WORKING CHUTE

Holt's road to hospital was winding

By Donald Cooper
Hereford Brand Staff Writer

George W. Bush and Al Gore probably wish they could get a promotion as easily and as quickly as Ray Holt.

In June 1998, Holt was hired as a respiratory therapist at Hereford Regional Medical Center. After one day on the job, he was promoted to manager of the department.

"If hindsight is 20-20, I don't know if their eyesight was in focus," Holt said with a laugh.

As department manager — Holt said the staff is too small to call him a director — Holt oversees the work of one other full-time and five part-time therapists. The other full-time therapist is John Sappington.

"I'm pretty new as a respiratory therapist — I've only been in it since 1989," Holt said. "Before that, I managed a fertilizer company, and before that I was in farming and ranching in southwest Kansas. Before that, I was a teacher in Rochester, N.Y. Who knows? My career may be different a year from now."

Ray Holt, who has been manager of Hereford Regional Medical Center's respiratory therapy department since June 1998, was a school teacher and farmer-rancher before going into medicine.

He is originally from Moscow, a small town of about 200 in southwestern Kansas. He earned his bachelor's degree in biology, with a secondary degree in education, from Ottawa University and "got a job teaching right out of college in Rochester, N.Y."

He taught special education for two years in Rochester before moving back to Kansas, where he was in farming and ranching for 14 years.

"After I got through teaching school in Rochester, I came back to southwest Kansas — to homefolk, that's where I was born and raised — and stayed in farming and ranching for 14 years until the banker said enough is enough," he said.

"After taking a battery of tests, I learned I should take something in the health field or go back to farming and ranching. I walked into the junior college there in Liberal and the director of respiratory therapy was the first guy to catch me, so ...," Holt said.

Although he's no longer in the farming and ranching business, Holt still enjoys that life, and tells a story about one of his first patients at St. Anthony's (now Baptist St. Anthony) in Amarillo.

When he saw his patient, Holt said he "noticed he was wearing an old pair of cowboy boots that looked like they lived in the corral, all cracked and green, and he was nervous. When I drew out that needle (to draw blood for blood gas test), he kinda looked at it and I said, 'Well, it's all right, I learned my bedside manner in a working chute. If he could have flown, he would have gone out that fourth-floor window.'"

"Anytime that I get somebody I know is involved in farming and ranching, that's one of the things I bring up, you know, that I learned my bedside manner in a working chute," he said.

In looking at his job at HRMC, Holt said his department's one drawback is lack of a backup. However, that is outweighed by the advantage to the patients.

"In my department, if you need

LOCKDOWN

■ Dimmitt police search for man seen carrying a gun near school campus

By Dianna F. Dandridge
Hereford Brand Staff Writer

DIMITT — Dimmitt school officials ordered an all-school lockdown about 8:30 a.m. Friday after the school nurse at Dimmitt Middle School reported seeing a man carrying a gun across from the campus.

According to the Castro County emergency dispatcher, the caller identified the man as a light-complexioned Hispanic, about 5-9 and weighing 250 pounds. He was wearing a red baseball cap, black jacket and blue jeans and was carrying rifle.

No shots were ever fired and dispatcher said there were no reports of the man even pointing the gun towards the school.

School officials closed and locked all exterior doors as well as the internal doors. Parents were allowed to pick up students, but they were required to wait in their cars while law enforcement officers and school officials verified the adults were authorized to take the children. Cars lined the city streets, sometimes as many as 50 cars deep. Children who were not picked up remained in school and were later escorted to school buses for transportation to their homes.

Castro County Sheriff's personnel, Dimmitt police officers and Texas Department of Public Safety troopers responded to the call and cordoned off the area surrounding all Dimmitt campuses.

School officials said that classes will resume on Monday. Officers will be on hand to form a perimeter around all campuses.

As of 10 a.m. today, law enforcement departments were still looking for the suspect. Anyone with information regarding the suspect is asked to call the Dimmitt Police Department at 64-4545.

Volunteers gearing up for charity

Applications for assistance from the 2000 edition of Hereford's holiday charity, the Christmas Stocking Fund, will be accepted 9 a.m.-4 p.m. Nov. 14-16 in the lounge area of the Hereford Community Center.

Those applying for assistance will need to provide proof of residence in Deaf Smith County through a driver's license or bill receipt showing their local address.

Applicants seeking assistance with utilities or medical bills will need to provide water, gas, or electric bills and must provide account numbers.

Those asking for help with doctor bills or pharmacy bills will also need to provide account numbers.

CSF is administered by an anonymous committee of volunteers who give the needs of the young and the elderly a high priority in their decisions on assistance. With the caring and sharing help of the local community, CSF will address as many needs as possible during the 2000 campaign.

CSF extends assistance in numerous forms including help with food, utilities, medical and pharmacy bills, and clothing. All assistance, with the exception of food, is via vouchers payable to the merchants, utilities, or medical facilities cooperating with CSF. Food assistance is in the form of staple goods that are boxed and delivered.

This year's primary assistance delivery date for food boxes and assistance vouchers is Dec. 22.

The Hereford Brand will again serve as the official collection point for CSF, and will begin accepting contributions immediately after Thanksgiving.

Donations to CSF may be made in-person at the Hereford Brand, 313 N. Lee, or mailed to CSF in care of the Brand at P.O. Box 673, Hereford 79045. Those contributors who wish to remain anonymous should so designate their gifts.

The Brand periodically publishes a listing of contributors and keeps a running tally of the sum collected by CSF.

Bosnians vote is seen as showdown with nationalists

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina—Bosnians chose national and regional leaders Saturday in an electoral showdown between reformers and the hard-line, ethnically based parties that led the country to war eight years ago. After Balkan neighbors Yugoslavia and Croatia shed their war-time leaderships, international administrators have been urging Bosnians to follow suit and elect pro-democracy candidates. The officials hope will mend the nation's ethnic divisions. Bosnia's Serbs, Muslims and Croats started lining up before the 3,600 polling stations around the country opened at 7 a.m. The first official results were expected Sunday. There are 2.5 million registered voters. Final, official results could take weeks. The main issue is whether Bosnians will turn to new leaders or cling to ethnically oriented parties that have held power since the start of a 3½-year war in 1992.

Five Palestinians, Israeli killed in Mideast violence

JERUSALEM—Violent clashes in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip claimed the lives of five Palestinians and an Israeli soldier, as Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat pressed his bid for U.N. protection for his people, despite U.S. and Israeli opposition. Fears of an escalation in the fighting hung over preparations for talks Sunday between President Clinton and Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak at the White House.

Rebels, government agree to Sierra Leone cease-fire

ABUJA, Nigeria — A cease-fire reached in Sierra Leone was in doubt Saturday after a rebel leader said that the deal was no guarantee of an end to the West African nation's nine-year civil war. Sierra Leone's government and leaders of the brutal rebel movement agreed Friday to a 30-day cease-fire, and for U.N. peacekeepers to deploy in rebel territory, including lucrative diamond mines.

Dems hope some electors will bolt

NEW YORK (AP) — In elections past, the occasional renegade in the Electoral College broke with his state and voted his desire — George Wallace got a vote that way in 1968. Ronald Reagan did in 1976, even Lloyd Bentsen got one in '88.

This time, with the final electoral margin potentially just a few votes, a so-called "faithless elector" or three could swing the election.

So some Democrats are speaking out to encourage Bush-pledged electors to switch their votes in the Electoral College to the nation's apparent popular-vote winner, Al Gore. "Do what's right for the country, and not what's right for a candidate," said Pennsylvania Democratic state Rep. T.J. Rooney. "The process is arcane, it's not based upon the premise our country is founded on."

In Florida, especially, electors should re-examine the will of the people considering the problems that have surfaced, said Wisconsin Democratic state Sen. Bob Jauch.

But despite strong words from these and other Democrats, none said they are actively seeking out GOP electors to change their vote.

"I would hope others are out there doing God's work," said Rooney, who worked on behalf of Gore in Pennsylvania.

The Gore campaign in Nashville said it was closing for the Veterans Day holiday and couldn't answer questions. And a prominent Florida Democrat said in no uncertain terms that party leaders were not encouraging renegades.

Republicans scoff at the suggestion.

"It's a real sham," said Cindy Costa, a Republican elector from South Carolina. "It's not going to happen. (Republicans) elect people they know are very committed to the philosophy and ideology of the Republican Party."

The political parties each choose a slate of electors — a total of 538, one for each senator and for each House member, so bigger states get more (like Florida, with 25 electors) and smaller ones less (like South Carolina, with eight).

When one candidate wins that state's popular vote, their party's electors are then certified. (Except for Maine and Nebraska, which allocate electors depending on the overall popular vote and votes within congressional districts).

On Dec. 18, the electors will gather in their individual states and cast their votes. Only 26 states require electors to vote for the candidate they're pledged to — the other 24 and the District of Columbia could, in theory, switch.

a respiratory therapist, you've got a top-notch one. I've worked really hard to make sure that the therapists that the patients have are highly skilled," Holt said.

"I think you have to be more skilled in a small hospital than you do in the large ones because you don't have that backup. You don't have that therapist that you can turn around and look at every once and awhile. It's all on your shoulders," he said.

"The department is busy. We're seeing more asthma than when I first came here. I think a lot more people are getting involved with respiratory care ..."

I think a lot more people are getting involved with respiratory care, as far as the doctors are having us evaluate and assess. It's also seasonal. We haven't seen a real influx yet, but anytime the flu season comes along" the number of patients jumps, he said.

The normal respiratory problems that accompany the flu season are aggravated by the air pollution emanating from the feedyards that surround Hereford.

That (feedyard pollution) is a never-ending problem for a community like Hereford. You have the pollution from the dust and the dirt. It's certainly a negative for our community, I think. But you try to take care of it as best you can," Holt said. "It's hard to keep that balance when you know that all that economy is coming from the feedlots and then look at the negativity of the air pollution ..."

The feedyard pollution is particularly severe among children and the elderly, "especially if they have something else going on, like they're long-term smokers," he said.

"My major goal when I came here, and that thankfully I have reached, was to bring respiratory skills and respiratory therapists that have the ability to operate in multi-faceted situation, which is a small hospital," Holt said.

"We do OB, we do cardiac, we do ventilator, we do floor therapy — anything that has to do with breathing. From trauma on down, we're involved with it."

"It's been good for my career that I was doing other things before I got into the medical field. It gives you an idea that you're part of a team and not just there to carry out orders. You have input and that's what I try to emphasize with my fellow staffers. Their knowledge and information is valuable for the care of the patients," he said.

RAY HOLT

"I think a lot more people are getting involved with respiratory care ..."

Groups voice anger over plans to build World War II monument on the National Mall in Washington, D.C.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opponents of placing a World War II memorial on the National Mall aimed their fire Friday at a plan to build two helicopter pads on the Washington Monument grounds.

The proposed helicopter pads would replace those now on the site near the Lincoln Memorial that is to be occupied by the new monument. The pads are used for arrivals and departures of domestic and foreign VIPs.

"First they take the Lincoln Memorial. Next they take the Washington Monument," Judy Scott Feldman, co-chair of the National Coalition to Save our Mall, told reporters and about 30 sympathizers gathered to protest the plans Friday.

Her group contends the proposed World War II monument would hinder views of both the Lincoln Memorial and the Washington Monument.

The protest took place on the eve of today's ceremonial groundbreaking for the World War II Memorial, scheduled to coincide with Veterans Day. Despite the groundbreaking, Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt will not issue a building permit until the National Capital Planning Commission rules on some elements of the design at a meeting Dec. 14, said Babbitt spokesman John Wright.

Lawyer Andrea C. Ferster has filed suit in Washington's Federal District Court on behalf of the opponents of the site, seeking an injunction to block the start of work scheduled for next spring.

Joseph M. Lawler, regional director of the National Park Service, has said helicopter arrivals and departures would not interfere with visitors to the new World War II memorial.

In addition, "We have determined that the installation of two landing pads and connecting walkway to the Washington Monument grounds will have no adverse effects on the National Register qualities of the Washington Monument grounds," he wrote in a letter Nov. 2 to the city's Historic Preservation Office.

Cold War vets get recognition

At a time when the veterans of the "forgotten war" in Korea are finally getting recognition for their service, where thousands of people daily stop and reflect at the Vietnam War Memorial in Washington, D.C., the veterans of the Cold War also are receiving notice from their country.

In 1998, the U.S. defense secretary approved awarding Cold War Recognition Certificates to all members of the armed forces, including the National Guard and reserves, and qualified government civilian personnel who served the nation during the Cold War era, Sept. 2, 1945-Dec. 26, 1991.

The applicants must certify their service was "faithful and honorable," and they also must provide documentation that shows they served during the Cold War era. For deceased veterans, the certificate may be awarded to relatives who apply.

The certificate may be requested by use of U.S. or international forms found at the Army's Cold War webpage, <http://coldwar.army.mil>. It is a secure site, but anyone who doesn't feel comfortable providing a Social Security number online can obtain the form by mail.

A request must contain the words "I certify that my service was honorable and faithful," or it will be rejected.

Supporting documentation, which must be submitted with the request, includes military service number, foreign service number or Social Security number, a copy of a DD-214, which is the military service record, or a DD-215, which is a corrected version of that document. National Guard members should provide the statement of service equivalent, NGB Form 22.

The request should be sent to:

CDR, PERSCOM
Cold War Recognition,
Hoffmann II
Attn. TAPC-CWRS, 3N45
200 Stovall St.

Alexandria, VA 22332-0473.
Applications for the Cold War certificate also can be obtained through U.S. Rep. Larry Combest's office, according to a spokeswoman for the 19th District representative.

For more information, contact one of Combest's offices or visit the Combest website, <http://www.house.gov/combest/kvets.htm>.

Deaf Smith County veterans should contact Jessica Detten in Combest's Amarillo office, 5809 S. Western, No. 205, Amarillo 79110. For more information, call Jessica Detten at 353-3945.

NASA engineer set as special lecturer

AMARILLO — An engineer in the space program whose best-selling autobiography was the basis of a popular movie will be the first speaker in the 9th Annual Distinguished Lecture Series at Amarillo College.

Homer Hickam Jr., a former NASA engineer and author of Rocket Boys: A Memoir, will speak at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 20 at the Amarillo Civic Center Grand Plaza, 4th and Buchanan.

Tickets for the lecture series go on sale Wednesday at Amarillo College's Washington Street Campus, West Campus, Technical Center Campus and Dumas Campus in the student service centers. Tickets also are available at all Bank of America locations.

Tickets are $50 for the reception and lecture, and $15 for the lecture only. AC students can get lecture tickets for $7. Co-sponsored by the AC Student Government Association and Bank of America, the proceeds fund scholarships for AC students.

Hickam grew up in Coalwood, W. Va., where the story of his youth was depicted in the book and movie version of "October Sky." He earned a bachelor's degree in industrial engineering from Virginia Tech and worked as the payload training chief for NASA.

EDITORIAL

Networks stumbled

Getting there “fustest with the mostest,” as Confederate Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest said, might be a good idea for battle, but it's not always a good idea for television networks.

The TV networks found this out to their chagrin Tuesday night when they announced Florida had gone for Democrat Al Gore in the presidential election, only to have to pull back that projection and declare the race too close to call.

The networks would later announce that Republican George W. Bush had won Florida — only to have to back off again and declare the race undecided.

The mistakes by the networks, which make their projections based on exit polls conducted by Voter News Service, are largely their own fault.

We've all seen the TV spots, where an anchor person announces his or her network (or local station) was the first to report a breaking news story. This desire to always be first is driven by ratings, which determine advertising revenue.

In striving to always be first, the media are failing to adhere to the first rule of journalism, which says to be sure of your facts before going with a story.

Sometimes it's better to be second with the correct information than to be first and have to eat crow.

System still works

We predict that Texas Gov. George W. Bush will rightly assume his place as the 43rd president of the United States when 6 million Florida ballots and absentee votes are canvassed for the final time, certified and announced to the nation no later than Nov. 17, according to the most recent estimates afforded by the state's election officials.

By Friday, fewer than 400 votes separated Bush and Vice President Al Gore from 25 electoral votes needed to secure the presidency — the furor over which has heightened the nation's interest in this Election 2000 race and further honed the timeless idiom that “every vote counts.”

That a recount was made necessary in this stunningly close race between Bush and Gore, is a shining example of the world's oldest democracy in progress and also a telling statement for two candidates who, for whatever reasons, had difficulty in assimilating sweeping favor with the nation's electorate.

Neither candidate will enjoy an absolute mandate, no matter who wins the presidency. Ironically, Gore may win the popular vote, but his harvest of electoral votes didn't include any from his own home state of Tennessee. Bush is wearing a shiner, too, sweating out the electoral vote from a state that should have been delivered to him on a silver platter by his brother, Florida Gov. Jeb Bush.

But while it is certainly the candidates' right to ask for recounts in states where voting margins were inordinately slight, both candidates should be prepared to endorse and abide by the results of those recounts without challenge of the integrity of state election codes, or the united voice represented by the Electoral College.

To do otherwise would only erode confidence in an election system that, despite some imperfections, has withstood all the just and legal tests thrown before it.

Who won, who lost?

Donald Cooper

Election 2000 produced one clear winner in the presidential election as well as a clear loser and potential loser.

The loser is Republican nominee George W. Bush, who will be moving into the White House through the back door.

Bush, who will become the first son of a president since John Quincy Adams in 1824 to be elected president, lost the popular vote to Democratic nominee Al Gore, although he becomes president because of his narrow victory in the Electoral College.

When he takes office Jan. 20, 2001, Bush will find himself in a weak position politically because he was not the voters' first choice for president. This is ironic because Republicans have been contending for eight years that Democrat Bill Clinton lacked the “mandate” to govern because he failed to capture a majority vote in 1992 and 1996, although Clinton did win landslides in the Electoral College.

Bush also is a loser because his name on the ballot didn't help out Republican candidates in the U.S. House and Senate. Although the Republicans retained control of the House, their narrow majority grew even more slim. In the Senate, the GOP saw a 54-46 margin erased, with both parties holding 50 seats.

What this means is Bush will not be able to point to a popular vote victory or a convincing Electoral College victory in persuading members of Congress to accept his agenda instead of theirs.

And, he will have to govern under the shadow of Al Gore, the choice of the most voters. However, Gore can come out a big loser if he takes his campaign into the courts.

As for a winner in the election, I believe it was the U.S. Constitution.

Before this election, the Electoral College failed on only two occasions to produce a winner. When this happens, the Constitution dictates that the election of the president be decided by the House of Representatives.

In 1800, neither Thomas Jefferson nor

Hereford BRAND, November 11, 2000

Aaron Burr received a majority in the Electoral College and the House elected Jefferson president.

The House also decided the election of 1824. Although Andrew Jackson won the popular vote and the electoral vote, he did not have a majority, so it was thrown into the House, which elected John Quincy Adams.

In 1876, Republican nominee Rutherford B. Hayes thought he had lost the election to Democrat Samuel Tilden. However, some of the Southern states, among them Florida, submitted two sets of electoral votes. An electoral commission, appointed by Congress and consisting of eight Republicans and seven Democrats, awarded all disputed votes to Hayes, allowing him to become president by one electoral vote.

In 1888, President Grover Cleveland lost re-election to Republican challenger Benjamin Harrison, even though his popular vote total was larger. Cleveland did revenge in 1892, when he defeated Harrison, both in the popular vote and in the Electoral College.

So, while the process might be messy, it worked and produced a clear winner: the U.S. Constitution, which established the procedures that ensure a smooth transition of power from one administration to another.

George W. Bush says he got the idea to run for president after an aide told him in the summer of 1997 that he was leading in the polls.

More than three years later, he was briefly — and prematurely — named the winner early Wednesday based on the TV networks' interpretation of exit polls. They later withdrew the projections as Florida announced a recount of its very close vote.

In between, there was a steady avalanche of polls, and no matter whether Republican Bush or Democrat Al Gore is the eventual winner, this presidential campaign and much of the media coverage of it was heavily influenced by that flood of polls.

“The campaign coverage was very poll-driven,” said Tom Rosenstiel, director of the Project for Excellence in Journalism, noting that is often the case in presidential elections.

“The press sees everything through the prism of who's ahead or who's behind,” he said. “The polls create the entire context. If a candidate is ahead and his plane gets a flat tire then it's not a story, if you're behind and your plane gets a flat tire it becomes a metaphor for your predicament.”

For much of 2000, Bush could do no wrong in the polls. The public saw him as a stronger leader than Gore, more likable, with new ideas and strong on issues that Gore thought would be his strong points like education and even the economy.

Gore struggled in the polls and in the media coverage, which alternately described him both as too stiff and too flexible, saying he frequently changed his style — both personally and on the campaign trail.

“The polls set the stage for who's ahead and who's behind and that's where all the coverage fits in,” said Stephen Hess of the Brookings Institution.

One of the frequent complaints from pollsters is how reporters use selected poll results to highlight a story angle, rather than looking more broadly at a poll's findings in context. With the high number of polls this year, it wasn't hard to find a poll number to support almost any argument.

Andrew Kohut, director of the Pew Research Center for the People & the Press, argues the problem is not with the polls, but with the way they're used by the media. He says polls are less often used to show how people feel, but are used to develop a story line in what he calls a “tabloid form of reporting politics.”

After the Democratic National Convention, Gore kissed his wife passionately, was described by friends and family as a solid citizen and gave a thorough speech explaining his stand on the issues.

He increased his standing in the polls and the coverage of Gore for the next month seemed to focus on his positives. Suddenly the Democrat was described as more likable and more of a leader. Bush, who was squabbling about different debate formats and was caught making uncomplimentary comments about a reporter, couldn't seem to do anything right — at least as far as the news coverage indicated.

Then the candidates participated in the three debates and Gore modified his personality — first being too aggressive to suit many people, then too passive and finally “just right” — in the Goldilocks analogy used by Gore.

The attention given to numerous tracking polls that started in September and early October began to dominate the coverage, and some complain that they drowned out more thorough polls that examine why people support the candidates and what they want in the campaign.

Rosenstiel said some of the tracking polls are “quick and dirty polls done each night that usually don't ask underlying questions about why people are voting the way they are.”

“They ask who you are, are you a likely voter and which way are you leaning?” he

The agony of 'what ifs'

Walter R. Mears

For Al Gore or George W. Bush, the agony of “what ifs,” of second-guessers and hindsight await the loser in the presidential election so narrow that any of dozens of campaign calculations could have been the one that cost the White House.

So it was for Richard M. Nixon and Hubert H. Humphrey after their close defeats.

If, for example, Nixon hadn't worn himself out keeping an unwise pledge to campaign in all 50 states in 1960, while John F. Kennedy went where the electoral votes were. It was a mistake Nixon did not repeat when he won eight years later.

And for Humphrey, if he had found a way as vice president to declare independence from President Johnson in 1968 to avoid being overridden when he suggested he might part, even slightly, with the administration's war policy in Vietnam.

Both men reflected on their defeats in their memoirs, in words that etched the pain of losing so narrowly.

With the 2000 election hanging on a recount of the frail thread of votes by which Bush leads in Florida, where 25 electoral votes will elect a president, and with Gore narrowly leading in the national popular vote, the second guessing isn't awaiting the outcome.

Bush's spokeswoman Karen Hughes, asked Wednesday whether he now wishes he had spent more time campaigning in Florida, she said, “I'm sure there is plenty of time for that.”

In Gore's case, the chorus of television talkers was appraising why he lost early Wednesday, before their networks decided that maybe he hadn't lost at all, that Florida was too close not to rescind the call they already had made for Bush.

Nixon, who defeated Humphrey in 1968, recounted some of his own second guessing in his campaign diary of 1972 — an election he won by a landslide for the term he had to resign in Watergate.

“If we had known then as much about how to campaign, etc., as we know now, we probably would have won in 1960,” he wrote.

In his memoirs, Nixon recounted his version of the day after Kennedy beat him by about 0.2 percent of the popular vote, of being told of “massive vote frauds in Chicago and Texas.”

“We had made a serious mistake in not having taken precautions against such a situation and it was too late now,” he wrote. He said a full recount could have taken up to half a year. “I could not subject the country to such a situation,” he said.

Besides, what if he lost anyhow? “Charges of sore loser would follow me through history and remove any possibility of a further political career.”

Nixon said he had underestimated the new power of television in the 1960 campaign, complained that the national press had been slanted against him, and said that “I should have anticipated what was coming” in Kennedy campaign hard ball, which he called dirty tricks.

“I vowed that I would never again enter an election at a disadvantage by being vulnerable to them — or anyone — on the level of political tactics,” he wrote.

He kept that vow. The dirty tricks of 1972 were the work of his people.

That was Nixon's landslide year. His close call was over Humphrey, by 0.7 percent of the vote, in 1968, making it Humphrey's turn to reflect on what almost was.

“We have come so far so fast,” Humphrey wrote of his election day musings in his memoir, “The Education of a Public Man.”

“No, we aren't,” he said he'd told himself. “Stop thinking that. I am so tired again.”

And later that day:

“Vietnam is a mess ... Wonder why Johnson shot me down when I said that troops would be withdrawn in 1969. Ruined my credibility. Made me look like a damn fool. ...”

Later still, “I wonder if I should have blown the whistle on Anna Chennault and Nixon.” That was the allegation that Nixon knew his allies were telling the South Vietnamese to hold tough about peace talks until after the election because they'd be in better bargaining shape with a Republican president.

Then the vote. “We're losing. We're losing. It's gone.”

The morning after. Conceding. “Congratulations, Dick. Mr. President. ... He's gracious. That's about it. To lose to Nixon. Ye Gods. ...”

“We could have won it. We should have won it. ... There are some who didn't produce ... Got to hide the bitterness.”

Humphrey got past it, returning in 1970 to the Senate, where he served until his death in 1978. He campaigned, futilely, for the 1972 Democratic presidential nomination.

After the unyielding intensity of a presidential campaign, the scars of the loser do not soon fade. And the scars never cut deeper than when the loss is so narrow as this one.

Party was Class A affair

Dear Editor:

This letter is a little late in arriving, but having arrived, it speaks about a party — a wonderful and fun-filled evening attended by my family at the old Cardinals building.

This party, presented by the Genesis Church on Halloween night, was a Class A affair. The work and effort put into this event was evident at every turn. There were game booths, food, candy prizes and the outstanding life-size puppet shows, set to Christian music, captured every child's attention and imagination.

I applaud Genesis Church for its effort. Halloween has become such a controversial celebration among the local churches. I know the meaning behind this night borders on the dark side. I also know that many people feel we are actually celebrating something evil. Yet, while some churches preach against this night and turn their back on everything and everybody, one church — Genesis Church — saw only opportunity and came to battle this night of evil in a positive and true Christian form.

The church came to do God's work in tremendous form and dispelled any chance for our youngsters to be led astray by surrounding them with love, fellowship and great Christian messages. It was certainly a spirit-lifting experience to witness so many of our youth run around in an excited frenzy, not able to decide which game to play next or which person to hug attending these games.

It is a joy and a duty for me to write this letter for that night this individual was touched at the very core of his soul.

Thank you, Genesis Church.

What's better than first snowfall?

The first snowfall. Can anything be better?

Early this week I awoke to hear the soft sigh of snowflakes gently brushing the windowpane. The quiet whispers grew faint as each new flake added to the downy like drifts.

Glowing red numerals on the bedside clock showed 2:37. The tiny dot in the lower left corner indicated a wee morning hour.

In a semi-somnambulist state, I wondered if it was really time for the first white blanket of winter. The leaves on the old elms in my front yard are still green. The water cooler is still in the dining room window. With a rush of cold north wind, I realize, yes, it is time for the first snow and it is past time for me to get the cooler out of the window.

For years, living in southeast Texas and Louisiana, I missed the first snowfall and all the accompanying excitement. Last year I took little pleasure in the first snow as I was making a mad dash through the snow to get back to a Lubbock hospital for Joshua's pending surgery.

But this year, I took time to enjoy it.

In the sighing quiet of the early morning snow I heard the regular breathing and somewhat less than peaceful tones of Badger's snoring. Her years are catching up with her now and she no longer pays much attention as the snows blow in. She'll be anxious to go play in it in the morning and hurt like all get out when I finally make her come in, but she'll still make a point of rolling the puppy — which stands taller than she does — in the highest drift.

I know the heater is on, but still the house is cold and it's a cold that only penetrates the walls of an old house after a blanket of white covers the roof and mini-drifts block the wind from whistling in under the wooden window sashes. It's cold, but for awhile the drifts block the drafts. The coating of white insulates us from the normal sounds emanating from the road and nearby lilac bushes. The birds are huddled in their nests and the family of feral cats, living under the house have all nestled in. Last night's leftover popcorn will provide a good breakfast for our feathered friends. I've got to remember to set out a bowl of warm milk and bread in the morning. The cats will be cold and in need of something warm.

I could get up and make a pot of coffee, but the warmth and weight of the quilts beckons me to linger, just a while yet. There will be time for coffee later in the morning. With a shrug I pull the blanket up and forget about the coffee.

Somewhere in the house a radio is playing. I guess one of the kids left it on as they went to sleep. I can faintly hear the notes, but not clearly enough to make out what is playing.

The heater, apparently becoming aware of the cold, flares up, briefly wakening Badger. She woofs and gets up on the bed, probably more for the comfort than the company, but she knows she's welcome. Almost instantly her even breathing tells me she's asleep again. The heater fan begins to blow the warmed air through the vents and I burrow farther into the quilts.

Gone are the days when the first snow meant listening eagerly to see if our school was on the "closed" list. Making a snow man no longer holds my interest. I know the kids will be out as soon as possible, rolling the three big balls and stacking them one on top of another. I'm sure I can afford a couple of buttons for eyes and a carrot for the nose.

They'll come in, all red and glowing from the cold. Like always, there will be a pot of soup on the stove. The hot broth will thaw them from the inside and the noodles and vegetables will fill the hollow spot left from the aching cold.

As sleep once again draws me farther away from the realities of the everyday world, I see the clock registers only 2:51. There will be time to watch the dogs and the kids later in the day.

For now, I'll practice my wildlife imitation and see how well I do at the hibernating thing. The drifting snow and blowing wind cannot touch me now. I'm warm and cozy under the quilts. Badger's deep snores lull me back to sleep.

It's time for the first snow. It's time for the needed rest, provided only by a winter snowstorm. It's time to let the summer go. Rejuvenation can't come without the cold of winter.

Yes, it's time for the first snowfall.

said. Some of the tracking polls include a substantial amount of material about voters' motivations in their daily tracking. But he said the tracking polls are seen more as a measure of the horse race.

While more thorough polls were taken that examine issues and voter motivation during this period, Rosenstiel said he fears they get drowned out by the flood of tracking polls and the horse race.

"I think it's led to a shallower understanding of what the election means to people," he said. "If we don't understand the meaning of the election, it will make it harder for whoever finally wins to govern."

Texas turnout put at 51 percent

Pauline Word

AUSTIN — Fifty-one percent of registered voters turned out Nov. 7 to cast ballots in the general election. Nearly 6.4 million Texans voted on election day and another 2.5 million cast ballots during the early voting period.

Terry County had the highest turnout with 76 percent or 6,209 of the 8,123 registered voters casting ballots. Loving County followed with 74 percent or 156 voters out of 211 registered.

The lowest turnout was in Dimmitt County, which trailed the rest of the state but nearly 12 percent. Only 19 percent of that county's 8,311 registered voters voted in the election.

In the presidential election Gov. George W. Bush captured 59 percent of the vote statewide to Vice President Al Gore's 38 percent. Green Party candidate Ralph Nader garnered nearly 2 percent of the Texas vote.

Texans overwhelming re-elected Republican U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison. She received 65 percent of the vote to Democratic challenger Gene Kelly's 32 percent.

Democrats came out on top in Texas' 30 congressional district races with all incumbents of both parties winning re-election. Texas has 17 Democrats and 13 Republicans in the U.S. House of Representatives.

Republicans retained two of the three seats on the Texas Railroad Commission. Commissioner Charles R. Matthews was re-elected and voters affirmed Gov. Bush appointee Chairman Michael L. Williams, who stepped into the position in December 1998 to fill the unexpired term of Carole Keeton Rylander, who vacated to become comptroller.

The three Republican incumbent Texas Supreme Court Justices Nathan Hecht, Priscilla Owen and Al Gonzales also kept their seats on the nine-member court.

Two Republicans, incumbent David Bradley and newcomer Cynthia A. Thornton, were elected to District 7 and District 10 respectively on the State Board of Education. District 10 Democrat Will Davis did not seek re-election. When the new term begins in January 2001, the board will be controlled by 10 Republicans and five Democrats.

The makeup of the Texas Senate remained the same with all incumbents winning re-election.

In the Texas House of Representatives, Republicans gained one seat, District 11.

In District 18, which covers part of East Texas, Democratic incumbent Rep. Dan Ellis earned 51 percent of the vote to fend off Republican challenger Ben Bius. The longtime Democratic district became a hotly contested race in Polk County. Only a week before the election, a state judge cleared the way for a group of recreational vehicle owners to vote in Polk County. The predominantly Republican RV owners live part of the year near Lake Livingston and claim their vehicles as residences.

■ Hereford High clips Eagles for ninth straight win and second straight outright district title

By Jeff Blackmon

Hereford Brand Sports Editor

The Hereford Whitefaces and Canyon High Eagles have both known for a couple of weeks now that they are headed to the Class 4A playoffs, so one would expect Friday night's showdown to be kind of an easy warm-up game to get both teams ready for their playoff runs.

Instead, the Canyon-Hereford rivalry remained rabid, with both teams bashing their brains out for district bragging rights with the Whitefaces coming out on top 32-22 to clinch their second District 3-4A title in a row.

"It was a fun game," Hereford head coach Craig Yenzler said. "You can throw out the records and everything on paper."

"It comes down to their kids wanting to beat us, and our kids wanting to beat them," Yenzler said.

The last two games for the Whitefaces (9-1, 7-0) have ended with the exact same score, 32-22, and Yenzler said they have had similar results for his team. He said Dumas and Canyon (6-4, 5-2) both have been games that have made them better, and that is exactly what the Whitefaces need going into the playoffs against Wolfforth Friendship (8-2, 6-1).

"You couldn't have written a better script for us as we head into the playoffs," Yenzler said. "The last two weeks we have raised our level of play and had some important team building."

"You want your team to get better with every part of the season including pre-season, district season and post season, and I think we have done that," Yenzler said.

Much of the team's building has come on the banged up defensive side of the ball. After losing senior rover Rick Bodayo for the year, senior noseguard Kris Hammerbeck

Crowd big factor for Aggies

■ Texas A&M hosting nation's number one team this afternoon

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas A&M fans will attempt to set a world record for stadium sound volume when No. 1 Oklahoma comes to town Saturday.

It is up to the Aggies to give them something to cheer about.

"It's kind of hard to hold the emotions down right now," said fullback Ja'Mar Toombs, who admits he might be inclined to yell a little himself.

Come kickoff, Toombs and the rest of the 23rd-ranked Aggies won't be holding anything back. Neither will the mega-loud Kyle Field faithful, who are expected to number 86,000-plus, becoming the largest crowd ever to see a football game in Texas.

Mile High Stadium in Denver claims the record of 128.7 decibels during a game between the Denver Broncos and New England Patriots on Oct. 1.

Oklahoma coach Bob Stoops plans on being ready for everything, even the Aggies' fans. The Sooners practiced all week to the blare of Aggie songs.

"I don't know what they are, but I'll know by the end of the week," Stoops said.

The Aggies will turn up the heat as high as possible. It's their chance to shine on a national stage against a team that handed them their third worst loss in school history, 51-6 last year.

A victory would keep the Aggies (7-2, 5-1) in the race for the Big 12 championship.

The Sooners (8-0, 5-0) have even bigger stakes. They are trying to win their first national championship since 1985 and help quarterback Josh Heupel take another step toward the Heisman Trophy.

"We've proven, I believe, through this year's play that we're not a fragile team, that we've been able to handle the difficult situations," Stoops said. "There's no way that A&M can be more motivated than us. We've got a lot here on the line."

Heupel, who directed the win over the Aggies in Norman last year, has been unstoppable this season. He ranks fourth nationally in passing and total offense and the Sooners offense leads the nation in scoring at 45.9 points per game.

"Pressure is being 0-8," Heupel said. "That's pressure. It better be fun. Noise after a certain level is just noise. There comes a point when you can't hear, whether that's 50,000 fans or 80,000 fans."

The Aggies' Wrecking Crew defense expects to do better than a

Fall Flight Index being dropped over accuracy, misuse problems

While duck hunting has been much-improved the last couple of seasons, it still hasn't equaled the salad days of the late 1960s and early 1970s for some time, on the local scene or nation-wide.

The Fall Flight Index issued by the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service for 2000 projected 90 million ducks, down 13 percent from a projection of 105 million in 1999.

In spite of predictions for a record fall flight for the 1999-2000 season, duck harvest dropped seven percent last year from the 1998-99 season, and duck harvest was 15,117,208, down from the record level in 1998 of 16,360,528.

U.S. duck hunters spent an average of nine days in the field last season and averaged harvesting 10 ducks for the season, down eight percent from the previous season.

The Delta Waterfowl Foundation, a non-profit organization that works toward a goal of a sustainable North American waterfowl population for the use and enjoyment of future generations, has long maintained that the Fall Flight Index prompts false hope among duck hunting enthusiasts who tend to believe the duck numbers are much higher than they actually are.

Evidently, Delta struck a nerve with the F&WS. The Service has announced that it will be discontinuing the use of the current Fall Flight Index, admitting that its usefulness has been called into question.

Delta has pointed out, particularly in the past few seasons when duck numbers were thought to be high, but hunter success wasn't, that the Fall Flight Index is merely that—a comparison of one year to another, and not an estimate of actual duck numbers.

The Sportsman's Den

By Jim Steiert

The usefulness of this number, Delta has maintained, is only in its measure of relative change.

Says Delta: "Don't look for 90 million ducks to darken the skies, they don't exist. If we look to the spring breeding number of 41.8 million, the result of an actual count, and apply a reasonable growth rate, it reflects that the fall flight of ducks in actual numbers is in the 50-60 million range."

"High hunter expectations from misuse of the Fall Flight Index are creating tension and causing loss of credibility of waterfowl management. Look to see fewer ducks this year than what you would have seen in 1999."

Delta urged the Fish & Wildlife Service to come up with "a more biologically-based and reliable way to give duck hunters an idea of what to expect."

Lloyd Jones, vice president of Delta Waterfowl, says the Fall Flight Index was being "grossly misrepresented, even by some in the waterfowling community," and he hails the F&WS decision to abandon the Fall Flight Index as "a bold and important move on behalf of duck hunters by committing to change the current forecast process."

According to Jones, there currently are not 105 million, or even 90 million ducks, and the Fall Flight Index "was misleading duck hunters, creating expectations that were unrealistic and eroding duck hunter confidence in waterfowl managers...and needed to be changed."

The Fish & Wildlife Service is now working on alternatives to the Fall Flight Index. Among the possibilities is an annual production forecast.

Last season was certainly one of mixed results for local waterfowl hunters, who had some early chances at ducks and geese, but who were disappointed by the lack of waterfowl late in the season, despite available water.

Nation-wide, mallards were the top duck in the bag of sportsmen for the 1999-2000 season, with a take of just over 5.5 million. Mallards were followed in order by greenwing teal, gadwall, wood ducks, bluewing teal, widgeon, shovelers, pintail, and ringnecks.

For the 1999-2000 season the Canada goose harvest was down a bit from the previous year at just-under 1.9 million, which ranked it the fourth-highest harvest of Canada geese on record.

Snow and blue goose harvest during the regular season was 957,332, the second-highest on record.

The 1999 duck harvest ranked the fifth-highest since 1961.

year ago.

"A lot of people say they're playing like the St. Louis Rams, scoring 45 points a game," A&M linebacker Roylin Bradley said. "This is going to be up to our defense to go out and put pressure on the quarterback, stop their offense and keep our offense on the field."

"He's probably one of the best quarterbacks we've faced in a while. We have respect for him but we don't fear him."

The Aggies are sixth nationally in points allowed—13.1 per game—and 16th in total defense.

The Aggies have won 24 of their last 25 games in Kyle Field, including an upset of Nebraska in 1998 en route to the Big 12 title and a victory over then-No. 10 ranked Kansas State this season.

"Kyle field has always been magical for us," Toombs said. "I guess when we beat a top team it's like we pulled off a magic trick, but this feels like the '98 game (against Nebraska)," Toombs said. "Time can't go any faster, because I can't wait to see what we're going to do to have a chance to beat those guys."

Man tip Spurs

Dallas beats state rival 79-77

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks want the ball in the hands of their shooting swingman Michael Finley in crunch time.

Finley delivered Friday night, hitting an off-balance 22-foot jumper as time expired to lift the Mavericks to a 79-77 victory over the San Antonio Spurs.

"He can make a shot out of nothing," Mavericks guard Steve Nash said. "We're always confident he can get a good look."

San Antonio's Avery Johnson had tied the game at 77 with a 3-pointer from the right corner with 4.1 seconds left.

Finley, who finished with 20 points, took Greg Buckner's inbound pass, dribbled to his left and launched a fallaway jumper over Sean Elliott with just over a second left. The shot swished as the final buzzer sounded, and Finley was mobbed by his teammates.

"It's a play we work on quite a bit in practice," said Finley. "Sometimes it works, sometimes it doesn't. The ball felt good when it left my hands. Luckily, it went in."

Playing with a bruised left shoulder, Dirk Nowitzki added 18 points and 10 rebounds for the Mavericks, who wanted to put on a good show for free agent forward Joe Smith. Dallas owner Mark Cuban spent the afternoon trying to convince Smith to sign with the Mavericks.

Smith and his agent, Dan Fegan, sat beside Cuban in baseline seats. Smith visited the Mavericks locker room before the game and at halftime.

The Reunion Arena public address announcer introduced Smith to the crowd, and Smith smiled as he was cheered.

for several weeks and sophomore linebacker Derek Mendoza indefinitely the Whitefaces have had to play with inexperienced players. Yenzler said the play of the younger guys has only made them a better team.

"Our young guys have stepped up tremendously the last couple of weeks," Yenzler said.

Last night, after allowing 17 points and 230 rushing yards from Canyon senior backs Clete Andrews and Josh Small, the Herd's defense stormed back into the ball game holding Canyon to only a field goal. The defensive unit got the momentum back for Hereford after junior corner back Cody Marsh intercepted the Eagles at the Whitefaces' 12-yard-line to end the half and take an excellent scoring opportunity away from Canyon and keep the lead going into the locker room 18-17.

"They had a little bit of momentum in the first half," senior defensive end Gilbert Hernandez said. "We let them have a lot of plays we should have had easily, and we just adjusted after halftime and did what we had to do."

While the Herd's defense stopped Canyon cold, Hereford's offense picked up right where they had left off putting the ball in the end zone two more times to go up 32-22.

After falling behind early in the first quarter after an interception on a trick play and an Eagles stop, the Whiteface offense came back to score five touchdowns in the game. From the beginning it looked as if the match up would be a shoot out, and senior quarterback Cody Hodges said the offense was ready to take the game into their own hands if necessary.

"When we were down 10-0 I told the guys that we had to go and that our defense had been on the field too long, and we need to get some points on the board because we might need to out score them tonight."

Hodges once again had plenty of time to sit in the pocket and go to work behind another big effort made by the Herd's offensive line. Senior lineman Hagen Henderson said it was important for the line to establish itself against one of their top district foes.

"We didn't want to lose to them," Henderson said. "I knew we needed to take care of business and give our defense a boost."

The Herd's offense got rolling in the first half after two touchdown strikes from Hodges, including a 47-yard screen pass to junior Geoffrey Marquez, to get the Whitefaces back on track. The scores helped the Whitefaces break through and snap their opponents will while Hodges racked up 273 yards in the air.

"After the first score we got some momentum back, and when we got into the end zone on Geoffrey's score we were rolling."

"I don't think Canyon ever stopped us after that," Hodges said.

Hodges also totaled 54 rushing yards.

The win finishes out a great career for 31 Hereford High seniors that won two District 3-4A titles outright ('99, '00), a district co-championship ('98) and a state finalist ('99). Make no mistake about it, they will be missed.

"It is real emotional to talk about these guys," Yenzler said. "Several of them have started 36 football games for us."

The seniors made their last walk across the grass at Whitefaces Stadium as Hereford High football players at about 11 p.m., but their season is far from over.

YOUR EYES

Low Vision Mostly Affects Seniors

The term "low vision" usually refers to partial sight that is not correctable with surgery, medicines, contact lenses, or glasses. Low vision is not the same as blindness. Unlike a person who is blind, a person with the performance of daily activities, such as reading or driving. A person with low vision may not recognize images at a distance or be able to differentiate colors of similar tones.

Eye injury, diseases such as cataracts, glaucoma and diabetic retinopathy, and hereditary are a few of the primary causes for low vision. Most people who suffer from the condition are in their senior years.

There are many instruments to help people with low vision lead normal, productive lives. For reading, there are handheld magnifiers, many of which have lights. There are also high-powered reading lenses and reading telescopes. Video magnifiers project printed material on a television or computer screen. If you are having any difficulty seeing—hazy or blurred vision, light sensitivity, loss of peripheral vision, night blindness, a need for more light, spots or reading difficulty—see an eye care professional for a complete exam. These could be the first signs of a serious eye disease, and you need to take action before further vision loss occurs.

Location recognition benefits ag products

Combs urges producers to boost local economies

By Dianna F. Dandridge
Hereford Brand Staff Writer

Branded agricultural products may be the hottest idea going for producers looking for a sure thing when it comes to attracting repeat buyers.

Probably the best known "branded" agricultural product is Beau Pilgram's chicken and poultry pieces, which got a start more than 30 years ago.

Consumers have come to

expect a certain quality when they purchase a brand name item, and are willing to pay a little extra for the perceived quality.

Texas Agricultural Commissioner Susan Combs has for some time been pushing the "Go Texan" logo and theme, basically pushing Texas grown and produced agricultural products.

With more products bearing the "Go Texan" brand, many producers now want to make their particular items sell themselves.

"Texas agriculture offers unlimited opportunities for growth and economic development from the producer to the retail sector," Combs said while talking to Hereford FFA members, two weeks ago. "But as the state's second-largest industry, we need to capitalize on our assets, both here and abroad to keep Texas Agriculture competitive and profitable."

Combs said people have come to expect certain products to meet quality standards, and now is the time for area producers to realize the potential of associating certain products with a location.

"When the consumers buy

Rio Sweet or Ruby Red grapefruit, they know the fruit is juicy, sweet and will sport bright colors that consumers are looking for. Consumers also relate these products to the Rio Grande Valley, where they are grown. This in itself increases the economy of the areas which grow these products. Customers of all sizes will come back to get the same quality product year after year," Combs said.

Local beef producers see the day when beef products in the meat cases of the local grocery store, will also wear a label - branding it with a quality consumers will grow to expect.

"I can see beef heading that way," said Guy Walker, owner of Dawn Cattle Feeders and a board member of the newly formed Consolidated Beef marketing program. "Right now, Consolidated is just a marketing tool, but with the consumer looking for products that are always the same quality and the same convenience, I can see where labeled beef will be an up and coming item."

"Our products - the Texas sweet onions, East Texas yams, Gulf Coast shrimp, fruits, nuts and vegetables, are known for where they are grown. Producers need to work with this information to draw other industries to their areas,"

Susan Combs, Texas Agricultural Commissioner

Agricultural products from edibles and wearables to functional to ornamental have the potential of developing a market with location identity, Combs explained.

"Our products - the Texas sweet onions, East Texas yams, Gulf Coast shrimp, fruits, nuts and vegetables, are known for where they are grown. Producers need to work with this information to draw other industries to their areas," Combs said.

According to Dept. of Agriculture information each product made or produced in Texas has the unique ability to capture vast numbers of consumers, willing to always come back to a proven product.

Texas leads the nation in cattle, calves, cotton production, spring onions, sheep, goats, wool and mohair production and cattle on feed.

"Each of these items are produced in a such a way as to make them known to that area. Now is the time for these areas to determine the means of making the profits come back to the specific areas," Combs said.

IRS changes tax code

Changes protect farmers, ranchers

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service has agreed to a change in the tax code that will help protect farmers and ranchers from paying a higher tax rate than other taxpayers, says Sen. Chuck Grassley, R-Iowa.

The change appears in the new IRS Publication 225, "Farmers Tax Guide," which says farmers and ranchers will be able to average their losses and gains over a three-year period.

Farm and ranch income can vary greatly year to year. Without the ability to average income over a period of time, Grassley said, farmers and ranchers can be forced to pay an "unfair, higher effective tax rate than other taxpayers who earn the same, but at a steady, consistent rate."

Grassley said he saw the need to seek an administrative change by the IRS after the government proposed new regulations for averaging farm income in 1999 that failed to make clear that "taxable income" in the farm income averaging formula could be a negative number.

He said farmers will be able to amend their tax returns for 1998 and 1999 to take advantage of the new rules.

Texas turkeys find strong holiday market

Drought caused less damage to turkeys than other cash crops

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — The Texas turkey crop is expected to be gobbled up by consumers, making producers very happy this holiday season, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service reports.

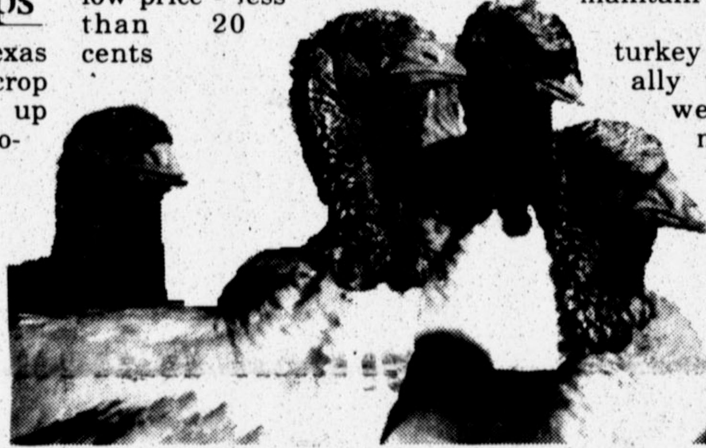

Extension poultry specialist Dr. Sarah Birkhold of College Station said more than 273 million turkeys were raised nationally in 2000.

"Texas raised approximately 9 million turkeys," she said, "and is ranked tenth in the nation for turkey production."

As far as price goes, Birkhold said consumers should look closely because they have a variety of choices. "Consumers will not always find the prices they expect when purchasing a turkey," she said.

Some stores will use turkey as their "loss leader" and offer it at a very low price - less than 20 cents

She said since the price is set according to weight, the bird's size is important, and producers work hard to maintain proper growth.

Birkhold said a turkey hen will usually take 12 to 15 weeks to reach maturity at 15 pounds, and toms will be raised for about 18 weeks with a market weight of about 30 pounds.

"Hens are processed and sold as whole birds," she said. "Toms usually go on for further processing and are found served at major restaurants and hotels where they are required to feed large groups."

Birkhold said although heat can hinder a turkey's growth period, this year's drought was not a big factor, because they are raised in environmentally-controlled housing where a fogging system is used to spray water throughout the house to keep the birds cool.

"The heat stress does cause some concerns for producers," she said. "Birds remove heat from their bodies by panting, so it's important that they have fresh water and there is as much cool air moving throughout the house as possible to make ventilation effective."

She said drought is a manageable situation, especially in Texas, where producers are used to it, and the birds have a good chance for survival during hot months.

Commodity yields down; harvests record-breaking

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government lowered its estimates of this fall's harvest of corn and soybeans, but the crops will still be the largest on record, which will continue to hold down commodity prices.

The corn harvest, which was largely complete at the beginning of November, was expected to total 10.05 billion bushels, 1 percent below last month's forecast but 7 percent above the 1999 crop, the Agriculture Department said Thursday.

Yields are smaller than USDA had expected. They have been averaging 137.7 bushels per acre, which is down 1.9 bushels from the October forecast. The estimates are based on USDA's monthly survey of farm conditions.

The nation's soybean crop was estimated at 2.78 billion bushels, down 2 percent from October but 5 percent higher than last year's harvest.

Farmers have been getting about 38 bushels per acre, slightly less than USDA expected last month but about 1.4 bushels per acre more than they harvested in 1999.

Because the corn crop is a little smaller than expected, USDA said prices paid to farmers would rise about 5 cents to $1.90 a bushel.

The price estimate for soybeans was lowered 20 cents to $4.70 a bushel because of large foreign supplies of the commodity and weak international demand for vegetable oil.

Cotton production is estimated at 17.5 million bales, up slightly from last month's forecast. A bale weighs 480 pounds. USDA is barred by law from forecasting cotton prices.

A sudden change in weather patterns in October has alleviated a drought that threatened the winter wheat crop on the Plains. However, some fields that weren't planted in the middle of October because it was too dry "remained unplanted at month's end due to excessive wetness," USDA said.

The drought has continued in Mississippi, Alabama and other parts of the Southeast.

Nebraska proves to be dairy haven

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska, long known for its beef and corn industries, is becoming a mecca for dairy farmers being pushed out of traditional dairy states like California and Pennsylvania.

Encroaching cities, inflated land prices and increasing environmental concerns are cited as reasons by many dairy farmers looking to relocate their operations.

"It's cropping up all over the country, especially in places like California," said Christopher Galen, a spokesman for the National Milk Producers Federation. "Nebraska is one of a handful of Midwestern states ... that have made a concerted effort to entice producers from other parts of the country to relocate."

Dairy is the top-producing farming activity in California, Idaho, Michigan, New Hampshire, New York, Pennsylvania, Vermont, Washington and Wisconsin.

In Nebraska, dairy accounted for less than 2 percent of the state's total farm receipts in 1998.

But that is changing. In the past three years, 14 dairy operations with an average of 1,500 cows have moved to Nebraska from other states.

Randy Newsome, who moved his dairy operation from California's San Joaquin Valley to near Seward in 1995, said he got the idea to relocate when he visited a Nebraska booth at a dairy trade show in California.

"Nebraska offers a lot of wide open spaces and good source of feed and a good milk market," he said.

The movement is not without growing pains. State officials met Oct. 18 with farmers and dairy industry officials to solve the quandary that has cropped up in the recruitment process.

"The dairy people say we need more processors for their products and the processors say we need more dairy producers," said Merlyn Carlson, the director of the Nebraska Department of Agriculture.

Nebraska now produces about 150 million gallons of milk each year.

While a large dairy operation is good for economic development, some communities are concerned about environmental and quality-of-life issues when a large livestock operation wants to move into a community.

The 700 dairy operations in the state today average more than 100 cows each, and many have several thousand.

Jeff Keown, a dairy specialist with the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, said Nebraska is not simply opening up its arms to large dairy operations without concern about the environment.

"I don't want anyone to get the impression that our environmental regulations are any more lenient than California's or any place else," he said. "In fact, they are much more stringent."

Keown said the state has the potential to eventually have as many as 200,000 dairy cows.

And the economic impact would be substantial. He said each dairy cow is fed $1,000 worth of feed per year, meaning a 1,000-head operation would buy $1 million worth of feed each year.

Dairy cows also are fed corn gluten — a byproduct of the ethanol industry, he said.

Each dairy operation will invest about $3,000 per cow in buildings and equipment, he said, meaning a new, 1,000-cow dairy will invest $3 million to get up and running.

Hillary calls for an end to the Electoral College

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Senator-elect Hillary Rodham Clinton called Friday for the elimination of the Electoral College.

Beginning a victory tour of upstate New York, the first lady said she would support legislation for a constitutional amendment that would provide for the direct election of the president.

At the moment, Americans are waiting to see who wins Florida's 25 electoral votes and thus becomes the next president. Vice President Al Gore leads Republican George W. Bush in the popular vote nationwide.

"We are a very different country than we were 200 years ago," Clinton said. "I believe strongly that in a democracy, we should respect the will of the people and to me, that means it's time to do away with the Electoral College and move to the popular election of our president."

The first lady also said that because of the closeness of this year's presidential election, "I hope no one is ever in doubt again about whether their vote counts."

Clinton was accompanied by Democratic Rep. Michael R. McNulty, who has co-sponsored electoral college legislation introduced by Illinois Republican Rep. Ray LaHood. LaHood has introduced his bill in each of the last two congressional sessions, but aside from a 1997 hearing granted as a favor by House Judiciary Chairman Henry Hyde, R-Ill., it has not advanced.

As she started her tour across upstate New York, Clinton said she had talked with Republican Gov. George E. Pataki about how they could work together to help the state. She called it "a very cordial conversation."

Special to The Brand

CANYON — A panel of distinguished area executives will address "Women In Business: A Glass Ceiling" at West Texas A&M University for the third annual Executive Leadership Symposium, sponsored by the T. Boone Pickens College of Business and Alpha Kappa Psi professional business fraternity.

The symposium is scheduled from 11 a.m.-12:15 p.m. Wednesday in the Alumni Banquet Facility at WTAMU. The format will consist of initial discussions drawn from seed questions provided to panelists in advance; those will be followed by screened questions from the audience.

Featured panelists are: Carolyn Balzar, senior vice president, Bank of America; Paulette Fonteno, manager of employee training, Bell Helicopter Textron; Michele Fortunato, attorney at law, Brown & Fortunato; Janna Serrano Keihl, executive director/CEO, Better Business Bureau, Inc.; Barbara Miller, owner/president, Miller Paper Co.; and Jennifer Stanley, physician relations specialist, Northwest Texas Hospital.

Dr. John W. Cooley, dean of the T. Boone Pickens College of Business, will serve as moderator for the discussion, which is free and open to students, the general public and business community.

"We tried to select people in different areas of business so that we could touch upon a lot of different viewpoints," Friske, assistant professor of accounting, said.

"This is mainly for our students nearing graduation as they prepare to face the business environment of the real world. But we certainly invite anyone interested in women in business to attend," Friske commented.

AC honor students to hold water forum

AMARILLO — Honor students at Amarillo College will sponsor a water forum at 7 p.m. Nov. 18 at the Concert Hall Theater on the Washington Street campus.

The forum's panelists include T. Boone Pickens, chief executive officer of Mesa Water Inc.; State Sen. Teel Bivins; State Reps. David Swinford and Gary Walker; Dr. Ronald Kaiser, professor of the Institute of Renewable Resources at Texas A&M University; Jarrett Atkinson, local government services director for the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission; and Tommy Knowles, executive director of the Texas Water Development Board. Amarillo attorney Steve Hoard will moderate the discussion.

The audience will include AC students, Texas Panhandle elected officials, agricultural producers, ranchers, attorneys, city managers and representatives of state agencies, economic development agencies, and water districts.

A reception for the panelists and guests will be held after the forum in the Amarillo Museum of Art.

REACHING FOR TEENS

By Dianna F. Dandridge

Hereford Brand Staff Writer

Crime in the streets. Gangs taking over neighborhoods. Drugs, sex, peer pressure and lack of stability within their own homes threaten to destroy teens' lives even as they look forward to life as an adult.

Harsh realities of society and culture seem to have an uncanny knack of dragging susceptible youths into the dirtiest gutters.

All is not lost.

Just as Christ held out the importance of coming as a child, churches today are reaching out for the children pulling them away from the dangerous fringes of sex, drugs, gang violence and other destructive pursuits.

Most churches today prominently feature teen youth ministries designed to appeal to youth between the ages of 12-20, who might otherwise choose some of the more destructive lifestyles.

"It's a fact, that most decisions to follow Christ are made between the ages of 15-24," said Cory Campbell, teen minister at the First United Methodist Church. "If we can catch the kids in that age bracket, we can have a better chance of helping them make positive choices that will affect the rest of their lives."

"If we can connect with these kids at this age we can help them make some life changing decisions and find a better way to face the problems of their world," said Lee Price, teen minister at First Baptist Church.

It's not a matter of dragging teens and younger kids to church to sit through a boring sermon, but instead the youth and teen ministers use the buildings, the programs and fun events much like a baited hook attracts a hungry catfish.

"That's why we bait a hook - to catch a fish. We use our programs, buildings, our people and our love to catch the at risk, the on fringe or the forgotten kids," said Carol Haile, kids minister at the Hereford Church of the Nazarene. "Our programs are only a hook, just a tool we use to get the opportunity to tell the Good News to kids who might never hear it any other way."

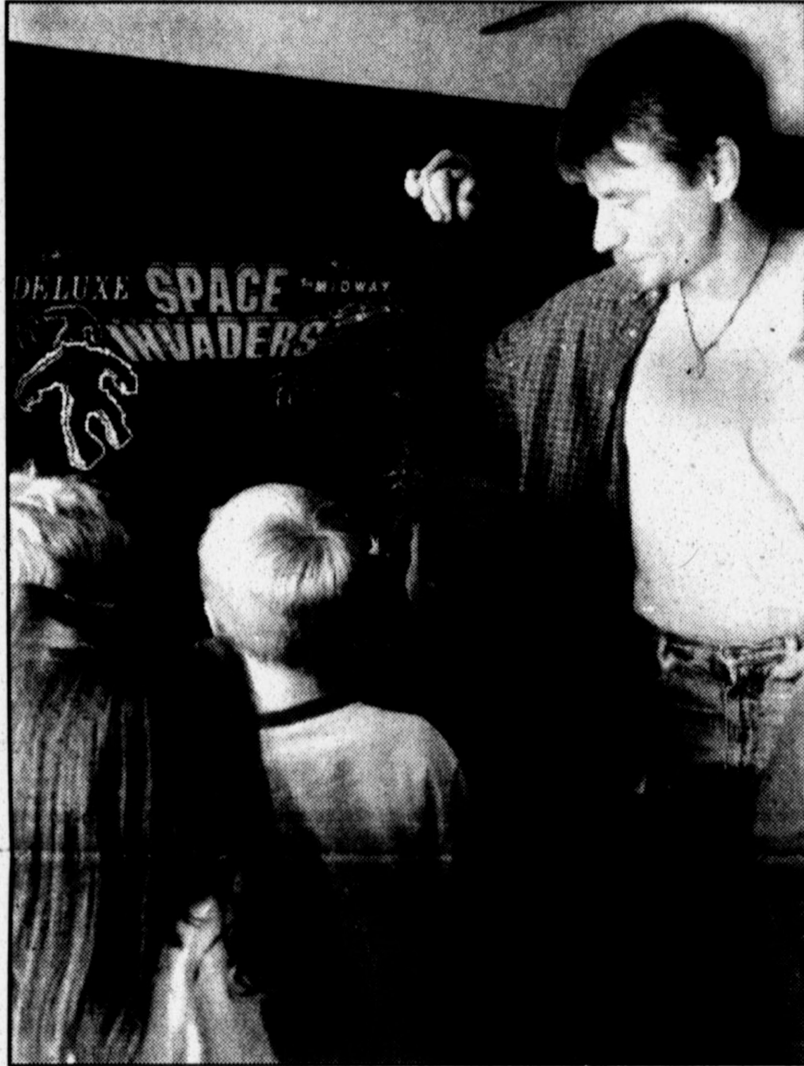

"The biggest hook for these at risk or on the edge kids is the love. They are all looking for love and acceptance," Price said. "Some of these kids need lots and lots of love to make up for the lack of it elsewhere in their lives. That is what we have to offer these kids."

Teen ministers realize the prospect of an evening of fun, games and pizza draw a huge number of kids - both the very affluent and the kids from the meanest poverty ridden neighborhoods. They also know many of the kids will be lost between the ages of 12 and 14, when peer pressure and other cultural evils claim so much of their attention.

"What we are trying to offer these kids is a safe alternative to the outside pressures," Campbell said. "We go out of the way to meet the teens' needs, especially their social needs. We build a place where the kids can come have fun and not worry about gangs, drugs. Somewhere where they can find things they can't get anywhere else in town. That gives us an in into their lives and a chance of reaching them."

"We try to catch the kids early enough so we can lead them to a Christ-like lifestyle. When they have a true heart change they have a better chance of getting through the pressures of today's teens," Price said.

Getting the kids - even superficially - involved in the church events may very well prove to be the easiest part of the youth ministers jobs. The hard part comes when they have to walk a walk of faith with youngsters who have seen the hard realities of today's world and have no other safety net. Sometimes the harder walk is for the teens who have experienced all the benefits of American affluence and see no need for faith in God.

"We try to give the kids from all walks of life solutions to the real life situations which they are going to face," Haile said. "It's not always easy, especially when the kids go home to less than Christian homes and have to make some hard choices."

Many churches use special outreach programs, such as bus transportation, peanut butter and jelly get togethers, youth hotlines, sporting events or even Main Street parties to reach youngsters.

Main Street 2000, sponsored by the First United Methodist Church and joined by numerous others, attracted more than 460 teens. The Church of the Nazarene's Hallelujah Night drew more than 700 kids and their parents. Other churches host ski trips, Christian athletic tournaments and ministry work for teens.

"We have to get the kids involved in some kind of ministry that reaches them, then they can reach out to others. Sometimes they use our programs as a basis for that outreach," Price said.

"Events like these let us reach the kids, and ultimately the entire family," Campbell said. "As youth ministers we don't really care where the kids are going, we just want them involved in a church, hearing the word and having a basis for better choices."

Campbell and Haile both see the need for youth of all lifestyles to fit in somewhere. While dealing with the adolescents and teens, youth ministers will work to try get the kids in a group where they feel comfortable. Sometimes that means contacting other youth ministers and doing follow-up work to help a kid find their niche.

"We as Christians can't afford to lose a generation of kids," Haile said. "We hope that at some point our programs will provide them with something they can take home and share with their families and maybe draw some of the adults back to church."

"Ultimately we of course want to have a family based ministry, but we have to start somewhere and the teens and youth are the ones who are most negatively influenced. That's where we have to start to draw them back. If we get them as kids, be with them as teens, then we'll be able to keep more of them as they go into their adult lives, and hopefully break some of the cycles of broken families and violence which so many of them have experienced," Haile said.

"This is not about some goody-goody church thing. This is about giving them options and directions, based on the word of God and the love of Jesus Christ. Without that, all we have is just a bunch of high priced programs and buildings that make us feel good. As Christians, we are told to come as children, so the least we can do is reach out to all the children and share with them our Hope," Haile said. "This is what all the churches are trying to do when we build our kids churches, and our teen ministries."

Regardless of the denomination or beliefs, most churches now reach out to the community youth. "It's not about denomination. It's about Christian based choices, love, and the only way out of the worldly horrors," Haile said. "We reach the kids with what they can relate to. Sometimes it's a puppet show. Sometimes it's high-tech electronics. Where ever the kids are at emotionally is where the teen ministries have to go to meet and catch them."

Cory Campbell, youth minister at First United Methodist, racks the pool balls for a game at a teen event.

Lee Price, youth minister at First Baptist Church, readies the foosball table for a weekend teen meet. First Baptist Church teens can play basketball, pool, games and meet for fellowship in facilities provided by the church.

Carol Haile, kids pastor at the Church of the Nazarene, prepares youngsters to go into teen ministry groups.

Red Cross Update

The Tri-County Chapter of the American Red Cross is located on 224 S. Main. We serve Deaf Smith, Castro and Parmer Counties in the Texas Panhandle. The Tri-County Chapter has a long history of service to these communities and the new chapter manager Cynthia Welty is going to see that traditions continue and help our services grow. On November 17th we are going to sponsor a food drive for the Hereford Food Pantry. Items needed for the Food Pantry are beans, rice, peanut butter, crackers, noodles, macaroni and cheese as well as any canned meat products and soups. Also, please keep in mind that the holidays will soon be here any donations of sugar, flour, frozen meats and eggs will be of great help to those in need.

In anticipation of the November 14th VHS/DVD release of The Perfect Storm, Warner Home Video has launched an international "Tell-a-Friend" e-mail campaign honoring the efforts of the American Red Cross during the recovery from this devastating event. The e-mail message and The Perfect Storm web site provide an innovative method for you to help American Red Cross disaster relief programs. Every time the e-mail is passed along, Warner Home Video will donate 5 cents to the American Red Cross, with the ultimate goal of raising $50,000.

Please support this promotion and raise funds for the Red Cross by sending the e-mail to your friends! You can access and send the e-mail by logging on to www.perfectstorm.com.

CREATORS SYNDICATE

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Our bedroom is upstairs overlooking a home directly across a narrow street.

Ann Landers The owner of the other house is very hard of hearing. He has a rooster that wakes us up at dawn — sometimes 4 o'clock — every morning. Nothing can be done to quiet this bird.

I've had heart surgery, and need my rest. We have pleaded with the owner to get rid of the rooster, but he is attached to his pet and says it is perfectly legal to keep him. We offered to pay him $1,000 to "remove" the rooster, but he refused. We then offered to pay for surgery that would eliminate the crowing. I was assured that the rooster would not be adversely affected in any way, except he would no longer crow. The owner would not consider this alternative.

He said the rooster should be allowed to "express himself."

If a dog can be quieted by law, why not a rooster? Please look into this. I'm frustrated and exhausted. — Red-Eyed in Woodland Hills, Calif.

Dear Red-Eyed: We contacted the City of Los Angeles Department of Animal Regulation and were told it is legal in your town to have roosters in residential areas. However, they must be kept at least 20 feet from the owner's dwelling and 100 feet from anyone else's home. Also, roosters may be subject to noise nuisance laws the same as dogs. Complain to your local animal service center. If you don't get anywhere, you might consider earplugs. Good luck.

Dear Ann Landers: I was especially interested in the letter from "Content Now in California," whose husband finally decided to get hearing aids. My husband also has hearing aids. However, when he doesn't want to hear, he turns them off and yells, "Hearing aids are off. Can't hear you!" This is frustrating, to put it mildly.

When we are in the car, he turns his hearing aids off because the road noise bothers him. Recently, we were in the car for six hours in dead silence. He can't hear the radio or tapes, so why have them on? We can't carry on a conversation because he can't hear me. He loves to drive, so he is in his own silent world, driving and happy, while I am ready for the crazy house.

So, congratulations to "Content Now." I'm glad the hearing aids have improved her marriage. I wish I could say the same. — NOT Content in California

Dear N.C.: Some people get satisfaction out of playing the role of "victim." To sit in a car for six hours in dead silence because your husband can't hear the radio makes no sense whatsoever. Deafness can be enormously frustrating, but it need not ruin your marriage.

If your husband's hearing aids bother him, he should see an audiologist and be fitted with some state-of-the-art devices. They could make a tremendous amount of difference in the quality of his life — and yours.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I separated a year ago by mutual consent. I thought some time apart would allow us to work things out. "Rudy's" feelings were different. He began dating two months after our separation.

We have three great kids who are active in sports. Rudy brings his new girlfriend to the children's Little League games and soccer tournaments. This is humiliating for me. When I asked Rudy not to bring her to these events, he said, "It's YOUR problem. Deal with it."

What's the acceptable time after separation to bring a significant other to children's functions? — West Coaster

Dear W. Coaster: "Separated" is not "divorced." Rudy is still a married man, and should conduct himself as such around the children.

Nuptials are held in Methodist church

Mrs. Stephen Joshua Coneway
...nee Pamela Elice Dean

Pamela Elice Dean and Stephen Joshua Coneway were united in marriage at 6 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 28 in the First United Methodist Church of Hereford.

The bride is the daughter of Boyd and Pat Dean of Denver City.

Parents of the bridegroom are Stephen and Nan Coneway of Hereford.

Dr. Tom Fuller, pastor of First United Methodist Church, officiated at the ceremony.

Maid of honor was Lori Zingerman of Seagraves, sister of the bride. Best man was Josh Dean of Denver City, brother of the bride.

Bridesmaids were Amy Carlson; Amy Moore of San Jose, Calif., sister of the groom; and Lori Dean, sister-in-law of the bride.

Serving as groomsmen were Jeffery Carlson; Chad Coneway of San Diego, Calif., cousin of the groom; and Wade Patterson of Sterling Co.

Guests were seated by Jeff Dean of Amarillo, brother of the bride; Matt Moore of Amarillo, cousin of the groom; and C.B. Sutton of Seminole, cousin of the bride.

Flower girls were Hannah Moore, niece of the groom and daughter of Shaun and Amy Moore, and Jaci Zingerman, niece of the bride and daughter of Lori Zingerman.

Ring bearers were Gunnar Dean, nephew of the bride and son of Jeff and Lori Dean, and Connor Delaney, cousin of the groom and son of Carrie and David Delaney.

Candle lighters were Ben Coneway, cousin of the groom, and Kinsey Reeve.

Music was provided by organist Tommie Kay Stevens and vocalists Amy and Jason Massey and Mechelle Curry.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal, A-line style gown of white regal satin. The bodice had a scooped neckline and beaded accents. The skirt flowed into a chapel length train, also with beaded accents.

She wore a blusher veil with a pearl head piece.

Her cascading bridal bouquet was of casa blanca lilies, white Virginia roses and baby's breath tied with sheer chiffon ribbon.

Bridal attendants wore two-piece, forest green dresses with a brocade top and satin, floor-length skirt. They carried bouquets of fire and ice roses and stargazer lilies tied with taupe chiffon ribbon.

The couple was honored with a reception in the fellowship hall following the ceremony.

Those assisting with the reception were Peggy Sutton, aunt of the bride; Gail George; Greta Coneway and Carrie Delaney, aunts of the groom; and Jennifer Spatafore, cousin of the groom. Wedding events coordinator was Betty Coneway, aunt of the groom.

Guests were registered by Holly and Lisa Coneway, Blake Moore and Adam Delaney, all cousins of the groom.

The bride's tiered cake was strawberry flavored with fresh flowers between each layer.

Pecan pie, made by Tom Coneway and David Delaney, uncles of the groom, was served from the groom's table.

After a wedding trip to Angel Fire, N.M., the couple is at home in Hereford.

The bride is a 1990 graduate of Denver City High School and at 1994 graduate of West Texas A&M University. She is a teacher and coach at Hereford High School.

The groom graduated from Hereford High School in 1992 and served two years in the U.S. Navy. He is active in the Naval Reserves. He works with Tascosa Industries and is part owner in Water Industries.

Chamber Women's Division seeking WOY nominations

The Women's Division of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce will be accepting nominations for Woman of the Year until Nov. 30.

Nominations may be mailed to the Chamber of Commerce, P.O. Box 192, Hereford, or they will be accepted at the office, 701 N. Main St.

The award, presented by the Women's Division, will be given to a division member who has been active during the past year. The winner will be announced at the Women's Division's first quarterly meeting in 2001.

Persons submitting a nomination need not be a member of the Women's Division. Nominations should be in writing, giving qualifications and reasons why the person named should be considered. The letter does not have to be signed.

Nominees will be judged on accomplishments done for and on behalf of the Women's Division and/or the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce. Other outside activities will then be considered such as community work, charitable work, church activities, youth work, etc.

Cantu seeks assistance to continue prison ministry

Hereford resident Raymond Cantu is, for the fourth consecutive year, seeking assistance for "God's Prison and Jail Ministry," a special ministry directed toward children of inmates in prison in Juarez, Mexico.

According to Cantu, conditions are very different in the Mexican prison from those in the United States.

"If a father is put in jail and there is no one to care for the children, then they stay in with their father," Cantu said.

According to Cantu, this means that the children get only one meal a day, have to sleep on the floor, get a bath once a week and usually do not have shoes.

Cantu's prison ministry is in need of toys, Bibles or monetary contributions for these children.

He also needs a 16 foot trailer (any kind) that can be used to haul items to the prison.

"The deadline for collecting these things is Dec. 12 because we (a group of concerned Panhandle individuals) plan to be in Juarez on Dec. 16-17," Cantu said.

Cantu has already completed paperwork to allow him to cross the border for the explicit purpose of visiting the prison.

Anyone who would like more information can contact Cantu by writing 306 Knight St., Hereford, or calling 364-2089 or 364-1497.

Thank You

Military Muster

Marine Corps Reserve Pfc. Michael D. Hicks, a 1998 graduate of Hereford High School, recently graduated from the Marine Corps Basic Combat Engineer Course at Marine Corps Base, Camp Lejeune, N.C.

During the five-week course, Hicks received instruction in the fundamentals of engineering support for combat units, including the procedures for building and repairing bridges, roads and field fortifications. Hicks also received training on demolition concepts, land mine warfare and camouflage techniques.

Hicks will accompany Marine infantry forces to build roads, set up camps and fortify living areas.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

Think Outside the box, but...

Recently, an old friend and business associate came by to see my new office. While we were visiting he threw out this little gem of wisdom. He said, "I know you've got to think outside the box, but somebody has to stay in the box or it will blow away." Every year I work with business owners who become so enamored with new ideas that they forget to take care of the customers who are paying the bills. Now, I believe in forward thinking, and I certainly believe in thinking outside the box. However, if you forget to guard your box it may blow away or a competitor may take it from you. Small-business owners seem to struggle with this concept. Some know they must change, but are reluctant to. Others spend so much time creating change that they create nothing of value. Both types are likely to go broke in today's environment.

When I think of resistance to change I remember a little story regarding former U.S. President Martin Van Buren. Seven years before he became president, Van Buren wrote a letter to then president Andrew Jackson complaining that the new-fangled railroads were threatening the canal system of the states. Van Buren pointed out that if railroads replaced its canals, serious unemployment would result and America would lose its ability to defend itself.

Van Buren wrote this paragraph in fierce resistance to this technological change: "As you may well know, railroad carriages are pulled at the enormous speed of 15 miles per hour by engines, which in addition to endangering life and limb of passengers, roar and snort their way through the countryside. The Almighty certainly never intended that people should travel at such breakneck speed."

Ah, Mr. President, if you could only see us now. Hurting through space at the speed of sound. Yes, the times are still changing.

Change is positive

Change is positive, but needs balance to succeed. We can still stand in our box while we're thinking outside it.

The best possible attitude you can take toward change is to embrace it. Don't try to resist change, because you can no more stop it than you can hold back a river by standing in it. The water will pass you by. So it is with change. You may advance your business by learning to swim with the current. Use change to get ahead, accomplish more and travel faster.

Your objective must be to master change. Learning about life and life's lessons, gives you a real competitive advantage. Since change is the only constant in life, we will benefit if we learn more about it.

The learning process is only the beginning. Knowledge (the product of learning) is ineffective without action. I know a few folks so filled with knowledge that they can talk about anything. However, what you know should never prevent you from doing what needs to be done. When you know what to do, get right after it. While learning never stops, you must supersede talking with action.

Swim upstream

Sometimes change means going against established trends. There are times when you may have to swim upstream. Regardless of the latest fads, you'll find that doing the right thing is more important than doing things right. For example, stealing a car - no matter how well you do it - is not a right or proper thing to do.

Always ask yourself, "Is this fair to everyone?" "Is it honest?" "Would I want to appear on a national TV show and defend my decisions?" If you can answer yes to these questions, you're learning about positive change. Your actions are appropriate and you will be making the right changes.

SOME BOOKS WORTH READING

Between the Covers

Martha Russell
Deaf Smith County Library

We are getting acquainted with the new software that came to us with the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation computers. So far my favorite program is Word 2000, the word processor. I realize that most computer savvy folks have already seen Word and use it regularly, but I've been buried in Microsoft Works and WordPerfect for years. I just didn't know what fun I was missing.

Those of you who have been living in the same cave I have been in have missed the "office assistant" that Word provides. The default assistant is a computer graphics paper clip with big round eyes who gives you helpful (?) hints and does cute little antics to relieve the boredom of the day. When you close a file, he (the paper clip) turns into a bicycle and rides off into the sunset.

One of the six or seven choices in office assistants is a little guy who looks like Albert Einstein. I love to have him on the screen while I'm working. The rest of the library staff laughs at me because I tend to talk to him. He waves at me when he has an idea that I might use, drinks coffee and taps his foot when I bore him, and takes a digital camera out of his pocket and takes a picture of my document when I want to save the file.

You have to wonder who thinks of these things. The Internet also provides a wealth of clever, but virtually worthless, graphics and text creations that make you wonder who has the time to do all this and why they do it. They must make money somehow dreaming up this stuff. It mystifies me how someone could make money with this. Maybe I'm in the wrong line of work.

However, I don't really think so. Although computers are entertaining and informative, they just can't take the place of people. Computers are semi-predictable; people aren't. One of the best things about working in the library is that when you come to work in the morning, you have no idea what will happen before you go home at night. Sometimes the surprises aren't particularly good ones, but library patrons, being the wonderful bunch they are, usually bring pleasant and funny things to our day.

However, there are no library patrons; I'm sure, in this new book on our shelf this week.

The Darwin Awards: Evolution in Action by Wendy Northcutt is a series of tales of trial and awe-inspiring error, verified by the author, which illustrate the ongoing saga of survival of the fittest. The concept is to recognize and commemorate those "who improve our gene pool by removing themselves from it, showing us just how uncommon sense can be."

You will meet the absentminded terrorist who opens a mail bomb returned to him for insufficient postage, and the thief who steals electrical wires without shutting off the current. Much of this material, but not all, is available on Northcutt's website, www.DarwinAwards.com, one of the most popular humor sites on the web, with over 400,000 visitors a month and growing.

The Coalwood Way by Homer Hickam, is a continuation of the story of The Rocket Boys, the inspiration for the movie October Sky. It's fall, 1959, and Homer "Sonny" Hickam, and his fellow Rocket Boys are in their senior year at Big Creek High, launching hand-built rockets that soar thousands of feet into the West Virginia sky. But in a season traditionally marked by celebrations of the spirit, Coalwood finds itself at a painful crossroads.

The strain can be felt within the Hickam home, where a beleaguered Homer Sr. is resorting to a daring but risky plan to keep the mine alive, and his wife Elsie, is feeling increasingly isolated from both her family and the townspeople. And Sonny, despite a blossoming relationship with a local girl whose dreams are as big as his, finds his own mood repeatedly darkened by an unexplained sadness.

Eager to rally the town's spirits and make her son's final holiday season at home a memorable one, Elsie enlists Sonny and the Rocket Boy's aid in making the Coalwood Christmas Pageant the best ever. But trouble at the mine and the arrival of a beautiful young outsider threaten to tear the community apart when it needs to come together most.

When disaster strikes at home, and Elsie's beloved pet squirrel escapes under his watch, Sonny realizes that helping his town and redeeming himself in his mother's eyes may be a bigger and more rewarding challenge than he has ever faced.

Marcia Muller has another Sharon McCone mystery, Listen to the Silence. In the midst of celebrating a joyous wedding, Sharon McCone gets word that her father has died. After the funeral, while sorting through her loved one's belongings, she makes a discovery that will change everything. The existence of a legal document, hinting at a family secret deliberately withheld from McCone, provokes a violent breach between McCone and her mother. It drives McCone to search for her family's roots, particularly those of her Shoshone great-grandmother. This emotionally fueled search takes her to Montana's Flathead Indian Reservation and, eventually, to a remote and sparsely populated county in northern California. There, obsessed with her own problems, she walks into a deadly fight between Indians trying to preserve their sacred lands and a high-powered resort developer.

Soon McCone is drawn into a conspiracy that includes the attempted murder of an activist lawyer and threats on her own life. No one is talking, and McCone must learn to listen to the silence: the questions carefully avoided; the pauses that point to a lie; the hesitation when emotions block the disclosure of a vital fact.

Now, her fears mounting, her anger growing, McCone enters a dark inner place, dogged by an identity crisis and a killer.

Comforts Of A Modern Lifestyle

© BY W.D. FARMER, F.A.I.B.D.

The recessed entry of this home leads into a vaulted area brightened by a dormer above. Nearby is a coat closet and niche for collectibles. The formal dining room is adjacent and bordered by columns.

A large great room with a 12' ceiling height blends with the sunny kitchen breakfast room of the home. The footwork saving kitchen includes an angled counter with sink and snack bar. The great room surrounds you with luxury and boasts a fire place overlooking the convenient sun deck. Discreetly tucked away near the bedrooms is a stair to the basement.

The garage is accessed from an entry way near the breakfast room. Also included in this area are a half-bath and laundry room.

This plan demonstrates that elegance and wise use of space go hand in hand. The large bedrooms are sequestered in a wing of their own. The master suite surrounds you with luxuries like a tray ceiling, vaulted garden bath and oversized walk-in closet.

One of the family bed rooms is highlighted by a huge wall of windows that take in the outdoor panorama. Both family bed rooms utilize the central full bath.

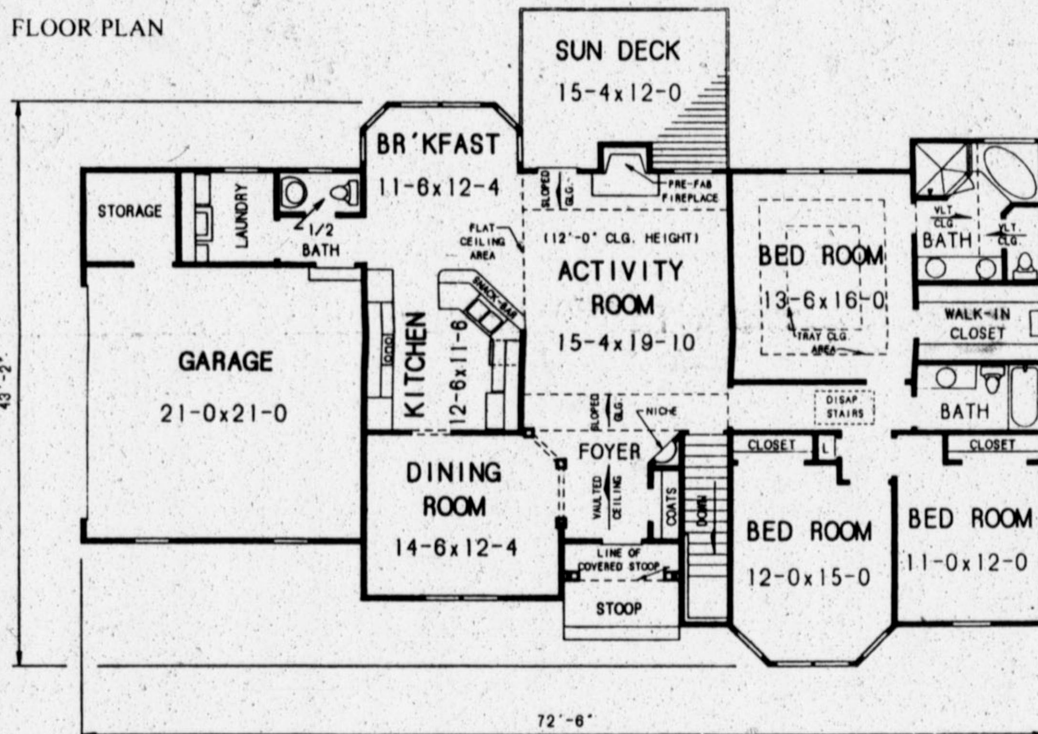

A few luxurious touches, like multiple roof lines and window treatments, along with horizontal siding give this home unrivaled street presence.

Plan number 996 includes 1,939 square feet of heated space and is available with a basement foundation. All W. D. Farmer plans include construction details for substituting brick, frame or stucco exterior finish.

To receive an information packet on our plans, call W. D. Farmer Residence Designer, Inc. at 1-800-225-7526 or 1-800-221-7526 in Georgia. You can write to request the information at P. O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 31145. Visit our Web site: www.wdfarmerplans.com.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!
Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.
For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs."
Then remember these hints:
• Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
• Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
• Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
• Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Today in History

Today is Saturday, Nov. 11, the 316th day of 2000. There are 50 days left in the year. This is Veterans Day in the United States; Remembrance Day in Canada.

Today's Highlight in History:
 On Nov. 11, 1918, fighting in World War I came to an end with the signing of an armistice between the Allies and Germany.

On this date:
 In 1620, 41 Pilgrims aboard the Mayflower, anchored off Massachusetts, signed a compact calling for a "body polittick."

In 1831, former slave Nat Turner, who'd led a violent insurrection, was executed in Jerusalem, Va.

In 1889, Washington became the 42nd state.

In 1921, President Harding dedicated the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery.

In 1939, Kate Smith first sang Irving Berlin's "God Bless America" on network radio.

In 1965, Rhodesia proclaimed its independence from Britain.

In 1966, "Gemini 12" blasted off from Cape Kennedy, Fla., with astronauts James A. Lovell and Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin Jr. aboard.

In 1972, the U.S. Army turned over its base at Long Binh to the South Vietnamese army, symbolizing the end of direct U.S. military involvement in the Vietnam War.

In 1992, the Church of England voted to ordain women as priests.

In 1993, a bronze statue honoring the more than 11,000 American women who'd served in the Vietnam War was dedicated in Washington D.C.

Ten years ago: Stormie Jones, the world's first heart-liver transplant recipient, died at a Pittsburgh hospital at age 13.

Five years ago: With a partial government shutdown looming, President Clinton and Republican congressional leaders clashed over Medicare and bickered over whom to include in compromise budget talks.

One year ago: A car bomb ripped through a Bogota commercial district, killing at least eight people, but President Andres Pastrana defiantly signed extradition orders for three suspected drug traffickers. Sixty-seven people were killed when an apartment building collapsed in Foggia, Italy; an investigation blamed the collapse on cheap materials and slipshod construction.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTES
 DAILY CRYPTOQUOTES - Here's how to work it:
 AXYDLBAAXR
 is LONGFELLOW
 One letter stands for another. In this sample, A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

The Miracle Worker

On Sunday, Hallie Kate Eisenberg (left) and Alison Elliott star in the ABC TV movie The Miracle Worker, a retelling of the story of Helen Keller, a wild deaf and blind girl who became an inspiration to countless people thanks to her teacher, Annie Sullivan.

Sometimes the familiar stories are the most difficult to tell. After all, everyone knows the ending, and comparisons are unavoidable. Yet if the story is compelling enough, a retelling is inevitable.

Thankfully, The Miracle Worker, airing on Sunday, Nov. 12, on ABC, lives up to its legacy. It is the story of Helen Keller, who became blind and deaf when she was 18 months old. Her frustrations and outbursts ruled her genteel Southern family until a teacher changed everything. Annie Sullivan did not allow Keller to simply grunt, eat from everyone's plate with her fingers, and pitch tantrums when she didn't get her way. Rather, Sullivan expected Keller to behave civilly and gave her a great gift: communication.

The most famous filmed version of the story is the 1962 movie for which Patty Duke and Anne Bancroft, playing Keller and Sullivan respectively, both won Oscars. They had performed the roles on Broadway for more than a year as well. Earlier, there had been a Playhouse 90 rendition, and in 1979, the story was remade with Duke in the role of Sullivan.

The themes of a mother refusing to give up on her daughter, a teacher's unwillingness to lower her standards and a little girl trapped in a world where she can't communicate certainly withstand time.

Hallie Kate Eisenberg, best known as the curly-haired girl in the Pepsi commercials, plays Keller in the ABC version. Alison Elliott (The Spitfire Grill) co-stars as the indefatigable Sullivan, and David Strathairn (L.A. Confidential) portrays Keller's desperate father.

Elliott does a masterful job, starting with Sullivan's accent. "I wanted it to be reflective of who Annie Sullivan actually is," Elliott says. "Her parents were Irish, and she grew up in the system of poor, rural Massachusetts. ... I was told by several dialect coaches I was creating more work for myself, but I really wanted to do it."

Elliott unearthed the only known recording of Sullivan's voice and read every book she could find. She and Eisenberg also learned the manual alphabet, which Sullivan used to teach Keller by spelling words into her palm.

Elliott hadn't seen the 1962 version when she was approached about the project, and she asked the executives, "Why don't you just get the rights and reshoot the original?" After viewing it, however, she took the part. "Because this was so dear to so many people's hearts, I did pay homage to it. Of course, in watching it, I became tremendously envious that they had the years to do the stage."

Still, she and Eisenberg are quite natural together. In one very physical scene, Elliott accidentally hit Eisenberg under the eye, and a welt rose as the scene continued. Eisenberg never broke character.

Before this movie, Eisenberg says all she knew about Keller was a quotation: "The best and the most beautiful cannot be seen and touched. They must be felt with the heart." Once landing the role, she read many books, watched videos and observed schools for disabled children. "I saw children my age and how they act, and that's where I got all the noises and where to put my hands and everything."

If viewers are to glean a message from the movie, the 8-year-old says, it is, "Everyone has something to overcome in life."

But is she a good witch or a bad witch?

She may not have any magical powers, but there's no doubt Rebecca Hotchkiss (Andrea Evans) is a real witch. The wealthy matriarch will do anything to make sure her daughter marries into the Crane family on Passions. "I don't think of her as wicked," Evans says. "She's only doing what she thinks is best for her family, and she doesn't care who she steps on to do it. "There's a line in The Talented Mr. Ripley that really applies to this character: "Nobody thinks they are a bad person," and that is so true for Rebecca. She definitely has a heart and loves her daughter, but she isn't the nicest person you'll ever meet."

Evans loves playing a witchy mama, but she could have just as easily played the sister. Her youthful looks and generous personality make her a much-wanted property in the daytime industry. "I think daytime as a whole is much more accepting of older women," Evans says. "This industry, for the most part, is run by women, so they don't put them on a shelf when they turn 30. They create these wonderfully rich roles for women, and many actresses then spend their whole careers in daytime because of that."

Dear Candace: Is Keanu Reeves (The Matrix, The Replacements) related to Scott Reeves (Ryan McNeil) on the soap opera The Young and the Restless? -Lauren Wentzel, Goshen, Mass.

Dear Reader: They are not related. Dear Candace: I'm having a little trouble with the romance between Lucky and Elizabeth (Jacob Young, Rebecca Herbst) on General Hospital. Are they not related in some way? Laura (Genie Francis), Lucky's mother, is a Webber, and Elizabeth's father is Jeff Webber (Richard Dean Anderson). I don't see how they can't be related. -J.M. via the Internet.

Dear Reader: Stay with me on this one. Laura's mother is Lesley (Denise Alexander), who married Rick Webber (Chris Robinson). He adopted Laura, and that is how she became a Webber. Jeff was Rick's brother, but his daughter, Elizabeth, is not technically Laura's blood relative.

TV PIPELINE
Daly starred in Almost Grown before Wings

By Taylor Michaels

Q: Please help me with any information you may have about a late '80s series starring one of my favorites, Tim Daly. The very first episode featured him as a college disc jockey. —Alma D., Boynton Beach, Fla.

A: Alma, you're thinking of Almost Grown, a CBS drama that lasted only two months in the winter of 1988-89. Daly played Norman Foley, the program director of a rock radio station, who was recently divorced from his high-school sweetheart, Suzie (Eve Gordon). Music was a key element in the series. At least once an episode, either Norman or Suzie would hear an oldie and be transported via flashback to an important personal event associated with that song.

Q: My friend, who is right about everything else, insists that former Today host Dave Garroway is still alive. I am almost certain that he committed suicide several years ago. Can you clarify? —R. Stauffer, Bonita Springs, Fla.

A: Sadly, you are correct: Garroway committed suicide on July 21, 1982, eight days after his 69th birthday.

Q: Rocky & Bullwinkle used to include a cartoon about a turtle that always wanted to be something else until a wizard granted his wish to teach him a lesson. Was the turtle's name Tutor? —Connie Blaney in Pana, Ill.

A: You're very close. Tooter the Turtle, who was rescued each time by Lizard the Wizard, first appeared on King Leonardo and His Short Subjects, a 1960-63 NBC cartoon series.

Q: Some of my friends and I are trying to remember the name of an old series with Monte Markham as a man who had been found frozen in ice, which made him appear to be about the same age as his descendant. What was it? —Stan Gillespie, Heidelberg, Germany.

Tim Daly

A: In The Second Hundred Years (ABC 1967-68), Markham played both Luke Carpenter, a prospector flash-frozen in a 1900 avalanche, and his 33-year-old grandson, Ken, who was understandably stunned when Gramps miraculously thawed out, unharmed, and entered his life. Veteran character actor Arthur O'Connell played Edwin, Luke's son and Ken's father.

Q: Please help me remember the title of the animated show about three mice that lived in the White House. It ran on ABC in 1992. My mom says it was Capitol Critters. —Renee Timmons, Lancaster, Pa.

A: Mom knows best. Steven Bochco (NYPD Blue) devised this satirical show about mice, rats and roaches living under the White House. Neil Patrick Harris, Bobcat Goldthwait and Dorian Harewood supplied voices for the show, which ran less than two months.
