Coincidence or Providence?

Golden thinks God brought him to Hereford

By Don Cooper

Hereford Brand Managing Editor

Ask Cliff Golden how he came to be in Hereford and he'll say it is an act of God.

"God brought me to Hereford," Golden said.

He was attending a job fair at Eastern New Mexico University in Portales, where representatives from school districts were interviewing potential teachers.

"I wasn't scheduled to see people from Hereford, but I happened to have an extra resume and there happened to be a cancellation. So, I happened to get an interview," which led to a job offer, Golden said.

"Call it lucky or coincidence, or whatever you want, but I sincerely think God brought me up here," he said.

Golden cites Providence because he and his wife, Gail, were able to sell their house in Clovis - during the Christmas season, which many real estate professionals say is one of the worst times of the year to try to sell a house.

Also, Mrs. Golden was hired at Hereford Texas Federal Credit Union, when they had been told there were no openings in Hereford.

It wasn't in Golden's plans to wind up in the Texas Panhandle as a career specialist for the Hereford Independent School District; he was a tech sergeant and serving as non-commissioned officer in charge of quality control for communications at Cannon Air Force in Clovis, N.M., in January 1988 when he suffered a stroke.

"While I was lying there paralyzed, I said, 'Well, the Air Force doesn't want me anymore.' ... I have to do something, so I went back to school because I love kids, I love being around kids," Golden said.

After he received a medical retirement from the Air Force, Golden enrolled at ENMU-Clovis (now Clovis Community College) and earned his associate's degree. Then he transferred to ENMU at Portales, where he earned a bachelor of science degree in social studies and English.

Because of his varied background and experience, Golden would be made career specialist for the district, a job he describes as "guidance counselor for all of HISD."

Although the job description is much more formal, Golden says his biggest responsibility is to help prepare the district's youth for finding their place in the workforce.

"My creed is there's only one difference between kids and adults, and that's experience. Kids haven't had enough experience yet to temper their emotions - something that even some adults never learn," he said.

"I try to help mitigate the pain of gaining experience," he said.

In practical terms, Golden helps teach HISD students how to prepare resumes, learn how to manage personal finances, and improve, or develop, communication skills.

"The dynamics of education have radically changed (over the years)," Golden said. "Although the basics, the three R's, are still essential, but you need to be able to apply them. ... Nobody becomes a geography, or an

9-year-old maintains smile, love for animals

By Dianna F. Dandridge

A slap by a small delicate hand on the flank of a 1,200-pound steer is hardly felt. A mighty shove by the girl has almost no impact as the antsy Hereford lets it's young owner know he's had enough and is ready to go back to the barn.

Through it all, 9-year-old Chelsea Campbell maintains a smile and apparent affection for the animals she shows.

As the steer nudges her from behind, Chelsea turns to scratch between his ears. She fondly pats the huge animal's neck and is ready to enter the ring.

"The first year, it's all about going out there and having fun and just learning to do it," she said. "The second year and after, you still need to have fun, but you need to get more serious."

Believing she ever gets serious about anything is hard to

The 1999 Hereford Young Farmers Livestock Show ended Friday with the judging of the goats and sheep.

Only one class of goats with five animals were shown.

Goats

Carley Lassiter won the top two honors in the goat show with Champion and Reserve champion animals. Jordan Hicks placed third; and Joshua Hicks finished the class with fourth and fifth place. All goat exhibitors represented Deaf Smith 4-H.

Jerad Johnson claimed Grand Champion Lamb and Deiter Brannon took Reserve Champion.

Senior showman in sheep went to Kylee Auckerman. Junior showman went to Justin Johnson.

There were two classes of Southdowns judged.

Kelby Monroe won breed champion and Jordan Monroe came in with reserve breed champion.

County champion southdown went to Tim Schlabs; and reserve county champion was claimed by Jenna Schlabs.

Joe Hamby appears to be at one with the universe as he sets up a barrier at the intersection of 15th Street and U.S. Highway 385. The snow which swept through the area Friday night forced the closing several roads through Deaf Smith County. U.S. 385 north from Hereford was closed about 8 p.m. Friday.

OI' MAN WINTER

Snow whips through city; forces closure of roads

Staff and wire reports

Snow, hail, rain and sleet - Texas has it all with the latest winter storms generated by persistent upper-level low pressure systems.

In successive waves, the fronts dumped more than a half-foot of rain in parts of the state, with more precipitation expected Saturday before the three systems associated with the upper-level low finally move eastward, giving way to high pressure again.

The Panhandle caught the brunt of winter's blast, with freezing rain, snow and blowing snow common. Temperatures were mostly in the 20s and 30s with northerly winds at 15 to 20 mph. Wind chill values were in the single digits and teens.

Highways out of Hereford were closed because of the high snow covering the roadways.

Stephen Henry, publisher of the Levelland News-Press, said this morning he saw 15-20 cars in ditches along U.S. Highway 385 between Dimmitt and Hereford.

"There was blowing snow from Levelland to just north of Dimmitt," Henry said. "There were five or six cars in the ditch about 5 miles south of Hereford. They were in a cluster."

A spokesperson for the Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Office said this morning U.S. Highway 60, both east and west out of Hereford, had been closed, as well as U.S. 385 north of the city.

In Hereford, city crews were busy clearing major thoroughfares and spreading a mixture of sand on the intersections.

Hereford's high Friday was 32, with an overnight low of 27. Ten inches of snow fell Friday and early Saturday, giving the city 12 inches for the two days. There were 1.94 inches of total moisture for the two days.

Tonight's forecast for the Hereford area calls for decreasing clouds, with low 20-25, north to northwest wind, 5-15 mph.

A warming trend is expected Sunday, with clouds clearing and partly sunny skies forecast. Sunday's high is expected to be about 40 with west to northwest winds at 5-10 mph.

The extended forecast for the Hereford area calls for partly cloudy skies and highs in the 40s and lows in the mid-20s through Wednesday.

Moisture from a warm front extending from near Lufkin into Louisiana produced some flooding.

High water entered houses in Texarkana and Longview, while street flooding stalled cars.

City commission

Members of the Hereford City Commission will consider a request from the Hereford Economic Development Corp. to relocate the executive director's office.

The commissioners will consider the request when they meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the commission chamber at Hereford City Hall, 224 N. Lee.

The HEDC board has asked to move the executive director's office from City Hall to the Hereford Community Center, 100 Ave. C.

- In other business, the commissioners are expected to:
- Consider approval of the order notice for the municipal election, which will be May 1;
  - Accept nominations for the 1999 Governor's Volunteer Awards; and
  - Consider appointments to the Panhandle Plains Higher Education Authority board.

more docile animals of the stock show -- Southdown sheep.

"I really like these small sheep," she said. "But my favorite animals are horses, then steers, then dogs and sheep."

When questioned about raising pigs, she crinkles her nose and said, "I don't have any use for them. I don't have to raise them to have pork chops."

Chelsea was the smallest and youngest of showmen in the steer category at the Hereford Young Farmer's Junior Livestock Show.

While showing her steer, Chelsea could hardly be seen behind the big animal's shoulder.

Even though she only placed fourth in the mediumweight English breeds, Chelsea didn't let it get her down.

"I'm having fun and that's ore important than winning," Chelsea said. "He's more like my baby than just an animal and I like showing him off."

Chelsea feels pretty much the same way about her sheep projects as she does about the her steer -- they're friends and fun to be around.

"I don't always have as much time to train them as I would like," she said. "Sometimes the sheep are really hard to halter train, they throw up their heads, but I still like doing this."

Chelsea, along with her parents and at least a couple of her 4-H projects, will be traveling to some of the bigger shows to display at least one lamb and maybe a steer or two.

"I just like showing them."

When it came time to participate in the Junior Showman class, she was there -- all smiles and ready to show the judge exactly what she knew about handling steers and sheep.

Matter of fact, the steer judge, Dennis Poole, Borden County Ag Extension agent, commented on her stick-to-it attitude.

"She may be a tiger by the tail," Poole said. "But, give her another year or two, and she'll have those steers by the tail."

It pretty much sums up the character of the little spitfire.

The youngest of four children, Chelsea said it's been a big help having her two older brothers show her how to work her projects.

In the years to come, Chelsea wants to put her stock skills to good use as she works toward becoming a veterinarian.

"I just grew up around animals and loving them. I think I want to be with animals all my life."

Chamber accepting selections

Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce officials are accepting nominations for Hereford's 1998 Citizen of the Year.

Nominations will be accepted through Friday for the award, which is presented at the chamber awards banquet.

Beverly Harder of the Deaf Smith County Extension Office was last year's recipient of the Citizen of the Year Award.

This year's banquet will be Feb. 18 in the banquet hall of the Hereford Independent School District Administration Building, 601 N. 25 Mile Ave.

The award, which honors a Hereford resident who has demonstrated civic and professional leadership in the community, has been presented annually by the Hereford Lions Club president since 1946. Hereford Lions Club President Stan Fry Jr. will present the award this year.

All nominations should be forwarded to the Deaf Smith Chamber of Commerce, 701 N. Main.

Meanwhile, tickets for the banquet will go on sale Monday.

In addition to the introduction of the Citizen of the Year, the banquet will feature the presentation of the 1998 Woman of the Year, as well as introduction of new chamber officers and directors.

The 1998 Woman of the Year, who was named recently, is Shannon Redwine.

Tickets for the banquet are $15 per person and must be purchased in advance because seating is limited to 525.

The keynote speaker at the banquet will be radio humorist Tumbleweed Smith.

Smith, who is host of the syndicated radio show, will bring the "Sound of Texas" to the banquet.

Smith has been interviewing residents of the Lone Star State since 1969 when he started his daily syndicated radio show.

HISD Science Fair

HISD students wind up preparations on science projects

Special to The Brand

More than 650 local students will spend this weekend putting the final touches on projects they will enter in the annual Hereford Independent School District Science Fair.

Students' participation in the annual event begins Monday, when the students set up their projects in the HISD Administration Building, 601 N. 25 Mile Ave., and will end with public viewing Thursday and Friday.

The fair is designed to:

- Stimulate interest in science and engineering;
- Emphasize the positive aspects of young people; encourage creativity and curiosity;
- Give public recognition to talented students;
- Encourage students to experience the wonders of science through individual involvement in preparing a project;
- Teach students how to recognize a problem, pursue a solution and draw conclusions;
- Encourage students to study mathematics and sciences;
- Encourage exploration of the Internet.

Students will be allowed to set up their projects in the exhibition hall from 9 a.m. until 8 p.m.

Transportation from the various schools to the administration building will be provided by the school district during regular school hours or the students may be accompanied by a parent that evening.

Student services director Debbie Gallman said the science fair has received entry information from 669 students, who will enter 410 projects which have been designed and put together by individual students or small groups representing schools from throughout the district.

Projects will be judged Tuesday and Wednesday by 28 residents representing the local community with awarding of top honors at special ceremonies 9:30 a.m. Thursday.

The judges will select the best six projects by grade level in each of four divisions - life, physical, Earth, and chemistry. Students whose entries are selected will be interviewed by the judges, who will then determine final placements.

First-place winners of each division will then be judged against each other to determine which entry earns the Best of Division honors. One of these winners will then be selected for presentation of the Judges' Choice award.

Public viewing of the projects, with their award designation, will be 10:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. and 8 a.m.-noon Friday.

Several businesses have contributed to the Science Fair including Deaf Smith Electric Co-operative, which has provided pencils for each participating student; Panhandle Vision provided the Judges' Choice Award; Agri-Pro Seed, provided Best of Grade award ribbons; and Gallman Equipment for providing breakfast and lunch for the judges.

One of the items on the Hereford City Commission meeting agenda Monday night is to discuss the possibility of housing the chamber of commerce office and the city's economic development office in the west end of Hereford Community Center.

If the chamber had a rent-free facility, more funds would be available for that organization's work, and it would offer the HEDC and the C of C the opportunity to work hand-in-hand on seeking new business and industry for Hereford. The space has been available for small meetings, but has not been much in demand. There are other places available, especially now with the city taking over the former Camp Fire building.

Personally, we believe it makes a lot of sense, and it appears to be a win-win situation.

We can fool ourselves but it becomes a little more difficult when we attempt to try to put one over on God.

Nancy Ezell in The Canadian Record recently shared a list of supplications and prayers which offer some nuggets of truth and fun. Like me, maybe you'll find yourself in some of these expressions:

-Lord, help me to relax about insignificant details, beginning tomorrow at 7:41:23 a.m. CST.

-Lord, help me to take responsibility for my own actions, even though they're usually not my fault.

-Lord, help me to consider people's feelings, even if most of them are hypersensitive.

-Lord, help me realize I can't run everything. But if you need help, please feel free to ask me for I have lots of ideas.

-Lord, help me to be more laid back, and help me to do it exactly right.

-Lord, help me take things more seriously, especially laughter, parties and dancing.

-Lord, give me patience, and I need it now!

-Lord, help me not to be a perfectionist. (Did I spell that correctly?)

-Lord, help me to finish everything I start.

-Lord, help me to keep my mind on one thing - Look at that big bird in the oak tree -ing at a time.

-Lord, help me to do only what I can and trust you for the rest. And, would you put that in writing?

-Lord, keep me open to other's ideas, wrong though they may be.

-Lord, help me to be less independent, but let me do it my way.

-Lord, help me follow established procedures today. On second thought, I'll settle for a few minutes.

-Lord, help me slow down and not rush through what I do.

Lord, help me not to worry, even though I'm concerned you may not take care of this.

Polite Senate turns partisan

They're usually polite in the Senate, often more mannerly than that other, blue-collar branch of Congress, but a party-line vote there is no less a partisan verdict than in the House.

And that's what it was when the Republican Senate voted Wednesday to keep President Clinton on impeachment trial for his job, in a test that showed Democrats had more than enough votes to acquit him.

One Democrat voted with the unanimous Republicans, against dismissing the charges and for summoning Monica Lewinsky and two other witnesses.

All the talk of Senate bipartisanship doesn't change numbers — 56, enough to keep Clinton on trial, 11 too few to convict him. That would take two-thirds of the 100 senators.

Forty-four Democrats voted to dismiss the case. "The president will not be removed from office," Sen. Tom Daschle of South Dakota, the Democratic leader, said after the votes against ending the trial and for witness depositions.

"The impeachment process has been abused by a partisan effort and we should bring it now to a close," Daschle said. But Democrats can't, and Republicans won't, at least until House prosecutors get their chance to question the witnesses.

Actually, as Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., the lead prosecutor, says, Republican votes against Clinton are no more partisan than Democratic votes for him. It was Hyde who called his House the blue-collar branch, when he was complaining that his prosecutors weren't getting proper respect from the haughty Senate.

Walter R. Mears

partisan self-indulgence. The Senate is teetering on the brink of that same black pit."

At that caucus nearly three weeks ago, the Senate settled on a plan to open the trial with arguments by both sides, to be followed by the dismissal and witness votes. It was unanimous, as bipartisan as the House had been riven, they boasted.

Still, it was about trial procedures, and when time came to act on dismissal and witnesses, there was nothing bipartisan about it. Sen. Russell Feingold of Wisconsin was the only Democrat to vote against ending the trial and for summoning witnesses to it, siding with the 55 Republicans now, but saying he hadn't decided how he will vote on acquittal or conviction.

"It was an unfortunate and crystal-clear reality that the votes today were almost totally along partisan lines, which a lot of us had hoped would not happen, if at all, until the very end," said Sen. Joseph Lieberman of Connecticut. His Sept. 3 rebuke of Clinton's conduct in the Senate was the first by a Democrat after the president admitted the Lewinsky affair.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., called the trial a travesty and the vote to continue it with witnesses a major blunder. "Not only the president is on trial but the Senate's on trial," he said. "And I think all of us want this not to be a spectacle and want to maintain at least the dignity of the United States Senate."

"If we start hollering at each other and sounding partisan then that will make it so," said Sen. Trent Lott of Mississippi, leader of the Republican majority.

They haven't, so far.

The first teacher made mark

Don Cooper

A child's attitude toward school and learning, for better or worse, is established on the first day of school. If the first-grade teacher makes a bad impression, it will be harder to get the student to appreciate school. But if the impression is good, many children may go on to be good students -- for the rest of their lives.

I was fortunate to have Minnie Graves as my first-grade teacher. A tiny, wizened woman who looked like a dignified Granny Clampett, "Miz" Graves knew how to inspire her students to want to learn, to be curious about the world around them, to refuse to lose a childlike enjoyment of simple things.

In the early 1950s when I started school, few school districts in southwest Arkansas had kindergarten, so the first day of school could be more traumatic than it is today, when children have already been through day care, pre-kindergarten and kindergarten. School no longer is a great mystery; something to anticipate with foreboding.

I really didn't look forward to the first day of school, which I saw as an unnecessary disruption of my life. My mother read to me every night and bought children's books, so by the time I was ready to enter the first grade, I already could read. Because I already could read, I considered my education pretty much complete, and school would be something to interfere with my perfectly orderly life. I spent my days riding with my Uncle Bo as he plowed the fields, clipped the pastures, or did other jobs around the farm. I couldn't see how school could possibly be as much fun as spending the days with Uncle Bo. But much to my chagrin, the State of Arkansas didn't give a flip about disrupting my life, it was adamant I would start school on time and would continue to be a presence in the public schools until I turned 15, graduated or moved to another state.

But I was pleasantly surprised when I showed up in school for the first day. Miz Graves welcomed all of us warmly, helping us to make the adjustment to our new environment, letting us know what we would be doing for the next twelve years. I wasn't a familiar face to her, but I certainly was a familiar name: Minnie Graves had been my father's first-grade teacher a generation earlier. She had to tell me what a well-mannered little boy my father was, and she just knew I would be a good student, too.

But I found that being a good student to Miz Graves meant more than just sitting quietly in class, following the rules and not causing any disturbances. To her, good students were inquisitive, always asking questions, never just accepting anything a teacher told them. Miz Graves encouraged us to ask questions, to be curious and skeptical. She believed if she could somehow persuade her students to be curious, to be unafraid to ask questions, then they would grow into people who would always try to learn -- even after their days of formal education ended.

She also taught us kindness and compassion. She never allowed students in her presence to ridicule or tease others. She always felt that

Some folks don't find Monopoly to be fun

Milton Bradley might have landed a gold mine, when it purchased patent rights to the board game Monopoly, but there's just something about the game that gets on my nerves.

As a kid, I had to play the game because my father thought it was fun.

He always had to have the race car/piece. He always had to have all four railroads. We gave up telling him the cost of hotels for the properties was the hotel price plus price of four houses.

It's long been known in our family that alcohol brought out the worst in my father. Personally, I have to wonder if Monopoly would be a close second.

It's been more than 25 years since I played the game, but apparently it still has adverse effects on otherwise normal human beings of all ages.

Dianna F. Dandridge

My kids love the game, but every time they play, they get into a huge argument. Rebecca wants to be the banker and she always counts the spaces a second time. Let me assure you she will let other players know when they've moved the wrong number of spaces.

Joshua, of course, has to snatch the dice, demand immediate payment (sometimes on property he doesn't own), and wants every other turn to be his.

I've noticed even quiet and unassuming kids who come to play get wound up and are ready to fight over the stupid board game.

That at least makes me happy it's not a characteristic of only my family.

Sometimes I wonder if the history of the game has something to do with its effects on people.

It was invented during the Great Depression by a man who had big dreams of being a multi-million-dollar property owner, but saw no way of escaping the Depression.

It started as a way for his friends and family to get away from the hum-drum games of dominoes and cards.

As it was, the inventor sold the game for a pittance of what it has made for Milton Bradley.

Apparently even before it was sold and mass marketed, the game caused strife among those playing it.

I've heard the inventor and his wife had a huge fight over selling the game. The inventor's wife was upset he would try to make money off of hard times for other folks.

The game hasn't changed much in the 50 plus years of existence. The playing pieces -- the boot, worn shoe, a wheelbarrow -- still represent the working people and the hard times they face while the luxuries of the ultra-rich -- the race car, the racehorse, the ship and the top hat -- are also present.

Listening to the kids fight over who owns Boardwalk and how much rent is due if you own both utilities makes me wonder how the game has managed to maintain its popularity.

That was one of the first things to get tossed when my father left. There was no way any of us ever wanted to play again.

A friend said she's known others who say the game brings out the adversarial worst in lots of people.

If this is so, why does it remain one of the top selling board games each year?

Is it that we are just an adversarial people who feel the need to fight over trivia? Or is there a deeper reason?

Did the Great Depression instill such a fear of doing without that it has become ingrained even in children, who know nothing about that era in history?

I don't know the answers, but I do know that having the kids put away the game at the first hint of a fight once again restores peace.

Letters to the editor

Dear Editor:

You know, it seems kind of ridiculous that whenever the Hereford Police Department wants new cars or more money for some of their adventures or even for themselves, they get this little program going to give more tickets for some of the most stupid things.

Now I personally have heard (from reliable source) that your local "public servants" are in need of new cars, so what that means is that all of you local residents and people coming through this fine community better be on your best behavior or you are going to make a big contribution to the new car fund of the Hereford Police Dept.

Another thing that really drags me through the cow dung of Hereford is that if you go down and look at the mileage on the patrol cars, I would bet that it's not over 70,000 miles.

Now days you can drive a car at least 100,000 miles and still have a good running vehicle. Now, why can't they drive these cars for that many miles? ...

Brian Hubbard

Dear Editor:

I read with amusement the recent article concerning Ma Bell's rate increase. Isn't it amazing timing that the increase in rates is necessary at this time for Hereford - just as we are no longer required to pay for long-distance service to Amarillo and Canyon.

I also was amazed at the speed of collection for this increase. They will be able to manage collection by at least early summer. This is unbelievably fast, considering that our toll-free calling to Amarillo and Canyon has been delayed almost a full year by various obstructive tactics on the part of Ma Bell - such as not polling about one-third of us on the first ballot.

One would think that collecting the long-distance charges for at least six months longer than necessary would have filled their coffers enough that they could forgo a rate increase. By the way, I wonder if they are planning on giving us back all those excessive long-distance charges. If long-distance charges are not that profitable, then why are they billing an extra $3.50 per month for each residential line in return for toll-free calling?

We'll all be on the edge of our seats as this corporate mystery plays out.

kindness and compassion were the true marks of adults, and she constantly tried to impress this upon us.

I don't know a single student who didn't love Miz Graves. I know I did, and we exchanged Christmas cards every year - even while I was in the Army - until she died a year or so after I finished college.

Even today, more than 46 years after I walked up the steps to the front door of Nashville Elementary School, I think often of Miz Graves and how she taught me to accept the challenge of learning.

Grounding them from playing the game only brings sighs of longing as the kids look at the rack of games, puzzles and books as if there were only one game in the house.

For now, peace reigns. Two more days until the kids once again quibble over going to jail or the free parking. Two more days of long lugubrious sighs, just waiting for the game to be free.

What other newspapers are saying

Here are excerpts from editorials in newspapers in the United States and abroad:

Argus Observer, Ontario, Ore., on the GI Bill:

The GI Bill revolutionized America to some extent and it is one of the bright, shining examples of a government reimbursing the veterans who gave up their lives for one, two, three or four years.

Now a bipartisan panel is pushing a wide increase of military veterans benefits, including a new and updated version of the GI Bill. This effort is a good one and long overdue.

While the $3 billion price tag appears steep, Congress has already sent various messages it likes the new plan.

In the context of the massive federal budget, $3 billion is a mere drop in the bucket. While many, including President Clinton, are rushing to find ways to add money to the current defense budget during a time of peace, it is fitting that there is an effort to reward the many who sacrificed their time, their youth and sometimes their sanity for a work in progress called the United States. ...

The Blade, Toledo, Ohio, on English-only law:

A Supreme Court decision ... not to reinstate an English-only law in Arizona is only a brief interruption in the ongoing march toward making English the official language in states across the country.

In fact the court's ruling can be seen in a positive light in that it allows some perimeters to be discerned within which proponents of English-only should operate.

There are English-only laws in effect in 25 states right now, and proponents of such measures are pushing to add Utah to the list. A new proposal also is under consideration for Arizona. So the issue isn't going to go away.

Toledo is an example of how the diversity of citizens' cultural and ethnic backgrounds is not adversely impacted by the conducting of all public business in English. The rich tapestry of languages spoken in homes around the city and region, from Spanish to Hungarian, is not harmed or demeaned by the use of English in official interaction.

The Sun News, Myrtle Beach, S.C., on possible female candidates for president in the year 2000:

Elizabeth Dole vs. Hillary Rodham Clinton in 2000? Is that possible? Might that be the way this nation politically turns the millennium?

Might we finally acknowledge that men have done a simply terrible job, especially lately, of running this country and turn to two bright women to appeal to the electorate to choose between them?

Well, we know Dole is at least somewhat interested; she has resigned her Red Cross presidency to run, if she decides to do so. ...

And we know that Clinton has already sat at the right hand of presidential power, despite all the ups and downs of that public couple and of their private marriage. But is she presidential material?

Move over, Vice President Al Gore. Move over, Gov. George W. Bush. Let the women show all of us how it should be done.

Liberation, Paris, on corruption in sports:

A doping scandal dominated sports headlines in 1998. And 1999 has started with a bang: the Olympics, the symbol of sports, is in the hot seat. After the health of the athletes, the health of the organizations is at stake. Dodgy intermediaries, lost files, empty purses, shadow companies, manipulation, all come at the taxpayer's expense.

The moral virtues of amateur sports were renounced a long time ago in exchange for an explosion of commercialism. ...

Who controls sports? Governments, teams, the federations or the television magnates?

The fall of Samaranch wouldn't solve anything if the Olympic organization is not thoroughly cleaned from top to bottom.

Die Welt, Berlin, on miners' march on Bucharest:

Romania's leadership considers the miners' retreat a victory. But in truth it won nothing. After an almost one-week march on Bucharest and three victorious battles with police, the miners disappeared within an hour of a meeting between their leader, Miron Cozma, and Prime Minister Vasile. There was no haggling. Vasile gave in to all Cozma's demands and has left the closing of unprofitable mines to the next government. But there seems to be another reason for the miners' demands being met: Government negotiators got cold feet when they realized their leaders were about to sanction the use of bullets.

For investors this means that Romania is at the best of times a country in which workers can dictate economic policy. At worst, Romania is an unstable country where extremists threaten it with collapse. In other words, a country to avoid.

Impeachment opponents swell Democratic coffers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Capitalizing on anti-impeachment sentiment, the Democratic Party raised more than $2 million with a fund-raising letter accusing Republicans of "slash-and-burn tactics," a top party official said Thursday.

The letter, signed by General Chairman Roy Romer, raised twice as much as expected, said Joe Andrew, who is to succeed national party chairman Steve Grossman in March.

Though the letter does not contain the word "impeachment," Andrew said that was the issue that struck home.

"That's the only politics that people are seeing," he said. "They're sending $20 because they're upset."

Republican National Committee spokesman Tim Fitzpatrick criticized the fundraising tactic.

"Republicans have always viewed the impeachment of the president as a constitutional issue and a matter of the rule of law, not a political issue," he said.

One of the Republican House members prosecuting the impeachment case, Rep. Lindsey Graham of South Carolina, raised the impeachment issue in a fund-raising letter just a few days before he addressed the Senate. Graham's appeal for money warned that Republicans might face stronger election challenges in 2000 for their role in the impeachment saga.

The Democratic Party's fund-raising letter asks for money to help Clinton fight for his proposals on issues such as Social Security, education and the economy.

"Now is the time for key Democrats to rally around the president and our party," Romer wrote. "Otherwise, nothing stands in the way of the GOP's slash-and-burn tactics — the last Congress focused almost entirely on investigating rather than legislating."

Last year, the Democratic National Committee sent out a fund-raising letter over

James Carville's signature that called independent prosecutor Kenneth Starr "as objective as the Spanish Inquisition."

Fitzpatrick said RNC fund raising for January also was higher than expected.

"Republican donors are very energized by our new leadership team in the House and the aggressive agenda of issues," he said.

Campaign 2000 Bush's loss is Forbes' gain

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — George W. Bush's loss is Steve Forbes' gain.

Steve Grubbs, former Iowa Republican chairman and a key state operative, has agreed to work for Forbes' presidential campaign after flirting with the Bush camp.

"I just spent the last two months evaluating the situation, looking at all the candidates, and decided finally it's Steve Forbes' ideas I want to see succeed," Grubbs said Friday.

The move is a coup for Forbes, who is trying to build a campaign organization after spending $4 million in Iowa three years ago only to finish fourth in the state's first-in-the-nation presidential caucuses.

It doesn't stop with Grubbs. Forbes' strategist Bill Dal Col says three of the state's top social conservatives have said they would support the millionaire businessman: Bobbie Gobel, head of the Christian Coalition; Steve Scheffler, former field director for the Christian Coalition; and Nancy Streck, a top activist.

A Gobel ally says she will "be supportive" but won't leave the Christian Coalition. The coalition's support could be critical to Forbes as he tries to court social conservative voters he alienated in 1996.

Forbes also has lined up the leadership of Sen. Phil Gramm's 1996 Iowa team, including Bob House, Troy Bishop, Chad Olson and John Steinman. Gramm finished fifth in the Iowa primary.

A Bush adviser, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Grubbs presented a detailed campaign plan for Iowa that included putting him on the payroll immediately and reinforcing the Iowa staff March 1. The timetable was too quick for Bush, who has not decided whether to run, and Grubbs didn't want to wait, the official said.

An ally of Forbes, also speaking on condition of anonymity, said Grubbs felt Bush wasn't following through on commitments regarding resources for the Iowa campaign.

Indeed, speculation has increased in the state that Bush may not campaign hard in Iowa if he runs, a suggestion dismissed by Bush allies who say the governor can't commit resources to a campaign he has yet to launch.

Responding to the Forbes and Bush allies, Grubbs said: "They're both right to a certain extent. The bottom line is Iowa is going to be competitive, and Steve Forbes is the candidate I believe will make the commitment to win it."

Bush, the governor of Texas, is expected to form an exploratory committee or announce that he is not running in March. Forbes has not formally announced his intentions but is almost certain to do so.

Bush is in Washington this weekend to attend the closed-door Alfalfa Club dinner. The club exists solely to host the annual dinner at which a presidential nominee is meaningfully anointed and the city's political elite crack jokes about each other.

Bush's father, former President George Bush, also is expected to attend.

While in town, the Texas governor plans to meet with old political allies, and the subject of a likely presidential race will almost certainly come up, advisers say.

A potential rival, former Tennessee governor Lamar Alexander, plans to announce his candidacy March 9 in Nashville, Tenn.

He won't be wearing a checkered shirt, the trademark of his failed 1996 presidential campaign.

"No more plaid shirts," spokesman Steve Schmidt said Thursday by telephone from Alexander's Nashville office. "It got in the way of his message last time."

Sen. John McCain of Arizona, also seeking the GOP presidential nomination, is making his first trek to New Hampshire since he became a candidate. He will meet privately with supporters in Manchester, N.H., today before taking questions from reporters.

Vice President Al Gore will be in the state Wednesday, hoping to build on a political organization that has made him an early favorite against former Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey, the only Democrat to announce his opposition to the vice president so far.

Bradley made his first trip to the first-in-the-nation primary state this week.

Gov. George W. Bush

President Clinton will travel to New Hampshire this month to give Gore a political boost.

Southern Baptists' text eyes homosexuality

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Sunday school lessons on how homosexuals can "change" will be offered to adults at many Southern Baptist churches for the first time this weekend.

"I hope through this lesson that people would see an open door for all sinners and come and have a changed life through Jesus Christ," said Ross McLaren, who worked on the lessons.

McLaren, a biblical studies specialist at Lifeway Christian Resources, the publishing arm of the 15.6-million-member Southern Baptist Convention, said the lessons aim to condemn homosexuality but not homosexuals.

Bill Turner, co-chairman of the Lesbian and Gay Coalition for Justice in Tennessee, said he finds the idea of "hate the sin but love the sinner" patronizing.

"I know plenty of lesbian and gay Christians who are quite convinced that they have a perfectly adequate relationship with God and are still gay," said Turner, adding he is not contesting the right of Southern Baptists to teach what they want.

"The problem is imposing that doctrine on the rest of the culture," Turner said, citing the Southern Baptist boycott of Disney for its corporate practice of extending health insurance to homosexual partners of employees and hosting homosexuals at its amusement parks.

Southern Baptist lessons have touched on homosexuality in the past, but McLaren said Sunday will be the first time it is the sole focus.

Other lessons have focused on abortion, pornography and justice — aiming to treat all people with fairness and dignity.

Wishbone writing contest winners announced

Special to The Brand
AMARILLO -- KACV, the local public television affiliate, recently announced the winners of the WISHBONE Writing Contest.

The story selected as Grand Prize winner, "Welcome To Congress," was written by Jessica Sinclair, a fifth-grade student at St. Mary's. Four other stories were also named winners: "If I Were a Dog" by Raquel Gonzales, a fifth-grader at Sanborn Elementary; "A Day in the Life of Wishbone" by Eastridge Elementary fourth-grader Sarah Vongsouthi; "Dog Trek: Encounter at Catphobia" by Jonathan Gates, a third grade student at Bivins Elementary and "Molly and Tomisina Go Swimming" by Aubrey Elmore, a home-school fifth grade student.

In addition to the five winners getting to read their stories on videotape to be broadcast throughout the area on KACV, the top 10 stories will be copied and distributed as a book to all the school libraries that participated in the contest.

In addition, each library will receive WISHBONE books and outreach materials from KACV-TV. The public television station funded the contest.

George, Barbara, George all on 'Net

WASHINGTON (AP) — There is, perhaps, some self-interest behind Texas Gov. George W. Bush's proposal to shield the Internet from sales tax. Seems the whole Bush family is online.

"I e-mail back and forth to ex-President Bush. ... He's pretty literate," said the governor and former president's son.

As for the former first lady, Barbara Bush, better known for her gray hair and pearls than electronic wizardry, "Mom's on there as well. Believe it or not, she's high-tech. She may not look high-tech, but she's high-tech."

In an hour-long C-SPAN interview for broadcast on Saturday, Bush talked of finding an academic chat room to help his 17-year-old daughters with their English homework. He talked about his favorite history books. He talked about preferring written scripts to off-the-cuff speeches.

Super Bowl week concludes

A week full of personal feuds, Elway's uncertain retirement and the Falcon's dream-shot may make the actual game pale in an entertainment comparison

MIAMI (AP) — NFL coaches rarely pass for standup comics, particularly at the Super Bowl. Yet Mike Shanahan and Dan Reeves were in a jovial mood Friday as they wrapped up a week of entertaining buildup to Sunday's title game.

Granted, most of the entertainment was provided by the Broncos' Shannon Sharpe and the Falcons' Ray Buchanan. But Shanahan put their dissing match into perspective:

"If you take Shannon Sharpe out of the equation, we have been very quiet," said Shanahan, whose defending champions are seven-point favorites to become the first AFC repeater since the 1980 game. "Now if we didn't have Shannon Sharpe, there would be everybody in this room complaining about there was nothing exciting to write about or talk about."

Reeves talked about long-gone days when he was playing for championships.

"I watched the Ice Bowl game the other day or the other night, actually," Reeves said, referring to the NFL title game in 1967, played in subzero temperatures at Green Bay. "I couldn't sleep. Those stories have gotten so much better through the years. I am a much better player than I was back in 1965. So it's amazing to hear some of the stories."

Commissioner Paul Tagliabue wasn't telling story, but he had plenty to talk about shortly after the coaches finished their monologues.

He discussed the likelihood of instant replay returning to help officials — he almost guaranteed its passage at the March league

The Broncos and the Falcons, meantime, held their final practices. Reeves placed Dave Widell, Rod Monroe, Omar Brown and Darren Anderson on the inactive list. "That's one of the things I struggled the most with," Reeves said. "I can't understand why you can't at least have them dress out."

Not dressing for Denver will be Justin Armour, Chris Banks, Cyron Brown and Trey Teague.

They weren't required to do interviews, so Sharpe and Buchanan couldn't insult each other again through the media.

Their trashathon almost overshadowed some

Tour veteran, Mediate plays nose to nose with the Tiger

he plays his game, he's at the top of the leaderboard mostly, or close."

Woods went into today's third round trailing Mediate by two strokes. Mediate crept up on the field with a quiet but effective 4-under-par 67 as twilight gathered, reaching the midpoint in 6-under 136.

Only 80 of the field of 131 managed to finish play after a second straight day of frost delays. The other 51 had to finish this morning.

Based on the placement of the early finishers, David Duval made the cut with 74-71 for a 145, but it will take all of his January magic to get into contention with Woods, the only player ranked above him in the world.

Woods, who shot a 67 Friday, doesn't mind the budding rivalry with Duval, who has won nine of his last 28 tournaments, including his first two this year. Woods is trying to snap a 12-tournament PGA other topics, including the feud involving Reeves and John Elway and Shanahan; the likelihood this will be John Elway's last game; and the novelty of having the Falcon in their first Super Bowl.

Reeves, of course, has been in more of these games than anyone. This will be his ninth, but he's lost a three as coach — with the Broncos.

ing (to win) as a coach," said Reeves, who has overseen a remarkable Atlanta turnaround from 3-13 in 1996, the year before he arrived, to 16-

2 this season. "Now maybe I wouldn't say that if I had won my first one, because I coach ... it would mean more as a coach than it did when I was a player."

Shanahan was on Reeves' Denver staff for those super flops in the 1987, '89 and '90 games. Now, he's dealing with history.

Before last year's win over the Packers, no AFC team had even won a league title since the 1983 season. Beating Atlanta can remember how gratifying it was to win that first Super Bowl after struggling and being there so closely (with Dallas).

"But I think when you go through and have lost three and you feel like you let everybody down, because that is your responsibility as head would stamp these Broncos as one of the NFL's best.

"I thought our guys stepped up and wanted to make themselves special this year by going out and proving that last year wasn't a fluke," Shanahan said. "Character, that is where it starts, in everything we do."

Electronic eavesdropping on "bugged" sandhill cranes

A current movie, "Enemy of the State" is a Hollywood fictional look at the extremes to which electronic eavesdropping and satellite tracking could be taken by snooping government agencies looking to pry into the lives of private citizens.

Not that birds should become paranoid, but life may be imitating art to some degree in the case of "bugged" sandhill cranes that came to the Texas High Plains this fall.

Four feathered birds--sandhill cranes tagged with transmitters-- were being monitored by orbiting "birds"--satellites in outer space--as part of a four-year study seeking to document the year-round habitat use of mid-continent sandhill cranes, and to aid in the estimation of their population size.

Personnel from the U.S. Geological Survey's Northern Prairie Wildlife Research Center in Jamestown, North Dakota captured and marked the cranes in March of 1998 in Nebraska's Central Platte River Valley.

They marked each of the four cranes with a standard U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service aluminum band on one leg, and a one-ounce transmitter mounted on a plastic leg band on the other leg, mounted above the knee.

Using James Bond-style spy-in-the-sky technology, the USGS folks have used a space "bird" to track the location of the four sandhill cranes during northward migration, breeding season, and southward migration.

Texas is an important wintering area for mid-continent sandhill cranes. At least a portion of the estimated 450,000 sandhill cranes in the Western sub-population winter in the Texas High Plains. An estimated 100,000 sandhills make up

The Sportsman's Den

the Mid-Coast sub-population. Since a better understanding of the mid-continent population's year-round activities is sought, it's anticipated that over 200 satellite transmitters will need to be placed on sandhill cranes over the next three years... That won't happen inexpensively--each transmitter costs about $3,800.

Updates on the whereabouts of the study cranes and additional information on the study can be obtained from the U.S. Geological Survey's website at www.npwr.usgs.gov/perm/cranemov.

While on the subject of cranes--whooping cranes were thought to have numbered less than 20 in the 1940s, but biologists estimated that as many as 200 whoopers would arrive to winter on the Texas Coast during 1998-99. As many as 182 whooping cranes, including 152 adults and 30 young, spent the 1997-98 wintering season on the mid-Texas coast on and near the Aransas National Wildlife Refuge. A record 49 nests were found in the breeding grounds of northern Canada during the summer of 1998, and 24 chicks were found during an August survey.

Texas plays an important role in the conservation of whooping cranes. Whoopers once bred in wetlands scattered across northern North America and wintered from the mountains of Mexico to the Carolinas.

The whooping cranes that now winter in Texas represent the only breeding wild population. A reintroduction experiment in the Rocky Mountain region failed, and captive-bred whoopers that were introduced into central Florida during the past few years have not successfully reproduced.

Whooping cranes are the tallest birds in North America, standing over four feet in height. They are similar in appearance to gray-colored sandhill cranes, but are solid white, except for their black wingtips that are visible only in flight. Like sandhill cranes, they fly with their necks and legs outstretched.

During migration they often pause overnight to use wetlands for roosting and feed in agricultural fields, but they seldom remain for more than a short time.

On rare occasion individual whoopers, most-likely off course, have been seen in the Panhandle, most recently a few years ago in Carson County.

Jim Steiert is a multiple award-winning member of the Texas Outdoor Writers Association, and recipient of TOWA's first "Outdoor Book of the Year" Award.

Clyde Drexler learns tough lessons

The former NBA standout-turned college coach, finds the game has changed some since he played

HOUSTON (AP) — Clyde Drexler, who is listed among the top 50 players in NBA history, knew plenty about basketball before he took up college coaching.

But his first season at the University of Houston has included some tough lessons. Lesson One: Times have changed since Drexler and Hakeem Olajuwon starred for the Cougars' Phi Slama Jama group in the early 1980s.

For one thing, Drexler says, players are different than he remembered from his college days. Now, Nintendo practice cuts into basketball if a coach isn't careful.

"They still try hard, but there's not a lot of guys that work on their game daily as when I was coming up," Drexler said. "They work hard in practice but the minute you blow the whistle, they're gone."

"I think we had fewer choices in our daily lives. After practice, we'd stay two more hours and work on our games. We didn't have Nintendo. Now guys play Nintendo as much as they practice.

"Two hours a day that you could be on the court over a 10-year period of time, that's a substantial amount of time."

Drexler also is faced with rebuilding a program that hasn't had much success in recent years, certainly nothing like his era (1980-83). The Cougars were 9-20 last season and they've had only one winning season since 1993-94.

Still, Drexler was expected to turn things around immediately, an unlikely prospect given his roster. His first team has five sophomores, two freshmen and no seniors.

"I don't think you look at them through your eyes," Drexler said. "You look at them in a realistic way... You just have to expect guys to play up to their potential."

In his basketball career, Drexler has rarely faced such a challenge.

After leading the Cougars to the NCAA Final Four in 1982 and 1983, Drexler had a memorable career with the Portland Trail Blazers and Houston Rockets, helping the Rockets win their second consecutive NBA title in 1995.

Drexler is one of three NBA players — Oscar Robertson and John Havlicek are the others — with at least 20,000 points, 6,000 rebounds and 6,000 assists.

Now he's just the rookie coach for a below-average college team.

Drexler is showing none of the strain. He insists the transition from superstar player to first-year coach has been easy.

"I made that adjustment the minute I stepped off the court," Drexler said.

Drexler's coaching style is outwardly relaxed and quiet. He's almost devoid of histrionics on the sidelines. That doesn't mean there's no emotion. Though he didn't raise his voice, he was ejected from a game against North Carolina State.

victory drought.

He even wishes the competition was more intense.

"I think it's great for golf, especially if we can add another two or three guys to that and build a cluster of guys. Back in (Jack) Nicklaus' day, you had Arnold (Palmer), you had (Alex) Trevino, you had (Tom) Watson, and even Lanny (Wadkins) or (Tom) Weiskopf. So you had a good group of four, five players that were always battling for No. 1."

Woods was one of the 45 golfers stranded by the suspension of play Thursday. He finished up with 22 holes Friday, starting to roll with two birdies in the last four holes of the first round and then overcoming an early bogey in the second round with five birdies in the last 10 holes.

His first birdie was at No. 16, where his hole-in-one two years ago touched off a beer-cup-throwing, fist-pumping celebration almost unheard-of in golf.

He also birdied the 18th hole for a first-round 71. Then he recovered from an early bogey to birdie five of the last 10 holes of the second round for his 138.

"They tend to move quicker to the next tee," Woods said about the throngs who follow him. "Especially if I can rattle two or three in a row. Then they start moving quick. If I'm really playing well, they start running."

Groundhog Day

Job shadowing big success in town

ay back in November we started putting this thing together. We knew it would be fun and kinda had an idea it probably would take a lot of work, but this has been great! Never, in our wildest dreams did we have any idea the response would be this great. Students and professionals alike took to this thing like ice cream on a hot summer's day.

In early November we started the ball rolling with a meeting here at the HISD Administration Office. Lee Ann Vogel, Director of the Panhandle Tech Prep/School to Careers Partnership and Dr. Janie Noble, Workforce Development Coordinator, showed us how the plan works and how we could be one of the first Panhandle school districts to put it in place.

We've had many different formats of career days usually consisting of a professional standing in front of a group of students 'telling' them what it's like to work for a living. Most of the time the kids went to sleep. Some professionals brought slides, pictures and even some of their technical equipment. One year we had Sven Anderson come over from West Texas A&M. He brought his computer and showed us how computer graphics really work. Now that was interesting. Enter a new concept.

We initially announced Groundhog day to junior high and high school students saving it was a chance to "go" see what the work place is really like. The junior high counselors, Brenda Simons and Karen Roberts, started their process right after Christmas break whereas we had the applications out to the students and returned at the high school before Christmas break. We had 212 applications in the hands of the high school students with 39 actually turning them in complete. The student had to have no grade less than a 'C', have no unexcused and less than three absences during the previous 6 weeks and write a brief description on how Groundhog Day would help them make career decisions if selected. After a little record checking and visiting with some of the teachers who'd written a letter of referral, we had the students and two career choices. Now to find professionals in those careers that would be willing to give up half a day!

The junior high counselors, Steve Nash, Ernie Eckert, Jack Stein and I set out to call professionals. Every one of the professionals we contacted said yes! One day, as I humbly accepted the offer of my therapist, Mr. Daniel Lemus to be one of our mentors, I took a call from Mrs.

We've had many different formats of career days usually consisting of a professional standing in front of a group of students 'telling' them what it's like to work for a living.

Vaavia Edwards. Mrs. Edwards, an attorney with Cowser, Line and Langenhennig here in Hereford, related as a high school student how Mr. R.C. Hoelscher had mentored her and she wanted a chance at helping someone else. This kind of stuff is awesome!

Bottom Line

Parents are still calling to see if their student can sign up for Groundhog Day. We've put this years student list in concrete and have finally got all the mentors lined up. There's a few legal issues we're having to correct this week, but it looks like a winning plan and program. Students will be sending a thank you letter to their mentors and documenting their experiences for us to review. Using the student and mentor feedback, we'll be ready to lay the groundwork for Groundhog Day 2000. Stay tuned; film at 11!

News in brief

House prosecutors, White House spend weekend preparing for depositions

WASHINGTON — House prosecutors, senators and White House lawyers are spending the weekend preparing to question Monica Lewinsky and two of President Clinton's confidants in closed-door proceedings that could be made public next week.

"I'm working my rear off," said freshman Sen. John Edwards of North Carolina. A practicing lawyer until his election in November, Edwards is one of three Democrats who will preside with three Republicans over the depositions that begin Monday.

His weekend reading: "Everything from the grand jury transcripts to the House Judiciary Committee reports."

Clinton, too, is planning his schedule around the final phase of the trial. He is considering delaying a trip to Central America Feb. 10-14 so he would be in Washington when the trial is supposed to end Feb. 12, said White House spokesman Joe Lockhart.

Although the Senate apparently lacks the 67 votes needed to remove Clinton from office, House prosecutors this week won the right to question Ms. Lewinsky on Monday, presidential friend Vernon Jordan on Tuesday and White House aide Sidney Blumenthal on Wednesday.

They will be questioned, respectively, by Reps. Ed Bryant, R-Tenn.; Asa Hutchinson, R-Ark.; and James Rogan, R-Calif., impeachment "managers" from the House Judiciary Committee.

Lawyers for Clinton also will take part in the questioning.
GOP predicts death of special counsel law

WASHINGTON — Republicans are predicting the demise of the independent counsel law now that Attorney General Janet Reno has rejected a special prosecutor investigation of alleged perjury by former White House deputy chief of staff Harold Ickes.

Acting minutes before a deadline Friday, Reno told a special court her six-month inquiry found "no reasonable basis to believe that any additional investigation would ... prove that Ickes' testimony was knowingly and intentionally false."

"There is clear and convincing evidence that Ickes did not intend to lie" when asked what the Clinton administration did about a 1995 strike by the Teamsters union, Reno concluded in a 35-page analysis of the case.

The Teamsters had contributed to Democrats in 1992, and Ickes was central to gathering the money for President Clinton's 1996 re-election campaign.

Sen. Fred Thompson, R-Tenn., chairman of the Senate committee that referred Ickes' testimony for scrutiny, was disappointed by Reno's decision.

"The demise of the independent counsel law when it expires this year may be the most notable 'achievement' of her tenure as attorney general," Thompson said.

Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said the decision "spells the death of the independent counsel statute."

U.S., allies set deadline in Kosovo

BRUSSELS, Belgium — With NATO preparing for possible military action, the United States and five European nations have given Yugoslavia and its ethnic Albanians a week to start negotiating an end to a nearly yearlong conflict.

Amid renewed violence in Kosovo, the six-nation Contact Group that deals with Balkan conflicts demanded Friday that the warring sides come to agreement on autonomy by mid-February.

An estimated 2,000 people have died and hundreds of thousands have been driven from their homes since the conflict began last year in Kosovo, a province in Serbia where ethnic Albanians outnumber Serbs 9 to 1.

The United States, Russia, France, Britain, Germany and Italy are seeking a settlement to grant "substantial autonomy" to the Albanians without granting them full independence.

At the United Nations, the Security Council threw its support behind the Contact Group, approving a consensus statement Friday that demands the two parties negotiate a settlement.

The statement contains "very strong language demanding compliance there, and we hope very strongly that the leadership in Belgrade gets the message," said Nancy Soderberg, the deputy U.S. ambassador.

NATO already has issued a stern warning to all those involved in the conflict, and the North Atlantic Alliance, NATO's policy-making body, is expected to issue an even tougher call.

Colombian president asks better relief effort
ARMENIA, Colombia — After a day of looting and street violence, President Andres Pastrana has ordered his ministers to Colombia's earthquake-ravaged coffee belt to discuss how to jump-start a struggling relief effort.

Troops fired shots and tear gas Friday at bands of looters who ransacked a Red Cross warehouse and smashed into stores in Armenia, the city hardest hit by Monday's magnitude 6 quake.

Not all the looters were hungry quake victims seeking food — some carted off typewriters, refrigerators and chain saws — but frustration over an inefficient relief program grew by the hour.

"We've gotten nothing from the government," said 46-year-old Adalberto Valencia. "The only ones who have helped us are the rich who drive by with potatoes or plantains from time to time."

The earthquake killed at least 940 people and injured 3,690 across Colombia's western coffee-growing region, the Red Cross said. Many more were missing.

With his relief program under fire, Pastrana called an emergency Cabinet meeting in Armenia on Friday night. His interior minister, Nestor Humberto Martinez, emerged to announce a $315 million program to aid victims and rebuild. Martinez provided few other details.

Martinez also said the government had declared a 30-day "economic emergency."

Health scares spread on 'Net

WASHINGTON (AP) — An e-mail campaign attacking an artificial sweetener was spreading fear fast: "Could I have been misdiagnosed? Will eliminating the aspartame in my diet eliminate the MS symptoms?" a panicked patient asked the Multiple Sclerosis Foundation.

Absolutely not, the MS Foundation replied, furious that whoever wrote the e-mail not only frightened vulnerable patients but falsely used the group's name as part of the campaign.

"We've been completely inundated with calls about this," said the MS Foundation's Cliff Roer. "It was very alarming."

Welcome to the latest health scare on the Internet, where e-mail or "consumer alerts" can suddenly spark panic by blaring about "DEADLY POISONS."

"I call them toxic terrorists," said Jeff Stier of the American Council on Science and Health. He investigated after his New York City group got calls from frightened Internet users last week.

Consumer scares are nothing new, but the Internet lets

The scare du jour is over claims that aspartame, sold under such brand names as NutraSweet, causes MS or another disease, lupus.

rumors spread faster — and archives them forever, he said. "It's so easy to play on people's fears."

The scare du jour is over claims that aspartame, sold under such brand names as NutraSweet, causes MS or another disease, lupus.

For the record, the Food and Drug Administration says that is false. MS and lupus have been around a lot longer than aspartame has, and repeated scientific studies have found no connection between the sweetener and such symptoms. An MS Foundation neurologist also investigated and calls the allegations "rabidly inaccurate."

But it is not the only scare. Last fall, a "Shampoo Alert" claimed an ingredient that helps the suds form in almost every shampoo is really an "engine degreaser" that causes cancer. Today, Internet chat rooms still show people asking if they should toss their shampoo. In fact, the ingredient might irritate your eyes or your skin, but cancer experts agree there is no sign it is carcinogenic.

"This is something we're going to see a lot more of," cautioned Dr. Randolph Wykoff of the FDA, which received more than 100 questions about the shampoo scare and dozens so far about aspartame.

The Internet is full of important, even lifesaving, medical information, Wykoff stressed. The quandary is one of consumer savvy: How do you filter out the exaggerations, misinterpretations or falsehoods?

For people searching for information on the Internet, it is less of a problem: Just use Web sites operated by reputable groups such as the National Institutes of Health or medical journals, and be wary of cure-all claims.

The bigger question is what to believe when an alarming e-mail shows up unsolicited — but with just enough science to sound credible, and then snowballs into frightened discussions on Internet bulletin boards.

Take aspartame, which long has been controversial.

Some people do say they are sensitive to it. But the FDA insists that 20 years of research has not found evidence of serious side effects — except in some people with the rare genetic disease PKU or phenylketonuria, who cannot properly process an aspartame component called phenylalanine.

The new scare, however, argues that aspartame causes MS and lupus symptoms by breaking down into toxic methanol.

Very high doses of methanol can be toxic, but aspartame causes only the same tiny amounts you would get from fruits or vegetables such as tomatoes and tomato juice, which also produce methanol during digestion.

Hereford native marches in Washington

This year when the March for Life was held in Washington, D.C., a Hereford native was included in its ranks.

Lois Kersten, a 1969 graduate of Hereford High School and interim president of a newly organized national group of Democrats for Life, was in Washington to participate in the march and also to help with organizing the national pro-life group.

Kersten said she has been working as a Democrat since the age of 9 when she passed out Kennedy bumper stickers. She attended her first State Convention in 1972 and has attended most since then.

Kersten has served as president of Texas Democrats for Life since 1995 and that involvement has led to helping organize the national group.

"Our primary purpose is the legal protection of the unborn," Kersten said, "and as Democrats who care about our party, we choose to work within the party to accomplish that purpose."

Kersten, like many of the march participants, arrived in Washington prior to the day of the march in order to attend other pro-life functions.

"During a meeting with some leading legislative aides, we were made aware of a second group of people who thought we needed a national Democratic pro-life group," Kersten said.

Representatives from both groups met, decided they had a common goal, and plans are now being made to merge the two organizations, according to Kersten.

Lois Kersten displays programs from some of the events she attended while in Washington, D.C., to participate in the March for Life.

ALT's musical touring production included in HCCA concert season

Amarillo Little Theatre is coming to Hereford for a one-night performance of its current Touring Project production, "All I Really Need to Know I Learned in Kindergarten." Hereford Community Concert Association is sponsoring the production as a part of its current concert season at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Feb. 5 in the Hereford High School auditorium.

ALT is presenting this new innovative musical in celebration of the 10th anniversary of its popular annual Touring Project.

Based on the award-winning series of books by Robert Fulgham, "All I Really Need to Know I Learned in Kindergarten," has been called a "revue in the key of Life."

Six storytellers take the audience through the entire life-cycle from kindergarten through adolescence to adulthood, old-age and even death.

Sometimes whimsical, often poignant and generally hilarious, this play combines some of Fulgham's best stories with innovative staging and a fabulous rhythm and blues score.

"All I Really Need to Know I Learned in Kindergarten" is produced by ALT managing/artistic director Allen Shankles with ALT music/associate director Loren Strickland serving as artistic director. ALT staff members, Gregg Dunlap and David D. McKnight Jr. will provide technical direction and choreography is by Shawn Walsh.

Members of Hereford Community Concert Association should use their series tickets, but this performance will also be open to non-association members. Tickets may be purchased at the door for $8 or in advance for $7 by calling Kristin at 364-9371, Nancy at 363-7670 or Betty at 364-0770.

Amarillo Little Theatre performed to a packed house in Hereford when they presented "Always, Patsy Cline."

"This year's Touring Project promises humor, serious moments and a variety of musical styles," David Fanning, president of HCCA board of directors, said.

HCCA wants to alert all who attend this concert that with the current construction around Hereford High School, the most desirable parking will be the lot west of the school on the corner of Avenue F and Union Street.

There is also a small parking lot west of the cafeteria and parking is available on the streets bordering the high school.

The cast of "All I Really Need to Know I Learned in Kindergarten" includes (clockwise from bottom) Laura Barton, Ken Bender, Cara Johnston Kee, Art Lynch, Treva Bradford and Shawn Walsh.

A Legend in the Retail Industry Turns 80

Irving Alexander is turning 80! Born in New York City in 1919, Irving worked in the NY diamond district as a teenager, leaving to serve in WWII as a tanker in 1941. He married Harriet Baer in 1947, a girl from Texas, and relocated to her home town of Hereford. By 1948, the two were shipping in ready-to-wear to Gaston's Popular Store, effectively bringing a little bit of New York to the Texas plains. A second Hereford store was opened in 1967 and, six months later, a third in Amarillo under the name 'Alexander's.'

In Amarillo, Irving brought a verve and vivacity missing from the business scene. His electric personality captivated both customers and suppliers. This, along with his innovative business practices, made him a legend throughout the industry in Dallas, Los Angeles, and New York. After operating the Amarillo store through mini and maxi, Boom and Recession, Irving retired in January 1989.

Anyone who knows Irving is invited to send a special memory or their regards to be placed in a scrapbook as a gift in his honor. Please send your 8x11 letters by February 10th to his daughter:

"If you want your children to keep their feet on the ground, put some responsibility on their shoulders." -Abigail Van Buren

Congratulations to the HHS Orators' Club members who "have their feet on the ground" and did an excellent job in hosting the speech tournament last Saturday. Club sponsor, Mrs. Lana Hall, is to be commended for her leadership of this group. The young men and young ladies who hosted this event represented our school well.

High school students have an opportunity to write a short essay, only 100 words or less, in the Amarillo Globe-News "Best Teacher and Class in the Region" contest. The author of the winning essay will have their essay printed with a picture of the class and tickets for the class and its teacher to the February 27 matinee performance of "Les Miserables" and admittance to the cast party following the performance. Entries must be postmarked by February 12. Information has been mailed to the high school, so ask about it. Students, 100 words won't take long and the prize is great!

The annual Design an Ad contest has been extended to the inclusion of an essay geared toward the Millennium, 100 words or less, for third through eighth graders. There will be four first place prizes of $75 bonds and four second place prizes of "Celebrate 2000" duffel bags. This is a great opportunity for young writers.

The HISD Science Fair will be held this week at the Administration Building. Judging will be on Tuesday and Wednesday, with the winners to be announced at 5:00 p.m. on Thursday. With over 400 entries, this should prove to be an interesting fair.

Congratulations to the winners of the Conservation Essay contest sponsored by the Natural Resources Conservation Service. Pace Lawson garnered First Place, Tyler Yenzler received Second Place honors and Kerri Flood won Third Place. Each winner received a ribbon and a check.

HJH reading classes have been using Accelerated Reader since the beginning of the school year for improvement in reading levels and comprehension skills for each reader. A point club has been established as an incentive for the students to read. A donation of free movie passes from "Moovies 6" will be used as rewards to students who have received 100 points. Thanks to "Moovies 6" owner Gary Moore and manager, Mary Hamby, for their interest in education.

Congratulations to all the students who have worked so hard to prepare their animals for the local stock show. This is one more opportunity for our youth to learn the importance of responsibility.

There are many ways to measure success; not the least of which is the way your child, or student, describes you when talking to a friend."

LIFESTYLES

Beth Stennis, Jacob Sublett

Engagement announced

Dr. and Mrs. Sam Stennis of Amarillo announce the engagement of their daughter, Elizabeth Ann Stennis, to Jacob Charles Sublett.

The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Sublett of Canyon and the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Buster Sublett and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hoover, all of Hereford.

The couple will be married June 4 in First United Methodist Church of Canyon.

The bride-elect is a marketing major at Texas A&M University in College Station.

Sublett is a civil engineering major at A&M.

Catholic Schools Week activities are planned

St. Anthony's School of Hereford will participate in Catholic Schools Week, Jan. 31-Feb. 6, with the 1999 theme, "Faith for a Brighter Future."

Celebrations begin with the 11 a.m. liturgy Sunday at St. Anthony's Catholic Church. Children from the school will provide most of the ministries during the celebration and the Distinguished Graduate will be awarded at this time.

After the liturgy the celebration will continue in the school with a potluck dinner.

One of the activities that has become a tradition with St. Anthony's is singing on the radio. Each class will perform live on KPAN at 9:45 a.m. Monday performers will be K4 and K5 students; Tuesday, first and second graders; Wednesday, third and fourth graders; Thursday, fifth graders; and Friday, sixth graders.

A special daily theme will center on the community on Monday, the students on Tuesday, the nation on Wednesday, volunteers on Thursday and the staff on Friday.

In the Service

Military Muster

Domingo A. Garcia Jr. has joined the United States Army under the Delayed Entry Program at the U.S. Army Recruiting Station, Amarillo.

Garcia, a student at Hereford High School, will report to Fort Leonard Wood, Waynesville, Mo., for basic training June 29.

He is the son of Lupe S. Garcia and the nephew of Shawn P. Reece, both of Hereford.

Navy Seaman Recruit Alma D. Salinas, daughter of Alma and stepdaughter of Adolfo Ramirez of Hereford, recently completed U.S. Navy basic training at Recruit Training Command, Great Lakes, Ill.

During the eight-week program, Salinas completed a variety of training which included classroom study and practical instruction on naval customs, first aid, fire fighting, water safety and survival, and shipboard and aircraft safety.

She joined the Navy in September 1998.

Marine Pfc. Hector F. Vasquez, son of Francisco F. Castaneda and Teresa Vasquez of Hereford, recently was promoted to his present rank while serving with 4th Tank Battalion, 4th Marine Division, Amarillo.

Vasquez was promoted based on sustained superior job performance and proficiency in his designated specialty.

The 1998 graduate of Hereford High School joined the Marine Corps in January 1998.

Marine Pvt. Isnacio Garcia, son of Angelita Soto of Hereford, recently completed basic training at Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego, Calif.

Garcia successfully completed 12 weeks of training designed to challenge new Marine recruits both physically and mentally.

He and fellow recruits ended the training phase with The Crucible, a 54-hour team effort, problem solving evolution which culminated with an emotional ceremony in which the recruits were presented the Marine Corps Emblem, and were addressed as "Marines" for the first time since boot camp began.

Garcia is a 1998 graduate of Hereford High School.

College Report

Colby Christie is among students who have been named to the Dean's Honor List for the fall 1998 semester at South Plains College.

Students named to the Dean's Honor List maintain a minimum 3.25 grade point average with no failing grades while enrolled in at least 12 semester hours of college-level work.

VFW Auxiliary meets

Reports of recent events were primary topics of the meetings of Veterans of Foreign Wars Auxiliary to Roy Wederbrook Post 4818.

At the January meeting, a report on the annual Auxiliary auction indicated another successful fund-raiser. President Laura Smith expressed thanks to all those merchants and individuals for their contributions to the auction and to all, especially VFW members, who helped make the event successful.

In the December meeting, plans had been finalized for the auction.

Members were reminded of the Mid-Winter Round-up which was held Jan. 21 in Austin.

Other reports included delivery of Christmas fruit baskets and grocery baskets and reports of donations to various projects and organizations in Hereford.

Members in attendance were Betty Boggs, Mildred Clements, Becky Curtis, Pixie Forbus, Marie Goheen, Erma Murphey, Peggy Oakes, Terry Rhyne, Frankie Ruland, Earline Schneider, Imogene Sweeney, Anita Vardell and Smith.

The next meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. Monday preceded by an evening meal at 6:30.

DAR announces history essay winners

Winners have been declared in the annual American History Essay Contest sponsored by Los Ciboleros Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution, according to Charlotte Clark, chairman of the American History Committee.

Based on criteria determined by DAR and judging by DAR members, the essay which was sent to State Competition was by Kale Ann Hollingsworth, a sixth grade student at West Central School.

Judged as Best Overall Essay by a non-DAR member was the essay by John David Ory, who is in the eighth grade at Nazarene Christian Academy.

A total of 193 essays were submitted with five schools represented. They were West Central Intermediate, St. Anthony's School, Shirley Intermediate, Community Christian School and Nazarene Christian Academy.

A complete list of winners follows.

by John Gilmore

During the past few years, The Great Orion Nebula (M42) has been scrutinized by astronomy's "eye in the sky" The Hubble Space Telescope (HST). The orbiting observatory has yielded some remarkable images of the region in and around the Trapezium, a cluster of young, hot, and very energetic stars nestled in the center of nebula. Astronomers believe M42 is no more than a million years old. One of the reasons for this assumption lies in the high temperature and energetic nature of the brightest Trapezium stars. The most massive star of the cluster radiates energy in the ultra violet portion of the electromagnetic spectrum. In other words, human eyes cannot detect a large portion of its radiation. But the results of the radiation are visible, as we will see.

In 1992 Dr. C. Robert O'Dell, a Rice University astronomer, using the Hubble Space Telescope discovered what he dubbed proplyds (protoplanetary disks) in M42. Proplyds form around young stars from gas and dust trapped during stellar formation. Astronomers believe these may be the beginnings of planets or solar systems around stars. Dr. O'Dell's findings confirmed what astronomers had speculated for decades, that a "nebula" or disk forms around young stars and these may be the genesis of planetary formation. But forces are at work within the stars which may cut the life of the proplyds short.

Doug Johnstone, a Natural Sciences and Engineering Research Council (NSERC) Post-Doctoral Fellow at the Canadian Institute for Theoretical Astrophysics (CITA), University of Toronto has studied the dynamics of stellar life in the Trapezium and concluded that the energy radiating from the massive Trapezium stars may be destroying the protoplanetary disks before they have a chance to form planets. "The theory of disk destruction predicts most efficient destruction at large distances from the embedded, central star. Near the center of the disk, perhaps even at the same distance as the Earth is from the Sun, the remnant disk might survive long enough to form planet embryos," says Johnstone. Evaporation of the disk surround the star erodes approximately three moon masses of material per year according to a theoretical model, a number which is verified by the HST observations. Also, radiation from the massive stars of the Trapezium acts on the proplyds in another way. The radiation is of such intensity as to "blow" the disks of some of the young stars in the form of a comet's tail or teardrop (see image at right).

As we have seen, the constellation Orion has many treasures to behold. Whether it is the search for planets forming around young stars, the action of massive young stars on neighboring stars, or the beauty of nature at its best Orion has something for everyone.

Thomas scheduled to speak at Flame Fellowship meeting

Hereford Flame Fellowship will meet at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the lounge of Hereford Community Center with Joan Thomas of Clovis as the speaker.

Thomas worked as a disc jockey for KIJN in Farwell for eight years while she attended Eastern New Mexico University in Portales. She taught in public school in Clovis and is now a professor at ENMU in the Special Education Department.

Her husband, Lewis, is an ordained minister. They have traveled to Korea where they taught English as a second language.

They are frequent speakers in this area where they tell others of the good news of Jesus Christ.

Men, women and children are welcome to attend meetings of Flame Fellowship.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: I do a lot of sewing for the local hospital, making walker bags for patients who use a walker. These bags are used to carry items that are hard to handle while using both hands on the walker. We solicited the local upholstery and drapery shops for their scraps, resulting in some very usable material.

The bags are made by cutting a rectangle 20 by 15 inches and hemming both ends with a 3/4-inch hem. Then hem a strip 15 inches long by about 4 inches high, hem one long end, and sew it across the width of the rectangle to make a pocket on the outside of the bag.

The next step is to sew the side seams, and overcast the edges, turn right side out. The ties are made by cutting strips about 1 1/4 inches wide by 13 to 15 inches long.

Turn the edges inside and top-stitch. They are attached on the inside of the bag as close to the side seams as possible.

The bags are given to every walker patient to use and to take home as a gift from the hospital. — Frieda Wilson, Salem, Ohio

MORE ON VERBAL CONFRONTATION

Have problems with children or teens writing obscenities? Put up a "graffiti sheet" in the child's room or private area for writing out feelings. Emphasize to the child that if vulgar or derogatory language is to be used, it must be used in private.

Feel like you are verbally abusive at your children when they are being verbally abusive? Every time a child is verbally abusive, don't yell. Quietly place a check on a chart or card. Contract with the child so that if a certain number of checks are accumulated, privileges will be lost or other consequences that you have previously agreed on with the teen or child will be imposed. If there are fewer checks than the agreed number, the child is rewarded with special privileges chosen by the child. Avoid lecturing, reminding, scolding, or nagging when recording a check, as this attention is reinforcing to the child or teen.

Teach children new and acceptable ways of expressing feelings without verbal abusiveness. Suggest words to say in situations in which they tend to be verbally abusive or obscene. Monitor the teen's and child's activities, especially in situations where verbal abusiveness is more likely to occur. Maintain constant supervision.

Help older children and teens to develop a self-management plan. Work with them using thought-stopping for irrational ideas and the techniques of cognitive restructuring to stop the feelings that accompany verbal abusiveness. Help them develop an alternative plan for expressing their feelings. Try confrontational techniques such as "Could it be?" questions ("Could it be you want to hurt me by calling me names?") Also explore with them what they want and what they are getting from the behavior.

Interact frequently with the child or teen in order to monitor his or her language. Set the example by not being verbally abusive yourself. Get to know one another and become aware of feelings with your children. Discuss specific incidents and feelings, relating the incident to a feeling they may have had at the time they chose to use verbal abuse.

Help your teen or child to realize they have choices. Finding alternative reactions to anger and above all else acting the way you want them to act will establish a stronger bond with your teen or child. They may even begin to respect you and themselves because you are willing to set values and not allow verbal abuse from any family member in### cluding you.

For more information on a successful family, contact ACTION MENTAL WELLNESS CENTER at 407 Lee or call Tili Boozar at 364-HELP (4357). You may also want to join other families on Thursday evening at 6:00 p.m. for the DRESS YOUR FAMILY FOR SUCCESS program that meets at San Jose Community Center. Infants, children, teens, and parents all have a place in the program. A snack supper is provided. Drops-ins are welcome. Stop verbal abuse in your family and our community. It only leads to violence, resentments, and hate.

YOUR EYES

BLOODSHOT EYES

A smoky room. A windy boat ride. A good cry. An allergic reaction to a cat. Too much to drink. All sorts of things can cause your eyes to become bloodshot.

Often when eyes are bloodshot, they're also dry and itchy and can feel and look uncomfortable. The redness comes from the blood vessels on the surface of your eyeballs which are swollen when irritated.

To get rid of the red, apply a cold compress to your eyes for a good half hour. Or try re moistening your eyes with artificial tears. Medicated eye drops such as Murine and Visine contain a vasoconstrictive substance that will shrink the blood vessels for about 45 minutes. So if you need to clear up your eyes quickly for an important meeting, consider using them.

Finally, if your eyes remain red after a day or the red is accompanied by pain or vision loss, see your optometrist.

Great Hidden Truths—Words of Wisdom XXI

I found them! There they were between the pages just waiting to be discovered. Yes, these great truths were hidden in books.

None of these words of wisdom were the central theme of the book. None were book titles when I found them. They were little gems, filler, footnotes or throwaway quotes used to make a point or balance a page.

I'll recycle them now for your use. They are hidden on the bookshelf no longer. They are now yours to use, share and ponder. I hope you enjoy them.

Concepts work keeping

- The best day of your life is today.
- If you and I exchange dollars, we have one dollar still. If we exchange ideas we are both one idea richer.
- A little experience will buy a lot of theory.
- If you haven't decided where you wish to go, any road will take you there.
- Your mouth is your most valuable marketing tool.
- Three ways to add authority to your professional appearance. 1) Wear dark colors, 2) Avoid "far out" fashions and 3) Wear quality shoes and keep them shined.
- Make it easy for customers to do business with you.
- It is easier to live with your own poverty if your neighbor isn't too prosperous.
- A thoroughly wise man knows how to play the fool on occasion.
- I wish my grandfather had been a miser.
- Customers and kids have this in common: They both need education.
- Ten words that will change your life: If it is to be, it is up to me.
- It is easier to break a bad habit if you replace it with a good one.
- Fear is False Education Appearing Real.
- Luck is Laboring Under Correct Knowledge.
- There are two fools in each market: One charges too little, the other charges too much.
- People never forget folks who help them up when they're down, and people who don't.
- You'll never see a success who was a slow learner.

- The best idea in the world won't work if you don't.
- Money isn't the root of all evil, but it is a pretty fair measurement of services rendered.
- Regarding the restroom door: Incoming traffic has the right-of-way.
- It's pretty hard to learn about your customers needs and wants if you're focused on what your competitors are doing.
- Now is a much more powerful word than later. Today is stronger than tomorrow. There is much to do, but so little time.
- On a gravestone: Even the undertaker was saddened by his passing.
- Courtesy is cheap. It costs nothing, but conveys much. It blesses both the giver and receiver.

- Courtesy has great value. Your own courtesy is your best protection against the ill manners of others.
- When you invest your time and effort in helping others who are less fortunate than yourself, no recession or depression can diminish your returns.
- When faced with a difficult challenge, it is your attitude that determines the outcome.
- Love is what causes two people to sit together on a small couch when there are two large, comfortable chairs in the room.
- Even though it costs more to live today, it's still quite popular.

Some Books Worth Reading

Between the Covers

By Martha Russell

Since we first got Internet access last summer, we have discovered that it is a mixed blessing. There are lots of issues involved in providing Internet access to the public, and most of them are potential mine fields, partly because it is such new territory.

There are days when we want to lay hands on the thing and cast it out, but they balance these by days like today. Now, don't you think for one moment that books are becoming obsolete. It's just that some kinds of information are accessed more readily by electronic means.

Twice, today, I have been able to use the Internet to find information for patrons almost instantly, after spending precious staff time looking in books. One patron needed to find information about a museum of antique sewing machines in the Dallas area. We looked in a book about Texas museums, the Texas Almanac, and the Dallas phone book, with no success. Finally, I looked on the Net and found it quickly, complete with an address (in Arlington), phone number, and pictures. Ah, sweet success!

Just as the glow was fading from this victory, another patron came in to find a company that manufactures some sort of water softening technology. The initial information came from a 1995 magazine article. Chances are good that the company no longer exists, has changed names, or any number of other complicating possibilities. I could have looked in the Thomas Register, a huge multi-volume reference for businesses, but after the Internet couple of this morning, I opted for the Net. Bingo! We found it, much to the amazement of the patron. By the way, this patron, knows that we are wonderful, she just didn't know how wonderful!

We are in the business of informational service. The Internet is just one more tool we have to serve the people of Deaf Smith County. It is not always the best tool. In fact, often it is not, but sometimes, the Net is tailor-made to help a patron. You gotta love it, at least some of the time!

We, if you didn't avail yourself of the opportunity before now, you missed it! The Friends of the Deaf Smith County Library Annual Book Sale is over for another year. Of course, it was a smashing success. Lots and lots of books went out the doors during January, each priced at 10¢ or 25¢. It adds up. That first weekend, the sale brought in almost $800. It is the major fund raiser for the Friends group.

There are not words to express how much we appreciate the Friends group and what they do for us. We could not get through the Summer Reading Club without their volunteer help, and that's besides the financial support they give us for special projects and needs.

Have you considered becoming an active part of the Friends? It doesn't require a major commitment of time. You can participate at any level of involvement you wish. The cooperative effort of those who value our library makes a big difference in the quality of service we are able to provide for the community. Think about it. New books this week include Hill Country by Janice Woods Windle. Although it is a novel, it is based on the history of the author's family, a parallel to her best-selling True Women.

When Laura Hoge Woods died in 1996, at ninety-six, she left her granddaughter a cardboard box labeled "For my Janice when I'm gone." In the box were her thin gold wedding ring, her old blue Olivetti portable typewriter, and all her fading notes for the Hill Country manuscript.

From these notes come the remarkable story of Janice Woods Windle's paternal grandmother. It is set in Central Texas, home of the Texas bluebonnet, swamp rabbits, and the Yellow Dog Democrat.

The Victors: Eisenhower and His Boys: The Men of World War II by Stephen Ambrose is the account of the war in Europe, from D-Day, June 6, 1944, to the end, eleven months later, on May 7, 1945. The book includes stories on individual battle, raids, acts of courage, and suffering, when a detachment of British airborne troops stormed the German defense forces and paved the way for the Allied invasion.

Ambrose also gives us an account of the American Rifle Company from the 506th Parachute Infantry Regiment who fought, died, and conquered, from Utah Beach through the Bulge and on to Hitler's Eagle's Nest in Germany.

The Victors tells the stories of the ranks, the ordinary boys and men, drawn from thousands of interviews and oral histories from government and private archives, from the high command — Eisenhower, Bradley, Patton — on down through officers and enlisted men.

In The Stillest Day by Josephine Hart, Bethesda Barnes is an artist and a teacher. Her village life with an invalid mother is ordered and calm until the sudden vision of a man's face imprints itself on her mind's eye. She becomes a woman obsessed. She paints fragmented images of Mathew Pearson, secretly and relentlessly. And then, on the stillest day, in an extreme moment, she performs an act so bold that it shatters lives. For daring to play God, she is sacrificed on the twin altars of convention and vengeance.

Other new books are: The Big Bad City: A Novel of the 87th Precinct by

- Ed McBain
- Billy Straight by Jonathon Kellerman
- Rogue Warrior: Option Delta by Richard Marcinko
- Apocalypse Troll by David Weber

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Your response to "Slow Boil in California" stank. I, too, am dealing with an ex-wife who calls my husband four times a week about some "crisis" with the kids, and I'm fed up with it. Your response didn't sound like you. Are you on vacation or just getting addle-brained? — Klamath Falls, Ore.

Dear Klam: You weren't the only one who didn't care for my response. "The Second Wives Club" landed on me with a load of complaints. Keep reading for more about a response of mine that turned out to be unexpectedly controversial!

From Sunnyside, N.Y.: That ex-wife in California is keeping one foot in the door. You should have told "Slow Boil" to slam it shut, and the sooner the better.

Lehigh Valley, Pa.: You screwed up royally when you said it was OK for that former wife to keep in touch with her ex-husband. That would be the same as pouring kerosene on a fire. Do you drink or what?

Dayton, Ohio: "Slow Boil" should realize she is not first in line. There was a woman before her who gave her husband children. "First" has earned access to him whether Wife No. 2 likes it or not.

Fort Worth, Texas: A second wife should set firm boundaries regarding her husband's contact with Wife No. 1. Once divorced, she loses all special privileges, and if she isn't aware of this, she should be reminded.

Boston: My husband has three ex-wives, and they all call him for one thing or another. It doesn't bother me at all. Being No. 4 is just fine when you know you are No. 1 with your husband. At no time have I felt threatened, and my confidence has made our relationship stronger.

Tortola, British Virgin Islands: Whatever happened to "forsaking all others"? That husband should tell his first wife to leave him alone. Her telephone calls at mealtime are designed to remind everyone that she is still in the picture, even if only part time, because of their children. "First Wife" sounds like a troublemaker and should be cut off at the pass.

Daytona Beach, Fla.: Thanks for showing no sympathy to "Slow Boil." I'll bet she was no small factor in the breakup of her husband's first marriage. Second wives should expect a boatload of trouble when they marry a man who has children because that's what they usually get.

Salt Lake City: An ex-husband owes his ex-wife zero, whether or not there are kids. In my case, the ex-wife was using the kids to reconnect, and she almost made it by playing the guilt card. Your advice didn't help. Thanks for nothing.

Royal Oak, Mich.: This is about your "kwitchebeefin'" advice to the second wife. It was a 24-carat mega-bomb. True, they share a past, but there won't be any future for Wife No. 2 unless her husband cuts all ties — kids or no kids.

Lake Bluff, Ill.: My husband's ex-wife used to call him a lot (also during dinner), and it burned me up. To retaliate, I left messages for my ex-husband to call me — during dinner. After three calls from him, my husband took the hint, and his ex-wife's calls came to a dead halt.

Montreal: I'm a 16-year-old who has learned a lot from your column. My parents have been divorced for four years, and the hatred between those two is so thick you can cut it with a knife. I would give anything if my dad called Mom during dinner and they talked for an hour.

San Jose, Calif.: My husband's first wife used to call him two or three times a week. I was sweet about it and never complained. "Well, guess what. He divorced me and remarried her last year. Sometimes, a wife can be TOO nice to her husband's ex. I'll sign this — Better I Had Been a B—"

Hog market rebounds too late for many producers Farmers cut back stock hoping for better prices

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Last year, Jeff Duling converted his 600-acre hog farm in north-west Ohio from a birth-to-market operation to one that raised young pigs until they are ready for market.

Then one of the worst price crises in the history of the pork industry hit. Duling had based his investment in the operations change on earlier market conditions and ended up with $80,000 in losses.

"I think the hog market is going to come back, but it's going to take me two years to get back what I lost in two months," said Duling, 32, who raises hogs in Ottawa, 50 miles southwest of Toledo.

Hog prices are slowly edging up to the break-even point after plunging so low last fall that farmers nationwide were losing $50 to $75 a pig. Now, Ohio pig farmers and their suppliers are rethinking their position in the industry.

"At first this crisis last quarter hurt the producers," said Bryan Black of Canal Winchester, president-elect of the Ohio Pork Producers Council and a 300-sow farmer. "This quarter it hurt not only the producers but people they do business with."

Black, 38, said some owners of small farms were finally forced out of business by the crash in prices. He predicts the next shakeout will come in the spring, when bigger producers return to the banks to talk refinancing.

Some analysts have blamed the low prices on overproduction by megahog farms. Federal officials are also investigating allegations of price-fixing by large meatpackers.

Mark Murphy is sales manager with Birchwood Genetics in West Manchester, about 25 miles west of Dayton. The company sells boar semen to hog farmers across the United States.

"We're affected more now than when prices were tough because of our position in the pork chain," Murphy said. "Our biggest downfall is we operate so much off of cash. When the cash isn't there, we're not prepared for a crisis of this kind."

The company tightened its belt but hasn't had to lay off any of its 22 employees yet. Another round of low prices would cause serious trouble, Murphy said.

Jim Schnipke, 61, raised hogs for more than 35 years in Ottawa. He said Monday the low prices made him decide to sell his 100 remaining sows and get out of the business of raising pigs independently. He might take hogs back on contract, where he simply feeds and tends the animals, for which he receives a set fee per pig.

Marion Horton in nearby Hancock County figures he was losing $1,100 a week during the worst of the crisis. He reduced his inventory from 600 pigs to about 100.

He's going to stay in business for now because at age 67, he doesn't have the debt that hangs over younger farmers' heads. But he's keeping an eye on the future.

"I'm not going to keep on raising hogs until I lose the farm," Horton said.

Industry leaders hope to lure sugarbeet producers back

Signs point to end of sugar crisis

SCOTTSBLUFF, Neb. (AP) — Sugar beet industry leaders believe they can lure farmers back to the crop a year after one of the worst seasons in North Platte Valley.

Although the industry is not back to full health, growers and processors point to encouraging signs that the last decade's beet crisis may be over.

Recent sugar prices have been strong and stable, promising to put an extra $2 to $3 per ton in the pockets of beet growers by the time the 1998 beet crop is paid off.

Officials with Scottsbluff-based Western Sugar Co. and Holly Sugar Corp.'s plant in Torrington, Wyo., said their growers planted a combined 60,000 acres in 1998, the lowest in 16 years.

Early feedback suggests Holly's acreage will rebound from last year's 19,000 acres, said Rick Griffith, the plant's agricultural manager.

"We've had some farmers who were out of the business for a couple of years and are asking for information about beets," he said.

Western Sugar hopes to add 15,000 acres to the 40,357 planted last year by their growers, said Owen Palm, a vice president for the firm's parent company, Tate & Lyle LLC.

Besides stronger prices, improvements in pest management may win back even more farmers.

Results from test plots throughout the valley have boosted confidence that the right seeds will ward off yield-killing diseases. Genetically-engineered seeds and new chemical also are being developed.

Despite a low sugar content in last fall's crop, aggressive spraying for diseases such as leaf spot helped lift yields to near the national average.

With new pesticides, "we think we have a good handle on what the potential of this crop can be," Palm said.

The leader of Western Sugar's growers group in the valley said ongoing contract talks may decide how many farmers return. Western Sugar is working with growers in four states on a new contract, which must be approved before beet acres can be signed up for 1999.

"If the company's willing to give a little more, we may have a few more acres," said Randy Hoff of rural Mitchell, president of the Nebraska Non-Stock Sugarbeet Growers Association. "If they're not, it's doubtful that it will change much."

Even so, depressed markets for corn and other crops may make farmers more willing to grow beets, said Dave Hinman of Wheatland, Wyo., president of the Platte Valley Wyo-Braska Sugar Beet Growers Association.

"With the corn prices being what they are and Freedom to Farm (the 1996 federal farm bill), you don't have to plant corn to be in the program," said Hinman, whose group is affiliated with Holly's Torrington

Learning the trade — As the hog market came nearly to the point of collapsing this past year, many 4-H and FFA Members across the country were busily learning just what kind of hog today's packers are looking for. ## Windbreak tree orders continue

The Tierra Blanca Soil and Water Conservation District will continue to take orders for windbreak seedlings through the first week in February.

District officials remind buyers that orders placed early have the best chance of being filled, as many varieties have already been sold out.

The district is offering shrubs, evergreens, and deciduous trees that have been grown specifically for this area.

For more information or to place an order please contact the Soil and Water Conservation District office at 364-6995.

Feeding time — Meals get far between during stock show and some pigs will eat anything they can find.

Explore the roads of Oklahoma for $16.95

From dirt roads to interstate, The Roads of Oklahoma has more information on Oklahoma than any other road atlas. Shearer Publishing has worked diligently researching and adapting information from U.S. Geological Survey maps, U.S. Bureau of Land Management maps, U.S. Forest Service maps, and Oklahoma Department of Transportation maps. With a large format of 11 1/8 x 15 3/8 inches and a scale of one inch=2.5 miles, the atlas has 108 full-color map pages that show township and range, latitude and longitude, topography, all watersheds, forests, grasslands, wildlife areas, state resort and park areas, roadside parks and picnic areas, power substations, gravel pits, and many more details. All communities are noted — whether there are three residents or 300,000. Cemeteries, schools, post offices, churches and other cultural features are shown in rural areas.

In addition to the detailed maps, The Roads of Oklahoma has information and illustrations that capture some of the unique qualities of the state. Specific listings offer a wealth of travel information that covers everything from Oklahoma's roadside attractions to its history to helpful phone numbers for travelers.

Easy cook meats top new items Old stand-byes now quick-fixers

Beef industry is continually looking for ways to encourage consumers to consume more beef. Now in their most recent push, industry leaders are introducing new programs and techniques to encourage the use roasts - meats that for years have been considered time consuming and hard to cook.

Cattlemen, using beef check-off funds, are encouraging beef packers and processors to develop new heat-and-serve beef products using chuck and round cuts.

Now those products are becoming more available, a marketing program is underway to help consumers realize that beef dishes like mom used to make are available in their local grocery store and can be prepared in less than ten minutes.

The marketing program combines checkoff funds with efforts form beef entree manufacturers to conduct advertising, public relations, promotions and partnerships with retail and food service outlets.

"These new beef products solve two big problems," said Jim Schwertner, chairman of the Texas Cattle Feeders Association (TCFA) in a news release.

"Consumers are pressed for time and need quick, easy, convenient meal solutions," he said. "We know beef is a preferred food that consumers enjoy and trust. These new heat-and-serve beef products give consumers the convenience they demand, the comfort they want and the taste they crave."

These products also represent a major step for the beef industry, which has traditionally relied on retailers to market fresh beef cuts.

In some cases, fresh beef cuts still easily meet consumer demand for ease of preparation.

Consumers, especially the younger ones, have decreased purchases of chuck and round cuts because they have little knowledge of how to cook those cuts and even less time to prepare them.

As a result, consumers have gravitated to the old favorites of ground beef and steak - cuts they know how to prepare and prepare quickly.

Finding meals that can be prepared quickly is paramount in the minds of most working mothers.

Seventy percent of American women are in the workforce and 70 percent of today's consumers spend 30 minutes or less preparing a meal at home. TCFA

What's more, nearly two-thirds of dining decisions are made the same day and most of those decisions are made after 4:30 p.m.

It's no wonder, then, that steaks account for 17 percent of all in-home beef servings and-third of all Americans have eaten some type of ground beef in the past 24 hours.

Of those ground beef servings, burgers are by far the most popular. So, while steaks and ground beef sales continue to climb, cuts from the chuck and round have lost demand.

This has lowered the value for these cuts, making them good buys for consumers but a drain on beef producers since chuck and round represents more than 60 percent of a beef animal's red meat yield.

In the past five year, the National Cattlemen's Beef Association estimates the value of chuck and round cuts has declined 20 percent.

The new ready to heat beef products may change all that. Homestyle beef pt roasts, beef stew, quick-to-serve beef fajitas and succulent beef brisket offer consumers delicious meal solutions.

One of the advantages the new beef products offer is the fact they are "branded" products - something the beef industry has long needed.

Branded products have many different qualities to entice consumers, which is not provided by generic products.

"Branded beef suggests a premium product," Schwertner said. "Branded beef strongly relates to product dependability, it simplifies buying decisions, differentiates beef products and conveys convenience."

All these qualities are highlighted in a checkoff-funded ad campaign alerting consumers to the availability of the new products.

"Cattle feeders are excited about this effort," said Schwertner. "We're in a position to create new demand for beef by making it easy for consumers to serve our product."

And anytime you make it easier for consumers to use your product, they will use more of it. Since these products still provide the eating comfort of traditional beef dishes, we expect consumers will accept them wholeheartedly.

Pictured above Janna Rudd, teacher; Pace Lawson, first place; Tyler Ynezer, second place, Kerri Flood, third place; and Jerry Holmfeld, chairman of the board. Poster and essay contests are sponsored each year in an effort make children of all ages aware of the vital role conservation play in the perpetuation of our natural resources. Each year different contests allow children at different levels to express their knowledge of the world's resources.

Freaky storm bodes well for producers

Winter splash douses Central California

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — One of the nation's top farm regions should be spared serious crop damage by the freaky storm that cloaked some regions with snow for the first time in 25 years.

Actually, the winter splash is just the type of weather that bodes well for farmers, who had been warned they might get only half their 1999 water supply after an unusually long dry spell in the Sierra Nevada.

The mix of snow, slush and rain in the southern Central Valley early this week was the latest in a spurt of deluges to shower the mountains and surrounding foothills.

The storm, which dumped as much as 3 inches of snow in some areas of the agriculturally rich San Joaquin Valley, arrived a little more than a month after a mixture of snow and bone-chilling temperatures led to a costly crop-killing citrus freeze.

Bob Chilton, supervising manager for the Tulare County agricultural commissioner's office, said the damage there was limited to some minor limb breakage, mainly in olive trees.

Unlike the citrus freeze last month, no dangerously bitter temperatures accompanied this storm, which Chilton characterized as "more of a visual event than it is an actual catastrophic event."

"It was just nice and pretty, and there's no sign of it today, except an occasional snowman," In the grand scheme of things, the damage is minimal."

More important, meteorologists and water gatekeepers say, is that such storms continue so that there will be enough water to slake the agricultural thirst in the heart of California farm country.

Bob Chilton, Tulare County ag commission office

"We went a whole month with zip of precipitation," said Jeffrey McCracken, spokesman for the U.S. Reclamation Bureau. "We were below normal. But we're catching up."

An unusual four weeks of bone-dry weather in the Sierra Nevada from mid-December to mid-January left alarmingly low snowpack readings. A few areas in the southern Sierras reported no snow as recently as a week ago, said Frank Gehrke, chief of snow surveys for the state Department of Water Resources.

"Up until the past week, it was not looking all that good," Gehrke said.

Basing its projections on those early readings, the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation had gloomily projected last week that farmers north and south of the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta might get only 50 percent of their 1999 water supplies.

In a dry year, the bureau

But the spate of storms that began Jan. 16 has been pushing readings toward and even past normal levels, indicating farmers are more likely to get the water they need during the coming growing season.

For instance, in the northern Sierras, where run-off is critical to water supplies, January's index was pushed to 9.4 inches in 12 days, climbing to 104 percent of the normal monthly reading.

"We've been catching up big time," said state meteorologist Bill Mork.

must give fish and wildlife first crack at any water banked in reservoirs, as stipulated under the federal government's 1992 Central Valley Project Improvement Act. That leaves the water allocations to farmers more heavily dependent on annual precipitation.

"We pretty much live year-to-year now," said Dave Kranz, a spokesman for the California Farm Bureau Federation, the state's largest farming lobby.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

- Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
- Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
- Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
- Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

African-American artists in the spotlight on PBS

Choreographer Alvin Ailey is among the artists whose lives and work are celebrated in I'll Make Me a World: A Century of African-American Arts. The ambitious six-hour special airs Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday on PBS (check local listings).

I'll Make Me a World: A Century of African-American Arts, a sweeping six-hour overview of African-American art over the past century, launches PBS' celebration of Black History Month in a kaleidoscope of photographs, film clips and interviews.

Airing Monday through Wednesday, Feb. 1-3 (check local listings), the six hourlong segments, narrated by singer-actress Vanessa L. Williams, present personalities from dance, film, literature, art and music.

Some, such as dance pioneer Alvin Ailey and musical powerhouse Quincy Jones, are familiar, while others are highlighted for recognition they never received. Yet we may learn things even about those we thought we knew, such as Dizzy, the Duke, Bessie and Spike.

The shows present a virtual Who's Who of black artists in almost every discipline, charting the major trends that mark the history and impact of black creativity from vaudeville to rap. The Herculean task is tackled both chronologically and by art form, occasionally with story lines interweaving.

The fascinating and tragic story of singer, actor and activist Paul Robeson, for example, comes to the forefront, recedes and reappears in the second night's airing.

We move from the 1930s, when Robeson goes to Russia to discuss a film project with noted director Sergei Eisenstein, through the 1940s, when he is the first African-American to star on Broadway in Othello, to the 1950s, when he is blacklisted by the House Un-American Activities Committee.

In between, we learn about what made Dizzy Gillespie's jazz so innovative, and about the little-known Augusta Savage, who created a powerful sculpture for the 1939 World's Fair and whose art school in Harlem launched many careers.

The series is filmed in classic PBS documentary style: a mix of historical film footage, old stills, filmed interviews and "talking heads" of critics, scholars and artists who comment on their own and others' work.

Co-executive producer Sam Pollard (Eyes on the Prize, Clockers) says he's aiming for "a PBS audience" but also wants to entice young people "because it's important they understand the legacy."

At times, uninspired visual content — close-ups of a table's china place settings during a description of a historic luncheon of black and white artists, for example — makes for dull viewing, despite the clearly interesting nature of the subjects. The on-camera recollections of the time by artist Dorothy West, by turns witty and caustic, are far livelier.

"Some of it may not be as entertaining because we're trying to be true to history and not titillate," Pollard says. "It becomes a little more somber." Nevertheless, the visual choices might have been more entertaining and still have been educational.

One riveting segment during the final hour consists of recent interviews with, and dances by, dancer-choreographer Bill T. Jones. A film clip shows Absence, his tribute to his dance partner and lover, Arnie Zane, who died of AIDS.

Along with the poignancy of the dance itself comes a company member's description of the costumes: the bedsheets Zane had lain on. "I had tears streaming down," he says.

The audience might well respond the same way.

HOROSCOPES

Jan. 31-Feb. 6

ARIES - March 21/April 20

Don't beat around the bush during an important meeting early in the week, Aries. You have something to say, and everyone needs to hear it. Don't worry about the reaction you'll receive. Those involved will respect your opinion. A close friend asks for your advice. Be honest with him or her.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21

Keep your temper in check when you have a run-in with a family member. He or she is trying to aggravate you; don't let that happen. That special someone has a lot to do this week. Don't put demands on his or her time. In fact, ask if you can do anything to help. It is sure to make your relationship stronger.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21

You have a fun week ahead of you, Gemini. You don't have a lot of work to do, so take advantage of it. Spend time with family and friends; go out; enjoy yourself. You won't have this much free time for long. The person whom you've been seeing has a surprise for you late in the week.

CANCER - June 22/July 22

Don't let problems at work get to you, Cancer. Just work diligently to complete your tasks. That is all anyone is asking of you. As for the tension in the office, let it go. You have better things to think about. A loved one asks a favor of you. Do what you can to help. Leo plays a key role late in the week.

LEO - July 23/August 23

Keep your eyes and ears open this week, Leo. Something isn't quite right at work. Pay attention to what your superiors are doing, and don't believe the rumors that are being spread. An old friend calls you out of the blue. Make plans to see him or her. It definitely will be worth it.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22

You have a lot to do early in the week, Virgo. If you organize your time, you can get it all done. Don't let friends and loved ones distract you. Stay focused. A friend of a friend asks you out to dinner. Say yes, because he or she has something important to tell you.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23

Several of your friends get into an argument, and it is up to you to smooth things over. Help everyone to forgive and forget. If you don't do it, no one else will. It's not going to be easy, but you certainly are up to the task. A loved one needs your help with a family matter. Do what you can.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22

An acquaintance makes you a potentially lucrative financial offer. Don't fall for it. He or she really is trying to cheat you out of a lot of money. That special someone has a bad day late in the week and takes it out on you. Don't get upset. Just let him or her rant and rave. It's nothing personal against you.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21

You run into an old flame this week, Sagittarius. While your heart starts to flutter, your head knows the facts. Don't get involved with this person again. There's a reason why you two grew apart in the first place. A loved one gets into trouble late in the week. Try to help him or her, but don't get in over your head.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20

A business associate introduces you to an important person. Don't be shy; talk to him or her. This could lead to a career-advancing offer. A good friend drops by unexpectedly late in the week. He or she really needs to talk to someone. Be that person. Aries plays a key role on Friday.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18

A lot of people are making demands on your time this week, Aquarius. While it frustrates you, there really isn't anything that you can do. Work with them to get everything done. Don't worry; things calm down by the weekend. You have plenty of free time on Saturday and Sunday.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20

While you want to help a friend in need early in the week, don't. If you get involved, you will be in significant trouble yourself. Just let him or her her handle it. A loved one offers you romantic advice. Listen carefully.

IN FOCUS

Emmy winner Shelley Long plays a mother whose worst fear comes true in Vanished Without a Trace, airing Monday, Feb. 1, on NBC.

Elizabeth's (Long) teen-age daughter is spirited and slightly rebellious but basically good. When she suddenly disappears, the police search for weeks with no results.

This doesn't deter Elizabeth, who uses every means at her disposal, even resorting to a psychic. But time eventually runs out for her daughter.

Elizabeth now hunts for a murderer.

Gospel singer CeCe Winans performs contemporary and traditional music on In Performance at the White House, airing Wednesday, Feb. 3, on PBS (check local listings).

Winans has won eight Grammy awards for her combination of soulful vocals and uplifting lyrics.

She is joined by Mickey Mangun with the Messiah Singers, trumpeter Phil Driscoll and the Morgan State University Choir. They all unite for the finale, a stirring rendition of "Amazing Grace."

TV PIPELINE

Q: You recently reported that Whoopi Goldberg said the celebrities on Hollywood Squares were given the answers to the questions. That hardly seems fair, and I am upset to hear that. -Karen Hanna via e-mail.

A: Thanks for writing, Karen, because I need to set the record straight. My original answer echoed remarks Goldberg made at a press luncheon last summer, several weeks before the show went into production.

A spokesman for King World Productions Inc., which produces Squares, says Goldberg spoke in error. The stars are given jokes and phony answers with which to bluff, but they are not given the actual answers to the questions.

Q: What happened to Michelle Thomas? Until a few weeks ago, she was playing Callie on The Young and the Restless, but one day they announced another actress would be playing the role due to Michelle's sudden death. She was such a talented young woman who seemed full of life. -D. Carter via e-mail.

A: Tragically, this beautiful and charming young actress died of cancer in mid-December. She was only 29.

Q: Was that a very young Rosalind Chao of Star Trek: The Next Generation fame that I saw on an old episode of *M*A*S*H*? -John O. via e-mail.

A: Very possibly. In 1983, Chao played a Korean woman named Soon-lee, who ultimately married Maxwell Klinger (Jamie Farr) and moved with him to the United States as part of the short-lived sequel *AfterM*A*S*H*.

Q: What was the name of Ben Alexander's character on the original run of Dragnet? When did the series begin and end, and when did

Whoopi Goldberg

Alexander die? -Shirley Alexander, Avon Lake, Ohio.

A: Alexander joined the cast of Dragnet during the 1952-53 season as Officer Frank Smith, the sidekick of Sgt. Joe Friday (Jack Webb). He died July 5, 1969.

Originally a radio drama, Dragnet premiered on NBC on Jan. 3, 1952, after a December 1951 preview on Chesterfield Sound Off Time. The show ran until September 1959. A new version, which paired Friday with Harry Morgan's Officer Bill Gannon, ran from January 1967 to September 1970.

Yet another version was produced in syndication during the 1989-90 season, but it quickly flopped.

Q: Is the Louis Mandylor who co-stars in Martial Law the same one who starred last season in Players? -R. Thimlar via e-mail.

A: You're close. That was Louis older brother, Costas Mandylor (formerly of Picket Fences), who starred in Players.

HIGHLIGHTS

Baby Stewie is the youngest member of the animated Griffin clan, which makes its debut Sunday in Family Man, airing after the Super Bowl on Fox.

Fox's Family Man joins new wave of animation on TV

By John Crook
©TVData Features Syndicate

A subversive new animated comedy from a hot young cartoonist hits the airwaves as Fox's Family Man premieres in a special post-Super Bowl preview on Sunday, Jan. 31.

The off-the-wall series, which includes a talking dog and a baby who is an evil genius, is the creation of Seth MacFarlane.

The 25-year-old animator recently landed a multimillion-dollar development deal with Fox.

A bizarre mixture of The Simpsons and Fox's long-running sitcom Married... With Children, Family Man is set in the suburban home of the Griffins, a clan headed by father Peter, a dim slob who makes Homer Simpson look like a Rhodes scholar.

Unfailingly (and inappropriately) cheerful, Peter suffers the disapproval of wife Lois, who in turn has her hands full with the rest of the household: mopey teen-age daughter Meg, slacker son Chris and baby Stewie, who spends every waking minute plotting world domination. Only Brian, the family's very articulate dog, has it all together.

MacFarlane and fellow executive producer David Zuckerman are hoping that the sinister tot Stewie will prove to be an animated sensation on the level of Bart Simpson. The little guy is quite distinctive.

"Stewie is the evil scientist from 1950s science fiction," MacFarlane explains. "We don't know why he is the way he is, and it's something that's not entirely registered by the rest of the family."

"But he approaches everything from a baby's point of view," Zuckerman adds. "We have a story coming up where he doesn't want to eat vegetables, so he decides that he's going to build a weather machine that can destroy crops all over the world."

As Fox provided only clips for this preview, the full show is an unknown quantity for now. One irreverent scene in church, however, is hilarious. As the minister begins relating the story of Job, we see God in the congregation grabbing his head and moaning. "Oh, I hate it when he tells this story."

SOAP WORLD

The fall of 1999 will bring Diego Serrano (ex-Tomas, Another World) back to television. He will star with Jennifer Love Hewitt in the new Party of Five spinoff, The Time of Your Life.

Sarah (Hewitt) will go in search of her birth mother, and Dodge (Serrano) will be her neighbor, a street hustler with a soft spot for her.

Serrano also appears in the feature film The 24-Hour Woman with Rosie Perez and Patti LuPone.

Dear Candace: With the recent appearance of Victor (John Aniston), does this mean he may be returning to Days of Our Lives full time? I was upset when he left. -Stephanie via the Internet.

Dear Reader: It was great to see Aniston again. There are no plans to bring the character back at this time.

Dear Candace: I live in Jamaica, and I was wondering if you could tell me why some of my friends know what is going to happen on the soaps before I do. They have satellite and I don't.

Also it was a pleasant surprise to see Millicent Martin (Lili) on Days. -An Avid Soap Fan in Jamaica.

Dear Reader: Your friends are probably picking up the soap opera through their satellite at the same time it is airing in the states.

Martin recently won rave reviews in the London premiere concert of Whatever Happened to Baby Jane?

Dear Candace: I read where you said Dinah and Hart (Wendy Moniz, Frank Grillo) were leaving Guiding Light. Why they are leaving?

Also, what happened to Sean and Cassie (William Bumiller, Laura Wright)? You never see them anymore. -Dolores Goings, Concord, N.H.

Dear Reader: Moniz decided it was time to pursue other interests and did not want to renew her contract. Grillo was a casualty of Moniz's departure. Wright has been on maternity leave but is back on the set. Bumiller's role was short-term.

THE ROADS OF TEXAS

Now newly revised and better than ever!

Shearer Publishing is pleased to announce its new edition of THE ROADS OF TEXAS. We have added dozens of country roads, lanes, cowtrails, and put new names or numbers on hundreds of others, names like Good Luck Road (Guadalupe County), Seven Sisters Drive (Kendall County), and Lone Star Alley (Menard County). Altogether, the new edition identifies more than 25,000 state and county highways and byways, and the bright new cover features current scenic photographs from around the state. THE ROADS OF TEXAS is different from any other road atlas, with more detail, more historical travel information, more heart. It has proven especially popular with the curious traveler inclined toward a little adventure, who doesn't mind getting to Aunt Martha's house just a bit late.
