a Western wedding, he said, or at least what a Briton might think weddings were like in Texas.

"The bride wore a traditional gown, and the groom wore jeans," Johnson said, "and when he came in, they tied him up and pointed a gun to his head and said, 'Say I do.'"

The next day, Johnson said, "I went to a Cowboys game and I saw the bride in the stands. She was still wearing the wedding gown."

The buildings were constructed off I-45 near Wilmer in the early 1980s. The town was originally called "Big D" and was conceived as a theme park that could serve as a venue for private parties and backdrops for commercial filming.

After the initial venture went bankrupt, Johnson picked up its 30 buildings and 100 acres at a foreclosure sale.

Johnson, who had recently retired as owner of an auto air-conditioning parts manufacturing company, owned land nearby. He said he attended the auction not intending to buy the property.

"When nobody else bid, I made what I thought was a ridiculously low bid. The bidding started there, and that's where it stayed," he said.

Many of the furnishings inside the buildings are authentic. The saloon bar came from a small town near the Rio Grande, and the bars in the jail came from Collin County, he said.

The buildings themselves, however, are more Hollywood than Dodge City. Although some are modeled after actual buildings, and many are constructed with old wood, some of them simply look old.

Johnson said the builder soaked steel wool in vinegar for 24 hours, then brushed the mixture on the wood to give it an instant weathered look.

Johnson said he always regarded the town as a hobby.

"I never advertised much," he said. "I just waited for the phone to ring, and what business came to us, came."

That business included episodes of "Walker, Texas Ranger" in which the stretch of southern Dallas County prairie did duty as a Mexican town. Old Fort Dallas was also the site of a much-viewed Dallas Mavericks commercial that featured Jason Kidd, Jim Jackson and Jamal Mashburn.

Johnson vividly remembers the day it was filmed.

He was struck, he said, by the scene of then team-owner Don Carter driving "himself up in his pickup truck, while his players arrived in their chauffeured limousines."

Although Old Fort Dallas was profitable, Johnson said, he wants to give it up for a second retirement. He said the bidding would begin without a minimum.

Jeff Hathorn, sales manager for the J.P. King Auction group, said his organization has received at least 125 inquiries about the auction.

The town and 43 surrounding acres will be sold in the "saloon" at 11 a.m. After that, another 60 surrounding acres will be sold, and finally, all of the town's artifacts will be auctioned on a piecemeal basis.

He said he believed buyers would be interested in keeping the town intact.

"Because of the uniqueness of the property, I would think they'd want to keep the buildings as is," he said. Johnson declined to say how much he paid for the town but earlier reports had the purchase price at about $275,000.

"When you get tired of a toy, you eventually make a decision to move on," he said.

But maybe not entirely. "I'll stay during the transition period," he said. "I may even stay around to work here."

'Robo City' turns ideas into business partnerships

By CASEY COMBS
Associated Press Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) - Where others see a post-industrial wasteland of old brick warehouses and rusting foundries along the Allegheny River, robotics researchers envision "Robo City."

The NASA-funded Robotics Engineering Consortium, which sticks out like a shiny thumb at the foot of a hill crammed with run-down row houses, is the only center in the world devoted to turning robotic ideas into practical machines by forming partnerships with companies.

"These field robots will revolutionize industry after industry," NASA Administrator Dan Goldin said at the consortium's recent opening.

Companies such as Boeing, Caterpillar and Ford, which already are paying for the first robots, and other spin-off corporations likely will take over the nearby vacant buildings and lots, according to Dave Pahnos, director of the consortium.

Robo City would create hundreds of thousands of jobs and keep the United States in control of cutting-edge machinery, he said.

Consortium engineers can make "any piece of mobile equipment intelligent and autonomous" with "nobody on a joystick - no human," Pahnos said.

Previously, robots were confined to laboratories at a handful of universities, including Carnegie Mellon in Pittsburgh. The Robotics Institute there conceived the consortium two years ago and started it with a $2.5 million grant from NASA.

"In some ways the nation has played small in robotics," said William "Red" Whittaker, chief scientist at the consortium. "We haven't really hunted big game."

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration uses some intelligent machines to perform tasks in space, but most are made in Canada, Whittaker said. Goldin said nine out of 10 robots are built in other countries.

The consortium wants to change that by building and testing robots at the 98-year-old bronze foundry which has been renovated for its headquarters just north of downtown. The assembly area is larger than a football field and three stories high.

"The people in (the Pittsburgh neighborhood of) Lawrenceville have no idea what's going on here," said Carl Loeffler, a former art professor who is research director for the consortium's virtual reality laboratory. "They think we're conducting experiments on aliens from outer space."

Someday, that's just what the robots being developed at the consortium could do.

At the recent opening, a dune-buggy-like "lunar rover" used on-board sensing equipment to drive itself around the concrete floor and videotape guests.

LunaCorp in Fairfax, Va., plans to test the rover in deserts before launching it to the moon in 2000 with NASA's help. The company expects to make money by letting regular people operate the rover at amusement parks on Earth.

Other projects, while less glamorous, mean radical changes in heavy equipment.

They include an excavator for Caterpillar, a fork truck for Ford and an off-road vehicle for Boeing. The agriculture, mining and cargo handling industries each has about a $2 billion market potential, Pahnos said.

A computer-driven harvester for New Holland North America is expected to be ready for farmers by next fall at a price just slightly higher than mechanical machines.

It uses the satellite-based Global Positioning System, wheel sensors and a video camera to "see" a crop line so it can harvest a field without a driver or a remote operator, said Kerien Fitzpatrick, associate director of the consortium.

The harvester is faster and more responsive than a human driver can be, but it comes equipped with a cab so that farmers can drive it themselves until they ease into the idea of letting a computer do the work, he said.

NASA plans to spend $4.25 million annually for at least three years to lend its space robotics know-how to the consortium's Earth-based projects.

The Canadian national park system includes more land than any other national park system in the world.

Service program provides opportunity for young woman to help throughout nation

JESSICA SERRANO
New AmeriCorps member

By BECKY CAMP
Lifestyles Editor
AmeriCorps is a national service initiative that engages thousands of Americans in a domestic Peace Corps, to get things done throughout our nation's urban and rural communities.

One of these Americans who will soon be getting things done is Jessica Serrano of Hereford.

"I will be doing stuff for 10 months," said Miss Serrano, who applied to AmeriCorps in October 1995.

Before her application was approved, she had to submit two recommendations -- one from her employer and one from a college professor. She also was interviewed by phone and was fingerprinted.

Even though AmeriCorps has 20,000 members, they only accept 1,200 new applicants each year.

Serrano left this past week for the San Diego Campus, one of four in the United States, for a two-week period of intensive training designed to prepare Corpsmembers for community service and to develop their sense of community rules and team spirit.

A typical day during training will begin with a 5:30 a.m. wake up call, followed by physical training at 5:45 a.m. Training sessions are scheduled throughout the day with the evening session ending at 9 p.m.

After the two-week training session, the 9-1/2 months that follow will be spent doing service learning projects and participating in a variety of educational experiences.

Some recently completed projects have included three teams of Corpsmembers who responded to the floods in Oregon when called upon by the American Red Cross, two teams who were certified by the State of California to fight wildland fires and 44 Corpsmembers who provided support during the Olympics in Atlanta.

Miss Serrano said she is willing to learn the skills required to provide these services in order to earn money to further her education.

"I will be paid $600 a month, plus room and board, while I am participating in the program, but I will receive a scholarship to help me continue my college education at the end of the 10 months," said Miss Serrano.

"We have been told that completing this program will open doors for even more scholarships," said Celia Serrano, Jessica's mother.

Miss Serrano, who graduated from Hereford High School in 1995, has completed one year at Amarillo College.

"I want to go back to school after my time with AmeriCorps, at South Plains College in Levelland or at Texas Tech," she said. "I want to be a narcotics detective after I graduate."

Even though her mother is not exactly thrilled about this career choice, she said, "I will wish her well and be there for her."

"AmeriCorps is not for everyone, but anyone who is willing to work for it can earn money to continue their schooling," said Miss Serrano.

If you are one of them, write for information to AmeriCorps NCCC Western Region, 33500 Truxton Road, Bldg. 175, San Diego, CA 92133-1212.

Becky's Camp Site

By Becky Camp

Watching people is fascinating. When I was a youngster, we would drive from my hometown of 1,200 to the "city" to shop once a month.

While my mother, my sister and I would go into the stores, my dad almost always stayed in the car.

"I'll just sit here and watch the people," he would say.

I thought that was about the silliest thing I ever heard. But as I get older, I see why he did that.

Watching people is fascinating.

Since I have had occasion to sit in waiting rooms of doctors' offices and hospitals a lot lately, I have spent a great deal of time watching people. So I decided to see what other people do while they wait.

The first choice of "waiters" seems to be just watching others. There is always a constant turnover in the room as new people enter, patients who have been waiting are called in to see the doctor or the patient and the person who accompanied them are finally ready to leave.

There is an interesting mix of young and old, large and small, the obviously ill and those who appear to be perfectly healthy.

There is an unusual assortment of fashions from stylish to trendy to "comfortable--shorts and tennis shoes."

Some of the people who are waiting choose to look through magazines, most of which are sorely outdated. Others bring things with them to help pass the time, such as papers to grade or a crossword puzzle or toys for the children.

Picking a place to sit is a difficult decision for some of the newcomers. They don't want to occupy a chair next to an already occupied seat. But if there is no other place, they sit on the edge of their chair as far away from the person next to them as they can.

It isn't an uncommon sight to see someone dozing off for a quick nap. (Could it possibly be out of boredom?) While watching people is fascinating, it isn't necessarily invigorating.

So as you can tell, I spend most my time in waiting rooms watching people. And as a result of this I have developed a little game I play where I try to guess from an individual's appearance what their occupation might be.

Some, like the woman grading papers, are easy to guess. Others could follow any one of a number of professions--like men in suits and ties. They obviously aren't mechanics or welders, but they could be lawyers or salesmen or even computer repairmen.

And some I think are intentionally misleading, like those in western attire who aren't cowboys.

It's amazing what you can see if you really look at the people around you.

Watching people is fascinating.

I'm going to devote a little time to meddling in other people's business now.

I saw something at the service station just a few days ago that bothered me greatly--two youngsters that appeared to be 3 or 4 years old left unattended in a vehicle with the motor running.

One of the kids was sitting in the driver's seat and playing with knobs on the dash.

This child may have been told "not" to mess with the gear shift or parking brake, but at such a young age, about all that kind of warning would do is arouse their curiosity.

It only takes a fraction of a second to put an idling vehicle in gear and a youngster would have no idea how to stop it. And probably not be able to stop it, even if they knew how, before the vehicle hit something or someone.

Please, parents, think about this. It only takes a second to cause a tragedy that can never be undone.

Junior Historians take first field trip of year

Junior Historians spent the day recently on their first field trip of the year. Sixty-three members and eight sponsors left Hereford Junior, High at eight o'clock and made their first stop at the Armstrong County Museum in Claude.

A guided tour of the Armstrong County Museum, where they learned of the early pioneers of the area and the influence of ranching; a movie at the Gem Theater and a walking tour were the highlights of the Claude visit. From Claude, the group went to Goodnight and on to Lake McClellan for a picnic.

The next stop was at McLean for a visit at the McLean/Alanreed Museum. Among the interesting displays there was one about the German POW Camp, World War II. The Devil's Rope Museum in McLean also proved to be very interesting to students and sponsors. This museum has a large collection of barbed wire and fencing tools as well as Route 66 Hall of Fame and Mother Road items.

From McLean, the group headed north to Old Mobeetie, the oldest town in the Panhandle. The artifacts of Fort Elliott were also viewed.

October activities for Junior Historians will include seminar attendance of sixteen members. The seminar will be at the Panhandle-Plains Museum in Canyon and will be about researching our own county courthouse. The conclusion of the seminar will be March 20, when the members will display their research. This activity will also be reported as an "Adopt A Building" project on the Junior Historian annual report.

Other October activities will be the installation of officers and the involvement in the Panhandle Veterans Memorial. Junior Historians welcome the opportunity to present programs for civic clubs and other groups.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: My husband is in his 80s and refuses to give up on sex.

For some time now, he has been unable to complete the act, after trying for up to two hours. By that time, I am totally exhausted and feeling resentful. I have asked him repeatedly to stop after an hour, but he says, "Nature works slowly," and I should be more patient. Well, Ann, "nature" has not been working at all for a very long time, and my patience is wearing thin.

I have told him that I would rather forget the whole thing. Two hours of his trying to retrieve his manhood zaps me out for a couple of days.

He says I have no right to deprive him. He insists that giving him sex is part of my marriage obligation, and he expects me to live up to it.

These weekly attempts are sheer torture for me, especially when my arthritis acts up. It makes no difference to him how I feel. He insists it is my duty. Is it? I need some advice. -- Worn Out in California

Dear California: No wife "owes" her husband sex. Many women accommodate their men when they don't feel like it, but it is because they care about them and not because their men demand it.

Tell that inconsiderate, horny old coot NO unless YOU feel like it. If he gives you a big argument, hand him this column. I'll take the blame.

Dear Ann Landers: I recently started dating a terrific guy. He is everything I could want in a man. We both have similar interests, and he is open to trying new things. He comes from a very stable family background.

My problem is that "Pete" has been confessing about past involvements. He said, "I want to be an open book and have no secrets so nothing is ever a surprise or thrown in my face 10 years from now."

Pete has made it very clear that he wants marriage and children. I believe he would make a terrific husband and father. However, I have a secret that only two people know about -- not my family or friends -- only my ex-boyfriend and my ob-gyn.

I had an abortion eight years ago. I could never tell my family. They are ultra-conservative and are totally against abortion. I also feel it is none of anyone's business unless I decide to make it their business.

Must I tell Pete? If I do, must I tell my family? Please help me with this soul-searing dilemma. -- Brooklyn

Dear Brooklyn: You don't need to tell your family, but Pete deserves to know before you marry him. If this derails the wedding plans, so be it. Far better to get the skeleton out of the closet than to live in fear that one day it might come clanging into the open and raise questions about what else in your past you might be hiding.

Dear Ann Landers: I loved that letter from the reader who said a female pigeon had a crush on her husband. Whenever the husband came around, the pigeon fanned her tail and flirted.

When I worked in maintenance, I ran into a parakeet who, when he saw me climbing up a ladder, said, "What are you up to, big boy?" He repeated it four times, and I was completely unnerved. Finally, I told the owner, "Take that bird in another room or let HIM install the fan." As the woman carried the cage out, the bird said, "Goodbye now."

Can you top this? -- Big Boy in Delray Beach, Fla.

Dear Del: I wouldn't even try. Have trouble sleeping at night and don't want to get involved in a novel? "A Collection of My Favorite Gems of the Day" is the perfect bed-stand mate. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $5.25 (this includes postage and handling) to: Collection, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562 (in Canada, $6.25).

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

WORDS OF WISDOM XVI

In few short weeks we will once again enjoy one of the greatest media events of our time. Millions of dollars will pour into advertising campaigns as folks try to convince us to make decisions that will benefit them. I write about the 1996 political elections.

The media will spend hours and pages in every move the candidates make. I would not be at all surprised to even see coverage of the political potty stops this year. This would certainly make for some interesting sound bites.

Candidates will make promises they cannot keep. They will spend hours debating non-issues and they will propose elaborate solutions for problems they can never solve.

Then on November 5th, a minority of Americans will go to the poles to elect a president and send some new faces to congress. The majority will complain regardless of the outcome. Four more years of whining will ensue.

I may sound a little cynical about the political process and I guess I am. However, I respect and dislike it at the same time. Our process may be the best in the world, but it isn't perfect and certainly could be improved.

The whole process is complex. It is a series of checks and balances with pendulum swings of power and philosophy. At the same time the political process is sad and funny, invigorating and disgusting, serious and silly, frightening and comforting and inclusive and exclusive.

There are many wonderful quotes about politics, government and politicians. It seems fitting to share some of the best ones here. They run the gamut from deadly serious to funny and frivolous. Most importantly they reflect the mood of America for more than 100 years.

Political quotes

- We're going to move left and right at the same time. - Governor Jerry Brown
- An elected official is one who gets 51 percent of the votes cast by 40 percent of the 60 percent of voters who registered. - Dan Bennett
- Do you ever get the feeling that the only reason we have elections is to find out if the polls were right? - Robert Orben

There are always too many Democratic congressmen, too many Republican congressmen, and never enough U.S. congressmen. - Anonymous

Politicians are the same all over. They promise to build a bridge even where there is no river. - Nikita Khrushchev

A politician thinks of the next election; a statesman, of the next generation. - J.F. Clarke

No government is better than the men who compose it. - John F. Kennedy

No man is good enough to govern another man without that other's consent. - Abraham Lincoln

No government has ever been beneficial when the attitude of government was that it was taking care of the people. The only freedom consists in the people taking care of the government - Woodrow Wilson

Politics is a profession; a serious, complicated and, in its true sense, a noble one. - Dwight D. Eisenhower

I'm just glad we don't get all the government we pay for. - Will Rogers

A politician is a person who divides his time between running for office and running for cover. - Antonio Gonzalez

Ninety percent of politics is deciding whom to blame. - Meg Greenfield

The politician reminded him of a 1948 Studebaker - a car that looked as if it could go either way. - Donald Allen.

Between the Covers

By MARTHA RUSSELL

The Friends of the Deaf Smith County Library is a volunteer organization of persons interested in books, to create an awareness of the opportunities offered by the public library, to increase library services, to focus on library needs, and to enrich the cultural advantages available to citizens of Deaf Smith County and vicinity.

Now that you've read through all that, I will interpt. The Friends are an invaluable support group for your county library, so much so, that library services would be greatly lacking without their help.

Friends are responsible for starting the talking book collection, starting the video collection, purchasing the video projector, sponsoring the monthly free family film (and the popcorn!), the annual open house, and programs for schools during National Library Week, just to mention a few of the things they do. In short, the Friends are available to fill in gaps, spur us on to new heights, and generally facilitate the smooth working of the library.

The annual election meeting was held this last week, and I understand, dues are now due. It's only $3 per year for an individual and $6 per family. Business/organization dues are just $10. What a bargain!

Do you use your county library? Has it been of service to you in the past year? In this age of diminishing public funds, etc. consider being a part of the world's most excellent support team. You may contact us here at the library for membership.

This week we have something of a variety in new fiction -- fantasy, western and mystery.

Byzantium by Stephen R. Lawhead is the story of a great gift and an even greater journey. Aidan, a scribe in a remote Irish monastery on the far, wild edge of Christendom, is chosen to accompany a small band of monks on a quest to the farthest eastern reaches of the known world -- the fabled city of Byzantium. They are to present a beautiful and costly hand-illuminated manuscript, the Book of Kells, to the Emperor of all Christendom.

The journey, far beyond his wildest imaginings takes Aidan from the simple monastic life over sea and land into the vast, corrupt, and glittering heart of the Holy Roman Empire. On this expedition, Aidan becomes, by turns, a warrior and a sailor, a slave and a spy, a Viking and a Saracen, and finally, a man. This valiant Irish monk faces the greatest trial that can confront any man in any age: commanding his own Destiny.

Harry Combs' The Legend of the Painted Horse is a continuation of the saga of mountain man, Indian scout, and story teller Cat Brules. Steven Cartwright, a young man just back from World War I, sought out the man he loved more than anyone: Cat Brules. For Cartwright, life was just beginning, and would take him from the firs of war to the frontier of modern aviation. For Cat Brules, it was the twilight of a life that spanned the taming of a frontier, and the whole short, passionate history of the Old West.

Now thirty years later, Cartwright remembers Cat Brules and weaves together stories from Brules' extraordinary life with those of his own. And in a thrilling tale that spans the globe and the millennium, he recounts the strange and wondrous legend of how wild, painted horses came to the American Northwest, a tale as grand, rich and passionate as any ever told by Cat Brules.

Like all great tales, it is also mystery. It is the story of how an infant girl born to Wild Rose, the great love of Cat Brules' life, was lost and then found again -- and became the blood link between the teacher and his disciple.

The title of the new mystery this week is Gladly The Cross-eyed Bear by Ed McBain. Say that title out loud to yourself and think about the old hymn (Gladly the Cross I'd Bear).

The newest Matthew Hope story is actually about a cross-eyed teddy bear named Gladly which is mixed up in a trademark dispute between Hope's client, Lainie Commins, and toy company tycoons Etta and Brett Toland. Hope is certain that he can win this case until one of his key players is killed and his client is charged with the murder.

Lainie's story keeps changing her story as Matthew Hope discovers that she is not only a toy designer with a complaint, but also a participant in a most surprising sexual liaison.

Meanwhile, two of Hope's closest associates have found their way into the underworld of drug-smuggling violence from opposite ends -- and they can only escape together.

Finally, the time of year has come when we are able to order new books. Hang in there, folks, there are new books on the way.

Extension News

By BEVERLY HARDER

Consumers have discovered that calcium is important for your body, but supplements are not exactly what nutrition experts had in mind.

Sales of calcium supplements in supermarkets and drugstores have increased 13 percent in the last year alone. But most are unaware that calcium pills appear to interfere with absorption of zinc -- a nutrient many people, particularly the elderly -- already do not get enough of daily.

Nearly one in two older Americans take in less than two thirds of the zinc RECOMMENDED DAILY ALLOWANCE, according to a study of some 700 elderly men and women. Zinc is crucial for proper immune function, protein synthesis, wound healing and many other tasks.

One researcher discovered calcium's effect on zinc in two separate experiments. Both showed a significant drop in zinc absorption when participants took calcium supplements, but in a group of 59- to 79-year-old women zinc absorption dramatically fell six-fold when supplemental calcium was given.

In other words, the more calcium in the gastrointestinal tract, the more zinc that gets pushed out of the body.

For some time, researchers have known that calcium supplements can interfere with the absorption of iron. This recent study is the first to detect a potential problem with zinc as well. Now that high-calcium supplements are being recommended to stave off osteoporosis, it is believed that shortfalls in zinc absorption may be common.

A consensus panel convened by the National Institute of Health has recommended that all people over 65, as well as all women over 50 not on estrogen replacement therapy, take in 1,500 milligrams of calcium a day.

That's almost twice the recommended dietary allowance of 800 milligrams -- an amount hard to get from food alone.

A solution that could help is for consumers to include more zinc-rich foods in their diet -- meat, poultry, eggs and seafood. Of course, health professionals recommend averaging no more than about six ounces of flesh foods a day, largely for the purpose of limiting fat consumption.

Cereals and whole-grain products contain some zinc, but minerals in those foods are less available for use by the body.

A second option is to take a multivitamin/mineral supplement that contains 100 percent of the RECOMMENDED DAILY ALLOWANCE for zinc (15 milligrams). That amount of zinc will bring most calcium supplementers where they need to be for zinc absorption.

Instead of assuming that supplements make it okay to eat a less-than-optimal diet, consumers should be aware that taking supplements only makes it more important to follow a nutritious diet as possible to minimize any negative impact the pills and tablets may have.

Volunteers hear guest speakers

The Problem Pregnancy Center's staff of volunteers meet Sept. 24 in the Antonian Room at St. Anthony's.

Carolyn Jansa, RNC, advanced practice nurse from Hereford Regional Medical Center women and Childrens Clinic, along with Marlene Hendershot, co-director of the center, presented a program on sexually transmitted diseases.

Cliff Golden, vocational education coordinator from HISD, gave a presentation to the group on the computerized baby dolls called Baby Think It Over. These dolls will be used in Hereford to allow teens to experience first-hand the tough job of caring for a child.

The Problem Pregnancy Center is a non-profit educational facility which has been operating since 1985 and continues to provide free services to Hereford and the surrounding communities.

Thanks for the program

Red Cross Update

Everyone knows that the Red Cross responds to disasters. There is a special fund, which is set aside, just to pay for this service. The storms and flooding that have been pounding the East Coast have taken a large bite out of that fund, to the tune of approximately $25.2 million dollars. Because the hurricane season is not yet over, and because other forces always threaten destruction, there is concern that the amount of money remaining in the fund will not be adequate to meet the needs of another major disaster. So, Red Cross is beginning a national appeal to pay for the last one before the next one hits.

On last report, 50,125 families were affected by recent storms. Your American Red Cross has responded with nine "Emergency Response Vehicles" and the operation of 393 shelters. To date, more than 704,817 meals have been served to disaster victims.

The point is not that we responded, but that we were prepared. This preparedness is the business of the Red Cross. Every time someone takes a Red Cross class they help us prepare for disaster in two ways. They prepare to help someone in an emergency and the money they pay for the class supports the organization at every level. We have classes and programs which are offered to prepare you and your family for life, water safety, fire, tornado, aids and accidents. Without your support, we will fail.

All Red Cross disaster assistance is free, made possible by voluntary gifts of time and money from the American people. The Red Cross is not a government agency. To help the victims of this and other disasters, call 1-800-HELP-NOW (1-800-435-7669) or (1-800-257-7575 (Spanish)). You may also contribute to American Red Cross Disaster relief fund by sending a check to your local Red Cross chapter, and your local chapter and your area will get due credit for the contribution. Or you can contribute direct to the American Red Cross, P.O. Box 37243, Washington, D.C. 20013. Internet users can get more information about Red Cross disaster activities and make a secure online credit card contribution by visiting the American Red Cross World Wide web site at <http://www.redcross.org>. Major corporate and private donors should call for additional information.

Also, the funding with which your Red Cross was purchasing car seats has been discontinued. So, the supply of our seats available is slowly dwindling. If you have borrowed, or know someone who has borrowed an infant seat from the Red Cross, and the child has grown out of it, please return it. There have been many young families requesting them.

YOUR EYES

CAN YOU AVOID CATARACTS?

Once upon a time, we believed that everyone got cataracts, that this vision problem was an inescapable part of growing older. But it's not so. Good health can postpone cataracts and perhaps even prevent them.

Exposure to sunlight causes the most harm, and the effects are cumulative. Farm workers and fishermen develop cataracts earlier than office workers; people in the tropics get them younger. Research indicates that wearing a hat with a brim and sunglasses to protect against ultraviolet rays can slow the formation of cataracts.

Smoking is an eye hazard, too. Test at Johns Hopkins Hospital found a strong correlation between cigarette smoking and cataracts; heavier smokers ran greater risks.

Now diet has been found to be involved, too: antioxidants like vitamins C and E and beta carotene seem to offer protection.

Wheat farmers have option of revenue crop insurance

Deaf Smith County wheat farmers will be able to try a new kind of crop insurance this year that protects them against revenue losses, as well as yield losses. But they must decide quickly -- Sept. 30 is the deadline for choosing this new insurance.

This year, approximately 100,000 acres of wheat was harvested in the county.

"It's a new approach because it guarantees farmers a stated amount of revenue," said Ken Stokes, Texas A&M agricultural economist based in Dallas. "It's more expensive than traditional policies, but for the first time, covers losses from low prices, low yields or any combination of the two. Traditional crop insurance policies cover production losses only." Stokes stressed, "Wheat farmers in the High Plains, Rolling Plains and Blacklands should be sitting down soon with their crop insurance agents to examine this new option against other insurance programs to choose the best product for their situation. Crop Revenue Coverage (CRC) is an alternative to Multiple Peril Crop Insurance."

"This year's drought points up the uncertainties of farming and the need to choose crop insurance protection very carefully. If farmers don't make a change by the end of September, their existing insurance will continue in force and they won't have any options to adjust it until next year."

CRC was approved as a pilot program in Texas and six other states by the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation. It guarantees a minimum revenue calculated using a grower's yield history, a base price established this August prior to planting and a harvest time price determined next June.

"While the new farm bill moves farmers toward a more market-oriented system, it reduces the farmer's safety net," Stokes said. "However, using CRC to protect revenue, combined with the new farm program, could actually provide a stronger safety net than farmers had with deficiency payments. CRC also can protect and provide basis for securing production loans and the flexibility to use progressive marketing strategies to increase income."

CRC's expansion to wheat has the support of the Texas Wheat Producers Association, as well as the National Association of Wheat Growers, both of which worked to have Texas included in the pilot program.

"This may be just the program farmers want and need," said Bill Nelson, executive vice president of the Texas Wheat Growers. We look forward to working with the extension service, private companies and the Office of Risk Management to put forth a good educational program for our growers."

Other states included in the pilot program are Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, Michigan, Washington and parts of Montana. Growers got their first look at this kind of policy last year in Iowa and Nebraska with corn and soybeans when more than 35,000 producers enrolled in those two states.

TDA cautions farmers about unlicensed grain warehouses

Are you dealing with a warehouse licensed by the Texas Department of Agriculture? If not, maybe you should be!

Remember the old saying, "If it sounds too good to be true, it probably is?"

Many new turn-row dealers are popping up all over the state and they are not required to be licensed, insured or bonded in the state of Texas. Some may be there to take advantage of you in a system that has resulted in widely varied market prices. Beware!

Doing business with a warehouse licensed with the TDA insures your grain for losses caused by fire, tornado, lightning, wind storm, cyclone or internal explosion

Contact the TDA at (800) Tell-TDA for a list of the TDA-licensed grain warehouses. TDA inspects all of the warehouses licensed with the agency to make sure your grain is where it supposed to be.

Local directors attend annual TSSWCB meet

Three directors from the Tierra Blanca Soil and Water Conservation District -- Jerry Homfeld, Carl Kleuskens and Nick Josten -- attended the 56th Annual State Meeting of Texas State Soil and Water Conservation District Directors. Also attending was Jim Crowner, district conservationist, with the National Resources Conservation Service. The meeting was held Sept. 16-18 in the Radisson Plaza Hotel and Fort Worth/Tarrant County Convention Center.

Approximately 1,000 people attended the meeting. Bobby Waddle of De Soto, director of the Dalworth Soil and Water Conservation District welcomed the attendees on Tuesday morning. Other speakers were Guillermo "Memo" Benavides, president of the Association of the Texas Soil and Water Conservation Districts and Robert G. Buckley, executive director of the Texas State Soil and Water Conservation Board.

Special guest speaker was Nancy Robinson Masters of Abilene. Masters, an inspirational/motivational speaker and author, entertained and motivated listeners with her wit and "down home" style.

The main focus of the meeting was the conservation issues workshops featuring panel discussions on conservation districts and the farm bill, challenges and issues for the 75th Texas Legislature and funding of districts.

Slaughter calves down 10 percent

Cattle and calves on feed for slaughter market in Texas feedlots with the capacity of 1,000 head or more totaled 2.04 million head on Sept. 1, down 10 percent from a year ago. According to the monthly report released by the Texas Agricultural Statistics Service, the estimate was up 1 percent from the Aug. 1 level. Producers placed 510,000 head in commercial feedlots during August, up 5 percent from a year ago and up 24 percent from the July 1996 total.

Texas commercial feeders marketed 480,000 head during August, down 13 percent from a year ago. Monthly marketings were up 2 percent from July 1996 total.

Extension Agent's Notes

By DENNIS NEWTON
County Extension Agent--AG
 The recent rains have given our wheat crop a needed boost and also provided an opportunity for producers to do some fall weed control. Fall is an excellent time many of the brush species on our native ranges and field bindweed.

Field bindweed has been a nemesis of agricultural producers for many years. It is estimated that bindweed covers about 600,000 acres of farm land in Texas and decreases crop yield 50 percent where it is located. In the Panhandle area, losses to bindweed are estimated at $25 to $150 an acre annually. Assuming that 50 percent of the infested acres are irrigated, average loss is $88.50 per acre. Total loss from the 600,000 acres is over 50 million dollars annually.

Field bindweed is a vine-like, deep rooted, persistent, perennial weed that is a member of the morning glory family. Bindweed is easily recognized by its arrow-shaped leaves and its profuse three-fourths to one-inch white or pink trumpet-shaped flowers. The seeds are brownish-black with a roughened surface, three angled usually with one convex side and two flattened sides with the points and edges rounded off. Bindweed is a native of Europe and Western Asia and was first reported in the U.S. in 1739. The weed later was introduced to the Plains states between 1870 and 1875 in seed wheat brought to Kansas. Since introduction to the Plains, it has become one of our most troublesome weeds.

Bindweed is spread by both by seed and roots. Vigilance is required to keep fields clean and prevent introduction of bindweed to new areas. Bindweed is usually spread in contaminated seed grain from dirty combines. Samples of seed grain have been shown to contain up to 26,000 bindweed seed per bushel. Seed are also scattered in manure by animals grazing on bindweed-infested land. Combines should be cleaned and clean seed used at planting. Cattle that may have grazed on infested areas should be contained in a small area for at least two days before being allowed to graze on uninfested fields.

Once introduced to a field, new plants are produced from buds on lateral roots and, within one season, a single plant may spread up to ten feet in diameter. Roots of mature plants are fleshy, full of stored food, profusely branched and penetrate the soil six feet or more. The underground stems (rhizomes) can vary in length from a few inches to several feet. These may produce lateral roots and if detached from the main root, may develop into separate plants. Cultivation can give rise to new plants from roots and rhizomes if rain falls shortly after plowing.

The seed is extremely hard, impervious to water, and can remain dormant and viable for more than 30 years. Seedlings quickly develop and may have a perennial growth habit six weeks after emergence.

Fall is the best time to apply herbicides. Producers may apply 1 to 2 quarts of Banvel or 0.5 to 1 pt. Tordon 22K plus 2 pints, 2,4-d in early to mid-October. Landmaster BW may be substituted for 2,4-D to control grasses or volunteer wheat. Do not apply these rates to planted wheat or fields where wheat is to be planted this fall. Bindweed should have six to 10 inch long runners at the time of herbicide application.

Spot treatments for bindweed are also effective. Small patches should be eliminated prior to becoming large and infesting other areas. Spot treatments often include complete soil sterilization for long periods of time. The herbicides that have proven very effective in spot treatment are Arsenal for non-crop areas only, Tordon 22K and Banvel. There are others that also will control the weed in small areas.

Before using a herbicide, it's very important to read the label and follow directions. Check labels to be sure that your intended use is approved by the manufacturer. Labels contain all information necessary for safe and effective use of herbicides. Labels change constantly and should be routinely reviewed.

On Oct. 11, 1995, a field bindweed result demonstration was established on the city property just south of Wall and Sons Well Service on Progressive Road. This demonstration is comparing six herbicide treatments.

The treatments using Banvel and Tordon proved to be the most effective. Follow up treatments will be applied to the plot in early to mid-October of this year. Keep your eyes on this plot.

For more information on field bindweed control, please contact the Deaf Smith County Office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at 364-3573. Have a good week.

CRP symposium set in Claude

CLAUDE -- Holders of the Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) lands must soon decide what to do with their property once contracts expire. A symposium focused on CRP issues is set for Oct. 7 at the Armstrong County Activity Center in Claude.

Registration starts 9:30 a.m. The cost is $20 and includes a noon meal. Representative Mac Thornberry will be the keynote speaker, who will brief participants on the CRP program status.

Armstrong County is one of only seven such sites in the nation to host the specialized conference on CRP land management and the future of the program.

Coordinators are the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System, New Mexico State University and the Cooperative Extension Services of the state universities in Colorado, Kansas and Oklahoma. Cooperators are the Society of Range Management and USDA's Farm Service Agency and Natural Resource Conservation Service.

The CRP symposium's purpose is to offer contract holders answers on what course to follow once the program is over. The major areas of interest for landholders will include policies, regulations, conservation compliance and post contract options such as haying, grazing and cropping.

Specific topics featured during the morning session include, CRP Transition to Today, Fair 96 Policies and Regulations Impacting CRP, The Role of Conservation Compliance in CRP and Thornberry's Washington report.

Combust expresses alarm at Ag Department's plans for CRP

WASHINGTON, DC--U.S. Representative Larry Combust (R-Texas) expressed alarm as he closely quizzed U.S. Agriculture officials' plans for vast changes in the CRP (Conservation Reserve Program) acreage that will impact contracts which begin expiring next year, September 1997.

Combust was particularly astounded at USDA's wholesale departure from established CRP policies that may result in one-fourth of the nation's current questioning of the loss of eligibility of 8 million CRP acres nationwide, USDA Undersecretary Richard Rominger said, he did not know of any concentration in one region where land would no longer be qualified.

Earlier reports had indicated that USDA officials had intentions of moving the focus of conservation acres away from the drier, windblown western region to the eastern U.S. which is prone to flooding.

In a House Agriculture Committee hearing, Combust established that wind erosion would be included as a major factor in determining the qualifications for bidding land into CRP.

"I want to make certain that USDA's bureaucratic equations include the continued safeguarding from wind erosion in the Panhandle-South Plains," Combust said. "With USDA already three months late providing some information, producers whose contracts expire in September of 1997 must have USDA details long before that to make decisions for spring planting. Judging by the cautious nature of their answers to my questions during today's hearing, the Agriculture Department is not committing itself to continuing the same priorities for conservation of our region's highly-erodible lands. The critical point for us will be in seeing the actual formula USDA will use to evaluate wind erosion's importance in offering CRP contracts. During the next few weeks, USDA will be hearing more from me, along with producers throughout our region." The U.S. House of Representatives unanimously passed a Combust measure that required USDA to publish the long-overdue CRP regulations that were due in summer of this year. Although publicly announced last week to Washington, D.C. reporters, USDA has still not published details that were required by a July 7 deadline imposed by Congress. Combust observed that USDA's statements lack accurate figures regarding which cropland in the Panhandle-South Plains would meet new erosion qualifications.

Combust insisted at last week's hearing that controlling blowing dust and conservation of underground water supplies should be given high priority when considering land enrolled in CRP. Combust informed USDA officials that CRP's financial compensation to farmers to leave their fields unplowed has significantly reduced the days of blowing dust and saved at least 138 million gallons of groundwater supplies each year.

TCFA to hold convention in Houston

Nobody in the cattle business knows exactly what the future will bring, but one certainty is that change will be a constant as cattle feeders step into new century. That's why the Texas Cattle Feeders Association (TCFA) chose "Riding the Wave of Change" as the theme of its 1996 annual convention, Oct. 27-29 at the Westin Galleria in Houston.

During the opening general session on Monday, Oct. 28, TCFA President Randall (Cuppy) Graham will share his thoughts on the turbulent and challenging year that has faced cattle feeders. Then, the Honorable Frank Keating, Governor of Oklahoma, has been invited to speak on the current political climate that cattle feeders will face and how Oklahoma pulled together in trying times.

Following Gov. Keating, cattle feeders will learn how the king of fast food will meet the challenge of the future when Richard G. Starmann, senior vice president of communications with McDonald's corporation, discusses consumer trends.

With the wave of change sweeping cattle marketing, packers are playing a key role in the industry. The afternoon general session will feature John R. Miller, president and CEO of National Beef Packing Company, who will address the future of livestock marketing. Then, cattle feeders will hear the inspiring story of how Tom Harken rose from an illiterate vacuum cleaner salesman to become founder of Crazy Jose's Patio and Cafe, owner of Casa Ole franchises in Houston and head of a company that employs 600 people.

On Tuesday, Oct. 29, cattle feeders will hear a heroic story of valor, honor and courage during the inspirational breakfast when Master Sergeant Roy Benevidez, the last Medal of Honor recipient from the Vietnam War, tells his tale.

The House of the Week

Home is delightful, inside and outside

By BRUCE A. NATHAN
AP Newsfeatures
A curved front porch and a garden sun room in the back make this home a delight inside and outside. Plan G-15, by HomeStyles Designers Network, offers a comfortable 1,852 square feet of living space, with a nice blend of formal and casual styling.

Inside, a roomy kitchen is open to a five-sided, glassed-in dining room that has views to various aspects of the wraparound porch.

The living room features a fireplace along a glass wall that is shared by the sunny garden room.

Wrapped in windows, the garden room has access to the backyard, as well as to a large storage area in the side-entry garage.

The master suite is no less luxurious, and features a master bath with a garden spa tub, a corner shower and a walk-in closet.

Each of the two remaining bedrooms has a boxed-out window and a walk-in closet. A full bath with a corner shower and a dual-sink vanity is nearby. A stairway leads to the attic which provides more potential living space.

(For a more detailed, scaled plan of this house, including guides to estimating costs and financing, send $4 to House of the Week, P.O. Box 1562, New York, N.Y. 10116-1562. Be sure to include the plan number.)

A FRONT PORCH with a gentle curve is the focal point of this charming country home. Squared columns and a traditional gabled roof add to the home's inviting facade.

G-15

A SHORT HALL extends from the front entry and leads to two bedrooms and a full bath. Ahead of the entry, the living room unfolds and provides access to a bright garden room and a utility room which is on the way to the two-car garage. Adjoining the living room is an octagonal dining area and a kitchen. Just off the opposite end of the living room is the master bedroom with a private bath.

Design G-15 has an entry, dining room, living room, kitchen, three bedrooms, two full baths and a utility room, totaling 1,852 square feet of living space. The plan is available with 2x4 exterior wall framing and a standard basement, crawlspace or slab foundation. A two-car garage with adjoining storage space provides 528 square feet of space.

Replacing wall-hung sink with vanity adds storage space, hides plumbing

By POPULAR MECHANICS
For AP Special Features

One sure sign of an outdated bath is a wall-hung sink. Not only do these fixtures look low budget, but they deny you the valuable storage space offered by a vanity cabinet.

If your bathroom is cramped, as most are, then a vanity will add storage space. By concealing the sink's plumbing, it will also make the bathroom look a little less mechanical, and it does so without costing a fortune.

If adding storage space is not your top priority, but fixing up an old bathroom is, then now also is the time to replace the sink, especially if its faucet set is worn out and dripping. It also makes sense to replace the sink if you are thinking of painting and freshening up the grout lines in the tilework.

You can spend as little as $150 for a vanity if you shop for specials and closeouts. On the other hand, $1,500 will get you a long vanity and an expensive top, basin and faucet.

As for the style of vanity, consider the position of the water and drain fittings in your bathroom's wall or floor. Don't buy a vanity with drawers that will obstruct these piping connections. As for length, you'll find standard sizes to fit almost any space, from 18 inches to 6 feet. If your vanity will abut the toilet, most codes require that the countertop ends at least 15 inches from the center of the toilet.

And finally, if you don't care for molded tops, you can build a custom top of high-density particleboard and plastic laminate or tile. You would then cut a hole in the top for a porcelain, plastic or china basin.

You can shoot for an entirely custom installation by building the vanity cabinet as well. The cabinet is simply a box with a space for a toe-kick beneath it. The cabinet can be built out of a high density particleboard and covered with the same plastic laminate used on the top, or you can build it out of lumber. You can make the doors yourself or buy them separately.

To get an idea of what's involved in this kind of project here are highlights of the operation:

- To remove the old sink, shut off the water at the meter or beneath the sink, then cut through the caulk seam between the sink and the wall with a utility knife.
- Disconnect the sink's plumbing by loosening the compression nuts on the supply risers, and undo the trap by loosening the nut at the wall and on the drain's tailpiece.

Once all the plumbing connections are undone, lift the sink from its sides and pull it clear of its wall bracket. Remove the wall sink support bracket as well as it will interfere with installing the vanity.

Set the vanity in position. If it tips away from the wall, shim the base with scrap or cedar shingles. Locate the wall studs, bore the pilot holes and drive two screws through the vanity's back brace into the studs.

Press plumber's putty around the drain flange, and thread the drain into the flange from the underside of the basin. Insert the faucet bolts through the holes in the top of the vanity. Next, install the drain pop up assembly.

Apply adhesive caulk to the top of the vanity cabinet and set the top on the base, pushing it against the wall. Hook up your water supply and drain connections.

Seal the vanity top where it meets the wall with latex tub-and-tile caulk.

Lastly, cut the baseboard and shoe molding so they fit tight against the vanity, and nail in place.

Man stays wise as long as he searches for wisdom; as soon as he thinks he has found it, he becomes a fool.

Countdown to X-tasy: Fox reopens the Files

David Duchovny and Gillian Anderson star in the fourth season of writer Chris Carter's hit paranormal series The X-Files. The mysterious new season premieres Friday on Fox. The show moves to Sundays at the end of October.

By Jocelyn Beard
©TVData Features Syndicate

X-philes can stop holding their breath on Friday, Oct. 4. The new season of Fox's highly rated sci-fi series The X-Files finally gets under way with a new episode penned by series creator and TV wunderkind Chris Carter.

Mulder, Scully, the Cigarette Smoking Man and all the rest of the X-Files regulars are ready to get back to work after a long, hot summer of personal appearances, feature film work and parenting.

Their mission this season? To keep up with Carter's much anticipated new show, Millennium. When The Silence of the Lambs meets the end of the world, you know people are going to tune in. Millennium promises to do for Fridays what The X-Files did: keep people home watching TV.

Wherefore art thou, X-Files? Sunday night, in case you haven't heard. Will everyone's favorite freakfest survive the move to Sunday?

"Some people think that it's a night where they're preparing for work the next day and kids might not be able to stay up," laments Carter.

"I'm hoping," he hastily adds, "that parents break those rules for their children."

Carter remains relatively tight-lipped about the new season, assuring only that they have "some surprises in store in terms of the mythology of the show, characterwise."

But what kind of surprises? Is the dreaded Cigarette Smoking Man really Agent Mulder's father in a twisted Star Wars redux? Are Mulder and Scully brother and sister? Or better yet, lovers?

"I think Mulder and Scully would sleep with each other," jokes Carter while revealing that he is "under no pressure to push that relationship forward. The pressure I'm under is that David Duchovny (Mulder) wants a girlfriend, and I've resisted that for a year."

Mulder with a girlfriend? Say it isn't so! The cliches inherent in such a relationship would only bog the show down - wouldn't they? "I'm interested in exploring ways to do it that may not be obvious," says Carter.

Don't look for Agent Mulder to be with some lucky young lady any too soon. The first eight episodes promise to be standard X-Files fare.

"Once you've hit all the highlights," explains Carter, "you know, clairvoyance, telepathy, ghosts ... the truth is we've exhausted some of the high points, but I think that the better stories, the more interesting stories, are the ones you have to pick away at to find in the little nooks and crannies."

Would he shed some light into some of these nooks and crannies? Nope. The most plot information he reveals about the new season is the following uninspired gem, guaranteed to delight followers and irritate detractors: "What Mulder will think is a paranormal thing, Scully will say, no, it can't be."

If the serious countenances sported by Gillian Anderson (Scully) and Duchovny at the recent Emmy Awards are any kind of gauge, the new season must be grim indeed.

Along with a new night (Sundays, beginning Oct. 27 when Millennium takes over the show's Friday time slot), look for a new locale and, perhaps, a girlfriend for Mulder.

Until then, fans can continue to check out the Internet for tantalizing tidbits and speculation concerning the upcoming fourth season - unless you're happy just knowing that the truth of the new season is out there.

HOROSCOPES

★ ★ September 29-October 5 ★ ★

ARIES - March 21/April 20

A friend's dilemma will be a reminder of your past. You'll look back on a different phase of your life and be glad for where you are now. Don't be afraid to show your true feelings in a love relationship. Your partner needs some feedback. Safety in numbers applies this weekend.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21

Your moodiness will not be welcomed by loved ones. Spare your loved ones some grief and stop at the gym on the way home. You'll feel a lot more cheerful when you're done. Spitefulness is detrimental to a strained friendship. A heart-to-heart talk is the way to work things out.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21

Think twice before asking a financial favor of a friend. It could be more trouble than it's worth. A new work associate of the opposite sex wants to get to know you better. Go for it, but proceed with caution if you're dealing with Scorpio. Solidify travel plans or you may find yourself stranded.

CANCER - June 22/July 22

Before you pursue a new job or career, make sure you're ready to make a change. Jumping into something blindly could make for a very crabby Cancer. Having trouble sleeping lately? Stress could be the culprit. Give meditation a try as a way to relax. A Leo friend gives a call.

LEO - July 23/August 23

Watch what you wish for, Leo, you may just get it! And once it's yours, you may realize that it's not what you want. A Virgo is involved. If there's tension at home, you'd be better off addressing the problem sooner rather than later. A Cancer offers bad advice. Don't take it.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22

Acting on impulse could get you into a heap of trouble. Work through your problems and figure out how to take control. The answers are there for you; Virgo, you just have to find them. At work, try and keep a low profile. You will be the topic of an important conversation on Thursday.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23

Prepare for delays when working on an important project. Leaving everything until the last minute is a bad move. If you happen to be involved with a Cancer, prepare for a very romantic weekend. The Crab has something special in store for you. Be reasonable when it comes to spending — especially if you're saving for something big.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22

Patience will be needed to get through a family dispute early this week. Losing your cool will only lead you to say something you'll regret. A new procedure at work may seem tedious now but will save you lots of time in the long run. Give it a chance. Say "yes" to new romance.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21

A frustrating situation early in the week may seem like the end of the world, but in just a few days it will all be forgotten. Be patient. Take advantage of any free time that comes your way. It's time to catch up on all those chores and projects you've been meaning to get to.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20

Equipment failure could cause delays in your work schedule. Planning ahead is the best way to avoid problems. A visit from out-of-town friends adds some spice to the weekend. You'll finally get a chance to let your guard down. A Leo friend may ask for your assistance.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18

Don't let pride get in the way of a valued friendship. Admitting that you're wrong — especially when you really are — isn't such a bad thing. A few obstacles in the workplace could be a blessing in disguise. You could have a chance to show off your skills. Dress your best on Friday.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20

Don't let feelings of self doubt keep you from reaching a new level of success. Believe in yourself and you can accomplish anything. A realistic look at finances will help you plan for the future. Pay attention to details at work, especially if you deal with numbers. Diet plays a role.

HIGHLIGHTS

Ivan Sergei and Tori Spelling star in Mother, May I Sleep With Danger?, the story of a vulnerable teen trapped in a dangerous romance, airing Monday on NBC.

Tori is terrific in predictable NBC thriller

Tori Spelling (Beverly Hills, 90210) stars as an unsuspecting coed in Mother, May I Sleep With Danger?, airing Monday, Sept. 30, on NBC. It follows a dating relationship from its sweet beginnings to sheer terror.

The dreamy lover-turned-nightmare is a common story line for TV movies. But Mother, May I Sleep With Danger? adds some unexpected depth by showing how a dependent personality makes someone vulnerable to a domineering partner.

Laurel Lewisohn (Spelling) appears to be a well-adjusted, high-spirited college girl. But she was once hospitalized for an eating disorder, and her mother (Lisa Banes) tends to hover, if only from a distance.

When Laurel begins dating Kevin Shane (Ivan Sergei), she interprets his possessiveness as intense love, not a need to control.

As Laurel works toward independence from her mother, she begins to transfer that power to Kevin, allowing him to make decisions for her.

When Kevin asks her to change her hair color from red to blond, Laurel hardly hesitates. Such willingness to let a new boyfriend exert so much influence alarms Mrs. Lewisohn.

Motherly concern leads her to investigate Kevin's past. Her inquiry takes her to Denver, where she learns Kevin was a suspect in the disappearance of a girl two years earlier. The girl, who resembles Laurel but was a blonde, later was found dead.

Further information from the Denver police reveals that Kevin is using a false identity.

The mother has no doubt her daughter is involved with a killer.

The predictable race to save her daughter and the daughter's predictably terrifying attempt to escape the madman ensue.

But Spelling's convincing performance, and the film's unusual examination of the relationship from the victim's perspective, put this movie ahead of others in the genre.

Banes is also well cast as a mother coping with her daughter's emerging adulthood.

TV PIPELINE

Q: I heard a rumor that High Society will be back as a CBS midseason replacement series. I hope so! -Scott B., San Francisco.

A: Alas, no - but funny you should ask, since Jean Smart (whose character put the "high" in that show) recently bent my ear with stories of what happened behind the scenes.

It seems Smart and her co-star and pal Mary McDonnell saw the sitcom as a full-tilt, wacky, over-the-top farce: "The farther we took it, the less offensive it became," she said, and you have to admit, she has a point.

The network suits, sadly, didn't get it and kept sending notes that they wanted the show to be "more real."

"I just couldn't have taken five years of that," Smart says.

Q: My mom says the actress who plays Nadine on Grace Under Fire is the same actress who played Aunt Nora in the film Jumanji. I disagree. Can you settle our dispute? -Erin French, Hamilton, Ohio.

A: Your mom must not be a fan of Cheers or Frasier. That was Tony and Emmy Award winner Bebe Neuwirth, best known for portraying Lilith, Dr. Frasier Crane's (now) ex-wife on the above sitcoms, playing Aunt Nora. Another very fine veteran of the New York stage, Julie White, plays Nadine on Grace.

Q: Can you please tell me who had the starring role in the TV series Run for Your Life? I say it was Ben Gazzara. My daughter says it was David Janssen. -Betty Smith, Kansas City, Kan.

A: Everyone knows Janssen ran for his life in another, more familiar series, but you're right: Gazzara starred in Run for Your Life as attorney Paul Bryan, who was told by his doctors that he had only two years (at most) to live due to an incurable disease.

Determined to make the most of the time he had left, Paul closed his practice and embarked on a series of adventures around the world. Apparently it agreed with him: Although he only had two years to live, the show ran for three seasons - and he was still "running" at full throttle when it ended.

Q: I recently got hooked on Highlander: The Series. Will it be back in the fall with new episodes? What is Rob Estes up to now? Silk Stalkings is not the same since both the former stars left. -G.S., Nashua, N.H.

A: Most stations carrying Highlander began airing new episodes last week.

This season Estes joins Melrose Place, which co-stars his wife, Josie Bissett. USA Network has acknowledged it made a huge mistake with the replacement pair of Stalkings stars and recently recast the show, as you may have noticed, with the popular Chris Potter (Kung Fu: The Legend Continues) in the male lead.

Time for Marlena to tell the truth?

By Candace Havens

Dear Candace: I would like to know when Marlena (Deidre Hall) is going to tell John (Drake Hogestyn) the truth about Kristen (Eileen Davidson) on Days of Our Lives.

I want John and Marlena to get married and live happily ever after. —Kacie Fisher, Greenwell Springs, La.

Dear Reader: I'm with you, Kacie. This has gone on way too long.

Marlena should have told John the truth about Kristen as soon as she was able.

As for them living happily ever after, I don't think it will ever happen.

Dear Candace: I would like to know if the actor who played Brad Carlton on The Young and the Restless is coming back to the series. —Judy

The 1958 release of It! The Terror From Beyond Space was promoted with an offer of a free trip on the first commercial flight to Mars.

Dear Reader: Don Diamont (ex-Brad) is pursuing other avenues at this time. The door was left open for his return.

Dear Candace: I would like to know if Gloria (Teresa Blake) and Tad (Michael E. Knight) will get together on All My Children. Also, will Edmund (John Callahan) and Maria (Eva LaRue) get back together? —Janell Parriera, Tulare, Calif.

Dear Reader: Things will be heating up between Tad and Gloria, as well as Tad and Liza.

Edmund and Maria are making their way back to each other, but looks can be deceiving. There is an undercurrent in their relationship that will keep things from being what they were.

Dear Candace: I've been a fan of

CHITTER CHATTER

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Chris Hardwick, wise-cracking host of MTV's "Singed Out," is dating a tall blonde who's appeared on the same cable network.

No, it's not his co-host, former Playboy playmate Jenny McCarthy.

Hardwick shares his one-bedroom apartment with Jacinda Barrett, the Australian model and aspiring actress who appeared on the 1995 edition of "The Real World."

MTV talent coordinator Claire McCabe introduced the couple.

Barrett, who appears in J. Crew catalogs, moved in with the Shih Tzu she adopted in London. The dog caused conflicts on "The Real World" because it wasn't housetrained.

Although the dog hasn't grown out of those problems, the three of them are getting along fine, Hardwick said.

"Of course we've talked about marriage. But we haven't planned anything yet," he said.

NEW YORK (AP) - Dr. Dre has a new label; a new album and a new sound, moving away from the "gangsta" rap of his solo debut, which sold nearly 4 million copies.

"The Aftermath," scheduled for release on Oct. 15, is "55 percent R & B, 45 percent rap, but no gangsta flavor, just hard-core hip-hop," Dre says in the Entertainment Weekly.

Dre produced two of the best-selling rap albums ever, his solo album, "The Chronic," which sold 3.8 million copies, and Snoop Doggy Dogg's "Doggystyle," which sold more than 5 million.

In March, Dre left Death Row Records, which he co-founded, to start Aftermath Entertainment.

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) - Hometown hero Jackie Robinson, who considered Pasadena a bigoted city, will be honored with a float in the Tournament of Roses Parade.

Robinson grew up in Pasadena and was a star high school athlete before becoming the first black in major-league baseball. Robinson, who died in 1972, never returned.

Organizers of the New Year's Day parade had been accused in the past of excluding minorities, and the Tournament of Roses committee diversified its membership in 1993.

The float, which will feature

Robinson sliding into home, will honor the 50th anniversary of his breaking baseball's color barrier. Parade organizers decided on Friday to include the float, although the deadline for entry passed in August.

"Pasadena should be proud of Jackie Robinson," said John Van de Kamp, vice president of a committee planning a memorial to Robinson. "I hope, if he were alive today, that Jackie would want to come back."

BEIJING (AP) - Kevin Costner, the Duchess of York and Michael Caine appeared at the opening of a Beijing club with a membership fee more than 30 times the annual salary of the typical Chinese worker.

"China's one place I've always wanted to see," said Costner. "It's a big mystery here."

The club's membership fee is $15,000 with a $100 monthly charge. The average income for city people in China was around $470 last year.

The club expects many members to come from foreign corporations doing business in China.

Margie's Notes

By Margie Daniels, HSCA Executive Director

We will be honoring our outgoing board members Oct. 1 at 6:30 p.m. Gid Brownd, Audrey Powell and George Olson are the members retiring this year. Gid serves as president and has worked many hours saving money on maintenance of the building and equipment. Audrey is our secretary and also leads exercise classes three days a week. George serves as vice president and even though he has had some very serious illness during the last three years, he has been very faithful. I have always looked to him as my encourager.

I am thankful for the privilege of working with each one. I feel all three will continue to support the center.

The Christmas tour to Branson is coming along. Some shows we will see are the Radio City Rockettes, Wayne Newton Christmas Show and Dixie Stampede. Anyone interested needs to get your deposit in soon.

We are having a Festival of Trees meeting each Monday at 9 a.m. Please attend if you can. A lot of work is being done early so we won't be so rushed closer to the Festival. The program will be printed in this paper.

I am so thankful for the beautiful weather! I hear we are going to have cold, bad winter, so get your snowsuits ready.

HSCA Activities

By Peggy Maxwell, Activities Director

Fall is a beautiful time of year. We have had some refreshing rains, cooler weather, beautiful gardens and now the harvest time. We are a very blessed people.

As the cooler weather brings you indoors remember the activities at the Senior Center. We invite you to come play table games, quilt, paint, make dolls, exercise, line dance or sing with the choir. For those of you that like to lend a helping hand, we always need volunteers to help at the Center or the Thrift Store.

President's Corner

By Gid Brownd, HSCA President

My how time flies! Summer is over, and it's time for new board members to replace the ones going off. Board members serve for three years. Our by-laws require them to step aside for at least one year. Some we would like to keep full time.

The members leaving are Audrey Powell, George Olson and myself.

The new board members will be announced in October. I feel real good about the names to be presented to the membership at the annual meeting by the nominating committee. They believe in the center and will contribute much.

When at a board meeting, you know you are among friends who are dedicated and are there to do the best they can for the center. It's been a pleasure to work with them.

My hat is off to Margie Daniels for all the planning and organization that is demanded of her to keep the many programs going. Also for starting new ones like the Thrift Store, and the TRIAD program. Her job includes managing employees, maintaining the services and facilities that we enjoy so much. Of course she really depends on a lot of super volunteers and staff.

I have only hit a few high spots here. Each of you know what the center does for you, for food, fellowship and other activities. It's been a real honor to serve as president of your board. I appreciate each one of you and what you contribute.

Stoutheart and Sweetflower

Hero Stanley Stoutheart, played by Ed Schilling, and heroine Sarah Sweetflower, played by Carole McGilvary, were central characters in the Senior Citizens dinner theater production of the melodrama "A Golden Fleecing-or-The Undermining of Sarah Sweetflower's Sarsaparilla Saloon and Bridal Shoppe." Looking on is Crazy Clara, portrayed by Lucy Martin. Proceeds from the production benefitted the home-delivered meals program at the Senior Center.

'Home for the Holidays' program provides plane tickets for seniors

Southwest Airlines and the Area Agency on Aging of the Panhandle have announced the start of the 18th annual "Home for the Holidays" program which will provide Panhandle seniors with complimentary tickets to visit family and friends over the holidays.

Applications are available at senior centers across the Panhandle and by contacting the Area Agency on Aging at 1-800-642-6008. To apply, a person must be 65 years of age or older and demonstrate a strong economic need. Deadline for submission of applications is Oct. 18.

Fifteen applicants from the Panhandle area will be selected to receive complimentary round-trip tickets based on their need for economic assistance and their reason for travel. Married couples may name their spouses on the application if they would like the selection committee to consider both as possible recipients.

Past recipients may apply, and only one application per person will be accepted. No ground transportation or additional travel expenses will be provided.

Recipients may begin their trip any time after Dec. 2, 1996, but trips must be completed by Jan. 11, 1997.

Since the program began in 1979, thousands of senior citizens have been sent "Home of the Holidays." In 1986, President Reagan cited the program as an outstanding community service program and awarded it the Presidential Award for Private Sector Initiatives.

Festival of Trees approaches

The Festival of Trees marks the beginning of the holiday season at the center. The main feature of the event is the display of beautifully decorated trees for the residents of the community and visitors to the area to enjoy during five days of entertainment and activities for people of all ages.

The display, within a festival setting, is a major community involvement and fund raising project for the Hereford Senior Citizens Association. In 1995, approximately 5,000 people attended the display and took part in festival activities.

This year, the Preview of Trees will be held from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. on Wednesday, Nov. 20.

SOCIAL SECURITY QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q: I attended a teachers' conference this summer and one of the teachers told me that Social Security produces a Teacher's Kit. How can I obtain a copy?

A: Teachers may order the kit by writing to: Social Security Teacher's Kit, P.O. Box 17743, Baltimore, MD, 21235. Orders may be faxed to 410-965-0696. The kit is also available on the Internet at <http://www.ssa.gov>.

Q: How long before retiring should I contact Social Security?

A: When signing up for retirement, we suggest you talk to a Social Security representative in the year before the year you plan to retire. That's because the rules are complicated, and it may be to your advantage to start your retirement benefits before you actually stop working.

Q: How does Social Security help you keep up with inflation once you start receiving benefits?

A: Social Security benefits increase annually based on increases in the annual cost of living as measured by the Consumer's Price Index.

Q: I often hear about women receiving benefits on their husband's Social Security record. Do the same rules apply to men? Can a husband receive benefits on his wife's Social Security record?

A: Social Security can pay benefits to a man on his wife's record when she retires, becomes disabled, or dies, as long as she paid enough Social Security to qualify, and he is not entitled to a higher benefit on his own Social Security record.

Fewer men than women receive spouses benefits because they are more likely to be working and eligible for higher benefit on their own Social Security record. However, the protection is there for those who need to take advantage of it.

Q: Does Social Security provide any publications in Spanish?

A: Yes. Many of the publications produced in English are also produced in Spanish. Nutrition Notes

By CHARLOTTE R. CLARK
MS RD/LD
The Recommended Dietary Allowances:

The individuals on the Food and Nutrition Board who originally formulated the Recommended Dietary Allowances (RDAs) in 1941 as a "guide for advising on nutrition problems in connection with national defense" also recognized that these values would become "standards to serve as a goal for good nutrition."

As scientific knowledge has advanced and allowances have been established for additional nutrients, so too have the uses of the RDA expanded to meet a variety of purposes, most of which were never envisioned by the creators of the RDAs.

USES OF THE RDAs:

Ten major uses of the RDAs were described in the 1994 Institute of Medicine publication, How Should the Recommended Dietary Allowances be Revised? Many used the RDAs for educational, practice or policy settings. Four categories of RDAs uses have been noted -- nutritional standards for policy purposes; education and dietary guidelines; descriptive research and food standards.

PUBLIC POLICY:

Public policy uses are based on the assumption that the RDAs serve as the starting point for determining desirable nutrient intakes for federal food assistance programs and for establishing the comparison standards for protein and for micronutrients that appear on food labeling.

Nutrient standards for food assistance programs:

-- (1) Meal pattern system developed for use in the national school lunch programs, which provides over the week an average one-third of RDA for protein, vitamins and minerals.

-- (2) School breakfast program specifies one-fourth of RDA provided.

-- (3) Nutrition program for older Americans at lunch contains at least one-third of RDA.

-- (4) Special supplement program for women, infants and children provides "supplemental" foods and is one tool used in choosing those foods to be included in the standardized food packages.

-- (5) Commodity food packages distributed to Native Americans are evaluated on the RDA nutrient contents.

-- (6) The food stamp programs, the largest of all food assistance programs, uses the RDAs nutritional goal for the "Thrifty Food Plan," the least costly of four food plans developed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture nutritionists. The monetary value of the TFP is used to set food stamp allotments. (The RDAs set a "minimum" or "Floor" level for nutrients).

-- (7) The RDAs serve as a reference points for evaluating the nutrients quality (ie, protein, vitamins and minerals), but does not include total fat or saturated fat or guidelines for chronic disease prevention and health maintenance. Some changes were made in 1995 by the USDA for recommendations to include the macronutritionists from authoritative sources.

Food labeling has changed in the last 23 years since voluntary nutrition labeling programs for process foods were adopted. In 1990, the RDA was changed to RDI (Reference Daily Intake).

Uses for the RDAs encompass food and nutrition information and education, guides for food selection, food planning and procurement and clinical dietetics.

NUTRITION EDUCATION:

Nutrition education has used RDAs as reference standards for discussing nutrient needs with clients. Usually, a food-oriented approach is used to translate nutrient data into food-based information that is easily understood by patients/clients.

Food selection guides have been developed in which foods are classified according to their major nutrient contributions with the RDAs used to develop these food guides. The most recent guide for the public has been the Food Pyramid Guide.

Food planning and procurement uses RDAs to distinguish between development of dietary plans for healthy people when food purchasing and budgeting are essential and guide for planning diets. It is more reasonable to strive to meet 100 percent of the RDAs over a period of time. Nutrient intakes must be translated into food equivalents before purchasing and budgeting decisions can be made.

Clinical dietetics planners use the RDAs to serve as a basis for menu plans for patients receiving therapeutic diets. The RDAs were designed to meet the needs of essentially all healthy persons; however, not those with specific therapeutic needs. In such cases, the RDAs must be used only as a reference standard. Other considerations are different nutrition needs as well as problems with the mechanics of eating.

Uses of the RDA as food standards include topics such as food fortification, developing new and modified food products, nutrition supplements and special dietary foods.

In the area of food fortification, there are two instances where the RDAs have been successfully used as guides:

-- (1) When amounts of nutrients have been added to a given food, as in adding Vitamin D to fortify milk.

-- (2) In establishing the necessary of adding a nutrient to the food supply, as adding Vitamin C to imitation orange juice.

DEVELOPING NEW OR MODIFIED FOOD PRODUCTS:

RDAs have been used by food manufacturers to evaluate the nutrient contribution of new products. This is not the only factor that needs to be considered. For example: the manufacturer must consider the level and frequency of consumption of that food over a definite period of time.

NUTRIENT SUPPLEMENTS AND SPECIAL DIETARY FOODS:

RDAs used as a basis for formulating special dietary foods, including nutrient supplements, infant formulas and products intended for use by persons consuming modified diets (e.g. low sodium or low calorie diets). It is important to define whether the product is to be used for sole dietary source of nutrients or if the product is intended as a partial replacement of or an addition to the daily diet.

For the most part of these uses described, the RDAs provide only a portion of the information needed to present the total picture of one's daily intake. Other factors needed in the assessment are food costs, food availability, food preferences/acceptability, nutrient interactions and bioavailability.

Woman among few who repair accordions

By DAN PARKER

Corpus Christi Caller-Times
PORT ARANSAS, Texas - Rosie Ridgeway of Port Aransas is one of only a handful of people in the state who repair accordions.

And as the daughter of the late Al Trick, who once owned dozens of accordion instruction studios across the nation, she's carrying on a legacy. "No one could have had a better teacher" at accordion repair, said Ridgeway, 48. "He knew it all, it seemed. His whole life seems like it was devoted to the instrument."

Trick was born Aug. 28, 1904, in Crestline, Ohio. At 12, he played accordion with a small band at parties in Little Rock, Ark. A few years later, he began touring as part of a vaudeville troupe called The Three Vagrants.

Trick opened an accordion school and a repair and manufacturing business, Trick Bros. Accordion Institute, in Toledo, Ohio, in the late 1930s. It grew to 120 studios nationwide.

After he closed the chain in the 1950s, he moved to Dallas, where he operated Al Trick's National Institute of Music. He trained about 400 students to play accordion at the institute, which also provided accordion repair.

Ridgeway was a receptionist living in Florida when she decided to move to Dallas in the early 1970s. After she got to Dallas, she decided to help her father with his business.

Ridgeway started as a secretary and went on to work in the accordion repair shop.

She ended up apprenticing for 17 years under her father. Funny thing is, she never has learned to play any songs on the accordion.

"I have an ear for tuning. I know the mechanical end of the accordion. I don't necessarily need to play the accordion to fix the mechanical end or to tune it," she said.

Ridgeway's parents tried to persuade her to play when she was a child, but she refused.

"I think it was because they expected it of me when I was a little girl, and so I just rebelled. You know how kids are," Ridgeway said, laughing. "I just thought there was just no way you'd strap that thing on me."

Even to this day, she has no desire to play the accordion. But she has found that accordion repair appeals to a side of her that has little to do with music.

"I like to work with my hands," she said. "I'm very crafty. I did a lot of arts, crafts in my past, and I like

Grandtripping brings more visitors to Branson

By KAREN TESTA

Associated Press Writer

BRANSON, Mo. (AP) -- The screams from carnival rides can be heard at the entrance to a tranquil craft village. Shari Lewis and her puppets are singing with the Andy Williams orchestra. And the cave that once held square dances now is hosting a National Children's Festival.

Branson has found a fountain of youth, of sorts. Its source? Grandparents.

As the southwest Missouri entertainment town tries to market itself as more of a family destination, tourism officials and attractions are pushing the concept of "grandtripping" -- when the older folks bring along the kids.

"Branson is known regionally as a family destination, and nationally as a senior destination," said Beth Wanser of the Branson/Lakes Area Chamber of Commerce and Convention and Visitors Bureau. "Grandtripping is an opportunity to bring those two markets together."

Earlier this year, tourism officials noticed a large number of older couples traveling with small children. So the chamber commissioned a study of visitors to determine whether grandtripping had appeal.

Of 579 grandparents surveyed, 60 percent said they had taken a grandchild on an overnight trip without a parent. And of those, 92 percent said they were happy they did.

Those figures led to a marketing drive to encourage the trend. Theaters and theme parks have responded with their own offerings.

Mutton Hollow, which for 27 years has offered trail rides and a craft village, now has several carnival thrill rides, including the Zephyr, Sea Dragon and Paratrooper.

"We're all starting to see that we have to attract and appeal to an entire family," said Peggy Roberts, the park's administrative assistant. "(Branson attractions) were so interested in trying to build our spring and our fall and especially Christmas, we somehow forgot what Branson started with, and that was families."

Until the early 1990s, Branson was visited mostly by those in the region for its lakes, a few country music shows and Silver Dollar City, an artisan village built around a cave where locals used to have square dances.

The big-name theaters started to dot the highway. Within five years, the city of fewer than 4,000 year-round residents blossomed into a destination for hundreds of thousands of tourists annually. Tickets for theater shows now average more than $22 each.

"They've priced themselves out of the family market," said Nona Stephens, of Springfield, who brought her 2-year-old granddaughter, Kelsey, to Mutton Hollow. "Our children make good money, but it's just that food and lodging and the shows ... it's just too expensive."

Compared to other family destinations, like Walt Disney World in Orlando, Fla., Branson is a bargain. And many of the older folks who travel with children appreciate the city's patriotic, wholesome image.

Lewis, spending six weeks at the Andy Williams Moon River Theatre, said she was struck by the favorable response from the Branson audience.

"I always do a wholesome show," she said. "However, I don't always get thanked for it."

Barbara Webb, who lives in Springfield and has a home on nearby Table Rock Lake, said she and her husband travel with grandchildren at least one week each summer. Branson is a great destination for them, she said.

"This gives us the chance to give the parents a break and get to know the kids, because they live so far away," she said after a visit to Mutton Hollow with Tiffany, 7, and Buddy, 6. "When the parents are around, they're naughty. We're of the era of making them mind."

Tiffany, who was holding a wooden tooth fairy's box from Mutton Hollow's craft village, said she liked vacationing with the grandparents.

"It's just having fun, talking to each other, playing and all that," she said.

History lover refurbishes roadside monuments

By JERRY DANIEL REED
Abilene Reporter-News

ABILENE, Texas -- Naylor Gray enjoys his job outdoors in the fresh air, doing no heavy lifting to speak of, and getting plenty of opportunity to travel.

His specialty is cleaning, sanding and repainting historical markers -- work that some might find tedious or boring. But Gray couldn't disagree more.

"It can never be boring," he said Wednesday afternoon as he spruced up the state historical marker at Abilene State School. "I at least get to read the marker.

"And then on top of that, I get to see so many people (who) come up and introduce themselves, and tell me a little about themselves, or where they're from."

Gray will get to spend his time between now and December 1997 getting to know Texas, and Texans, better. No other Texas Historical Commission employee does what he does, and he has more than 2,000 historical markers to go on his job list.

A graduate in Spanish from the University of Texas at Austin, the fifth-generation Texan says he's learning much about his native state he didn't know before.

"I really feel like I've got a good history lesson for Texas. I thought I knew a lot before I went out, but everywhere I go, I seem to learn something," he said.

One of his lessons is that Texans cherish their local history. The events they celebrate may not match the fame of the tragic stand at the Alamo or the Texans' climactic victory at San Jacinto -- but to many local patriots, what happened around home long ago means just as much, he said.

His own job satisfaction seems to come as much from reading and digesting the information on the markers as from restoring their gleam and readability.

Along the way, he's become somewhat of an authority on the writing styles of authors of historical marker text. He can even tell the age of a sign by the style of its text, he said.

"There've been only a few people who have actually written texts, and you can see their personalities in the wording of the signs," he explained.

"Some are wordier than others. Some read more or less like telegrams, and others are magnificently written. They're all written well, but you can tell the personality of the person who's written them."

It typically takes a half hour to facelift a historical marker such as Abilene State School's, Gray said.

He demonstrated. Taking a wire brush, he swept from the sign flakes of black lacquer paint and other particulate debris, then repainted the entire surface with a fresh coat of black lacquer. He wiped the paint off the raised letters and graphics, then sanded the letters and graphics to restore the gleam to aluminum dulled by 15 years of oxidation.

Finally, he sprayed a coat of clear lacquer to seal and protect the black background and the shiny aluminum letters and graphics. Finished, the 1981 sign might look brand new, were it not for the noticeable mark of a weld that once re-anchored a lower right corner that had been bent or broken.

Age, weather and vandalism are the main assailants of historical markers, Gray explained. The course of none can be predicted with certainty, though signs at remote location are at greatest risk for malicious damage. The chief form: target practice.

The state school marker commemorates its beginning in 1904 as a center to care for epileptics and its transition to a residential campus for the mentally handicapped. It was renamed Abilene State School in 1957.

Also Wednesday, Gray refurbished four historic markers in or near Buffalo Gap, two others in Abilene and one on a ranch south of the city.

Gray follows in the wake of Texas Historical Commission surveyors who are systematically inspecting, and photographing, the state's 11,500 historical markers.

The agency's two-year project will not only complete the repair of the 20 percent of markers that need it, but will create a computer database of all 11,500.

The surveyors photograph the historic markers and the historic buildings, and type into the computer the texts printed on the markers.

So anybody blessed with computer literacy and access may one day take the same tour of Texas that Gray's on now -- but without having to put tens of thousands of new miles on the old odometer.

to do things with my hands, put things together."

Ridgeway took over her father's business 10 years ago and gave it a new name: Accordion Rose. Her father died in 1988 at the age of 84 in a nursing home in Dallas.

When Ridgeway moved to Port Aransas with her husband, Ron, in 1994, she brought the business with her. The Ridgeways' home, which they designed, includes an accordion repair shop.

While a few other people do accordion repair in Texas, Rose Ridgeway has the only business in the state that is devoted exclusively to accordion repair, said Norman Seaton, president of the Texas Accordion Association, a Dallas-based organization that claims about 700 members.

Ridgeway has more than 200 accordions lining shelves in three rooms in her house.

"Daddy pack-ratted accordions," she said, adding that she hopes to repair and sell the instruments.

Each month, five to 10 accordions are delivered to Ridgeway, who does repair by appointment only. People bring the instruments in personally or send them via delivery service.

Ridgeway said she never planned as a youth to get into the accordion repair business. She still seems a little surprised that she does it for a living.

But, she figures she'll keep it up. "I guess until I die," she said.

"It's not a very taxing job," she said. "I don't have to go anywhere. It's right here in my home. I never dreamed of doing this. But under my circumstances, I guess this is my job in life, so here I am."

Andreas Vesalius, a Belgian-born physician of the 1500s became known as the "Father of Anatomy".

THE ONLY JOINT COMMISSION ACCREDITED HOME HEALTH AGENCY IN HERFORD!

September was busy month for residents of care center

By CARMAN DOTSON

Residents of Hereford Care Center had a busy month in September.

An early Oktoberfest was celebrated on Sept. 13 with sausage, cheese and crackers. Some of the residents enjoyed it so much they tried to make a meal of it and didn't want dinner.

On Sept. 17 the residents wore flowers in their hair and on their clothes and listened to Mexican music to get in the spirit of Mexico Day. Some of the residents participated in making the flowers out of tissue and decorating them with markers.

Residents of Hereford Care Center hold a council meeting at 3 p.m. on the first Thursday of each month. They plan a meal for the following month. The meal for October will be at noon on the 3rd. The menu includes green chili beef stew, cornbread, tossed salad and banana pudding.

Bingo and dominoes are favorites with many of the residents. They play bingo three times a week and dominoes almost every day.

The residents do different crafts and are getting started with the Christmas decorations for the Festival of Trees. Between different craft projects, they find time to listen to bands like the Cox's and Murray's. There is a Bible study that meets at 10 a.m. and at 2 p.m. on the first Wednesday of the month. Country Road Church of God comes every fourth Sunday at 3 p.m.

The activity department needs help with the Halloween party on Oct. 31. Plans are to have a fishing game, apple dunking booth and cake walk.

Call the activity director if you will be able to help.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Please let me know whether the claims that zinc is helpful for a cold are true or not. I find a lot of misinformation going around these days, many times without a smidgen of truth. How much zinc should one take, and what would constitute an overdose?—M.H.

ANSWER: The zinc story is for real. At least there seems to be more than a smidgen of truth to it.

The facts are in from one study that indicates people who sucked on zinc lozenges during waking hours — a 15-milligram tablet every two hours — got rid of their colds in half the time it took those who did not.

Why zinc acts that way is not clear. Various ideas have been floated, with serious speculation centering on two likely explanations: Either the zinc interrupts multiplication of the cold viruses or it boosts the victim's natural immunity.

Excess zinc can be harmful. People taking more than 150 milligrams worth of the lozenges daily over several months can expect significant negative side effects, such as anemia.

Interestingly, long-term zinc use has a perverse effect on the immune system. While a safe intake apparently can boost the immune system, excess zinc weakens it.

I plan to do a personal zinc study on the occasion of my first cold of the season. I expect to see zinc tablets on drugstore shelves by then.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have an allergy that I cannot get cured.

Whenever I eat a meal, my nose runs. Breakfast, lunch or dinner, and regardless of the food involved. Halfway through the meal I also start sneezing. Have you ever come across this problem? Can you suggest a relief for this embarrassing condition? — P.N.

ANSWER: Were I to take a guess, I would say that your problem is gustatory rhinorrhea.

It is not an allergy. It's more of a peculiar reaction to hot or cold foods. Either that or it is a reaction to the chewing stimulus.

You can ask your doctor if he agrees and if he thinks one of the treatments below might help you:

- A decongestant such as Sudafed, taken before eating, might turn off your spigot.

- Atrovent, a nasal spray, also has been used for gustatory rhinorrhea.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have a stone in my saliva duct. It is most painful. I have been advised that it can be taken care of with sound waves. Have you heard of the problem and the sound-wave treatment? — O.T.

ANSWER: I feel for you. Plugging of a saliva duct with a stone leads to sheer misery.

Various removal procedures are available. If the stone is close enough to the mouth, it can be dislodged with a surgical probe.

Enjoying a fiesta

Residents of Hereford Care Center held a Mexico Day in September. They listened to Mexican music and watched a performance of the Mexican Hat Dance.
