City, county rebate checks show jump

By WILLIAM SEELEY
Staff Writer

Both the City of Hereford and Deaf Smith County had increases in sales tax revenues this month as compared to those of a year ago, a news release from the state comptroller's offices stated.

The city additionally showed gains for the year-to-date total sales tax collection over 1995 as of this month, though the county is slightly down for the same period, according to the news release.

Although the October sales tax returns reflect a stable if mild growth in Hereford's retail sector, the announcement may pack a limited punch in light of the recent announcement that one of Hereford's larger retail merchants will close its doors at the end of the month.

The City of Hereford this month will receive an $85,016.32 tax rebate from the state comptroller's office, bringing the 1996 year-to-date rebate to $813,592.12, a 5.19 percent increase over October 1995 figures.

This month's rebate represents two-thirds of sales tax collected in August. The remaining third goes to the Hereford Economic Development Corp.

Deaf Smith County, which receives a rebate for a one-half-cent sales tax collected on goods and service sold in the county outside the Hereford city limits will receive nearly 10 percent more this month than in October 1995 with a $30,181.12 sales tax rebate, bringing the county's year-to-date rebates to $286,240.74, a more than 3-percent drop from October 1995 figures.

State Comptroller John Sharp issued a total of $145.7 million in October sales tax payments to 1,084 Texas cities and 114 counties, the news release said.

"It's yet another indication of the strength of the Texas economy that the year-to-date returns are running about 8.5 percent ahead of the total for the first 10 months of last year," Sharp said in a printed statement.

Following are comparative figures for surrounding cities and counties. They reflect October 1996 returns, percentage change compared with October 1995, year-to-date totals for the first 10 months of 1996 and percentage change compared with the total rebates through October 1995.

CASTRO COUNTY -- County, $10,103.05 this month, 17.2 percent increase over October 1995 returns.

Clinton, Dole set for second, final debate

By DANA CALVO
Associated Press Writer

SAN DIEGO (AP) - President Clinton and Bob Dole are meeting for a final face-to-face showdown, offering the Republican challenger a nationally televised opportunity to ignite an against-the-odds comeback.

Tonight's town hall-style debate - in a theater on a University of San Diego campus - could hinge on Dole's harsh new line of attack on Clinton's character and on how the president responds.

Members of the audience, selected by the Gallup polling organization to weed out hard-core Clinton and Dole backers, will be asking unscreened questions during the 90-minute forum moderated by Jim Lehrer.

"So what they ask should be right off the top of their heads. That's the beauty of it," said Frank Newport, editor-in-chief of Gallup Poll.

Trailing by double-digit margins in national polls just three weeks before Election Day, Dole on Tuesday put forth his harshest condemnation yet of Clinton's ethical performance in the White House.

The Clinton campaign called it an act of desperation by a losing candidate and the president himself shrugged it off as "politics."

"We have seen more than 30 Clinton officials investigated, fired, or forced to resign due to ethical improprieties," Dole said to a luncheon audience of electronics-industry executives in nearby Coronado, Calif. "The problems of the Clinton administration have become a pattern. A habit of half-truths. An atmosphere of evasion."

From Albuquerque, N.M., where he prepared for the debate, Clinton refused to directly respond to Dole's accusations.

"I have not only tried to take responsibility for things that I have some responsibility for - good or bad - but also to share some of the good news with the American people," Clinton said.

Clinton was arriving here today ahead of the 9 p.m. EDT debate.

Democrats are dubious that California will suddenly become the anchor of Dole's hopes, given Clinton's assiduous courting of the state. But all signs from the Dole camp point to a full-scale battle, provided that polls after the debate do not show any significant movement in Clinton's favor.

Social Security increase noted

WASHINGTON (AP) - The nation's 44 million Social Security recipients will get a 2.9 percent increase in their benefits next year, largest in four years.

Social Security Commissioner Shirley S. Chater said today the cost-of-living adjustment, or COLA, means the average monthly check for retired workers will rise by $21 to $745, from $724 this year.

The maximum monthly payment for 6.5 million individuals receiving Supplemental Security income also will rise 2.9 percent, boosting their checks by $14 to $484, from $470. For a couple, the maximum goes to $726, from $705.

Monthly checks for the government's biggest benefit program are adjusted annually to prevent erosion by inflation. The adjustment is based on increases in the Consumer Price Index from the third quarter of one year to the corresponding quarter of the next.

Benefits rose 2.6 percent for 1996, matching the 1994 increase, which was the smallest since they inched up 1.3 percent in 1987.

The annual increases have been small in recent years as inflation remained in check, unlike the 14.3 percent jump in 1980 and 11.2 percent in 1981, when prices were surging.

"The continuation of low inflation is good news for all Americans, particularly for those, such as the elderly and disabled, living on fixed incomes," Chater said in a statement.

Hereford toddler dies after falling into bucket of water

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

A Hereford toddler died early Wednesday morning following an accident in which he fell into a cleaning bucket filled with water and cleaning chemicals.

According to reports, police and rescue personnel were called to a home in the 300 block of South Texas at about 8:45 p.m.

Cpl. Terry Brown, the first officer on the scene, found Andres Ramos, 1-year-old son of Ernesto and Blanca Ramos, lying on a couch in the house, not breathing.

Police Chief David Wagner said the child was discovered in a three-gallon cleaning bucket by his 12-year-old sister.

Immediately after arriving, Brown began performing cardio-pulmonary resuscitation on Andres and was able to revive him.

Hereford EMS personnel arrived on the scene and transported the toddler to Hereford Regional Medical Center.

He was then transported by ambulance to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo, where he was pronounced dead at 3 a.m. in the Pediatric Intensive Care Unit.

Potter County Justice of the Peace Terry Miller has ordered an autopsy, which will be conducted by the Lubbock County Medical Examiner's Office.

"Unless they come up with something that's a real surprise, which I don't expect," Miller said, the death will be ruled an accident.

A preliminary autopsy report should be completed within a few days, Miller said, but a complete report including toxicology results to determine the exact cause of death would probably take about a month.

Miller said the baby was conscious when he arrived at the hospital in Amarillo, meaning his death probably had to do with a chemical factor rather than drowning.

Miller said the chemical in the bucket was an ordinary "household cleaning product."

Services for the child are pending with Rix Funeral Directors.

Fans to honor 'Voice of the Whitefaces' Friday

'Tom Simons Day' will recognize broadcaster

BY SPEEDY NIEMAN
Publisher-Editor

Twenty-five years ago, a young man graduated from broadcasting school in Dallas and took a job in Hereford, thinking that he'd probably stay there about a year.

County Judge Tom Simons has made a couple of career changes since that time, but along the way he became known and still is widely recognized as "the Voice of the Whitefaces."

Mayor Bob Josseland has proclaimed Friday as "Tom Simons Day" in Hereford, recognizing his 25 years of broadcasting Hereford High football games and other sports events. He will serve as marshal of the Homecoming Parade Friday and will be honored during halftime of the football game Friday night.

But Simons is more than just a broadcaster. He is also being saluted for being a valuable community asset through his leadership as county judge, his volunteer work with civic and charitable organizations, and service in his church.

Simons is the current campaign chairman for United Way. He's worked with the YMCA, Camp Fire, Kids, Inc., Hereford Hustlers and chamber of commerce, and Lions Club. He is a recipient of the Bull Chip award.

Tom and his wife, Cindy, are active in First Baptist Church. She is a counselor at high school. They will soon be married 12 years.

Simons has three children--Kristy Parman, Julie Clements and Scott Simons, and one stepson, Billy Burnham.

Simons was born Sept. 1, 1943 in Mt. Vernon and grew up in Mt. Pleasant, where he was a standout basketball and baseball player. He went on to play baseball at Sam Houston State College and earned his degree there.

He worked at a Mt. Pleasant bank and started doing football games for the local radio station as a sideline. He'd dreamed of being a sportscaster since his childhood as he listened to Kern Tipps broadcast Southwest Conference games.

Simons later decided to attend a broadcast school in Dallas. After graduating, he passed out his resume and got a call from KPAN Radio in Hereford. "I figured I'd go there a get a year's experience, then I could take my pick of some other places," recalls Tom.

Simons served as news director and sports man for KPAN, then later went into sales. But he kept his job as a sports announcer, even after leaving the radio station to work with Lone Star Insurance for 1 1/2 years. He returned to the radio station, then briefly left in 1978 to work at a Greenville station. But he was soon back in Hereford, "because the kids hated the move."

He made an unlikely career change in 1986, deciding to run for the position of Deaf Smith County Judge. He was elected and took the oath of office in January, 1987.

For the past 12 years, listeners have heard Tom and "color-man" Cuby Kitchens describe Herd football games. Simons had five or six helpers before Cuby, including Buddy Peeler, Jim Tucker, Mike Margrave, Butch White, and his son, Scott.

There have been some memorable times along the way, including Cuby's introduction--and now traditional singing--of the victory song, "Turn Out the Lights, the Party's Over."

The most exciting game? "It had to be the 1986 playoff win over Cleburne at Abilene," says Simons.

'You're exactly right, Tom!'

Tom Simons, right, and his trusty sidekick, Cuby Kitchens, are shown in the broadcast booth a few years back. Friday has been proclaimed as "Tom Simons Day" in Hereford by Mayor Bob Josseland, saluting the county judge on his 25th anniversary of broadcasting Hereford High sporting events. Simons will serve as marshal of the Homecoming Parade and will be honored during halftime at Friday night's football game.

Nursing Home Agency wants 70 Percent Budget Hike
AUSTIN (AP) - The Texas Board of Nursing Facility Administrators will ask for a 70 percent budget increase to strengthen regulation and enforce new protection for the state's nursing home residents. The agency licenses the 2,700 nursing homes in the state. Earlier, the board considered reducing the two-year license renewal fee from $250 to $125, but dropped that idea because the money is needed for better regulation, officials said.

The board's chairman also proposed Tuesday to add three advisers to the board's complaint committee. They would be a geriatric nursing expert, a medical ethicist and a leader of a nursing home residents advocacy group.

The board will ask for its 1997 budget to be increased from $174,000 to about $296,000. About 40 percent of the increase would pay for a clerk and investigator to help reduce an expanding workload.

In the 1996 budget year, more than 300 complaints were lodged against nursing home administrators, but the board had only part-time investigators and a three-person staff.

Texie Waterman Howard, Crafter of Cowboys' Cheerleaders, Dies
DALLAS (AP) - Texie Waterman Howard, who was largely responsible for crafting the Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders' glitzy image, has died of lung cancer. She was 64.

Cowboys president and general manager Tex Schramm hired Ms. Waterman in the early 1970s as the cheerleaders' first choreographer. Four years later, the group captured the nation's attention on the sidelines at Super Bowl X.

"The cameras picked them up, and it was just phenomenal," Ms. Waterman told The Dallas Morning News in 1983. "One girl winked in the camera. She was a beautiful thing. That wink started the whole thing."

The cheerleaders eventually were world famous, making goodwill tours to war zones, selling pinup calendars and making movies.

Ms. Waterman played herself in the 1979 made-for-television "Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders Movie" and its sequel.

Turtle Ruling Curbs Imports of Popular Shellfish
WASHINGTON (AP) - Fewer imported shrimp will be allowed in this country because of a court ruling designed to protect sea turtles, but industry and government officials can't say whether shoppers will have to shell out more for scampi.

A judge of the U.S. Court of International Trade last week tightened a ban on shrimp caught by countries without national programs to safeguard the endangered turtles. The ruling excludes farm-raised shrimp.

The ruling will not affect imports from Thailand, the leading U.S. supplier. Thailand sends just under $1 billion worth of shrimp to the United States annually.

A face full of pie

In an effort to help the United Way of Deaf Smith County, Hereford Junior High School held a contest in which teachers competed against each other to see who could raise the most money. The winner, coach James Salinas, got to give the loser, coach Grant Davis, a pie in the face. Above, Davis, left, pushes a similar pie into the face of principal Marylin Leasure, who told the students at the assembly that she would take a pie if they gave more -- they raised another $60 within minutes. The school's total United Way donation was more than $500. Watching the pie action is coach Clint Coley.

Court puts hold on new rules for opening telephone industry

By ED SCHAFFER
Associated Press Writer
ST. LOUIS (AP) - Handing a major setback to the government, a federal appeals court has temporarily put on hold new rules for opening up the telephone industry to competition.

Phone and cable TV companies had asked the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to temporarily block the rules until they can challenge the legality in the same appeals court in January.

Federal Communications Commission Chairman Reed Hundt immediately attacked Tuesday's decision and said the federal agency would ask the Supreme Court to lift the stay.

"The Eighth Circuit's stay throws a monkey wrench into the carefully designed congressional machinery for introducing competition into the local exchange market," Hundt said.

Opponents hailed the decision as a vindication of their position that the rules were unfair.

The three-judge panel wrote in its opinion that the FCC seemed to have overextended its jurisdiction into pricing of telecommunications services, which it said was an issue for states to decide.

The FCC issued the rules in early August to provide guidance for companies in complying with the Federal Telecommunications Act of 1996. The act removes competitive barriers between telephone, cable and other communications companies.

"What it means is that the FCC's efforts to stack the deck against local phone companies has been rebuffed," said William Barr, general counsel for GTE Corp.

Local phone companies argued the rules would mean they would have to subsidize the entrance of competitors into their markets. They worry that the large competitors will turn around and sell their network services at lower prices.

The appeals were filed in separate courts but consolidated in the 8th Circuit.

Consumer prices show Sept. gain

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Consumer prices rose 0.3 percent in September, pushed higher by rising costs for food, clothing and new cars.

The Labor Department said today the increase last month in the Consumer Price Index followed a much more benign 0.1 percent advance in August. The September gain matched the 0.3 percent rise turned in during July.

The price acceleration was led by a fourth month of higher food costs, reflecting sharp increases for meat, poultry, fish and dairy products. Energy prices, which had been falling for three straight months, showed no change in September.

The September increase in the CPI was the last figure needed to compute the annual cost-of-living increase for the 44 million Americans receiving Social Security benefits.

For 1996, Social Security benefits will rise by 2.9 percent. That will mean a $21 increase for the average monthly check, increasing it to $745.

Consumer prices were also up 0.3 percent in September.

Both the overall increase and the rise in the so-called core rate of inflation, which were in line with market expectations, caused barely a ripple on the inflation-sensitive bond market. Yields on 30-year Treasury bonds dipped to 6.83 percent shortly after the figures were released today, compared with Tuesday night's 6.84 percent.

The Dow Jones industrial average closed above the 6,000 mark for the first time on Monday, propelled higher by enthusiasm among investors that the Federal Reserve will be able to leave interest rates unchanged for the rest of the year.

That view is based on the belief that the economy is slowing enough to keep inflation from getting out of hand. Still some analysts worried that the 0.3 percent September increase in the CPI showed some hints of rising cost pressures down the road.

"If you are inclined to think that inflation is getting worse, you could find reasons to support that view in the September report," said Cynthia Latta, senior economist at DRI-McGraw Hill Inc. in Lexington, Mass. "I think we might be seeing the leading edge of a little acceleration in inflation."

Through the first nine months of the year, consumer prices have been rising at an annual rate of 3.2 percent, compared with a 2.5 percent rise in 1995.

SIMONS

The Herd was down 7-6 and gave up the ball with just seconds left in the game.

"Cuby and I had already started talking about what a great season it had been and how the Herd did well to advance that far in the playoffs," recalls Simons.

But, instead of falling on the ball, Cleburne ran a play and fumbled the handoff. Hereford recovered and Mark Artho, who had never attempted a field goal in a game, kicked the game winner for a huge come-from-behind rally.

The most disappointing loss? "That had to be the state 5A semifinal game against Lake Highland in 1981," says Simons. The Herd outplayed the Richardson team but lost by a 10-7 score. Lake Highland went on to win an easy state final contest.

Simons also remembers a night when listeners must have wondered what happened to him. Borger was playing here and Hereford scored late, then went for two points to win. The play failed and some Borger coaches, situated over the broadcast booth, started jumping up and down.

A fluorescent light fixture came loose in the radio booth and fell on Tom's head. "It didn't hurt me bad, but it sure stunned me," recalls Simons.

"I didn't say anything for a short time." Simons says he remembers only two games that didn't follow the time schedule for football games. One occurred at Frenship when the lights went out during the game. The teams had to take about a 45-minute rest in the locker rooms while repairs were made, then Frenship seemed to gain a new lease on life and came back to defeat the Herd, recalled Simons.

The other break came this season in the Tascosa game at Amarillo. The refs held up the start of the game due to thunder and lightning. The kickoff was delayed about 20 minutes.

It brought back memories for Simons. The first game he ever broadcast at Mt. Pleasant, they put him in the open air on top of the press box. "A storm blew in and it started raining and lightning. I think I may be lucky to be here today!"

Simons admits he is not unbiased in reporting the games. "My listeners, after all, are primarily Hereford fans." He may question a referee's call now and then, but Simons says he never criticizes players.

"These are high school kids and it's just a game. We want them to do their best but if we lose, the sun still comes up tomorrow."

Probably one reason Simons comes across so sincere and knowledgeable in reporting games is that he always stays in close contact with the coaches and players.

For Simons, it's more than just a parttime job - it's a love affair with the game and the people. So, don't turn out the lights, the party's not over yet!

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I was surprised to read the letter from "Quebec Quandary," the teacher who was unsure about how she should evaluate handwritten English papers as compared with those that were word-processed on a computer.

Technology is an integral part of today's work force. Since this is now a fact of life, it is the school's job to teach students how to use computers as well as provide access to them. Teaching the basics of language, however, is still the teacher's responsibility.

Computer spelling programs do not pick up on typing and homophone errors such as "to," "two" and "too." I would never use, let alone recommend, a grammar-checker. One must have a fairly broad-based, in-depth knowledge of grammar in order to use the program. Of course, at that point, you don't really need it.

The only real advantage of a computer-generated English paper is that it looks better. -- English Teacher in Fairfax, Va.

Dear Teacher: I'm sure even the computer buffs in my reading audience would agree with you. Keep reading for more:

Dear Ann: I read the letter from "Quebec Quandary" about students using computers. She seems to think all students have the right to a level playing field. That just isn't so. There can never be equal status for all kids in all categories.

No student should rely on the computer's spell-check utility. It can't tell the difference between "wreak" and "wreck" because both are legitimate spellings of different words. It will accept either, whether the user wants to say "The storm wreaked havoc" or "The car was wrecked."

The student who can't afford to buy a computer can certainly afford to buy a dog-eared dictionary at a garage sale. And the kid does himself a disservice by using the computer's mindless utilities. Such dependency will ensure that he will never become proficient in spelling or grammar. The goal of a teacher should be to see to it that all students have a firm grip on both these skills before the class year is over -- whether or not they own computers. Gadgets will never be a good substitute for sweat. -- Russell in Va.

Dear Russell: Amen, brother. Keep reading. What follows will rattle your molars. It may also dampen a student's enthusiasm for computers:

Dear Ann Landers: This is for the teacher in Quebec who was concerned about grading papers done on computers compared two papers prepared by students who hand right them. I think the computer is a solution to my terrible penmanship, but I must also take the time to reread my papers if I want it to look well. A spell-checker only identifies misspelled words. Its still you're job to correct them. My son uses the computers suggestions, but sometimes, their are know suggestions that fit. As you can probably guess buy now, my spell-checker can find know errors hear. Can ewe? Seriously, Ann, teachers must decide what they feel is most important -- the content, the spelling or both. Maybe we could dispense with grading the papers altogether and just teach the subject matter. -- Port Sanilac, Mich.

Dear Port Sanilac: Some teachers have been doing just that for quite some time -- no grades, just "pass" or "fail." I prefer the old-fashioned way. It motivates those who strive for excellence, and I'm all for that.

What can you give the person who has everything? Ann Landers' booklet, "Gems," is ideal for a nightstand or coffee table. "Gems" is a collection of Ann Landers' most requested poems and essays. Lady Whitefaces rout Randall, clinch berth

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

The Hereford volleyball team clinched the program's ninth consecutive playoff berth with a quick 15-1, 15-3 rout of Randall Tuesday at Whiteface Gym.

The Herd improves to 9-1 in District 1-4A and 24-1 overall with two matches remaining in the regular season: one at Pampa Saturday, then the showdown with Dumas Tuesday in Whiteface Gym. Dumas (10-0, 21-4) handed Hereford its only loss of the season Sept. 28 in Dumas.

Hereford had no trouble with Randall (2-7, 7-15).

"This has been the best we've felt after a volleyball match in quite some time," coach Brenda Reeh said. "We had lots of fun, and that's been missing from some of our recent matches."

Hereford needed only five service rotations to win the first game, scoring the final eight points in one last run.

The second game lasted a little longer, but after two straight Cassie Abney kills gave Hereford a 10-0 lead, the outcome never was in doubt. Julie Rampley served two aces to start the game, Kendra Wright had an ace that re-started the Herd after several sideouts, and Catie Betzen served an ace to end the game.

The Lady Whitefaces may be peaking at the right time.

"We've brought up two or three (junior varsity) players to scrimmage against the varsity, and they've provided a spark for us," Reeh said. "A couple of defensive players have shown improvement recently, and that's been a spark. That kind of attitude and good play can be contagious, and I think it's coming around just at the right time."

Like the varsity, the Herd junior varsity took care of Randall quickly, winning 15-4, 15-9. Angie Pena served for eight points and Audra Witkowski served for seven.

The JV also won Saturday at Borger in a match that wasn't quite so quick. They won by the score of 15-1, 14-16, 17-15. Witkowski served for seven points in the second game and 16 overall.

The Hereford volleyball freshman split their matches over the past week. They won 15-11, 2-15, 15-6 Saturday at Borger, but then they lost to Valleyview, 15-2, 15-8, Monday in Hereford.

Hereford's eighth grade B team took third place in a tournament Saturday in Dumas, beating Pampa, 17-19, 15-12, 15-3 in a match that last an hour and a half, coach Pam Dean said.

The team lost a close one to Dumas in the semifinals, 16-14, 15-5. In pool play, they beat Valleyview and lost to Borger.

The Hereford A team won consolation in its division with a 15-13, 15-12 win over Pampa, as Shantel Bass served nine points. The A team lost to Valleyview and split with Borger in pool play.

On Monday, Hereford Junior High teams split four long matches with Canyon.

The seventh grade A team won, 10-15, 15-10, 15-11, and the B team won 15-9, 12-15, 15-10, as Nicole Mendoza served for eight points.

The eighth grade A team lost 16-18, 17-15, 15-12, despite 10 service points each from Brionne Yosten and Dorina Guerro. The B team lost 15-8, 4-15, 15-7.

HJH gridders sweep Borger

The Hereford Junior High football teams pulled off another sweep Tuesday; this time against Borger.

In Hereford, the eighth grade A team defeated Borger, 29-14. Ramiro Zambrano scored on a five-yard run and on a seven-yard pass from Cody Hodges, and Zambrano kicked an extra point. Hodges threw two other TD passes: one to Nathan Horrell for 10 yards, and one to twin brother Slade Hodges for 15 yards.

Cody Hodges also ran for two points, as did Kyle Arthro.

Coach Bobby Nino praised the play of the offensive line, and pointed out several defensive plays: Rick Bodayo and Israel Martinez each blocked a punt; Hagen Henderson and J.P. Holman each recovered a fumble;

Holman had an interception; and Slade Hodges had three TD receptions called back on penalties.

The eighth grade B team rolled 20-0. Eddie Lacey ran one yard for one TD and threw 50 yards to Eric Ramos for another. Tony Escamilla added a 10-yard TD run. Joseph Valdez threw to William Shows for a two-point conversion.

In Borger, the seventh A team won 16-14. Juan DeSantiago ran 60 yards for a TD and ran for a two-pointer. Geoffrey Marquez caught a 30-yard pass from Freddie Garcia, and the same two hooked up for two points.

The B team won 6-0, getting a 25-yard TD pass from Nickson Whatley to Matthew Cortez.

NCA aces home-schoolers

The volleyball and flag football teams from Nazarene Christian Academy finished up their seasons Tuesday in Hereford with victories over the Amarillo Home School School Association.

The volleyball team wrapped up a 9-4 season with a 15-2, 15-2 rout. Lyndzie Torbert served ten aces for the Lady Eagles, and Dena Brinkman and Sloane Merrick served nine and eight aces respectively. Each of the three girls had one additional service point that wasn't an ace; they combined for all 30 service points.

NCA won the flag football game, 52-0, but further details were not reported. The football team finished with a 4-4 record.

Cowboys won't dare overlook 0-5 Falcons

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) - The winless Atlanta Falcons shouldn't cause the Dallas Cowboys any sleepless nights.

But don't tell coach Barry Switzer. He can't stand this kind of game.

The Cowboys are gearing up to play the winless Falcons while everyone is talking about the Miami game against Jimmy Johnston in two weeks.

Switzer admitted he was "concerned" Tuesday that the 15-point favorite Cowboys might get caught looking ahead.

The Cowboys coach remembers what happened two years ago in his rookie NFL season against the Cincinnati Bengals.

Switzer, a former Oklahoma coach, had made some off-handed reference to not getting overconfident against the "Iowa States" of the football world. The 17-point underdog Bengals barely lost to the Cowboys 23-20 and Cincinnati coach Dave Shula confronted Switzer after the game.

"He told me what I could do with that Iowa State," Switzer said. "That's a good illustration of how a team can get motivated."

Braves' 14-0 rout touches off war of words

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer
ATLANTA (AP) - No telling if Atlanta's 14-0 rout will have a carryover effect on the St. Louis Cardinals. The Braves' words sure stung them, though.
Manager Tony La Russa, outfielder Brian Jordan and other Cardinals took turns Tuesday criticizing the Braves, chiding the World Series champions for being a bunch of complainers.
"Those guys lose and they give us no credit for beating them," Jordan said. "It's always excuses. Their hits aren't falling in, their hitters are getting squeezed, they're not getting the call. It's ridiculous."
"You win with class and you lose with class," he said. "It's getting real old, and it's going to be so sweet when we beat them."

The Cardinals, leading 3-2 in the NL championship series, can win it tonight in Game 6. They had their chance at home Monday night, but got clobbered.
"There is something like momentum in baseball, but it's usually not game to game, but inning to inning," La Russa said.
The Braves hope four-time Cy Young winner Greg Maddux can get them to Game 7, where Tom Glavine would pitch. Maddux was hit hard in losing Game 2, and takes a career postseason record of 5-4 into tonight's start.
Donovan Osborne was scheduled to start for St. Louis, but La Russa might turn to rookie Alan Benes instead. La Russa saw Andy Benes and Todd Stottlemyre struggle on three days' rest in this series, and might not want to put Osborne under the same pressure.

While La Russa would not commit on his pitching plans, he left no doubt as to how he felt about the Braves. Without much prompting, and peppering his comments with more profanity than usual, he took off on Atlanta comments regarding the Cardinals' style.
"The only one that really bothers me is the one that's coming out today at their getting upset at our emotion," he said. "I've always admired their ability to handle things well, but it surprised me some."
"I watched their celebration. They shook hands quietly, patted each other on the back. They want to be what they want to be? Fine, we'll be the way we want to be. We're not getting on them for being real cool, and I don't want to hear this about us being too emotional."

Perturbed? Probably. Looking for an emotional edge? Clearly.
La Russa did the same thing before the series started, pouncing on an innocent remark by Atlanta's Chipper Jones about how the Dodgers were the team the Braves really feared in the playoffs.
Then again, La Russa surely was looking for something after Monday night's rout.
At an off-day workout in Atlanta, the Braves had nothing but good things to say about the Cardinals.
"These guys are real good. We knew that," said second baseman Mark Lemke, who had four hits in Game 5. "I don't know what anybody else said, but we knew how good they are."

Shortly after the lopsided win, Braves general manager John Schuerholz tweaked the Cardinals, who had 20 cases of champagne on ice for a clincher.
"They got pretty excited when they won three games, and maybe winning three games is exciting, but they still make you win four," Schuerholz said. "All we heard all day long is about how they were going to celebrate. Well, they made a big mistake if they thought we were just going to curl up and go away."

La Russa seemed more rankled by remarks he said Schuerholz made that claimed Cardinals closer Dennis Eckersley pointed into the Braves dugout after a dramatic win in Game 4.
"Schuerholz just made a big mistake by accusing him of that," La Russa said.
Eckersley, certain he didn't do anything inflammatory, said he wasn't going to pay attention to it.
"Who's Schuerholz?" he said. "So what? I could care less what Schuerholz says."

Fielder will do whatever is needed

By TOM WITHERS
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) - Cecil Fielder anticipated the second half of the question like it was a fat fastball down the middle of the plate.
He crushed it.
"I don't care," he said. "Whatever it takes to win. Whatever it takes."
The query? "Cecil, will you be a designated hitter or a first baseman in the World Series?"
As the New York Yankees prepare for their first World Series appearance in 15 years, manager Joe Torre has some problems to resolve. Chief among them: What to do with Fielder?
The Yankees still don't know if they'll be hosting the St. Louis Cardinals or Atlanta Braves when the World Series opens at Yankee Stadium on Saturday night. But they do know that when they travel to the National League city for Games 3-5, they won't be allowed to use a designated hitter.

That's where the Fielder dilemma comes in.
Fielder, a designated hitter-first baseman, was one of the biggest reasons - literally and figuratively - that New York blew through Texas and Baltimore to gain its first World Series since 1918.
His single in the eighth inning of Game 4 against the Rangers drove in the winning run. And last Sunday it was his three-run homer in the third inning that gave the Yankees a lead the Orioles never challenged. He finished the series with eight RBIs in five games in the ALCS and two homers.

Torre must now decide whether to use Fielder only as the DH at home; platoon him in the NL city with regular starting first baseman Tino Martinez; or split DH duties between Fielder and Darryl Strawberry.
Compounding Torre's dilemma is Strawberry, who has a badly bruised toe and may not get a go-ahead to play until late in the week.
When asked if he is considering using Fielder in the NL city, all Torre would say was, "Possibly."
So much for tipping your hand.
Torre had other concerns Tuesday as the Yankees returned for a three-hour workout at Yankee Stadium. New York's manager took Monday "completely off, I blocked everything out" as the Yankees soaked in the celebration of their AL title.
Torre was still receiving handshakes and congratulations on Tuesday when he returned to work. The answering machine at home is over-loaded with messages from well-wishers, too.

"I've got a lot of friends," said Torre, who visited his older brother, Frank, on Monday morning at Columbia-Presbyterian Hospital, where the elder Torre is awaiting a heart transplant.
Still, he couldn't stay away from the ballpark.
"I came to Yankee Stadium and I got this telegram," Torre said. "It said: Finally. Best of luck. Regards to Frank - Sandy Koufax."
"I think I need the five days rest," he said. "It's not over yet and the phone is still ringing."
Strawberry limped into Yankee Stadium for the second straight day for treatments. And, although X-rays were negative, Strawberry still thinks his toe might be busted.
The Yankees' pitchers provided some light moments during their workout. Because they'll be required to hit when playing in the NL city, the Yankees pitchers, some of whom hadn't picked up a bat in 15 years, took a little batting practice.
It wasn't a pretty sight.

COWBOYS

Switzer said "point spreads never meant a thing to me and they didn't mean anything to the Texas Longhorns over the weekend." He was referring to 22-point favorite Texas' 30-27 overtime loss to Oklahoma.
He said the Cowboys by now "ought to be smart enough" not to get caught in the look-ahead trap.
"All the teams are tough, look at what Tampa Bay did to Minnesota," Switzer said. "All I know is (quarterback) Bobby Hebert has enough talent and ability to hurt you. You can't take anything for granted."
While Switzer is concerned about Atlanta, he did take the time to talk to Buffalo coaches after they had lost to Miami and Johnson on Sunday.
"Buffalo was the favorite but they had seven sacks and five turnovers,"

Switzer said. "That's what can happen."
Dallas players already have gotten Switzer's message.
"Everyone is a professional in this league," running back Emmitt Smith said. "It would make their season if they beat us. When teams play the Cowboys, they play their best football."
Quarterback Troy Aikman said Atlanta has good talent.
"For the life of me I don't know how they've lost all six games," he said.
Added linebacker Darrin Smith: "All you have to do is look at the Tampa Bay game. Were they supposed to beat Minnesota? Did they? That's why we can't look ahead to Miami."

I, ROBERT D. JOSSERAND, MAYOR OF THE CITY OF HEREFORD, TEXAS, do hereby declare and proclaim the 18th day of October, 1996 as "TOM SIMONS DAY" in Hereford.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereupon subscribed my name and caused the Great Seal of Hereford, Texas, to be affixed this 8th day of October, in the Year of Our Lord, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Ninety-Six.

ROBERT D. JOSSERAND, MAYOR
CITY OF HEREFORD, TEXAS

ATTEST:
TERRI JOHNSON, CITY SECRETARY

In the fall of 1972, a young radio announcer from Mount Pleasant took to the airwaves to call the play-by-play between Hereford and Pampa for KPAN.

The opening game of that football season had an added bit of drama, because the Herd had defeated Pampa in the bi-district playoffs the previous season--plus the Harvesters went into the game ranked #10 in the state in class 5A.

Tom Simons kicked off his career at KPAN Radio that night with a breathless, and at times shouted and excited commentary on Hereford's 20-0 victory over Pampa.

Through the years, Tom advanced to sports director, then account representative at KPAN, but always kept attending and announcing Whiteface football, basketball, volleyball and baseball games. He eventually left the station to get a real job, and now serves as Deaf Smith County judge.

Tom Simons is now completing his 25th football season as the "Voice of the Whitefaces". Please join KPAN--in person or on the radio--this Friday night at Whiteface Stadium, to honor the best sportscaster in Texas--

TOM SIMONS.

Aggies plan to use Kyle mystique

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer
COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) - The Texas Aggies want to use Kyle Field's mystique to get back into the Big 12 race.

The Aggies have a 62-5-1 record at Kyle Field since 1985 and they hope the home-field advantage will help them turn around their season Saturday against No. 21 Kansas State and on Oct. 26 against Texas Tech. "I told our team that October is a critical month for us," coach R.C. Slocum said Tuesday. "We had to beat Iowa State and now we have Kansas State and Texas Tech at home. If we win those two, now you've got some momentum. "That's how I've packaged our season but we've got to win the two home games."

Saturday's 24-21 victory over Iowa State pulled the Aggies back to a 3-3 record. They also have victories over North Texas and Louisiana Tech.

Now, beating a ranked team is what they're expecting.

"It would be great to beat them and quiet all the talk that we can't beat a top opponent," wide receiver Albert Connell said. "It would launch us back into the Big 12 race. I was surprised how pumped we were in practice yesterday."

The Aggies missed chances to improve their national stature earlier this season with losses to Brigham Young and Colorado and now they have another chance to beat a quality team.

"They (Kansas State) are good enough that we would gain from beating them," Slocum said. "We would gain more than just beating another team. If you can beat them, then you can beat most of the rest of the teams we play."

"It would be something to build on. It's still a long season but it would give us ammunition to keep our playoff hopes alive."

A&M quarterback Brannon

Stewart doesn't want to put too much pressure on the Aggies.

"It's not a make-or-break game but our goal is to win out and represent our conference," quarterback Brannon Stewart said. "If we play well and beat Kansas State the rest of it will follow."

Linebacker Keith Mitchell thinks the Aggies can pull off the doubleheader.

"If we can knock off these next two teams, they'll all be chasing us," Mitchell said. "We thought we'd be chasing Texas but they've had some trouble too so maybe we can pick up the momentum."

'Huskers aim to stop Raider RB Hanspard

By ED HOWARD
Associated Press Writer
LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) - Nebraska has become an icon in college football because the team closely observes a couple of Tom Osborne's basic rules for success. "On offense, establish the run. On defense, stop the run," says the coach of the fifth-ranked Cornhuskers.

Nebraska's offense has developed slowly this year. But the defense has throttled opponents - except for an embarrassing 19-0 loss to Arizona State in September that dimmed Husker chances for a third straight national title.

Now, after weeks of saying that it gets better every week, Nebraska (4-1, 2-0 in the Big 12) faces a pivotal test in the form of Texas Tech and the person of national rushing leader Byron Hanspard.

"You can't compare it to anything else we've faced," said All-America defensive end Jared Tomich. "Texas Tech prides itself on the running game. We pride ourselves on stopping it."

Texas Tech (4-2, 3-1 Big 12) wastes no time taking care of business. In five straight games the Red Raiders have scored on their first possession.

Nebraska has given up just 45 points total and only 12 in the last three games which included a 49-0 shutout of Baylor. And six of those points came on safeties in the Arizona State game.

"I wouldn't describe this as a shot at redemption, but it's very important that we make a statement," Tomich said.

The desired statement is that the Arizona State game was a misstep, that Nebraska's offense can grind out those scoring drives while the defense grinds down opponents.

Hanspard is averaging 217.7 yards per game and 7.3 yards per carry. He has earned more than 200 yards in four of Tech's six games.

Stopping the run is Nebraska's bread and butter. And the Huskers know their plates will be full Saturday.

"He's going to be a problem," Nebraska defensive coordinator Charlie McBride said.

"If you can keep him under 100 yards I think that's a pretty good accomplishment," McBride said.

Defensive end Grant Wistrom, credited with 24 total tackles and 4.5 sacks, seemed to grimace and smile when Hanspard was mentioned.

"If you don't wrap that guy up he'll take another 10 or 20 yards from you after contact," Wistrom said. "In practice, we're pumped up. The coaches are hollering, we're banging each other around. We know this is a tough test. It's probably a measuring stick for both teams."

Texas Tech is second in the Big 12 in rushing, averaging 322 yards each game; just behind Nebraska's 324.4.

McBride and Osborne said Tech quarterback Zebbie Lethridge, a scrambler with running back ability and a good arm, presents a challenge the Huskers haven't faced this year.

"They have built things around those two guys ... they can hurt you," McBride said. "You blow a coverage, you don't get after them on every down, you've got trouble."

Baylor coach Chuck Reedy, whose team fell to the Huskers and the Red Raiders, praised Hanspard while saying the Nebraska defense might be the best he has seen.

"I'll say this: If Hanspard gets 200 yards this week they ought to just send him the Heisman," Reedy said. "They ought to cancel the voting and go ahead and send it to him. If he does it against their defense he certainly deserves it."

Auburn always gives Gators fits

By DOUG FERGUSON
AP Sports Writer
GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) - Auburn is the last team with a realistic shot at stopping top-ranked Florida's undefeated run toward the Southeastern Conference championship game.

How fitting. The Gators have been the most dominant team in the SEC since coach Steve Spurrier arrived in 1990. They have won four of the past five SEC titles and 17 straight conference games.

The winning streak would be 32 games - except for Auburn.

Florida would be undefeated at home in SEC play - except for Auburn.

The 16th-ranked Tigers rode a surprising 38-35 victory over Florida to an undefeated season in 1993, although they were on probation.

A year later in Gainesville, they were 19-point underdogs to the No.

1 team in the nation, had a field day with Florida turnovers and won 41-38.

"I think we learned we didn't play very well," Spurrier said Tuesday of the Auburn losses. "They beat us. They got some turnovers and we didn't. They played a little bit better than we did and they coached better."

"If that gives Auburn a little confidence coming in, I guess that's good for them. But we don't pay much attention to something that happened last year or two years ago or 30 years ago. If something that happened a couple of years ago had anything to do with it, then I ought to bring up that 1966 game."

Spurrier was a senior quarterback at Florida that year. He kicked a 40-yard field goal in the final seconds that gave the Gators a 30-27 victory and helped him win the Heisman Trophy.

Florida (6-0, 4-0 SEC) hasn't had those kind of games this year. The Gators are the nation's top scoring team at 52.5 points a game. For the most part, all but one of those games have been decided by halftime.

"We go into almost all these games thinking they're going down to the wire, and we're going to have to slug it out in the fourth quarter and make a play to win in the end," Spurrier said. "That's our attitude going in, and I guarantee that all I'm talking about before the game."

It might not be a bad idea Saturday.

The Gators won 49-38 at Auburn a year ago, but only after recovering from a 10-0 deficit when Danny Wuerffel missed eight of his first nine passes.

Auburn (5-1, 3-1) is already behind in the West division race of the SEC because of a 19-15 loss at home to LSU, a team the Gators beat 56-13 last week.

But emotions figure to be a little higher on Saturday. The Gators and Tigers first played in 1912 and have played every year since 1945. It didn't take long for the bulletin board to fill up.

"I know we can win. There's no doubt in my mind," Auburn quarterback Dameyunc Craig said after the Tigers beat Mississippi State last week. "We're going to do some things Florida hasn't seen before. Florida's defense hasn't been tested yet."

Noseguard Jimmy Brumbaugh also jumped in.

"I'd rather play there than anywhere else," he said of the "Swamp," where Florida hasn't lost since that 1994 game to Auburn. "It's going to feel great. It's going to feel better when we beat them."

Spurrier, who chastised his own players for mouthing off before the Tennessee game, dismissed the Auburn talk as insignificant.

"I don't think it has much of an impact on anything," he said. "We want to beat Auburn. They want to beat us."

OU coach hopes to build on big win

By OWEN CANFIELD
AP Sports Writer

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) - No one was happier than John Blake after Oklahoma upset Texas last weekend. The first-year Sooners coach cried tears of joy after James Allen scored in overtime to give Blake his first victory.

The feeling is one Blake will never forget and doesn't want his players to forget. But he also realizes that it was only one game, and that his young team has plenty of work ahead as it prepares for Saturday's game at Baylor.

"I know that it is real important to get back to focusing on winning," Blake said Tuesday at his weekly news conference. "This team has nothing to be just tremendously proud about other than winning the game, because we made a lot of mistakes."

Like two blocked punts, one of which Texas recovered in the end zone for a touchdown. There were blown assignments on both sides of the ball, little mistakes that can result in big problems for a team unaccustomed to winning.

"We're 1-4 still," said defensive lineman Kelly Gregg. "We've got to keep winning to get back on track. We have to come out and play probably a better game this week than we did against Texas."

The 30-27 victory erased the pain of an 0-4 start and kept the Sooners from matching the school record for the worst start to a season. It also resulted in big celebrations in Norman, like a pep rally Monday that was attended by the school's president and athletic director.

Blake's phone rang constantly through the weekend, with friends calling to congratulate him. He said he was overwhelmed by the response.

Now the challenge for him and his staff is to avoid an emotional letdown, something that always seems to happen to the Sooners after the Texas game. How do you do that?

"Just from the word 'go,' be direct on what you want done," he said. "I think players look at the coaches to see how they respond. If the coach is kind of relaxed, laid back a little bit, kind of fat and happy right now, then they could take the same attitude. They haven't got that approach from this coaching staff or myself. They understand what can take place and we mean business."

The offense against Texas continued the improvement that has been evident since the second game, when Justin Fuente became the starting quarterback. The Sooners didn't turn the ball over for the first time this year, they outgained the Longhorns by nearly 100 yards and had two backs surpass 100 yards rushing in a game for the first time since 1992.

The Sooners also have had success rotating two offensive lines in recent weeks. All 24 points scored against Kansas two weeks ago came behind the second line. And Texas coach John Mackovic felt his team got tired in the fourth quarter and overtime, when Oklahoma's offense controlled the game.

Prior to the Texas game, many wondered if Oklahoma might go

Tyson hasn't been pressed

HOUSTON (AP) - Mike Tyson has all the right boxing skills but hasn't been pressed in the ring, Evander Holyfield says.

And he says that will be the difference when he tries to take Tyson's WBA heavyweight title 3 weeks from now in Las Vegas.

"He's skilled in techniques," Holyfield said Tuesday at his Houston gym where he's training for the Nov. 9 fight. "The man has a history of good coaching. His fundamentals are a lot better than a lot of people think. He's a student of the game. Regardless of his attitude, the man's a student of the game. That's why he continues to win."

What he hasn't faced since regaining the heavyweight title, though, is pressure, Holyfield believes.

"It's obvious he's been overwhelming competitors who have never pushed him," Holyfield said.

For heel pain, drug store remedy may be best

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer
NEW YORK (AP) - For millions of Americans who want relief from heel pain, over-the-counter pads that sell for $10 or so work better than custom-made shoe inserts that cost hundreds of dollars, a study found.

Heel pain is the most common reason people go to a foot doctor, and many doctors start treatment with the custom-made device. But the new work suggests that most sufferers may not have to see a doctor at all.

Starting treatment with over-the-counter pads could save more than $200 million a year in health care costs, said study director Dr. Glen Pfeffer, head of the San Francisco Orthopedic Foot and Ankle Center.

The results were described Tuesday by Dr. Carol Frey, an associate professor of orthopedic surgery at the University of Southern California and a study co-author, at a presentation sponsored by the American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons.

The study was financed by companies that make the three over-the-counter pads used in the study and by the American Orthopedic Foot and Ankle Society.

The researchers emphasized that the study dealt only with pain relief gained during the first eight weeks of a treatment that can take a year. Longer studies will be needed to see if the results hold up, they said.

The study focused on plantar fasciitis, the major cause of heel pain. It causes a dull or stabbing pain similar to walking with a stone under the heel.

Pfeffer said perhaps 2 million or so cases get treated every year in the United States, while several million others with the disorder don't go to a doctor.

The study involved 236 patients who were otherwise healthy and were seen at 15 hospitals across the country. All were prescribed exercises to stretch the arch and heel cord. In addition, some were randomly assigned to get either a semi-rigid, plastic custom-made arch support or one of three off-the-shelf pads: a rubber heel cup, a silicone pad for below the heel or a felt arch support that extends under the heel.

After eight weeks:

- 72 percent of patients who just did the exercises reported at least some pain relief.
- those who also used the custom-made inserts did no better.
- 95 percent of silicone pad users, 88 percent of those using the heel cup and 81 percent of patients using the felt arch support said they had gotten at least some relief.

Pfeffer said the heel cup and felt inserts cost about $10, while the silicone pad runs about $40. Custom-made arch supports cost about $180 to $500, he said.

Matthew Mirones, president of the Pedorthic Footwear Association, which represents people who design and make custom-made shoe inserts, said he agreed that custom-made inserts shouldn't be the initial treatment for heel pain.

But Mirones said that custom-made inserts can be made with a variety of materials and designs, and that a different custom insert might have performed better in the study. Pfeffer said it's hard to imagine that other types could do better than off-the-shelf pads for initial treatment, and even if they did, the difference probably wouldn't be worth the added cost.

Pfeffer said that people can try the exercises and an over-the-counter product - available at drugstores and sporting goods stores - and then see whether they need to consult a doctor.

Glenn Gastwirth, deputy executive director of the American Podiatric Medical Association, said the study supports what podiatrists have long recommended. People with heel pain should make sure their shoes are appropriate for their activity and not excessively worn, and do exercises to stretch the heel cord before and after physical activity, he said.

If that doesn't ease their pain, they can try an over-the-counter device, he said. And if that doesn't work, they should see a doctor. People who get this far might be helped by a custom-made shoe insert, he said.

Study: most Americans overweight

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Medical Editor
BRECKENRIDGE, Colo. (AP) - For many Americans, reality is a pot belly.

For the first time, more than half of the U.S. population now weighs more than they should, according to the latest government statistics.

"It's been clear for several years that Americans are getting fatter, and it's accelerating. That's troubling," says Dr. Tim Byers of the University of Colorado Health Sciences Center.

Federal guidelines suggest that people should keep their body mass indexes under 25. Anything more than that is too much.

Body mass index, or BMI, is quickly becoming the standard way of talking about obesity because it is an easy way to compare the fatness of people of different heights. BMI is body weight in kilograms divided by height in meters squared. A woman 5-foot-4 who weighs 145 pounds, for example, has a BMI of 25.

The National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey, conducted on 30,000 people between 1991 and 1994 and released Tuesday, shows that 59 percent of American men and 49 percent of women have BMIs over 25. Ten years earlier, 51 percent of men and 41 percent of women were this heavy.

Katherine Flegal of the National Center for Health Statistics in Hyattsville, Md., says small reductions in physical activity might be to blame.

Flegal, who presented the figures at a meeting of the North American Association for the Study of Obesity, also noted the development of the TV remote control, which keeps people planted on the couch all evening, and fear of crime, which gives them another reason to stay inside.

"It's just eating too much," contended Dr. Albert J. Stunkard of the University of Pennsylvania. "Physical activity hasn't increased enough to make up for it."

Extreme obesity is also becoming more common. The survey found 2 percent of men and 4 percent of women have BMIs over 40 - double the rate a decade ago. A 5-foot-4 woman with a BMI of 40 weighs 230 pounds.

While a BMI of 25 is probably not particularly bad, experts say significant health problems begin to emerge when people's BMIs hit 27.

There is no universally accepted definition of obesity, but some experts call it a BMI of 30 or more. That's at least 175 pounds for the 5-foot-4 woman.

Despite the bulging waistlines, the survey found that a majority of overweight people want to weigh less - as do many whose weights are acceptably low.

Flegal noted that some weight-related health ills do not appear to be rising with Americans' increasing weights.

The survey shows that cholesterol levels are falling, and blood pressure appears to be holding steady or dropping slightly. On the other hand, the statistics suggest that diabetes, which is also closely related to weight, may be increasing.

Americans use margarine more than twice as much as they do butter.

Gossip has it Galliano will go to Dior after stop with Givenchy

By SUZY PATTERSON
AP Fashion Writer

PARIS (AP) — John Galliano did not even bother to take a bow at what could be his swan song show for Givenchy.

Sunday night's ready-to-wear show could be called beautiful in many terms, but what is next? After less than a year at Givenchy, Galliano is expected to go to Christian Dior, and another English iconoclast, Alexander McQueen, will take over Givenchy's design.

It's still only gossip, but it was to be made official this week, according to Women's Wear Daily and other top newspapers with inside sources.

Givenchy's old clientele were not in evidence at the Sunday show, held in a far-out location near the Bois de Boulogne.

Thousands were prohibited from entering a tent next to an old railroad station, since much of the backstage curtain fell down in the afternoon. The traffic jam of cars and people was on a monumental Parisian scale.

"We aren't supposed to be pampered as in America," said Laurence Benheim, fashion writer for the French newspaper Le Monde, trying to explain the chaos. "In France, we are creative. We do what we want, and so do the designers."

Finally top models paraded down over 100 yards of red-carpet then disappeared.

They wore some beautiful blazers, black or white over uneven skirts or smooth pants. A long white nightshirt appeared.

A beautiful bowed jacket worn by Yasmeen Ghauri topped her white satin slim, long skirt and high heels. Then there were the Arab headresses, the Moroccan French colonial military pants with their red stripes, strapless satin dresses, white blazers with black lace skirts.

There were whiffs of the souk, many beautiful pieces that could sell in the Givenchy shop — such as model Kristen McMenamy's ivory silk pantsuit, impeccably-cut couture style.

But here was a painted navel on a skirt suspended under a lovely jacket, here were strapless shorts suits, not quite what your Givenchy customer expects.

The brocade jackets over long floppy pants or beautiful djellabah coats then met with the 19th century in Galliano's empire dresses with floral prints or fitted taffeta suits with a fringe, Jane Eyre style.

Beautiful pieces to mix and match were paraded. But as musical chairs are moving the fashion scene, it doesn't mean much to adhere to Givenchy or anywhere else.

Valentino's Dolce Vita show hit sensual and light notes as he unveiled his summer ready-to-wear line earlier Sunday.

"My woman has an instinct for luxury," he said, "and the clothes are lighter, more transparent than ever."

Perpetually suntanned, Valentino obviously loves summer. His soundtrack featured suggestive quotes about how great sun, sand and sex are in summertime.

He ended up with gorgeous fish-skin prints and fish-scale embroideries, as well as fish-tail dresses.

Naomi Campbell strutted along in a beautiful white trouser outfit topped with an ivory cashmere scoop neck pullover. There were few real trouser suits here — except for the odd gray pinstripe and a lovely dressy pink lace number.

But there was a loosened-up look in everything from blouses with cowl collars to little stretch lacy pulls that give these clothes real appeal.

Valentino's new skirt length to well below the knee also looks terrific with a fluid hemline, often split to show plenty of leg.

Special recognition given

Charles Schlabs holds the plaque awarded him Sunday by Fourth Degree Assembly of Knights of Columbus in recognition of his patriotic support of the Chapel at the Hereford Prisoner of War Camp. In 1987, Schlabs granted to the Castro County Historical Commission an easement to the Chapel and continues to be responsible for the upkeep of the historic shrine. Also pictured, from left, are Clara Vick (with back to camera) with the Castro County Historical Commission; Art Gonzales, Faithful Navigator for the Fourth Degrees; Monsignor Orville Blum; and other members of the Knights of Columbus and the Schlabs family.

We Want Your Recipes!

The holidays are nearly upon us and The Hereford Brand wants to help make this season shine by sharing special holiday recipes with our readers.

We want to publish as many of our readers' traditional holiday favorites as we can during the holiday season — from Thanksgiving's turkey dinner through New Year's Day's black-eyed peas.

Anyone wanting to submit a recipe may do so to The Hereford Brand, 313 N. Lee, in any of five categories — Main Dish, Appetizers/Beverage, Vegetables/Salads, Desserts and Candies/Cookies.

Each recipe must include the name of the person submitting it, complete list of ingredients and preparation directions, plus a short history of the recipe, including the name of the cookbook where it originally appeared, if applicable.

The Brand staff will select the best of these recipes to publish during the holidays.

All recipes must be typed or neatly hand-written. Deadline for submission is 5 p.m. on October 25.

So please, share the holidays with your friends and neighbors by sending us your favorite traditional holiday recipes.

Hints from Heloise

EGG SUBSTITUTIONS

Dear Heloise: Here's a quick saver I found when I bought some of the eggs in a box (liquid egg substitute — Heloise). I measured the amount for one egg in a measuring cup, then found my ice-cube tray held the exact amount.

I filled the tray, froze it, then popped the cubes out and put them in a plastic zipper-type bag.

Now when I want one or two, I just take out the amount of frozen cubes to use. — Carol Blache, New Orleans

MEASURING SHORTENING

Dear Heloise: When a recipe calls for shortening and brown sugar, measuring the brown sugar into the cup used for the shortening cleans it out nicely. — Sharon Lee, Forsyth, Mont.

PANTRY ORGANIZATION

Dear Heloise: Sometimes when I am looking for something else in the kitchen cupboards or when I am putting away the groceries, I discover that I have two of something. This is especially true of spices and other small containers.

When I find them I make a large X on the front label of the oldest or the one with the least amount. Sometimes I can consolidate them. The newer one or the one with the most in it I put away somewhere else.

That way, when I do empty a jar I know that somewhere there is another jar/bottle/tin of the same thing and I do not need to buy more. It does not mean that I know where the other bottle is stashed, but if I go looking I usually can find it. Sure does save me buying doubles. — J. Ellis, Cincinnati

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.
 For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:
 --Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
 --Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
 --Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the word, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
 --Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Pontiff celebrates 18th anniversary

By BRIAN MURPHY
Associated Press Writer
VATICAN CITY (AP) - On his first full day back from the hospital, Pope John Paul II marked the 18th anniversary of his papacy today with an impromptu appearance at his studio window.

A few thousand people, most of them Polish pilgrims, were in St. Peter's Square during the late morning when the window suddenly opened and the pope appeared and waved, first with one hand, then with both. He said nothing during the appearance, which lasted less than a minute.

His customary Wednesday public audience had been canceled to give him time to convalesce from his Oct. 8 appendectomy.

No public events are scheduled until Sunday, when the pontiff is expected to hold his weekly address in St. Peter's Square.

Photo retrospectives and documentaries for the anniversary hit a somber note by showing the toll that illness and injuries have taken on the 76-year-old pope.

Earlier shots of the robust and energetic pope contrast sharply with more recent images of John Paul: his halting gait after hip replacement surgery in 1994; the feverish spell that forced him to cut short his Christmas address last year; and his quivering left hand, possibly caused by Parkinson's disease.

On Tuesday, he walked with a cane as he left Rome's Gemelli Polyclinic hospital a week after the operation. The pope had not been seen using a cane since the hip surgery.

"It's sad to see the pope like this," said one woman in the crowd outside the hospital.

Doctors insist the pope is strong and recovering fine.

"He returned home well again," said Dr. Francesco Crucitti, who led the surgical team.

Crucitti urged the pope to take it easy for a while. "We only said, 'Get some rest,'" the surgeon said.

During his papacy, John Paul has harnessed the Vatican to the advance of modern communications, most recently putting a Holy See site on the Internet, and has traveled more widely than his predecessors.

According to Vatican Radio statistics, the pope has visited 166 nations in his 74 foreign trips, made 2,087 speeches and traveled a total of 606,000 miles outside Italy.

On Nov. 1, the pope marks the 50th anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood.

Texas Republicans hope to take control of legislative chamber

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) - They've got targets, they've got candidates, they've got a slogan.

What remains to be seen is whether Texas Republicans have the votes to do something they've never done in the 20th Century: take control of a chamber in the Texas Legislature.

Last spring, Republicans looked at the 150-member House and talked about "76 in '96" - the target number of seats needed to control that chamber.

They looked at the 31-member Senate, where they already hold 14 seats, and talked about the two victories needed to take charge there.

They recruited candidates to challenge Democratic incumbents and run in open districts. They attacked Democratic legislative leaders over issues including school funding, taxes, spending and, well, longtime Democratic control.

But with President Clinton and Bob Dole running a close race, the volume has softened a little this fall.

"I've been saying I hope we get a majority. But I think a gain of five to six would be terrific in the House for us. In the state Senate, I would hope we would win at least one," said state GOP Chairman Tom Pauken.

"In light of the closeness of the presidential race, we have got to be realistic about our prospects. I think Sen. (Phil) Gramm's strong showing will help our down-ballot candidates. But a lot of it's going to depend on turnout - that's the critical ingredient," Pauken said.

State Democratic leaders voice confidence.

"I'm thinking about a program called '98 in '98,'" said Bill White, Democratic Party chairman, as he eyed the Texas House lineup. "Things are going our way."

White said Texas voters are turned off to the socially conservative agenda pushed by some Republican candidates, and he said Clinton won't be a drag on local Democrats as some of the party's presidential candidates were in the past.

"Most Texans don't want to see our Legislature taken over by strident partisan Republicans like Congress was," White said. "We have targeted Republican House and Senate members. We intend to pick up seats from Republicans that Democrats have not done before."

For the GOP, this battle was uphill from the start, particularly in the Texas House.

Twenty-five years ago, Republicans held only 10 of the 150 House seats. Today, they hold 63 and Democrats 84 (three are vacant). The GOP must retain all its seats and notch a net gain of 13 to take over.

They took aim, starting at the top with Speaker Pete Laney.

Republicans criticized Laney, a 12-term lawmaker, for breaking a promise to serve only two terms in the top House job. He's expected to seek a third term as speaker if he wins in November.

In his district, GOP opponent Hollis Cain hit Laney over taking campaign contributions from lobbyists, supporting the "Robin Hood" school finance plan that transfers money from some property-rich districts, and accusing him of losing touch with folks back home.

Laney, a Hale Center farmer, says Cain is way off base. He campaigns as a conservative Democrat who has worked closely with Gov. George W. Bush and other Republicans. He's appointed Republicans as House committee chairmen.

But the GOP, Laney argues, wants Austin to look like Washington.

"A small group wants the Texas House to adopt the worst partisan aspects of Congress. Texas government is not like Congress. We should be proud of that. Let's not follow their lead into gridlock," Laney said.

Such reasoning rings hollow, says state Rep. Kent Grusendorf, R-Arlington, who chairs the Campaign for Republican Leadership.

"It is amazing to me that although the Democrats have controlled the Texas Legislature for the past 100 years, they view themselves as being 'bipartisan,'" the lawmaker wrote in a newspaper essay.

Democrat not up for election until 1998.

Many senators say that even if Republicans win control, it's unlikely Bullock would be stripped of the appointment and agenda-controlling power he now enjoys - although much of that authority is granted by senators under rules they adopt.

Bullock has sided with Republicans on some issues and like Laney has appointed Republicans to chair some key committees.

"I have no illusions about Mr. Bullock's enormous power," GOP chairman Pauken says. "He remains the most powerful political figure in our state, as he's been for years. Even if we get a technical majority, I suspect he will maintain most of his power temporarily."

Although 16 Senate seats are up for election, several incumbents face no opponents. Most analysts say GOP chances to win that technical majority ride on the outcome in four districts:

- The 2nd: This district covers part of Dallas and northeast Texas. Sen. David Cain, D-Dallas, is seeking re-election against Republican Bob Reese of Canton.
- The 3rd: Sen. Drew Nixon, R-Carthage, faces a determined challenger in East Texas from state Rep. Jerry Johnson, D-Nacogdoches.
- The 24th: Sen. Bill Sims, D-Point Rock, is retiring. A spirited race pits Democrat Rick Rhodes, a former mayor of Sweetwater, against Republican Troy Fraser of Marble Falls, a former House member.
- The 28th: This West Texas district unexpectedly opened up when veteran Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, resigned to become Texas Tech University chancellor. A special election is being held Nov. 5 and drew seven candidates. A December runoff will be held if no one gets a majority.

Doctors mark anniversary of ether's use

BOSTON (AP) - Gilbert Abbott took a few whiffs of an ether-soaked sponge, fell unconscious and had a tumor cut from his jaw 150 years ago today.

When he woke up, he said felt no pain, making medical history as the first patient to undergo surgery, in front of witnesses, under anesthesia.

Before that day, Oct. 16, 1846, surgeons numbed patients with alcohol or opium, held them down and tried to operate quickly because most went into shock from the pain.

To celebrate Abbott's operation, doctors from around the world made pilgrimages Tuesday to the Ether Dome, the amphitheater at Massachusetts General Hospital where the surgery took place. The hospital is holding a weeklong celebration of what many consider the most significant event in American medical history.

"(Surgery) never would have advanced without that," said Dr. Elliott Miller, chairman of the celebration committee and an assistant professor of anesthesia at the hospital.

Before the introduction of ether, patients' screams were known to drive medical students into other professions.

In 1811, English author Fanny Burney underwent a mastectomy. In a letter to her sister nine months later, she said her only preparation was a "wine cordial."

"When the dreadful steel was plunged into the breast - cutting through arteries, veins, flesh - nerves ... I began a scream that lasted - I almost marvel that it rings not in my ears still! So excruciating was the agony," she wrote.

Abbott was taken to the secluded amphitheater so the other patients wouldn't hear him in case he screamed as Dr. John Collins Warren removed the growth. Abbott, a printer, woke up a few minutes later and told onlookers he didn't feel any pain.

President's ethics, welfare, tax relief on voters' minds

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Give Americans the chance and they'd ask Bill Clinton about his ethics. They'd ask Bob Dole about how the country can afford his proposed tax cut.

They'd ask where the jobs are going to come from for people taken off welfare.

And how about a tax break for parents whose adult kids come home to roost?

And will the candidates ever stop bickering and start working together for the common good?

Riley Rahodes, leaning over an old pickup truck at his Oklahoma City service station, said he knew exactly what he'd ask: "What has gone wrong with America?"

Across America on Tuesday, people were asked by Associated Press reporters what questions they would pose if they had seats at Wednesday's town hall-style presidential debate in San Diego. The actual questions will come from 120 Californians, picked by the Gallup Organization.

Welfare, tax relief and the president's ethics were recurring themes in the street corner interviews.

Sandi Otoshi, a tourist visiting Boston, would ask about foreign policy: "How far does the United States have to go to protect other nations? I know we're the world leader, but how responsible are we?"

Out-of-work truck driver Reggie Harrell, on the way to pick up an unemployment check in Springfield, Mo., said he'd ask Clinton: "Why are taxes the highest they've been in the whole history of the world?" He said he'd vote for Ross Perot.

"Why do so many people think you're a sleaze ball and accuse your administration of being unethical?" Davis Morin, a Concord, N.H., psychologist said he'd ask Clinton. He was one of a number of people expressing discomfort with Clinton's personal standards.

From Rando Karvo, a trash collector in Bismarck, N.D.: "Why can't Clinton tell the truth? He's always backtracking."

From Alexander Hershel, a medical student in Philadelphia (and a Democrat): "Does your personal life reflect your professional life?"

"I'd like to know if we're ever going to know the full story behind Whitewater," said Todd Corey, 32, a loan officer from Higganum, Conn., who still said he plans to vote for Clinton.

Larry Baxter, 50, unloading milk from a truck in Providence, R.I., sounded weary of the Clinton character issue. His question: "When are they going to stop bickering about who's sleeping with who, and who's more dishonest?"

"The only thing I'm interested in is their vision for America, not what they have to say about each other," echoed Kathryn Swensen Tollefsrud, a volunteer for Planned Parenthood in Omaha, Neb.

The questions also revealed skepticism about Dole's tax proposal. Ronald Donatsch of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, visiting Sacramento, Calif., put it this way: "I'd like to know from Dole how he's going to cut taxes with the deficit going up. How Dole thinks he's going to balance the budget by cutting taxes."

Charlie Dodson, 70, of Greensboro, N.C., helping his daughter get ready for a horse show in Raleigh, said he would ask Dole, "If you can give a 15 percent tax cut now when you're running for president, why didn't you introduce a bill to do that when you were in the Senate?"

To Clinton, Maria Hernandez, 65, of Phoenix, would like to pose this question: "Why did he cut welfare? There are a lot of kids who need it." Her granddaughter is one of them, she said.

"If they're going to get people off welfare that's all fine and good," said Simon L. Johnson, 82, while shining shoes in Albany, N.Y. "People shouldn't be lazy, but where are all these jobs going to be coming from?"

Lori Ehrlick, 41, of Wichita, Kan., who plans to vote for Dole, said she'd ask how the candidates would bring families together. Colleen Cox, 33, pushing a bicycle with her son, Simon, 2, on her back, would ask about "ending corporate welfare."

Linda Rose, 55, of Providence, would ask Clinton if he would revive plans for universal health care in a second term. She works for Blue Cross-Blue Shield and said, "We get calls from people all day who can't even afford $10 for a prescription and they're worried about what's going to happen to them."

Finally, David Hayden, 49, of Whitefield, Maine, said he'd ask Dole and Clinton about the candidate who wasn't there: "Why didn't they allow Ross Perot to debate with them?"

And Cathy Lyons, taking a cigarette break outside the Minneapolis convenience store where she works, said her question was fundamental: "Why? Why would they want to be president?"

The great pumpkin race

It was a race to see who could pick the biggest pumpkin when students in First Baptist Church Kindergarten went to pick pumpkins Tuesday on the Miles Caudle farm, west of town. Here, Briney Schumacher, daughter of Gary and Judy Schumacher, is trying to decide if the pumpkin in hand is better than the pumpkin on the vine.

Texas is key arena in fight for control of U.S. House

By MICHELLE MITTELSTADT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Leave it to Texas, which revels in its larger-than-life swagger, to outdo other states with panache even in a category none were aspiring to claim.

The bare-knuckle fight Democrats and Republicans are waging over control of the House will be decided in part by which side claims the lion's share in one key arena: the 53 seats being vacated by retiring members.

And no state has more open seats than Texas.

The Lone Star state's seven vacancies dwarf those of other states, making Texas a major battlefield.

And with six of those open seats held by Democrats, Republicans have been handed a plum opportunity to make inroads in a state that's been trending ever more conservative. Currently, Democrats hold an 18-12 edge in the Texas delegation.

Nationally, Democrats need a net gain of 18 seats to retake control of the House, which they lost in the 1994 Republican landslide.

Their chances of success, once viewed as bleak, have improved in the wake of public unease over sections of the Republican congressional agenda, President Clinton's improved popularity ratings, and sustained attacks by labor unions against GOP incumbents.

Republicans are looking to the South to stem expected losses in the Northeast and elsewhere.

"Texas is going to be an important state in deciding who controls Congress," said Rice University political scientist Earl Black.

Texas Republicans predict they'll emerge with a net gain of two to three seats. Their Democratic counterparts, meanwhile, seem equally confident they'll solidify their majority by picking up two GOP districts.

"This is probably one of the most competitive elections in recent years," said Texas Democratic Party executive director Jorge Ramirez.

Said National Republican Congressional Committee spokesman Craig Veith: "Texas continues to be a land of opportunity for us, with open seats and vulnerable Democrats."

As the South becomes ever more Republican, Texas remains the last big Southern state with a delegation dominated by Democrats.

"If the Republicans are going to keep the House, then they need at some point to win a majority of the House seats in Texas," Black said.

The question is whether they can do that this year.

The wild card, Black and others say, is the redistricting plan implemented by a trio of federal judges in Houston.

The judges threw out March primary results in 13 districts in the Houston and Dallas areas in response to the U.S. Supreme Court's ruling that race was improperly used to draw three majority-minority districts.

In redrawing the lines of those three districts and 10 neighboring ones, the judges discarded the primary results and ordered a new special election on Nov. 5. Runoffs will be held in districts where no one emerges with more than 50 percent of the vote.

Only a handful of runoffs are expected. But should control of the House hinge on a few seats, Texas could well decide which party wields the gavel come January.

Most affected by the redistricting is freshman Democratic Rep. Ken Bentsen, whose Houston-area 25th District was made substantially less Democratic. Bentsen, who won by a slender majority in 1994, now faces 10 rivals.

Another vulnerable freshman, Republican Steve Stockman of Friendswood, may have been helped by redistricting in the Gulf Coast's 9th District. Considered one of the most vulnerable Republicans nationally, Stockman now faces Democratic primary winner Nick Lampson and a second Democrat, Geraldine Sam. Lampson has been locked in a tight race with Stockman; but with Ms. Sam's late entry, the two Democrats may split votes.

Nine-term Democratic Rep. Martin Frost, whose Dallas-area 24th District also figured in the redistricting mix, may have been moderately helped in his battle with Republican Ed Harrison. The judges' redrawing of the lines made the 24th District slightly more Democratic. Republicans are chomping at the bit to defeat Frost, who chairs the House Democrats' national campaign committee.

Republicans' best chances to grab any of the Democratic open seats are in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

In a battle of former Fort Worth mayors, Republican Kay Granger has the upper hand over Democrat Hugh Farmer for the 12th District seat being vacated by Democrat Pete Geren.

And, in the nearby 5th District, which reaches from Dallas to the outskirts of Bryan, Republican Pete Sessions is in good position to defeat Democrat John Poulard for the seat of retiring Democrat John Bryant.

Although Republicans once boasted they'd pick off two other open Democratic seats - the 1st and 2nd districts in East Texas being vacated by Jim Chapman and Charlie Wilson - victory there seems less assured.

Democrats, meanwhile, find their best hopes of snatching Republican seats along the Gulf Coast, in Stockman's 9th District and the 14th District where Democrat-turned-Republican Greg Laughlin was toppled in the March primary.

The Republican who bested Laughlin, one-time Libertarian presidential nominee and ex-GOP congressman Ron Paul, is embroiled in a tight race with Democrat Charles "Lefty" Morris.
