Books are Diller's passion, business

By Dianna F. Dandridge

Row after row of used paperbacks await the arrival of the one special buyer looking for a special author, an out of print collectable, or just an inexpensive book in which to pass the time.

Surrounded by all these tomes is Margaret Diller, reader, general book-lover and owner of Diller-a-Dollar Bookstop.

"I grew up reading. Me and all my brothers and sisters read nearly all the time," Diller said. "My mother used to keep lots of magazines, which she could read in a hurry, but she didn't just sit down and read a story book or novel. She didn't have time. Magazines she could read pretty fast. Even today if she reads a book, she wants to sit down and read it straight through."

With 13 children in the family,

Diller fully understands why her mom had little time for a novel-length book.

Diller has been in business for nearly 20 years, opening her first store in 1981, across the street from her present location at 149 N. 25 Mile Ave.

"I started this when I moved back from the Navajo reservation. Hereford didn't have a used bookstore, and it was just something I thought I would like to do," Diller said.

So, she turned in her chalk and workbooks for stacks and stacks of used books.

"When I first started, I had so few books it was pathetic. Then I bought a bunch of books from a place in Amarillo. They turned out to be mostly Harlequin romance, so I still didn't have a good selection. Then I

AVOIDING SOAP OPERAS

■ Deaf Smith County's chief election official has been handling voting since '83 with no Floridas

By Donald Cooper

Hereford Brand Managing Editor

If you thought running an election is easy, then the soap opera playing out in Florida should be enough to change your mind.

That the Deaf Smith County election went so smoothly could be attributed to the experience of County Clerk David Ruland, who is the chief election officer.

Ruland's been handling elections since taking office in 1983.

"I took office in '83 and we had a presidential election in '84," Ruland said of his baptism under fire.

Before his election in 1982, the Hereford native had owned and operated Steamway Carpet Cleaning in Hereford for about 10 years. During that time, he also attended West Texas State University (now West Texas A&M University) and completed work on his business administration degree.

In his nearly 18 years in office, Ruland has seen many changes in the election laws — "every two years," he said with a laugh. "It's like trying to shoot at a moving target, trying to keep up with them."

Ruland said county election officials do get help from the Texas

Secretary of State's Office in staying abreast of changes in election laws.

"One of the best seminars that I go to each year is put on by the secretary of state," he said and held up a thick book. "This was the study manual. Half of it was for voter registration and half of it was for election administration. ... And, I usually take somebody with me to help listen."

Although he has not had to administer any elections that have been as contentious as the one in Florida, Ruland said the local liquor elections have been as hotly contested in their own way as this year's presidential race.

"They're very emotional, very intense elections. We've had two since I took office — one of them in '84. That's when the county went wet for the first time, ever. Then we had an election to go dry. Those were intense because the supporters on both sides are just interested in the outcome of the election, and in making sure that the election is held in accordance with state law.

"Those elections are the ones that we have to really make sure that our t's are crossed and our i's are dotted ... it's not uncommon for the election to be thrown out because of technicalities," he said. "Usually supporters on both sides are looking for technicalities."

Since taking office, Ruland said one election has been voided and another one called.

"It was for commissioner in Precinct 1. It was soon after the redistricting in 1991 — the election of '92 was contested and the election was voided and a new election was ordered," he said.

One of the complaints, especially from senior citizens in Palm Beach County, Fla., was the ballots were confusing. Ruland said there were no similar problems in Deaf Smith

Victory? Not until the court says OK

By David Espo

Eleven days after the nation voted, George W. Bush and Al Gore are locked in ballot-to-ballot combat in Florida for the state's 25 electoral votes and the presidency, with no victory pronouncements allowed until the state Supreme Court gives its permission.

Palm Beach County resumed a manual recount of its 462,350 ballots at about 8:30 a.m. Saturday. Broward County did the same an hour later, and officials there were hoping to finish recounting their 588,000 ballots by 5 p.m. Monday.

"We can probably do it" if no legal challenges are filed, said Broward County Judge Robert W. Lee, a Democratic member of the county's canvassing board.

In Miami-Dade County, the state's largest, officials planned to meet Saturday to decide how to proceed with a hand recount of its 654,000 ballots.

"The one constant is that things are changing, minute by minute," Bush spokeswoman Karen Hughes told reporters Friday.

It was, if anything, an understated description of a tumultuous day on which one court handed Bush a victory, then two others favored Gore; and a day on which overseas absentee ballots boosted the Texas governor while the vice president gained ground from contested manual recounts in heavily Democratic counties.

Controversy was a constant companion. More than a thousand absentee ballots were thrown out Friday, and Republicans accused Democrats of mounting an organized effort to nullify votes cast by members of the armed forces.

Even so, the day's outcome, much to the Gore campaign's delight, was to block plans by the Florida secretary of state to certify Bush the winner based only on overseas votes, and to allow the manual recounts to continue over the weekend in Broward, Palm Beach and Miami-Dade counties.

Roughly 1.6 million ballots were cast in those areas on Election Day, and the vice president hopes to emerge from the recount with enough votes to make him the 43rd president.

Bush holds a 927-vote lead, a margin that includes tabulation of overseas ballots from 66 of 67 counties. By themselves, the absentee ballots were Bush 1,375, Gore 748.

The overall returns do not include the results of the disputed hand recounts sought by Democrats in Broward and Palm Beach counties. Broward has given Gore an additional 41 votes so far, while Bush picked up four votes in four Palm Beach precincts.

In Vietnam, during a brief farewell ceremony at the presidential palace in Hanoi, President Clinton joked with Vietnamese President Tran Duc Luong about the still unresolved election. "I have to go home to see if there's a president," Clinton said.

In another closely contested state, New Mexico and its five electoral votes went Friday to Gore, a winner by 481 votes out of more than 590,000 cast. With his slender victory Gore maintained his 200,000-vote lead in the nationwide popular vote.

But the battle for the White House had long since come down to Florida.

County with the ballots.

"In fact we use the same brand of machine as Potter County and Potter County had a lot of problems with theirs. Randall County uses the same brand, a much larger, much more complicated machine than ours, but it's the same technology, and we had absolutely no trouble with ours," Ruland said. However, he said, when the polling first started, a technician had to be called in to adjust the machine, which had been feeding more than one ballot at a time. After the adjustment had been made, there were no further problems, he said.

"We still have an occasional (problem) ballot come through. It's real easy to blame this on our male population. They will take the pen out of their pocket and use the pen to mark the ballot instead of the pencil that's in the booth. Most women don't carry a pen in the booth with them."

"When we see a ballot that's been marked with a pen instead of a pencil, we are allowed to place a removable sticker over that oval so that ballot is ever challenged during an election contest, we can prove that we didn't alter the ballot, we just made it countable," Ruland said.

Although the canvassing went smoothly, there was one aggravation — overseas absentee ballots, Ruland said.

The state has given extra time for the overseas absentee ballots to come in.

"In the past elections, everybody was required to have their ballots to our office by 7 p.m. on Election Day. I see no reason to change it. During the governor's election (in 1998) we didn't have any ballots to have to wait on. We knew who had requested ballots and we knew that all overseas ballots were in by Election Day. This election, they either chose not to return their ballots or there were only two — and they weren't military personnel," he said.

"The two ballots slightly complicated the canvass because we had enter that data by hand on the printout that came out of our machine," he said. In order to enter those two votes into the machine, everything would have to be reloaded and all of the county ballots would have to be rerun.

Ruland said he would like to see the Legislature rescind the grace period for the overseas ballots and go back to requiring all ballots be in the county clerk's office on Election Day.

"Each year the Legislature has met, they've been concerned about fraud in the mailout ballots. They have tried to plug the loopholes. Rather than prosecuting the people who are abusing the system, they write more regulations, more laws."

"So I'm concerned that there will be more restrictions added to our mailout ballots, which will affect our senior citizens."

"In Deaf Smith County, we have the personnel and we think it's important enough that we take the time to fill out as much of the application for the voters as possible so that all they have to do is sign the application."

"The application is so long and so complicated that if we just send it to them, we'd probably reject their applications two or three times before they got it right. Because of that, they would not get a ballot. Too many times, people just think that they can call us on the phone and have us mail them a ballot. But nothing can be done over the phone ... Somebody

Redistricting may be trouble

Like the Texas Legislature, which will be redrawing congressional and legislative boundaries during the session beginning in January 2001, the Deaf Smith County Commission will be forced to redraw the county lines next year. The lines are redrawn every 10 years after the completion of the national census.

"I have a feeling this next redistricting is going to be even more difficult for us to draw the lines that will have the demographics that will satisfy the activists," County Clerk David Ruland said, citing the American Civil Liberties Union and the League of United Latin American Citizens. "So far I haven't heard from any of those yet about whether they'll be targeting Deaf Smith County."

"But the demographics of the county have changed so we don't have pockets of identifiable minority language groups like we used to," he said. "If they draw a line that brings in, where they try to create a majority of minority like they have in the past, then the lines are going to be very hard to manage. They'll be very jagged and meander through neighborhoods like they never have."

Ruland said the major problem confronting those who will be redrawing the precinct boundaries is the shift of the population from rural to city.

"There just are fewer people in the rural areas. When (farmers and ranchers) started moving to town, they kept their homes for their hands, and the farmhands lived in the old house. Now they're not doing that anymore. They're letting the farmhand house go and the farmhands are living in town, or at least that's the way it looks when you drive around in the county. The properties are just vacant," Ruland said.

could be calling on their behalf and asking for a ballot to be sent to them and they might not know it. We could be accused of sending out ballots to a phony address. So we have to an application for each ballot."

bought a whole room full of books from an old junk dealer. That's when it really got started," she said.

Now her inventory includes several thousand volumes, some duplicates, but not a lot. Some of her customers will bring in three or four books at a time, trade them for volumes they haven't read and later bring them back to be traded again.

Diller said she can't say which type of book sells the best, or even find a pattern in the way they sell.

"Sometimes it's romance, or history, then the next week it will be westerns. There is no set pattern. It just depends on who is reading what each week," she said.

Diller's business is done basically on a trade-in basis. Customers receive 25 percent of the cover price of a book brought in for trade and customers pay half-price for the books they purchase.

She doesn't stock any one type of book. The store's shelves are filled with art, romance, mystery, westerns and children's books. The hardest type of book for her to stock is science fiction. She says sci-fi readers just don't want to turn loose of their books. She has some new and used books on tape and few Bibles, but mostly it's what people bring in.

"I don't stock many hardback books any more. I guess they are harder for people to carry with them or read in bed, but they don't move well."

This is not to say she never had a good supply. She said at one time they got so numerous that she offered them to a man for a quarter apiece. He bought all she had.

He later told Diller that he sold decorative shelving and for a while offered buyers a shelf full of books, which he would replace, when the shelf buyer read everything he supplied.

Even as the holidays approach, Diller doesn't really specialize in any special gift type items.

"It's hard to buy books for someone else. I do sell a lot of gift certificates, which allows someone to come pick out what they want," she said. "Last year, about this time, I had a lot of Gerald McCathern books, but that was just because he's a local man and had a new book out about then."

For the last few years, she has kept a good supply of "Hank the Cowdog" books, both in book form and on tape. Those, she says, sell as fast as she can get them.

Diller says the biggest plus of buying a used book is, of course the savings, over new book prices.

"You know at today's prices you can easily spend $1,000 and not have that many books. For people who just like to read, this is the best way for them to get their reading materials."

President Clinton talks to reporters from The Associated Press aboard Air Force One on trip to Asia.

REGRETS: Clinton says he wishes he could have brought peace to Mideast

By Terence Hunt
AP White House Correspondent

President Clinton says his biggest regret as president may be his failure to reconcile Israel and the Palestinians, because he "really wanted with all my heart" to bring peace to the Middle East.

"If it doesn't happen, I'll be profoundly disappointed," he said in an interview with The Associated Press, "but I'll never regret a minute I spent on it, because I think it's very important for the future."

Clinton met with Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak and Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat over the past few days to explore ways to end an eight-week eruption of violence that has left more than 200 people dead, mostly Palestinians.

The president said it should be apparent this week "whether there is going to be any kind of effort to change course. ... I think there's a way to do it, and I'm going to try to see what we can do this week. That's all I can say. I'll do my best."

Two months from leaving office, Clinton spoke about the highs and lows of his presidency in the interview aboard Air Force One as he flew to Brunei for a summit with leaders of Pacific Rim nations.

"Every president wants to feel that during his tenure of service America grew stronger and healthier and better."
■ PRESIDENT CLINTON

He said his greatest personal satisfaction was that the United States "is in so much better shape than it was eight years ago — and not just economically." He said America had more equality, less crime and fewer people without health insurance during his presidency, and schools are improving.

"The country is more self-confident," he said.

"Every president wants to feel that during his tenure of service America grew stronger and healthier and better," Clinton said.

"What is my greatest regret? I may not be able to say yet," he said. "I really wanted with all my heart to finish the Oslo peace process." He said that if Israel and the Palestinians could be reconciled, the state of Israel would be secure, "which is very important to me personally and I think to the American people."

Moreover, he said, the Palestinians "would be in control of their own destiny." He predicted that an Israeli peace with Syria would follow quickly once the Israelis and Palestinians come to terms.

He said the overall result would be a stable Middle East, which would be good for America's interests, and the forces of progress and reconciliation "would be stronger in all countries, including Iran."

"I really think this is a sort of linchpin, which could lead to a wave of positive developments across the region," he said.

Clinton said Israel and the Palestinians cannot return to the bargaining table with the current level of violence.

"You know, somebody has got to quit shooting," the president said.

He said it may not be possible for Arafat "to control everything every Palestinian does, immediately. It may not be possible for Prime Minister Barak to control everything every Israeli does, immediately."

"But this thing can be reduced dramatically," Clinton said, "if they want to get back to the negotiating table. I think the Israelis will respond in kind if the Palestinian shootings will diminish."

Variety of jobs open during holidays

AUSTIN — From October through the new year, seasonal work can be abundant. Work opportunities can range from production to sales at year-round businesses or temporary holiday shops, such as pumpkin patches and Christmas tree lots.

Employers and job seekers, alike, should know their legal obligations and rights. For anyone choosing seasonal staff or jobs, the Texas Workforce Commission (TWC) offers these highlights:

- Temporary employees are subject to the same laws as regular full-time or part-time employees. Despite the fact that they know that their job will end at a specific time, temporary staff members are not contract labor. They are entitled to the same protections under the law as regular employees.

- For students seeking jobs during the holidays, child labor laws apply to teenagers under age 18. While less stringent guidelines apply to 16- to 17-year-olds, the minimum employment age for scheduled to work more than three hours a day or more than 18 hours a week. When school is not in session, 14- and 15-year-olds cannot be scheduled to work more than three hours a day or more than eight hours a day, nor can they work more than 40 hours in one week. Additionally, the work must not start before 7 a.m. and must end by 7 p.m. The only exception is from June 1 through Labor Day, when work can be scheduled up to 9 p.m. In instances, where an employer is not covered by federal child labor laws, Texas child labor laws will apply. Furthermore, because teen-agers are barred from performing hazardous work, office machines such as computers and copiers are the only power-driven pieces of equipment they are allowed to operate. Under both federal and Texas law, parents may employ their own children in nonhazardous work for and during unlimited hours.

- Employers must pay Unemployment Insurance taxes even on their temporary employees. The wages earned must be reported and are subject to taxes. This law applies even though a temporary employee knows from the outset that the job will end at a set time and the employee has not plans to seek another job after that particular assignment has ended.

- The Texas Pay Day Law requires that both temporary and regular employees receive their wages in full and in a timely manner. For any employee, employers cannot withhold any amount of a paycheck without prior written authorization from the employee, or unless authorized by state or federal law, or by court order. Additionally, current minimum wage laws apply at wage earned.

Annually, the labor force realizes employment growth in the last three months of the year as employers hire staff for various needs. In 1999, the actual employment annual average in Texas was annual average: The October average was 9,849,210; November tallied 9,869,318; and December topped out at 9,895,156.

WTAMU set as host for wind meet

Special to The Brand

CANYON — About 40 international government policy makers and technicians are expected to participate in the Wind Energy Applications Training Symposium (WEATS), sponsored in part by the Alternative Energy Institute at West Texas A&M University. The theme of the symposium is "Village Power 2000," and instruction will focus on effective and efficient ways to supply power to remote villages.

The week-long symposium, which is Nov. 25-Dec. 2, is funded by the U.S. Department of Energy and will include stops at the National Wind Test Center (NWTC) in Boulder, Colo., large wind farms in West Texas cities such as Big Spring and McCombs, and tours and conferences at WTAMU as well as the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) complex at Bushland.

The conference and tour at WTAMU and Bushland are slated for Nov. 30; however, AEI personnel will oversee all aspects of the entire symposium.

This year's conference is the first year of a three-year contract committing AEI to sponsor the international symposium.

COMMENTARY

DEATH, DYING

Once taboo subject coming out of closet

Death and dying—once taboo subjects—are becoming increasingly relevant for Baby Boomers and their aging parents. Research conducted last year by the National Hospice Foundation found that Americans are more likely to talk to their children about safe sex and drugs than to talk to their terminally ill parents about end-of-life care options and preferences. With approximately 2.4 million Americans dying each year—and the number growing—it is vital that thoughtful, serious, personal conversations take place about the kinds of experiences Americans would want for themselves or their loved ones as the inevitable end of life draws near.

Often such conversations are avoided out of an understandable desire to spare each other's feelings. The need not be.

Experts agree that the time to discuss your views about end-of-life threatening illness occurs or a crisis hits. This greatly reduces the stress of making decisions about end-of-life care under duress. By preparing in advance, you can avoid some of the uncertainty and anxiety associated with not knowing what your loved ones want. Instead, you can make an educated decision that includes the advice and input of loved ones.

During the month of November, National Hospice Month is being commemorated across the country by hospice professionals and volunteers, who will be reaching out to their communities to educate their fellow citizens that there does exist such an end-of-life option that provides dying patients and their families with comfort, compassion, and dignity at the end of life. This end-of-life care is called hospice care.

Considered to be the model for quality, compassionate care at the end of life, hospice care involves a team-oriented approach of expert medical care, pain and symptom management, and emotional, social and spiritual support expressly tailored to the patient's wishes. Hospice care focuses on the whole person, and their family and loved ones. The services provided by hospice enable terminally ill persons to live peacefully and comfortably at the end of their life. In so doing, these programs and services not only reaffirm the inherent dignity and worth of every individual, but also demonstrate reverence for human life in all its stages. Hospice serves people of all ages, diseases, and faiths. Medicare patients have a paid up insurance policy which covers most hospice services at 100%, such as medications, equipment, medical, bereavement, emotional, and spiritual services.

Nationally, the country's 3000 plus hospice programs provided such care to an estimated 700,000 dying Americans last year, according to data from the National Hospice and Palliative Care Organization in Alexandria, Va.

Unfortunately, too many of those patients reached hospice only in their final days or even hours of life, leaving their

The view from Europe

"O, wad some Power the giftie gie us
"To see ourself as ither see us."

■ ROBERT BURNS,
"To a Louse"

The Scottish poet's words certainly ring true these days as the nation struggles with what should be a simple task: electing a president of the United States.

There have been close presidential elections before, but none so tight as this one: There have been presidential elections where winner of the popular vote didn't become president, but not in this century. There have been presidential elections where the victor is decided by the U.S. House of Representatives, but never one decided in the court system.

While many Americans are exasperated, frustrated or disgusted by the whole election mess, citizens of other countries are finding it to be great comedy.

After all, the United States has never hesitated to point out the flaws of others' electoral systems. Our national attitude seems to be: If you were just more like us, you wouldn't have all your problems.

Well, look at us now. Although there hasn't been rioting in the streets — yet — the missing ballots, the miscounting of votes, the posturing of both the Bush and Gore camps look remarkably like what happens in all those banana republics.

It is good to see the election from the perspective of residents of other countries.

Doug Heater, an Army buddy and former resident of Ohio, has lived in Berlin since the 1970s.

"I always thought that one of the candidates would win convincingly like always," he said. "When it finally did turn out so close, it was super interesting to see just how the 'American' system works. All of the different possibilities were mind boggling, to say the least."

"The German people don't really understand the system — and have more important things to worry about — but the ones that do have many, many questions.

"Actually, the biggest reaction I've encountered is 'Don't those stupid Americans know how to vote?' After seeing the ballots in question from Florida, I have to agree," Doug said. "It doesn't seem to us that punching a hole in a piece of paper is all that difficult. I can understand why people are upset that Buchanan got so many votes, but I don't want to believe that many people made a mistake."

In looking at the aftermath of the Nov. 7 vote, Doug said, "The way the parties are handling the situation is starting to turn into a circus. The good old US of A was always in the forefront, telling other countries to accept the vote no matter how it turned out and get on with life. Now the future president of the USA is acting like some of the 'elected officials' in some African or South American countries.

"The way it looks from here, it's only going to hurt the effectiveness of the U.S. in the future," Doug said.

Another aspect of the U.S. election that has drawn attention in Europe is voter turnout.

"I guess another big question here is why is this so important? According to reports, only 50 percent of the eligible voters voted anyway. People here can't understand that. If half the people don't care anyway, why the big fuss?"

"A lot of Europeans think that America looks down its nose at the rest of the world a lot of the time. In some ways, we've always thought that we were better than the others. Finally, we're human! Some of us can be bought. I think that's probably good because I see how small our world really is," Doug said.

"I think that militarily the U.S. is the strongest, but I don't think that is so important these days. So many countries have the 'bomb' any one can blow up anybody else. I think the European Union is equally strong politically and economically, as seen by the rest of the world. Everything has an effect on everything else, not just the American president," he said.

Doug did have one other question: "When this is over, what will the (U.S.) press have to cover?"

Who knows? I'm sure something will come along to create another media feeding frenzy.

Clinton comes to Vietnam at peace, not war

Walter R. Mears
The Associated Press

Bill Clinton came to "a country, not a war," 31 years after he maneuvered to avoid the Vietnam draft but still "maintain my political viability." His missions were accomplished beyond the imagining of the youth who became the president.

He came to a Vietnam at peace, spoke of "shared suffering" in the war, and said he was honored to be the first president to see Hanoi. He did not mention his own turmoil over the war he protested against as a young man, when the city was a target for U.S. bombers, not diplomats.

Clinton was the third president to come to Vietnam, the first since the south fell in 1975 to the communists who rule now.

"Finally, America is coming to see Vietnam as your people have asked for years, as a country, not a war," Clinton said in a nationally televised speech Friday at Vietnam National University.

Perhaps, but slowly. The name of the country remains a synonym for the war to a generation of Americans.

The young Clinton said he wrote, spoke and marched against a war "I opposed and despised." He does not discuss those feelings now.

"I don't see this so much as coming to terms with the past as moving forward into the future," he said.

"The best thing that we can do to honor the sacrifice and service of those who believed on both sides that what they were doing was right is to find a way to build a different future, and that's what we're trying to do," Clinton said in an interview with The Associated Press.

As president, Clinton oversaw the normalization of diplomatic and economic relations with Vietnam, ending the U.S. embargo that dated from the communist victory in 1975.

In 1995, he opened diplomatic relations with Hanoi. In 1997, he sent an ambassador. This year, the United States and Vietnam signed a trade agreement.

Amid the diplomatic rounds, speeches and the trade conferences of Clinton's three-day visit, the indelible imprint of the war remained: in "the bravery shown and the tragedy suffered by all sides," in Clinton's own words; in efforts to find and identify the remains of Americans still missing in action; in the warnings he joined against the perils of land mines and unexploded bombs that kill or injure about 2,000 people a year.

By the military's count, there are 1,498 Americans unaccounted for in Vietnam. The remains of 283 have been returned to the United States since 1993.

Beyond that, the war has haunted American politics since the earliest chapters of U.S. involvement. The draft issue was raised against Clinton when he ran for president in 1992. He withstood it then, along with the taunts of his critics about it later, after he became commander in chief.

President Kennedy sent military advisers to help the South Vietnamese resist the communist North in 1961. In 1965, President Johnson sent the first U.S. combat troops. By 1969, there were 534,000 Americans there.

President Nixon came to office promising to win the peace, but first, he widened the air war in Southeast Asia. President Ford presided over the last chapter, the surrender of Saigon on April 30, 1975.

The war cost 58,000 American lives, and 3 million Vietnamese dead.

For a generation, Vietnam was a dominant issue in American politics.

It forced Johnson from office after tens of thousands of demonstrators marched on Washington, then marched again. They closed campuses, set siege to the Democratic National Convention in Chicago in 1968. Nixon won the election that year largely on the war issue. He promised peace with honor, but the war went on. The seeds of Watergate were in a Nixon operation to find Vietnam policy leaks.

Clinton avoided the draft in 1969 with a deferment to serve in an ROTC unit he never joined. He dropped the deferment that fall. "I decided to accept the draft in spite of my beliefs for one reason: To maintain my political viability within the system," he wrote.

By then, the draft was a lottery. He drew a high number and was not called.

Clinton wrote then that he was preparing himself "for a political life."

He lived it. Walter R. Mears has reported on politics and government for The Associated Press for more than 35 years.

TIME: It's the perfect holiday gift to visit the seniors and just tell them what she has been doing and listen to their oft repeated tales. To her delight she has found many with wonderfully humorous sides. She has also discovered the vast knowledge stored away inside those graying heads.

Now is the time when the generosity of the human spirit shines its brightest.

From the poorest to the richest, people everywhere can and usually do scrape up a little something to help fill the food baskets, cheer packages and love offerings.

These material signs of loving one another certainly don't go unnoticed as many families and individuals would have little to celebrate without these anonymous contributions.

But, the gift of giving goes far deeper than a few dollars spent for some canned goods, a toy, or even help with utility bills. Sometimes the most needed thing is the wonderful gift of time.

Time is probably the most needed commodity in today's fast paced world and probably the most under-valued, as well. We all need more time to get the chores done, to make a living, to relax — whatever the task we could always use more time.

Unfortunately, there are people — many in our community — who feel this lack more than others. I'm talking about the elderly, the shut-ins and the youngsters who for whatever reason feel like no one has the time for them.

Time spent with these lonely, in-need people can have far more positive impact than all the food baskets and gifts combined. Groceries in the baskets may be appreciated, but soon they are gone. Gifts too, are fun to receive, but after awhile the novelty wears off and it becomes only another toy to be put away.

But, time, that marvelous commodity all too often taken for granted, never grows old. Numerous community programs reach out and work to connect people willing to share this special commodity with others.

Recently, I have had the pleasure of watching one young man help and encourage a young boy change from child to adolescent, to teen.

The young man, though not related to the child, has added

Not all the time spent together has been what would traditionally be labeled as "fun." Sure the guys have gone to ball games, and the movies. But they've also gone to church and to work. The young man spent time teaching the child important things such as faith and a work ethic. He's taken the time to listen to the child and given the child the time to listen to him. More importantly they young man has provided a truly positive male role model for a little boy who had never before had one.

In the course of this relationship, I believe they have both gained a little something, maybe a lot. Another situation has allowed a teen-age girl the opportunity to share her time with older adults, who are now fairly restricted in their activities.

This soon to be young lady considers it time well spent families to wishing they had known about hospice care sooner. Many patients die without ever being offered the tangible end-of-life support that hospice provides, instead struggling with untreated pain and with the side effect of by-now-futile curative medical treatments. All this in addition to watching their families struggle to cope with the escalating demands of their care.

Yet, slowly but surely, times are changing. And we all have a role to play to make death and dying socially acceptable subjects to discuss openly.

During National Hospice Month, initiate your own kitchen table conversations with your family and loved ones about your end-of-life wishes. Before you sit down to your Thanksgiving feast or between football games, when you are surrounded by your family and loved ones, I urge you to have a discussion about this important life event. Let your loved ones know now — when you are still able to effectively communicate — what your preferences for treatment would be if you were to confront a terminal illness. Living wills and other advance directives can be useful tools for communicating your preferences, but only if they are a first step for generating personal conversations on this most intimate of subjects.

Lawmakers get jump on session

AUSTIN — State legislators filed 282 bills in the first three days after the Nov. 13 pre-filing began for the 77th Legislature.

When the session convenes in January 2001, legislators will face months of debate on many hot topics including abortion, drug and alcohol use, campaign reform and school finance.

Pauline Word
Texas Press Association

House Bill 17 would specify new requirements for abortion procedures. The bill would require that new abortion facilities built after Sept. 1, 2001 be located at least 1,500 feet from a church or school.

The bill also sets new licensing requirements for abortion clinics and would require physicians to provide a woman seeking an abortion with detailed information and brochures at least 24 hours before the procedure can be performed.

Drivers who are convicted of a second or subsequent offense within five years of the first conviction for driving while intoxicated would face automatic suspension of all their vehicle registrations under House Bill 90.

City officials, both current and appointed, and certain municipal candidates would face new disclosure requirements under House Bill 64. The bill would require those people to file financial statements of their financial activity and the financial activity of their spouse and dependent children.

All public school students would be required to recite the Pledge of Allegiance under HB 88. School districts could exempt a student only if his parent or guardian submits a written request.

SB 28 would raise the wealth per student cap for school districts to $320,000 from $295,000 under the state's public school finance system.

The session convenes Jan. 9, 2001 and is scheduled to end May 28, 2001. Legislators have until March 9 to file bills and joint resolutions that are not local and have not been declared an emergency by the governor.

Lame ducks leave problems for successors

By George Gedda

Associated Press Writer

Three weeks after being humbled at the ballot box by then-Gov. Bill Clinton in 1992, lame duck President George Bush sent troops to Somalia to help ensure safe passage of humanitarian food supplies for the country's starving millions.

It was a gesture that few quarreled with. When the new administration took office weeks later, officials described the Somalia commitment as a model for humanitarian intervention. By spring, the starvation had ended.

The upbeat mood evaporated in October as American troops began trying to disarm one of the Somali factions. Eighteen were killed on one bloody Sunday and, within days, a chastened Clinton announced that all U.S. troops would be withdrawn within six months.

As the Somalia example suggests, actions or omissions by outgoing presidents can certainly spill over into the next administration, sometimes negatively but not always.

And as Clinton nears the

In 1992, President Bush sent troops to Somalia — an action that spilled over into the Clinton administration.

end of the road, he seems to have his eye on the history books. He is in Asia this week meeting with Pacific Rim leaders, but his main focus lately has been to get Israelis and Palestinians back to the negotiating table. He also seeks a breakthrough with North Korea and may even visit there before stepping down.

Many wonder whether he will leave any ticking time bombs for his successor, or if there are none, how deftly will the successor manage the hand Clinton deals him. One potential headache for the next president is a revitalized Iraq, possibly equipped with an arsenal of weapons that the U.N. Security Council had tried to ban.

Back in 1992, did the Republican Bush sense that he would bequeath Democrat Clinton a can of worms by sending U.S. troops to Somalia just weeks before stepping down?

No, says Herman Cohen, Bush's top adviser for Africa policy at the time. "Bush wanted the U.S. troops out by Jan. 20 (Inauguration Day)," Cohen said. "He backed down only after his advisers told him the troops needed more time to get the job done." Cohen noted that by the spring of 1993, the United States turned the Somalia assignment in large measure over to the United Nations, consistent with Bush's plan.

The fault lay not with the original commitment by Bush, Cohen said, but with the Clinton administration's decision to get involved with what was essentially a factional fight. Clinton blamed the fiasco on the United Nations.

Few transition periods were filled with ticking time bombs more drama than the for his successor? President Carter prepared to make the handoff to President Reagan.

Carter was determined to free the 52 American hostages in Iran before leaving office, and missed by less than an hour. In Central America, the Reagan transition team made no secret of its unhappiness with what it was inheriting from Carter — a pro-Cuban government in Nicaragua and the specter of a leftist takeover in El Salvador's bloody civil war.

The careers of virtually every State Department official involved with Central America during the Carter era were set back by the incoming administration because of the chaos there.

Amid the Carter-Reagan contentiousness, there also was cooperation. Their subordinates collaborated to save the life of South Korean dissident leader Kim Dae-jung, who had been condemned for anti-government activities by Seoul's military chieftains. Now, 20 years later, Kim is South Korea's Nobel Prize-winning president.

There was another momentous transition when President Eisenhower turned over to an unsuspecting President Kennedy his plan to have American-trained Cuban exiles topple Cuban leader Fidel Castro. The Bay of Pigs disaster occurred barely 100 days into Kennedy's presidency.

Citing Cuba and Vietnam, Robert Kagan of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, says Eisenhower was a "master of leaving bombs to blow up in his successor's face."

Beware, says Kagan, of presidents who "have a sneaky way of leaving serious foreign policy problems unresolved and some hidden disasters that conveniently erupt after they leave the scene."

George Gedda has covered foreign affairs for The Associated Press since 1968.

Students mourned

■ 25,000 gather to remember Texas A&M students who died one year ago

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — More than 25,000 people weathered a driving rain early Saturday to mark the one-year anniversary of the collapse of a log bonfire that killed 12 Texas A&M students.

Students and others huddled under umbrellas on the muddy and soaked campus polo fields for a memorial ceremony at 2:42 a.m. CST — the exact place and time A&M's log stack collapsed Nov. 18, 1999.

"I think the rain was appropriate because bonfires have usually been built in this kind of weather," said Ron Harrod, 62, who graduated from Texas A&M in 1960. "It was a very emotional ceremony."

The 59-foot stack of logs, weighing more than two jumbo jets, was being assembled for the school's annual pep rally on the eve of its football game against archrival Texas when it toppled. Besides those killed, 27 were injured.

Family members of each student who died in the accident sat together under umbrellas in rows of seats in a 150-foot circle. Behind each set of seats stood a 5- to 6-foot wood pillar bearing each victim's name and the year they were to graduate.

At the start of the 40-minute ceremony, lights on the fields were turned off and a memorial flame atop a platform in the circle's center was lit. The flame will be kept lit until 8 p.m. CST Sunday, to correspond with the time the last victim died.

A cannon was then fired 12 times. "I think the ceremony was beautiful," said senior Justin Taliaferro, 21. "The first-year anniversary of any traumatic event is the hardest. I think it brought a lot of closure to a lot of people."

The mood on the A&M campus was somber Friday. At the Memorial Student Center on campus, teary-eyed students left handwritten messages on signs bearing the pictures of bonfire victims.

GAME TIME

Closing in on Clete—Hereford junior cornerback Juan Ayala narrows the gap between himself and Canyon senior running back Clete Andrews during the Whitefaces 32-22 victory. Ayala and the Hostile Herd are in action at 1 p.m. this afternoon versus Frenship.

STAR POWER: ■ Dallas' Morrow scores with 3:57 left in regulation

DETROIT (AP) — Brenden Morrow had several breaks Friday night. The last one was the biggest.

Morrow, who broke two sticks in practice and missed two outstanding scoring chances earlier in the game, scored with 3:57 left in regulation to give the Dallas Stars a 1-0 victory over the Detroit Red Wings.

"A couple of guys thought it would be funny to slap my sticks around and I broke a couple of them earlier on shots," Morrow said. "I had to make up a couple of new ones just before the game and one of them happened to have a goal in it."

Joe Nieuwendyk slid a pass to Jamie Langenbrunner in the right circle. Langenbrunner attempted to dump the puck in front of the Detroit net, but it deflected off Red Wings defenseman Nicklas Lidstrom to Morrow who sent a wrist shot to the right of goalie Manny Legace.

"I had two great chances earlier in the game," Morrow said. "After the first one, (Dallas coach Ken) Hitchcock told me we had to get the puck up on this guy. On the second time, I didn't and he stopped with the right leg again.

The third time I got lucky and it kind of bounced off his stick."

Red Wings coach Scotty Bowman blamed Brendan Shanahan for the mix-up that led to the goal.

"We just got caught in a bad line change," Bowman said. "Shanahan had the puck in the neutral zone and he lost it. He was trying to flip it and it went a little ahead of him. He and somebody else headed to the bench. It was a poor line change. In a scoreless game with four minutes to go, you can't do that."

Shanahan refused to accept the blame, and said Dallas just caught the Red Wings at the right moment.

"It was kind of a scramble by our bench," he said. "It was just one of those plays where the puck was up in the air right in front of our bench. Everybody was just swinging at it and we were making a line change."

Ed Belfour, who turned away 33 shots, picked up his fourth shutout of the season and fourth of his career against Detroit. Belfour, who has 53 career shutouts, also blanked

Washington on Oct. 14, Columbus on Nov. 1 and Montreal on Nov. 11.

"This is a real strong win for us," said Belfour, who played his 10th straight game. "I had a few good breaks tonight. I was seeing the puck really well. I've been feeling better as of late. Anytime you start getting on a roll, it's nice to play more games."

The win extended the Stars unbeaten streak at Joe Louis Arena to six games (5-0-1) over the last three seasons, including winning the last five.

Before that, Dallas lost 12 consecutive games in Detroit.

Notes: Belfour improved to 8-5-3. ... Detroit held a 33-30 shots advantage. ... Both teams were 0-for-3 on the power play.

Velarde newest Ranger

■ Texas trades two pitching prospects for A's second baseman

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Second

baseball pitcher Randy Velarde was traded from the Oakland Athletics to the Texas Rangers on Friday for a pair of minor league pitchers: left-hander Ryan Cullen and right-hander Aaron Harang.

Velarde hit .278 with 12 homers and 41 RBIs in 122 games with the A's, the AL West champions last season.

Velarde, who turns 38 years old on Nov. 24, has a career average of .277.

"He is one of the top defensive second basemen in the game and brings an experienced veteran to our club," Rangers general manager Doug Melvin said.

Harang, 22, was 13-5 with a 3.32 ERA in 28 games at Charlotte this year. He led the Florida State League in wins. Cullen, 20, was 6-6 with a 3.04 ERA and nine saves in 48 appearances with Savannah of the South Atlantic League.

Texas also hired Bobby Cuellar to replace Larry Hardy, who became pitching coach.

Outfielder Scarborough Green was placed on waivers for the purpose of his unconditional release, and the contracts of four players were purchased from Triple-A Oklahoma City: right-hander Jovanny Cedeno, first basemen Travis Hafner and Carlos Pena, and second baseman Jason Romano.

Three other players — right-hander Danny Kolb, left-hander Justin Thompson, and outfielder Ruben Mateo — were activated from the 60-day disabled list.

Mateo broke his leg last year in first season as a Texas Ranger while crossing first base. Thompson has been plagued with shoulder trouble since coming over from Detroit.

Hometown boy teaching Hunter Safety course Nov. 27-30

Just in time for the upcoming pheasant season, Hereford's own Wesley Rudd will be conducting a handy hometown hunter safety course. The dates are November 27-30. Classes will meet at 6 p.m. each evening at the HISD administration building. Cost is $10.

The class will be limited to 15 students, so best get your name in early. Contact Rudd to enroll or for more information at 364-7575.

Although the hunter education course is not required to purchase a hunting license, all Texas hunters born on or after September 2, 1971, are required to successfully complete a hunter education course.

In Texas, hunters between 12 and 16 years of age must have completed hunter education or be accompanied by a person who is at least 17 years old and licensed to hunt in Texas.

Those under 12 years of age who hunt in Texas must also be accompanied by a person at least 17 years old and licensed to hunt in Texas.

Accompanied doesn't mean you can simply be roaming around in the same general area as the youngster--the adult must be within immediate normal voice control of the young hunter.

Although they may hunt if properly accompanied by a licensed adult hunter, youngsters under the age of 12 are not eligible for the hunter safety course.

The hunter education course is a 10-hour class that not only teaches hunting safety and proper firearms handling, but skills and responsibility in the field.

Wesley adds some material on survival and first-aid skills in his own sessions--handy information to know to enhance the enjoyment of outdoor experiences.

This course isn't filled with boring or difficult material. It's mostly common-sense, think-before-you-act sort of stuff, and the sessions are generally open-ended enough to be fun, as well as informative.

When they have successfully completed the course and its test, participants receive a hunter safety education certification card that is good for life, and is honored by the 49 states and 10 Canadian provinces that require hunter education.

The card must be carried at all times while hunting.

Even though you may be of an age doesn't require you to take the course to hunt in Texas, it's still an excellent idea to obtain your hunter safety card.

Many states require proof of hunter safety certification, regardless of the adult's age, before they will issue a hunting license. Many unprepared Texas hunters who have gone out-of-state to hunt deer and elk in places like Colorado and New Mexico have learned this the hard way. Completing the Texas course gets you over that hurdle to obtaining out-of-state licenses.

In addition to meeting legal requirements of many states, the hunter safety course is also fun, and filled with practical knowledge.--There's nothing wrong with brushing-up on our safety skills and ethics.

Wesley, a meats processing teacher at Hereford High School, is a local boy made-good in the hunter safety training area. He grew up in the Westway area and is an avid hunter and shooter himself. He became a hunter safety instructor in the course of obtaining his college degree.

According to Wesley, in a very sensible move, colleges now train "new" agriculture teachers to teach hunter education as they come out of school.

Teachers take the same hunter safety course that they teach, then receive 10 hours of additional training. They're tested over the material they will be presenting as instructors.

Four tied at Championship

■ LPGA Tour Championship turning out to be tight race between four pros

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — From sunshine to rain, an eerie calm to blasts of wind, it was hard to keep track of the weather during the second round of the Arch Wireless Championship. The same held true with the leaders.

When the topsy-turvy round finally ended in fading sunlight, Leta Lindley had a hard-earned 71 and was among four players tied for the lead.

Annika Sorenstam had a 71 and was disgusted. Meg Mallon had a 72 and was delighted. Dottie Pepper had a 71 and wasn't sure what to think.

"We've got 36 holes to figure out who is going to take home the trophy," Pepper said. "It might be sooner than the presidential election is decided."

It figures to be just as wild. Five players had at least a share of the lead on Friday, which began under blue skies and strong winds before giving way to calm and rain, followed by more wind just as the leaders were approaching the final three holes.

Instead of pulling away from the pack, they came back to the field.

Lindley had to hit driver and 3-wood on the 410-yard 17th, missed the green well to the left and took a bogey to drop her into the leading group at 5-under 139.

"If I had been there 20 minutes earlier, that hole would have been downwind," she said. "It was like playing two clubs into the wind. Just a poor shot, bad timing."

Mallon also bogeyed the 17th to fall back to 5 under, but she was in no mood to complain.

"I'm thankful that I shot even par and didn't lose any ground," Mallon said. "Maybe it's a testament to this golf course."

The only player in a foul mood was Sorenstam, and for good reason.

The Swede played the first 33 holes without a bogey, then picked up two on the final three holes by three-putting.

The last one was especially painful, because Sorenstam had a 10-foot birdie putt that would have given her a two-stroke lead.

Good hands!

Off to the races—Hereford junior receiver Geoffrey Marquez sprints upfield for one of his two touchdowns against Canyon High last Friday.

Before Friday's memorial ceremony, school officials arranged for movies and poetry readings at the student center to ease students' sadness.

In June, Texas A&M President Ray Bowen announced that the traditional bonfire would continue, but not until at least 2002, and only with greater school supervision and a professionally engineered design.

Minnesota gets by Spurs, 99-94 in OT

Garnett scores 32 for Timberwolves

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Three days after tussling with a teammate, Kevin Garnett's energy was nothing but positive for the Timberwolves on Friday night.

Garnett had a season-high 32 points, 12 rebounds and two crucial baskets in overtime as Minnesota survived another fourth-quarter failure and beat the Spurs 99-94.

Garnett drained consecutive jumpers over Tim Duncan to give the Timberwolves a three-point lead with 52.9 seconds left.

"Kevin played very much in control. He was really at peace and calm out there," said Minnesota coach Flip Saunders. "He showed a lot of poise."

Garnett, who has already been whistled for five technical fouls this season, got into a post-practice scuffle with Wally Szczerbiak earlier in the week. The burdens of Malik Sealy's death and the Joe Smith illegal-contract saga had many believing the Timberwolves' franchise player was beginning to get stressed out.

"I'm fine," Garnett insisted after the Wolves' win Wednesday over Golden State.

Garnett said Friday he thought he had too much energy in the teams' last meeting, a 103-91 loss for Minnesota.

"Tonight, I wanted to be in a calm mode and at the same time bring positive energy so I'd still be strong in the fourth quarter," Garnett said. "I was real in control. Sometimes when you're amped up, you don't have the same thought process."

Duncan didn't want to focus on the individual matchup but did credit Garnett.

Thank You

We at The Country Opry would like to thank Hereford and all of our supporters over the last 11 years. You have made the Country Opry the success it is. We will be closing the Opry until further notice. This is due to winter months approaching and family health at present. Thanks Again! The Country Opry Staff.

WTAMU sets 'Steinbeck on Stage'

Special to the Brand
CANYON — West Texas A&M University and the Branding Iron Theatre (BIT), through the direction of graduate student Jose Ochoa, will present "Steinbeck on Stage," an arts festival Nov. 30-Dec. 10. The festival will celebrate the life and works of John Steinbeck by showcasing ballet, lecture, film and art.

All events focus on Steinbeck, the American novelist, story writer, playwright, essayist and screenplay writer, who is best known for his classic novels, "Of Mice and Men," "The Pearl" and "The Grapes of Wrath."

FILMS: The festival will begin with a rare showing of the 1947 award-winning film "La Perla" at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 30 in the Lecture Room of the Cornette Library. The documentary/drama, "Forgotten Village," will be shown at 2 p.m. Dec. 1 in the Lecture Room of the Cornette Library. The documentary examines the conflict between modern and indigenous culture in a small Mexican village.

LECTURE: Dr. Susan Shillinglaw, director of the Martha Heasley Cox Center for Steinbeck Studies and a professor of English at San Jose State University, will deliver a lecture about Steinbeck at 3 p.m. Dec. 1 in the Lecture Room of the Cornette Library on the WTAMU campus. Shillinglaw was the 1995 recipient of the Pruis Award for Outstanding Contribution to Steinbeck Studies. She published an introduction for a Russian journal for Penguin Press and is working on a biography of Steinbeck's first wife, Carol Henning, and is editing a volume of Steinbeck's journals.

MUSIC, LITERATURE AND DANCE: A series of music, literature and ballet/dance presentations, performed by faculty and students, will be at 8 nightly Dec. 1-3 in the BIT on the WTAMU campus. Some of the performances include American folk and jazz songs, a Spanish quartet and scenes and readings from Steinbeck's work. The show concludes with the premiere of a new ballet based on "The Pearl" by Steinbeck.

ART: An art exhibit will be on display Dec. 1-10 in the Weill Art Gallery of Mary Moody Northern Hall.

POET'S CORNER

FRANK THE FROG (Jerry Ratliff)

While running through the woods
 I fell to my knees.
 A voice said, "Slow down and see the forest and the trees."
 I looked at the pond and sitting on this log
 I saw this big, green fella that I call Frank the Frog.
 He said, "Come closer and hear what I have to say."
 As the mist closed around us,
 closing out the day,
 He said, "Once I was a Frog
 and then I was a Prince, and then I was a Frog again.
 But what has happened since?
 Worldly wealth was in my hand,
 the rich and the hired,
 but all this wealth came down on me
 and made me very tired.
 I longed for the forest and the freedom from within.
 Beware the cover of the book,
 keep happy thoughts, my frined.
 My wish was granted,
 now I share with those who do come near and have the eyes to see and have the ears to hear."
 With that Frank jumped into the pond.
 Was he really once a prince?
 Did he give me wealth of the world by giving me his two cents?

LOVE IN OUR HEARTS (Dora Ochoa)

We were born with Love in our hearts
 Without this great gift
 your home falls apart
 God send his love from
 To spread through the world on the wings of a Dove.
 A white Dove is pure like
 God's love for you.
 Without any debts or paying your dues.
 Your job is to take Love and pass it around.
 It starts in the home and from there you gain ground.
 When children receive it, they learn really fast
 That love is not only a thing of the past.
 If you open your hear
 to let your Dove fly.
 You'll learn that God's love was never a lie.

Don't let the bird SPOIL your Thanksgiving

Preparations for Thanksgiving dinner take hours. There's a turkey to bake, the dressing to prepare, vegetables to cook and desserts to make.

You've spent days planning the menu and making shopping lists. There have been numerous trips to the store to get all the necessary items.

Now it's time. The big day is here. You get up early to put the turkey in the oven and — it's still frozen!! You forgot to take it out of the freezer and place it in the refrigerator to thaw. What do you do now? What is the quickest, safest way to get the turkey where you can cook it?

You've made lots of goodies for guests to enjoy as they come and go throughout the day, but these have to sit out at room temperature for hours. Is everything safe to eat?

Holidays are a time for family, friends, fun, and...food poisoning. Thanksgiving cooks need to be careful when handling and cooking the holiday meal. There are as many as 80 million cases of foodborne illnesses annually in the United States, resulting in 500,000 deaths each year.

There are many types of bacteria that can invade your Thanksgiving dinner, especially if you leave the food out while waiting for guests to arrive throughout the day, said Gulchin Ergun, M.D., a gastroenterologist at The Methodist Hospital and director of the Reflux Center.

"The turkey is a wonderful place for bacteria to grow," she said. It's warm and full of nutrients.

How do you know if you have food poisoning? Some bacteria can strike fast, causing symptoms in two hours. Others can attack the next day.

Most cases are mild, but in extreme cases, death can occur from food poisoning, Ergun said. Typical symptoms include watery diarrhea, abdominal cramping, vomiting and nausea.

If these symptoms do occur, Ergun said to wait them out and they will likely go away. But drink plenty of fluids and avoid heavy and spicy foods. If the symptoms persist more than a few days, however, contact a physician.

Here are some tips from Methodist Health Care System's Institute for Preventive Medicine to help make your holiday bacteria free:

Wash your hands

- Use warm, soapy water.
- Wash front and back, up to your wrists, washing between fingers, and under fingernails.
- Wash long enough that you are able to sing your favorite team's fight song.
- Wash hands after handling any raw meat.
- Wash all preparation surfaces like appliances, countertops, cutting boards, and utensils.
- Dry with clean cloth towels or disposable paper towels.

Handling raw meat

- Keep raw meat separate from other foods.
- Store turkey on bottom shelf of refrigerator to prevent juices from dripping on other foods.
- Use two different cutting boards.
- Wash those hands again using hot and soapy water.

Temperatures and refrigeration

- Buy a meat thermometer and insert in inner thigh area near breast, avoiding bone.
- Whole turkey should be cooked to 180 degrees F.
- Refrigerate leftovers at 40 degrees F. immediately after serving.
- Do not keep turkey longer than three to four days.

Thawing

- If planning to thaw by refrigerating, it will take at least a day for every four to five pounds. It can remain in the refrigerator one to two days.
- To thaw in cold water, the turkey must in a leak proof package, completely submerged in water and will take 30 minutes per pound. Make sure to change the water every 30 minutes.

Planned Parenthood observes 30th anniversary

By Becky Thorn
Hereford Brand Lifestyles Editor

Planned Parenthood of Amarillo and the Texas Panhandle is celebrating its 30 year anniversary at its Hereford Planned Parenthood Clinic on Tuesday from 1-3 p.m. Refreshments will be provided, and the public is invited to attend. The Hereford Clinic is located at 110 N. 25 Mile Avenue, Suite G.

The Hereford clinic coordinator is Lisa Sifuentes, of Dimmitt. Elsa Marquez is in charge of community relations/patient care. The nurse practitioner is Sherri Drinnon, of Amarillo. Sheila Merritt, a WT nursing student, is also on staff.

The Hereford clinic was opened on Oct. 29, 1970. The founder of the clinic was Mrs. Walter London Jr. She served on the Board of Planned Parenthood of Amarillo and was a delegate to the Planned Parenthood Federation of America's annual meeting in 1972. She organized the first Volunteer Auxiliary for Planned Parenthood in Hereford.

From the clinic's opening until July 1972 approximately 600 women received medical examinations and assistance in family planning.

The medical directors were Dr. Gerald Payne and Dr. Hugh McCrory. Mrs. Lupe Flores was the clinic director. Mrs. Ruby Metz was the volunteer auxiliary coordinator.

As a part of the 30 year anniversary of the Hereford clinic, a presentation will be made to Dr. Payne and a presentation in memory of Mrs. London will be made to her daughter, Julie Wagner.

Community support was evidenced by such organizations as L'Allegra Study Club which originated the "We Care" fund to provide medicine, laboratory services and x-rays for indigent children under 18 years of age.

The Young Homemakers of Texas worked as a group to repaint some of the rooms in the Public Health Clinic occupied by Planned Parenthood.

Planned Parenthood has provided reliable, quality health services and educational programs in the Texas Panhandle for more than 33 years. Planned Parenthood Federation of America has been providing services throughout the United States for almost 90 years.

Confidential and affordable healthcare is available for women of all ages, as well as testing for sexually transmitted diseases and HIV for men.

Appointments can be made by calling local Planned Parenthood offices or toll-free at 800-999-3107. The Hereford Clinic can be reached by calling 806-364-5641.

The Hereford clinic is open Tuesday through Friday, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. The Nurse Practitioner Clinic days are each Wednesday and Friday, from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. The clinic is open late on the first Wednesday of each month, from 10:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m.

The "Dose of Reality" Teen Clinic/Open House is held on the second Tuesday of each month. "Dose of Reality" sessions are for teens, ages 13-19.

"This is a program funded by the Amarillo Area Foundation with the objective of curbing teenage pregnancy," Rita Bryant, special events coordinator for Planned Parenthood, said. "It is very well attended in Hereford with a higher attendance of males."

These sessions provide teens with the knowledge and skills to make responsible choices about their sexual health. The sessions are supervised by caring medical staff and peer educators.

The peer educators are chosen from among the teens who attend the clinic. They help coordinate clinics and get paid for doing clerical work, making phone calls and providing other assistance, Bryant said.

The curriculum is centered around 12 different points and those who attend guide what they want to talk about, but the emphasis is always on behavior to prevent the need for birth control.

A new service will be offered at the Hereford clinic in January, according to Bryant. This will be a mid-life health clinic emphasizing preventive health care for pre-menopausal women.

All services of Planned Parenthood are available to everyone. Charges are based on a sliding scale for those who are able to pay, but "we don't turn anyone away," Bryant said.

Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Christie
...celebrate golden anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Christie will be honored on their 50th wedding anniversary with a reception hosted by their children Sunday at their home, 123 Liveoak.

Christie and the former Duores Thomas were married Nov. 18, 1950, in the First Baptist Church in Abernathy. The Christies moved to Hereford in 1953 and began a career in farming in the Summerfield community.

Hosts for the reception are their two children and spouses Jimmy and Kathy Christie of Burkburnett and Tom and Valerie Fellhauer of Hereford; their six grandchildren and one great-granddaughter.

Students inducted into honor society

Three Hereford students were inducted into Alpha Chi, a national college honor scholarship society, during a ceremony on Nov. 5 at West Texas A&M University in Canyon. They were Wendy Brisendine, Jeremy Urbanczyk and Kate Denison.

Brisendine is a junior elementary education major and the daughter of Mickey and Michelle Brisendine.

Urbanczyk, son of Martin Urbanczyk and the late Sue Urbanczyk, is a junior pre-med student.

Denison is a junior accounting major and the daughter of Jack and Nancy Denison.

Alpha Chi recognizes students for their academic achievement and character. To qualify, a student must be a junior or senior who has maintained a 3.5 or higher GPA.

Chamber Singers present dinner theater

A dinner theater, "A Merry Olde Christmas," will be presented by the Hereford Chamber Singers on Thursday, Dec. 7 at 7 p.m. in the Fellowship Hall of First Baptist Church.

Admission for the evening will be $7 for adults and $4 for children 12 and under.

The evening will feature a dinner and family entertainment consisting of songs and carols of the Christmas season. The audience will be transported to an old English setting as the lord of the manor hosts his annual Christmas merriment. The serving of the food and drink will be interspersed with a variety of choral arrangements of traditional Christmas music.

The choir consists of persons from throughout the Hereford and Dimmitt communities who love to sing and share their love and expertise with others. David Cox serves as the director and Linda Gilbert is the piano accompanist. Flutist Christine Beavers, a member of the group, will be featured along with the choir on some of the arrangements. Gene Streun is the president of the group.

David Cox directs the Hereford Chamber Singers as they rehearse a variety of choral arrangements of traditional Christmas music for a dinner theater presentation of "A Merry Olde Christmas" at 7 p.m. Dec. 7 in the Fellowship Hall of First Baptist Church.

Tickets can be purchased from any member of the group or at the Chamber of Commerce office through Dec. 4. Persons are encouraged to purchase admission prior to the evening's performance and may contact Bera Boyd, 364-5345, or Gene Streun, 364-0130, if necessary.

The Chamber Singers have also been invited to provide the entertainment for the annual Lion's Club Christmas party on Dec. 14.

Rural health concerns are targeted at adult health fair

An Adult Health Promotion and Prevention Fair, to be held Tuesday at the Hereford Community Center, will target rural health concerns.

The event, slated from 8 a.m.-6 p.m., is being jointly sponsored by the Texas Partnership for Farm Family Health and Safety, Inc., West Texas A&M University Division of Nursing, Texas Agricultural Extension Service of Deaf Smith County, Hereford Regional Medical Center (HRMC), and the Southwest Center for Agricultural Health, Injury Prevention and Education of Tyler which is the sponsoring agent for the Texas Partnership.

The fair will feature a number of educational booths, free screenings and disease assessments available to adults. More complete medical tests, requiring a doctor's referral, fees, and a scheduled appointment at HRMC will be offered at discounted costs. If tests cannot be completed on the day of the health fair, the discounted rates will apply at the local hospital through Dec. 1.

The booths will offer information on the following: Better Living for Texans: Nutrition, File of Life, cardiovascular disease, diabetes, prostate cancer prevention, breast self-examination, breast cancer prevention, tetanus boosters, tuberculosis, preventing hearing loss, basic first aid bleeding treatment, American Red Cross CPR, Hantavirus, stress management, poisonous bites of snakes and spiders, signs, symptoms and care of strokes, heat stroke versus heat exhaustion, respiratory disease and assembling first aid kits.

Free screenings will include hearing, blood pressure, finger-stick glucose level (after 8-12 hour fasting) and finger-stick cholesterol (after fasting 8-12 hours). There will also be free assessments of skin cancer, respiratory problems and stress levels.

Appointments can be made for the following discounted medical tests: PSA blood test for prostate cancer, lipid panel (fasting required), and mammography.

This health fair is designed to benefit residents of the county as well as provide an opportunity for senior level community health nursing students to develop an understanding of the unique health and safety concerns of the rural, agricultural community. Many of the area will be facilitated by R.N. and undergraduate degree completion students. The goal is to encourage these nursing students to pursue careers in the rural areas.

Questions about the health fair should be directed to Beverly Harder, County Extension Agent for Family Consumer Education, at 364-3573.

Health fair donors include Hereford EMS, Harrington Cancer Center, Texas Department of Health, Barbara Tabor Spa, Hereford ISD, Texas Panhandle Mental Health and Mental Retardation, Authority: REACH, the Tri-County Chapter of the American Red Cross in Hereford, Subway, IBP and others to be announced at the fair.

CREATORS SYNDICATE

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I am tired of the way you brow beat adult children who object to their widowed parents getting remarried. You make them out to be "selfish," and I am sick to death of it.

My dear mother passed away five years ago. Recently, my 65-year-old father came to me and asked if I would be unhappy if he started to date again. I told him, "Yes, I would." (Sometimes you have to be cruel to be kind.) Don't you realize, Ann, that moral teachings over the centuries have always condemned the remarriage of someone whose spouse has died? It means he or she does not want to be reunited with their departed spouse in heaven. Why shouldn't the children be resentful? Of course elderly singles are lonely, but that is the price they must pay for the joy of meeting their beloved spouses in God's kingdom.

The same goes for that inheritance nonsense you preach. An inheritance is something you owe your children. Valuable property should stay in the family. This includes jewelry and antiques. Stepparents are inheritance-stealing interlopers, and society should condemn them. Please, Ann, rethink your position on these topics. People pay a lot of attention to what you say, and you are wrong, wrong, wrong on both issues. Thanks for letting me have my say. — A Daughter in Arizona

Dear Arizona Daughter: Sorry, but I am not budging on either of the issues on which we disagree. Where did you get the idea that "moral teachings over the centuries condemn the remarriage of someone whose spouse has died"? What Bible are you reading? I can't find it in mine.

You are also wrong about the inheritance issue. I've said it before, and I will say it again. You do not owe your children or grandchildren an inheritance. Your hard-earned money should go to children, grandchildren, nieces and nephews, or non-relatives who have treated you kindly. Any one who sits around waiting for an inheritance deserves to be disappointed. People should leave their money to individuals and institutions that are worthy. I stand by this directive foursquare, and urge my readers to do so, as well.

Dear Ann Landers: I was sent an invitation to a wedding of the daughter of an old friend who lives in another state. I had business nearby, and realized that I could attend the wedding while I was in town. When I called the bride-to-be and told her I had received the invitation and would be delighted to attend, she informed me that I had been sent a "courtesy invitation" and they did not expect me to show up — "because of distance and all." However, she promised to try and "fit me in, somewhere, somehow."

What is the point of such an invitation, Ann? Were they simply expecting me to send a gift? In light of our phone conversation, what should I do about this awkward situation? I was so taken aback by this that I don't trust my judgment. — Chagrined on the East Coast

Dear East Coaster: How desperate are you for a glass of wine and a piece of wedding cake? Since you have been told that you were not expected to accept the invitation, by all means, do not disappoint them. Decline politely, and send a nice $3 card with your best wishes.

Gem of the Day (Credit Billy Wilder in the Prairie Rambler): France is the only country on the face of the earth where the money falls apart and you can't tear the toilet paper.

Program presenters at the recent meeting of Delta Xi Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma were Elaine Hyer and Lily Roberts. Both are HISD counselors and their program was titled "Values: Character Education in Theory and Practice."

Character discussed in Delta Xi program

Delta Xi Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma met recently in the Hereford Community Center. Special guests were Elaine Hyer, seventh grade counselor at Hereford Junior High, and Lily Roberts, counselor at Northwest and West Central schools. They presented a program on "Values: Character Education in Theory and Practice." Character Counts is a national program with six pillars: caring, fairness, respect, trustworthiness, responsibility and citizenship.

Both counselors explained how the Character Counts program is used in their schools.

A brief business meeting was conducted by president DeeAnn Matthews. Members received yearbooks. A summary was given of the area workshop held recently in Hereford and members were thanked for helping with it.

Hostesses for the meeting were Linda Cumpton, Elizabeth Abernethy, Tricia Sims, Francie Farr, Bera Boyd and Susan Perrin.

Project Christmas Card displays like the one shown above will be placed in area businesses on Monday. The annual fundraiser is sponsored by L'Allegra Study Club and the proceeds will be used to purchase two recovery beds for Hereford Regional Medical Center. Individuals are invited to contribute the amount they would spend on Christmas cards and names of all contributors will be printed in a full page Christmas greeting to the entire community in the Christmas Eve edition of the Hereford Brand. Pictured above are L'Allegra members Jan Weishaar (left) and Melissa Clarke.

Baldwin is speaker at Hereford Study Club meeting in Canyon

Lyle Baldwin was guest speaker at the Nov. 13 meeting of Hereford Study Club held in the home of Willie Braddy in Canyon with Elizabeth Hellman as co-hostess.

Baldwin, a retired Amarillo policeman, gave the program on "Tea." He was stationed in Korea and Japan when he became interested in tea culture. Baldwin said that the women who picked the tea leaves were about as tall as the tea plants. They only picked the three top leaves.

According to Baldwin, even though tea is consumed all over the world, the Irish people drink the most tea per capita. He has amassed a vast collection of tea from all over the world, including one called The Boston Tea Party. Even though black tea is the most popular, he said green tea is very healthy.

He displayed many interesting tea pots and tea cups to accompany his presentation.

Various hot teas were served for refreshments along with cookies and pralines.

Members present were Barbara Allen, Doris Bryant, Hazel Ford, Betty Gilbert, Carole McGilvary, Nedra Robinson, Mary Stoy, Virginia Winget, Joan Yarbo, Gladys Setliff, Braddy and Hellman.

Home on tour — The home of Stan and Jan Metcalf, 125 Nueces, will be one of four stops on the Holiday Tour of Homes hosted by La Madre Mia Study Club on Dec. 3 from 1-4 p.m. The house was built by Jan's father, Joe Story, for a retirement home. Items of interest which will be displayed for the tour are a christening dress, clothes and hand sewn baby shoes made by Stan's great-grandmother for Bobbie Metcalf, Stan's mother. There will also be Christmas quilts, like the one pictured, and a collection of approximately 100 Byer's Christmas Carolers figurines belonging to Roland and Sandra Saul. Admiring one of the carolers are (from left) Georgia Sparks, Jan Metcalf and Tricia Sims. Also on the tour are the homes of Bill and Kerry Glidewell, 126 Pecan; Jeff and Kim Shelton, 520 Westhaven; and Joe and Annie Brown, 149 Liveoak.

Military Muster

Shama L. Hernandez, son of Dee and Nacho Hernandez and a 1993 graduate of Hereford High School, was promoted to the rank of Sergeant in the United States Marine Corps on Nov. 1.

Hernandez enlisted in the Marine Corps in January 1996. After completing boot camp, he continued his physical training and was then ordered to report to Marine Corps Base Camp Pendleton, Calif. From California he deployed to numerous foreign locations, including Australia, Singapore and Korea.

His commitment to serving his country led Hernandez to request Recruiting Duty which requires strenuous hours and devotion to the corps. He is now recruiting out of Amarillo.

Air Force Airman Jay H. McCabe has graduated from basic military training at Lackland Air Force Base, San Antonio. During the six weeks of training, the airman studied the Air Force mission, organization, and customs and received special training in human relations.

In addition, airmen who complete basic training earn credit toward an associate degree through the Community College of the Air Force.

He is the son of Stan V. McCabe of Hereford and Kelly M. Brock of San Antonio.

McCabe is a 2000 graduate of Hereford High School.

Pvt. Stephan Mac Taylor, son of Scotty Taylor and Karen Fox Taylor of Canyon, graduated from United States Marine Corps Basic Training on Nov. 3.

Nominees sought

■ Woman of the Year will be named for CofC Women's Division

The Women's Division of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce will be accepting nominations for Woman of the Year until Nov. 30.

Nominations may be mailed to the Chamber of Commerce, P.O. Box 192, Hereford, or they will be accepted at the office, 701 N. Main St.

The award, presented by the Women's Division, will be given to a division member who has been active during the past year. The winner will be announced at the Women's Division's first quarterly meeting in 2001.

Persons submitting a nomination need not be a member of the Women's Division. Nominations should be in writing, giving qualifications and reasons why the person named should be considered. The letter does not have to be signed.

Nominees will be judged on accomplishments done for and on behalf of the Women's Division and/or the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce. Other outside activities will then be considered such as community work, charitable work, church activities, youth work, etc.

YOUR EYES

Take Precautions with Night Vision

At night, our eyes become somewhat myopic or nearsighted. Although night myopia is normal, it makes it harder for us to see signs and people along the side of the road. Glare from an approaching vehicle also causes our vision to weaken. To decrease glare, avoid looking directly at the light and get glasses with anti-glare coating from your eye care specialist.

Pupil enlargement also has an effect on night vision. Our pupils widen or dilate when less light is available. This allows light rays to scatter as they pass through the eye tissues to focus on the retina. Scattering causes visual disability. People with cataracts especially complain of poor vision due to scattering, which worsens with age as the lens of the eyes become cloudier.

To enhance your vision, consult with your eye care specialist for the proper glasses to wear for night driving. Wear tinted glasses in daylight only. Ensure your windshield and headlights are clean. Don't drive when your body and/or eyes are tired. Remember that drugs, alcohol and even some medications may affect your judgement.

Thanksgiving: A Season of Good Timing and Good Practice

There can't possibly be a better time of year for the Thanksgiving season than fall. I live in one of those wonderfully moderate climates where the seasons last just long enough to make you appreciate the next one. While we enjoy mild summers and winters in our part of Texas, spring and fall are still my favorite seasons.

I love these fall days in October and November, when you need your heater during the early morning drive to work, and the air conditioning on the way home. Warm sunny days, crisp cool nights

-- it doesn't get any better than this.

Food also seems appropriate for the season. Since that first celebrated feast between the Pilgrims and the Indians nearly 400 years ago, food has been a Thanksgiving tradition. Eating has always been a tradition with me, too. There is something special about the traditional Thanksgiving meal. I can almost smell the turkey as it reaches perfection, mingled with all the fixings. M-m-m, I'm having hunger pains as I write this.

It is also near the closing of the old year. It is therefore a great time for reflection on past achievements and a good time to consider future opportunities.

Even if the current year has been a disappointment, the new year with all its promise is not far away. Soon you can embark on a new chapter of your life.

A Thankful Heart

I do have a thankful heart. Not just for the turkey and trimmings, but also for all that God has blessed me with. And there are many, many blessings to count this fall.

As a cancer survivor, I'm thankful for health. Each day as I am able to rise, work, love and play I am grateful. What a wondrous thing health is.

As I was writing this column I remembered something I had written back in 1995. That was the year before cancer, and I wrote that I was thankful for my health. But, things are different now. I know that to really appreciate anything you must lose it for awhile. Then, if you get it back, you can fully appreciate it.

I am also thankful for my family. Not only was I raised by a mother who loved me, (my dad died when I was three), but I also had other family members who cared about my upbringing and were excellent role models. I even have great in-laws.

I have also been blessed with a caring partner who for 30 years has been -- and still is -- my best friend and wife, and a 23 year-old daughter we are proud of and love dearly. It doesn't get better than this.

I have a new job that offers a great challenge and brings something new every day. I have a boss who is fun to work for and encouraging of our efforts. I have associates that I both like and respect.

I have confidence in the future and few regrets of the past. I am blessed. I have much to be thankful for.

Someone once wrote that success in life was someone to love, something meaningful to do and something to look forward to. I agree with that, but would also add that success as you grow nearer the end of this life is more. It is also the joy of looking back and knowing that you have much more to be thankful for than to regret.

This Thanksgiving season, I challenge you to reflect as the Pilgrims did nearly 400 years ago and be thankful. In the original words of Gov. William Bradford, let us "... render thanksgiving to ye Almighty God for all his blessings."

SOME BOOKS WORTH READING

Between the Covers

Rebecca Walls
Deaf Smith County Library

This is the time of year to reflect on those few brave, determined souls that made this country a possibility. On Sept. 16, 1620, a total of 135 people left England to begin a new life in a new world.

Fifty men, 20 women, 32 children and 32 ship's crew began the 66 day voyage to the new world. Everything they needed for the voyage and would need to begin a new life, as well as the family, had to fit into the allotted space assigned to each family. That allotted space was five feet in height and the area about the size of a single bed mattress.

What would you take? Coleman camping gear wasn't available. Food, enough to eat on the voyage and to survive until the first crops can be harvested, is primary. Seeds and livestock are a must to build food sources for the future. Tools that can be used to build shelter, furniture and a trade are imperative. Then there are the necessities of clothing, blankets and piece goods.

Many people wore the same clothes for the entire voyage. There was no water for bathing, and when you stood on deck to get some fresh air, the salt spray would soak your clothes and make them stiff and uncomfortable. Remaining below deck, the smell of sea sickness, unwashed bodies and livestock had to be endured.

Before the 66-day voyage was ended, everyone -- man and beast alike -- shared the same fleas and lice. There was no way to control the infestation. Because the family members would share the same bowl and drink from the same cup, if one got sick they all got sick. Living in such close quarters with everyone else, sickness was impossible to control.

Families had to share their ship's galley with the ship's cook and each other. That meant they were able to cook a hot meal only once a week.

Most of the time their daily meal would consist of stale ship's biscuits infested with bugs, cheese covered in green mold, maybe some dried fruit or vegetable and a mug of ale. There might also be something left over from the hot meal the day before. Many passengers preferred to eat at night so they couldn't see everything they were eating.

On Nov. 20, the Mayflower arrived in the new world. The ship and crew were supposed to return to England immediately, but because so many of the crew were sick, and because the settlers had no shelters built, the Mayflower remained in the harbor until spring.

Slowly and cautiously the passengers located a building sight with fresh water and wild game. They even found large baskets of corn buried under mounds of dirt. I wonder where those came from?

At night the pilgrims would return to the ship to sleep and watch the camp fires in the distance. The sound of the wild animals crying in the night was another reason the pilgrims chose the safety of the ship.

The settlers worked in shifts with their weapons close at hand to construct the large common hall. Everyone would eat and sleep in this hall until individual family homes could be constructed. Many of them were still sick and dying.

Just in case the Indians were watching, the settlers buried the dead at night so the Indians wouldn't know how few their number grew. The first major set back came when a spark from the cook fire caught the building on fire and it burned to the ground. The second common hall was built quickly and life settled into a routine.

The first settlers soon learned that their muskets were great for making a lot of noise and scaring the game away, but not accurate enough to insure that every hunting expedition would be successful. After a few hunters were caught in traps set for game by the Indians, they learned to trap. After watching these ignorant newcomers, Squanto and other Indians took pity on them and showed the settlers how to survive. At the end of the first year, 55 of the 135 Mayflower passengers and crew were still alive. Four of the survivors were women.

At the first feast of Thanksgiving, Governor Bradford invited Squanto and his chief Massasoit to share in the celebration. When the Indians arrived for the appreciation dinner there were 90 guests. Governor Bradford has to explain to Massasoit that they had not expected so many guests and he feared there was not enough food for everyone. Massasoit sent a few of his best hunters out. They returned a little later with five deer. The settlers were once again overcome with gratitude, because in England only the upper class ate deer.

What do we have to be thankful for? If you would like to know what Ted Koppel talked about before the presidential election, his book Off Camera: Private Thoughts Made Public is available.

Skeleton Key by Jane Haddam is about one friend extending a kindness to another. However, when one friend is found murdered in the front seat of the others BMW -- and when the victim is the sole heir of a multi-billionaire -- it becomes world wide news.

Now, Bennie is stuck in Connecticut with the press whipping itself into a frenzy. The local police force wants to close the case fast and Bennie is afraid that she may become the only one on the suspect list. Gregor Demarkian, a former FBI agent, is the friend that Bennie calls for help. If Gregor helps the local authorities find the real killer, Bennie may survive this ordeal.

What You Wish For by Fern Michaels is the story of Helen Ward and her dog Lucie. Helen and Lucie would have never left their home or the abusive husband had he not tried to kill them. Now with a new identity and living in an area far, far away, Helen begins a new life full of hope for the future.

Sam Tolliver, a college professor, helps restore Helen's faith in men as love starts to grow. Helen's online business is also showing signs of success. So why is Helen so overcome with the feeling of impending doom? Is her past catching up with her?

Hit List by Lawrence Block is about Keller, a regular kind of guy and solid citizen. Keller doesn't complain about having to serve on jury duty. He considers it a right and privilege. Keller collects stamps, goes to the movies, watches TV and pays his rent on time.

His work begins with a phone call from Dot. Dot will send Keller off to kill a total stranger with only a moments notice. Keller makes the arrangements, does the job and is home before the body is cold. Cool, dispassionate and efficient, Keller is the best.

Then Dot breaks her own rules and sends Keller on a job within his home base. That is when things start to go wrong. Targets die before Keller can line his sights on them. Soon Keller realizes, someone is trying to hit the hit man. God help him, he is on someone else's hit list. Could the girl he just met be involved?

Horsemen practice for National Futurity

By Dianna F. Dandridge
Hereford Brand Staff Writer

Cowboys from all over the Panhandle arrived at the Barn Church Arena Friday to practice what can truly be called a rich man's game — cutting horse trials.

Participants at Friday's event came mainly just for the practice, before they head out next week to the National Cutting Horse Futurity in Fort Worth.

Friday's gathering gave horses and riders a chance to get in a new arena and practice what they do best — cut cattle from a herd.

Ranchers, breeders and professional trainers will all have their eye on this group of 3-year-old stock as these animals represent the best of the best and what the industry is looking for in exceptional cutting horses.

"As working cowboys, we still use horses for a lot of ranch work," said Jim Codgell, participant and rancher from Tulia. Codgell's father, Billy, owned last year's National Cutting Horse Futurity winner. The senior Codgell has been breeding cutting horses for more than 40 years.

"We need a good horse to do what we do everyday. These horses are the best we have, but we have others which have similar breeding, so it gives us some idea of how they can perform," Codgell said.

Codgell said the horses participating in this type of event aren't used for a lot of ranch work and are usually protected a little more than strictly ranch horses, but they have been trained the same as working horses.

"These are pretty much the VIPs of the ranch horses," Codgell said.

The national event is open to professional trainers, non-professional trainers (those who don't train for the public) and amateur trainers. Amateur trainers are typically beginners who have earned less than $50,000 training and showing horses.

"At Fort Worth, the riders and their horses will have 2½ minutes to separate three 450-650 pound calves, one at a time from the herd. Five judges will score the horses from 60-80. Eighty is of course the best," said Jeff Matsler, a competitor who will be entering in the amateur division. "Judges will drop the high and low score, average the three in the middle and that's the score."

Most of the horses going to the National Cutting Horse Futurity are mainly American Quarter Horses, but there are a few other breeds.

"These horses have to have some cow sense, some intelligence, and a natural ability," Codgell said. "The biggest thing is the horses' athletic ability, that's what gets this kind of job done."

Breeders and buyers usually look for specific traits, such as heavier bones and longer, leaner muscles, but it always comes down to the animals' athletic ability.

A horse and rider follow one of several calves which were cut from the herd, Friday at the Barn Church Arena practice event.

"If they aren't strong athletes they won't be able to compete with some of the other animals," Codgell said. "It's not a beauty contest.

Ability always matters more than looks, but it's nice to have both."

Codgell has no doubts that what he calls a hobby is truly a rich man's game. It's nothing unusual for the animals competing in the National Cutting Horse Futurity to hit the $200,000 dollar mark.

Competitors begin looking for up and coming horses as early as two years in advance before the actual competition. The animals in this year's futurity were primed for it as far back as 1998. Next year's animals have already been chosen.

Next week's National event will include more than 1,300 horses and riders competing for the top honors.

"We do it for the prize, of course," Codgell said. "But it's always good to know you have one of the best cutting horses around."

Agriculture department releases fire ants' natural enemy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The South's newest weapon against the dreaded fire ant sounds like something out of a sci-fi thriller: An insect whose larvae eat the heads off their prey.

The Agriculture Department plans to release hundreds of thousands of tiny ant-eating flies in the South and possibly in California, where the fire ants have now spread. USDA says the gnat-like phorid flies, imported from Brazil, pose no harm to anybody or anything other than fire ants.

"It is a self-sustaining biocontrol," said Richard Brenner, who leads a USDA research team in Florida. Releasing flies at 12 sites per state could blanket the region within five years, he said.

The flies don't kill enough of the ants to destroy colonies, but they cause enough panic to keep the ants in check, Brenner said. The ants, which have an innate fear of the flies, stop foraging and flee when they spot them, giving native ants a chance to move back into the territory.

Fire ants can make life miserable for homeowners and gardeners and cause billions of dollars in damage every year to air conditioners, electrical equipment and farms, experts say. The ants can blind and even kill livestock and wildlife, and their sting is occasionally fatal to humans.

The ants, which are native to South America, have no natural enemies in the United States. Chemical treatments are only temporarily effective.

The phorid fly helps keep the ants under control in Brazil and Argentina, where infestation levels are far lower than they are in the United States.

The flies hover over ant mounds before darting down and injecting a torpedo-like egg into the ants. After the egg hatches, the maggot decapitates the ant by eating the brain and other contents of the head. The maggot later turns into a fly and the cycle is repeated.

Some scientists are skeptical that there are enough native ants in the South to compete with the fire ants, even with the help of the flies. The native ants have either been poisoned by humans or driven away by fire ants.

"You've got to have a really good competing ant population for the phorid flies to have an effect," said Brad Vinson, an entomologist at Texas A&M University.

Scientists also are studying other biological enemies of the fire ant, including a microorganism and a parasitic ant.

"Anything that will take care of these fire ants will be fine with me, as long as it doesn't hurt anything else or the environment," said Kym Bell, a Cottondale, Ala., woman whose 5-year-old daughter missed several days of kindergarten this fall because of repeated ant bites on her school playground. The stings left welts the size of a half dollar on her skin.

The Agriculture Department started studying the flies in 1993 to see if they could harm anything other than fire ants. Nothing other than the fire ants would attract them, including animal dung or human waste, so the government is confident they will be completely safe for the environment, Brenner said.

The flies were released at four sites near Gainesville, Fla., three years ago and now have spread to 700 square miles. USDA scientists are now studying the area to see how the flies have affected ant populations.

As part of the federal project, Florida's agriculture department will begin mass-rearing the flies next spring and will ship them to field sites in Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee and Texas.

The project will cost USDA about $100,000.

Discussions also are under way about releasing the flies in California, where parts of the Los Angeles area are under a federal quarantine intended to keep the ants from spreading.

Inventor gets wood from waste straw

ELLENDALE, N.D. (AP) — It was almost four years ago that the idea came, when Jordan Sand was reading a story in a farming magazine about a company turning barley into cardboard.

Sand wondered why nobody was making paper from other renewable resources, the kind that grow in the fields farmers all around him struggle to make profitable.

Curious by nature, Sand came up with a sophomore science project, one that had all the raw materials he would ever need, just outside his living room window in the 2,000 acres his family farms in south-central North Dakota.

He called it the "Rumpelstiltskin Project: Can Straw Make Paper?"

The project made Sand, now 18 and a senior, the winner of the Lemelson-MIT High School Invention Apprenticeship. The award, based at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, honors the nation's top young inventors.

Sand admits his idea is not novel. His research found that companies made paper from straw and flax in the 1930s and '40s. But few high school students pursued the idea the way he did.

He wondered if quality paper could be made from the corn, wheat, flax and straw. He even wondered about paper made from the cattails that crowd sloughs and farm field ponds.

"I'm not a huge environmentalist," Sand said. "But if this is a huge renewable resource that we aren't using to its fullest extent, I figured there is something worth looking at here."

The Lemelson program was founded by inventor Jerome Lemelson and his wife, Dorothy, to inspire a new generation of American scientists, inventors and entrepreneurs.

Sand receives no cash award or college scholarship. Instead he will choose from a series of three-week, summer mentor-ships with some of the nation's most inventive minds.

"We could easily cut a check like others do. But we wanted something different for the winners ... something hands on that they could take with them." Michael McNally, a program officer for the contest.

The judges found Sand to be resourceful and determined.

Bogged down with questions and stymied by the limited technology at home and school, Sand tracked down a wood and paper sciences professor at the University of Minnesota. Their Internet dialogue ultimately led to a three-day visit by Sand to turn pulp from straw, cattails and corn into paper.

The end result: paper-thin, tortilla-sized discs that look, feel and test like their wood-pulp cousin.

Sand claims his product breaks down faster than the wood-pulp variety, and he says it is perfect for newsprint, magazines and packing material.

"What also impressed the judges was his ability to take a local problem, one very close to him and his family, and turn it into a valuable project," McNally said.

Sand also likes the idea of saving trees in the nation's forests and helping local farmers.

"There is so much potential here," Sand said, standing in the middle of a family corn field. "The problem is that people are locked into thinking making paper has to be done one way. There is not enough thinking outside the box."

Wheat producers set symposium

Texas Wheat Producers Board has scheduled a wheat symposium and the 50th anniversary meeting of the Texas Wheat Producers Association, Nov. 30, at the Amarillo Civic Center in cooperation with the Amarillo Farm and Ranch Show, according to Wheat Producers Board Chairman, Dave Cleavinger, of Wildorado.

Representative David Swinford, House Agricultural and Livestock Committee Chairman, will discuss Texas Ag policy.

Dr. Abner Womack, director of Agricultural and Food Policy Center at Texas A&M University will be analyzing the agricultural policy

Wheat producers are invited to attend the meeting in order to increase their awareness of the many challenges facing agriculture. The Board and the Association are concerned with such issues as future farm policy, low commodity prices, foreign and domestic market development, export credit funding and trade legislation.

The symposium will offer an opportunity for producers to hear from key individuals who will be helping form the 2002 Farm Bill.

Registration will begin at 8:30 in the Grand Plaza Room, with the program beginning at 9 a.m. On site, free registration must be completed by 10 a.m. to participate in the luncheon program and hear keynote speaker.

Other speakers include Henry J. Von Tungeln, secretary/treasurer U.S. Wheat Associates; Wayne Hammon, director of governmental affairs, National Association of Wheat Growers; Dr. David Worrall, wheat breeder and co-manager of AgriPro Wheat; and Tommy Womack, president of the Texas Wheat Growers Association will chair the business portion of the event.

Coating improves cottonseed handling

TIFTON, Ga. (AP) — For more than 200 years, cotton gins have separated cotton seeds from lint that is woven into fabric. The seeds are very nutritious and are fed to livestock or crushed for oil.

However, because the seeds are fuzzy and cling like sand-spurs, they are difficult to funnel through machinery. Now researchers in Georgia and elsewhere are testing a solution — a food starch coating that glues down the fuzz so the seeds can flow freely.

Each year, modern cotton gins, still based on Eli Whitney's 1793 design, churn out about 17 million bales of lint for fabric and about 6 million tons of seed.

Cotton Incorporated, a grower-funded trade group based in Raleigh, N.C., developed the coated-seed idea in the early 1990s to increase the value of cottonseed.

Tom Wedegaertner, the group's director of cottonseed marketing and research, said the coated seeds are as nutritional as uncoated seeds. The next step may be to add vitamins, minerals and other nutrients to the coating to make dairy cows even more productive.

John Bernard, a University of Georgia dairy nutritionist, is testing the enhanced seed at the university's dairy in Tifton, about 200 miles south of Atlanta, and another scientist is testing the seed on beef cattle in Lubbock, Texas.

As the big Holsteins in Tifton munched their food — a mixture of corn, silage, hay, grains and vitamins and minerals — Bernard grabbed a handful and pointed to the white cottonseeds. Many of the black-and-white Holsteins weigh between 1,400 and 1,500 pounds.

Modern dairy cows, the products of scientific breeding programs, produce 10 to 17 1/2 gallons of milk a day. To do that, they need plenty of protein and energy.

"Cottonseed has a unique blend of fiber, energy and protein that's very desirable for feeding cattle, particularly dairy cattle," Bernard said. "It's typically economical as a feed ingredient."

But until the arrival of the coated seed, sold commercially as Easiflow Cottonseed, some dairies and smaller feed mills lacked equipment to handle it.

Three plants are now producing coated seed in Windsor, Va., Courtland, Ala., and Hollandale, Miss. The Mississippi plant will produce a batch that will be used in deer feeders in Texas, where paid deer hunts have become a big business, Wedegaertner said.

Bernard has done several studies to show that coated seed is nutritionally equivalent to regular seed, now he's studying various nutrients that could be added to the coating to increase milk production and improve cows' digestion. That work may take a couple of years.

Nutritionists like Bernard have to consider the food cows eat and also the microbial action in their digestive tracts.

"We're really trying to tweak those microbes so the cow is more efficient and gets more out of every bite she eats," he said.

SPECTACULAR SWEEPING VIEWS

Home Design for Mountain, Lake or Sea Shore

© BY W.D. FARMER, F.A.I.B.D.

Plentiful windows adorn the "view" side of this creative angular home design. All rooms have complete visibility to the wood deck and your fascinating view beyond.

A stoop entry, street side, is direct into the spacious family area of the plan. This vast sun drenched room includes a vaulted ceiling, and stone fireplace.

The kitchen is tucked away in a corner of the room, allowing the family cook to enjoy the activities going on around them as well as the view. In the opposite corner a laundry and bar area are indicated.

Twin bedrooms flank the central room, each with it's own walk in closet and bath.

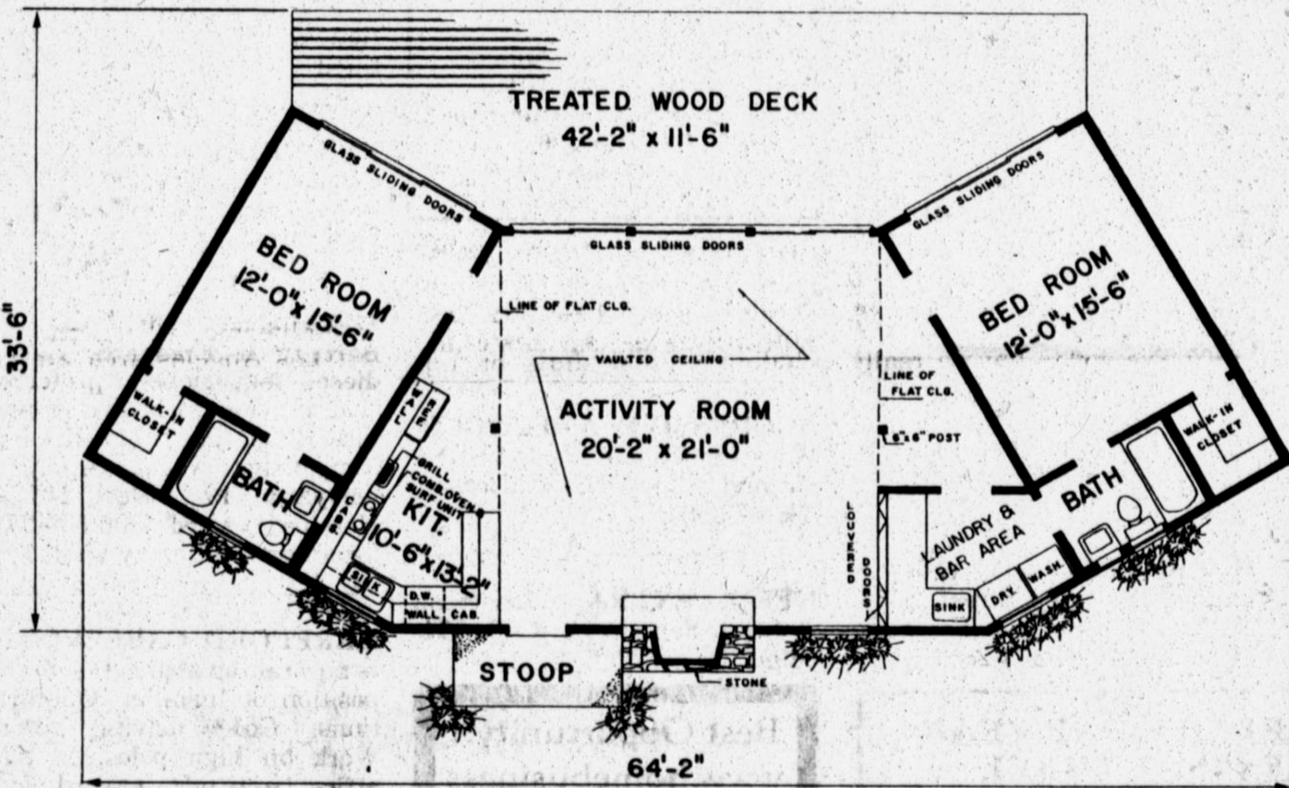

The plan is drawn with a crawl space foundation. An alternate foundation provides stairs to a basement, which can be left unfinished for future expansion, or finished with a double garage, studio, and additional bed room and bath, as shown.

The "U" shape of the home is accentuated with vertical wood siding, symmetrical window placement and a stone chimney.

Plan number 245-V includes 1,210 square feet of heated space on the main level with 778 square feet of finished basement, and 485 square feet of garage and utility area.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!
Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.
For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs."
Then remember these hints:
• Give the words the specific quality you're selling. • Use key words like location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition. • Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
• Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

There's a place for EVERYTHING in the Classifieds.

Newspaper is usually the first place people go when considering a purchase. It's their primary source of advertising information. Newspaper helps spark the local economy by putting dollars into circulation. And that's good for everyone, not just the retailer. Because a strong local economy means lower property taxes, more jobs, tax support for community services and a better place to live. Newspaper is more than just a smart place to advertise. It's an integral part of our lives.

Humble animator has made a lasting impression on many

The work of animator Chuck Jones, which includes the creation of a number of memorable characters, such as the Road Runner and Wile E. Coyote, is honored in the new Great Performances program Chuck Jones: Extremes and In-Betweens, a Life in Animation Wednesday on PBS (check local listings).

By Jacqueline Cutler
©TVData Features Syndicate

It may sound like hyperbole, but this is likely the truth: Chuck Jones was a major influence on your life.

You don't know him? "What's up, Doc?" as Bugs Bunny says.

Jones is the man behind Bugs, Daffy Duck, Pepe Le Pew, Road Runner, Wile E. Coyote and many more. He introduced millions of kids to classical music and opera: Rossini's "The William Tell Overture" and Wagner's "The Ring of the Nibelungen" were never quite the same after Bugs finished with them.

Jones was the director and animator of 300 cartoons. Some of his most famous devotees — Steven Spielberg and Whoopi Goldberg to name two — rave about his talent in the Great Performances program Chuck Jones: Extremes and In-Betweens, a Life in Animation, airing Wednesday, Nov. 22, on PBS (check local listings).

At 88, Jones continues to draw. "I can't stop," he says in a gravelly voice. "It's a terrible disease." His new cartoon, Tim Burr Wolf, will launch on the Internet in January, and all these years later, Jones can't quite get over the fact that people pay him to draw.

"The main thing is I want to have fun," he says from his southern California home. And that he does. He also has a magical quality that makes his fun contagious.

Jones says he never considered the audience. "I just ignore children," says the great-grandfather. "I'm not sure who they are; they're all different."

He still chuckles at the words of the late Theodor Geisel (a.k.a. Dr. Seuss), one of his collaborators, who once said, "I never write for children. You bear them, and I'll write for them."

Jones helped bring his friend's work to the small screen in the 1966 Christmas classic Dr. Seuss' How the Grinch Stole Christmas, but he has no insight into the upcoming live-action movie. "I wasn't invited to be involved in it," he says. "The Grinch didn't like Christmas because it was a damned nuisance, not because he was an evil man. They just decided I didn't know anything about it."

This is from a man who has won four Oscars, though he downplays the 1996 one. "It was just for Lifetime Achievement," he says.

Regardless of how much he has achieved, Jones doesn't fancy himself an artist. He cites Robert Frost's example of a young writer showing his work to Frost, who asked, "What do you do?" And the young man said, "I am a poet." And Frost said, "That's a gift word. You can't give it to yourself."

So Jones considers himself an animator. He began doodling as a boy, using the stacks of letterhead his father left around — letterhead left over from the numerous failed businesses his father had tried to launch.

Jones was part of the team that created Elmer Fudd, Porky Pig and the rest of the gang. Among the millions of kids who giggled at his cartoons are some of today's top filmmakers and actors, and they pay homage to him in the program.

"Chuck Jones is a national treasure," says Margaret Selby, director and producer. "In this country, we have to learn to honor our national treasures. That is what I hope this show has done. To make a show on Chuck is frightening and daunting, because how do you do it justice?"

Yet, she succeeds. For his part, Jones maintains, "I like everything about the documentary, except the subject matter."
