Schools try to help kids in 'Big' way

By Dianna F. Dandridge

Hereford Brand Staff Writer In the busy world of two-income or single-parent families, many children often are shunted aside, with little time spent with a caring adult.

Some community-based programs help — some. Other children are left to flounder through, doing the best their inexperience allows.

Now two Hereford elementary schools — Bluebonnet and West Central — in conjunction with the Big Brothers Big Sisters organization are introducing Bigs in School, an inschool program that will give youngsters much-needed one-on-one time with an adult.

Bigs in School will pair adult community volunteers with a child who needs just a little time with someone who cares.

Volunteers will have the opportunity to read, eat lunch, talk and get to know a special child.

"All it takes is someone who is willing to give a child 45 minutes a week," said Stacy Urbanczyk, Big Brothers Big Sisters executive director. "At the same time, it gives volunteers the chance to find out if they want to get more involved and become a big brother or big sister."

Students will be referred to the program through school staff and will meet the Bigs once a week for on-sight planned activities.

Urbanczyk said she hopes many community volunteers, who had participated in the HOSTS program will join the Bigs in School program, as a means of continued service to the children of this community.

"Last year, we matched 17 kids during the pilot program at Bluebonnet. This year, we would like to match 80 kids at the two schools."

HOSTS at Hereford schools fell under the budgetary axe last year and has not been formally replaced.

The Bigs in School program lets the adult mentor get to know and help a child, but it also allows the student participants to take the lead and interact with adults.

"Our ultimate goal is to develop caring, confident and competent kids," Urbanczyk said. "We want to

WTRT expands service

Special to The Brand

A new chapter in the history of West Texas Rural Telephone Cooperative's service to Deaf Smith, Castro, Parmer, and Bailey counties is about to open.

Effective Wednesday, members of all WTRT exchanges will be able to call one another without incurring long distance charges.

Customers who dial a "1" or "0" plus the area code in order to call exchanges in the WTRT system will hear a recorded message reminding them that it's no longer necessary to dial the other numbers before dialing WTRT exchange numbers. Cooperative members have awaited extended area service (EAS) for years. Many members have had to pay long-distance fees in order to dial up a neighbor who lived only a short distance away — but on another telephone exchange.

Economic factors, rules governing telecommunications, and advances in technology have finally made it possible for WTRT to offer EAS. EAS activation comes during the cooperative's golden anniversary year. "Local calling between all exchanges brings the WTRT membership in Deaf Smith, Parmer, Castro, and Bailey counties closer together as neighbors," WTRT manager Thomas A. Hyer said. "It's a great exercise of the cooperative spirit, and a money-saver for our members." The cooperative had to obtain the approval of the Texas Public. Utility Commission in order to offer

Cheney honed skills in Congress, executive branch

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard B. Cheney, widely credited with helping mastermind the U.S.-led military victory over Iraq, by reputation is deliberate but decisive, a Washington insidêr who honed his skills of persuasion both in Congress and the executive branch.

Out of sight for most of the past decade, the 59-year-old Cheney is very much back in the public eye as Texas Gov. George W. Bush's vice presidential running mate.

The face is rounder now than when Cheney, former President Bush's defense secretary, was on the world's TV screens during his prosecution of the Persian Gulf War. Some of the hair's gone.

But he still has that seemingly permanent half-smile, a friendly look that comes with a disarming manner that helped him get along with Democrats even while amassing a deeply conservative voting record on Capitol Hill.

In April, when George W. Bush put Cheney in charge of his vice presidential search team, Bush called him "a man of enormous experience."

DICK CHENEY Republican vice presidential nominee got along with Democrats even while amassing a deeply conservative record on Capitol Hill.

The highlight of Cheney's four years as Pentagon chief, from 1989 to 1993, was the resounding victory in the Persian Gulf War. During that time he also oversaw the Pentagon's first big wave of post-Cold War defense cuts — and characteristically cautioned Congress against cutting too deeply, too rapidly.

In November 1991, several months after the Gulf War ended, Cheney publicly worried about the future of the Soviet Union — which dissolved on month later — and foresaw an instability that continues today.

"We don't know what the hell's going to happen over there over the next few years," he said then. "We know they've got somewhere between 25,000 and 30,000 nuclear weapons." Cheney was born in Lincoln, Neb., and his father was a longtime Agriculture Department worker. He attended elementary school and high school in Casper, Wyo.

He was football co-captain and senior class president, and won a full scholarship to Yale — Bush's alma mater. He attended Yale for one year but had to leave because of failing grades. He moved back to Wyoming where he worked for the power company stringing and cutting lines, before enrolling at the University of Wyoming, where he renewed a relationship with high school sweetheart Lynne Anne Vincent.

They married in 1964 and both went to the University of Wisconsin for doctorates. She earned her doctoral degree, but politics lured him to Washington in 1968, where he was a congressional fellow and became a protege of Michigan Republican Rep. Donald Rumsfeld, a close friend of President Gerald Ford.

Cheney served under Rumsfeld in the anti-poverty agency of the Nixon years, on the Nixon White House staff and under Rumsfeld again as assistant director of the Cost of Living Council, Nixon's agency to combat inflation.

When Ford tapped Rumsfeld to become his chief of staff, Rumsfeld made Cheney his deputy. When Rumsfeld left the White House to be defense secretary, Cheney moved up

LIGHTS OUT SPS plans limited

SPS plans limited power outage for substation repairs

About 350 residential homes and businesses will be in the dark Tuesday morning when Southwestern Public Service Co. crews replace a New York Street substation transformer damaged in a June lighting storm.

The June 27 outage knocked out power for many residences and business along and east of Main Street for more than nine hours.

The planned outage Tuesday won't last nearly as long, according to SPS spokesman Danny Fiel, who said the affected customers will be without power from about 5 a.m. to 6 a.m.

He also said the planned improvements at the substation will mean greater reliability in the area.

The repairs will require power outages only to the following city streets:

• East side of North Main;

East side of North McKinley;
All of North Roosevelt and North Lawton;

• All of East 2nd;

• East side of the 100 block of Ave. E:

• West side of the 100 block of Avenue F;

• North side of the 100 and 200 blocks of East New York.

Urbanczyk stressed that many people are under the false assumption that a mere 45 minutes a week can't provide a child with a variety of benefits, but two independent studies indicate vast differences with only short adult mentoring periods. A study conducted by the United Parcel Service (UPS) Foundation reports students involved in 45-minute Bigs in School programs developed more positive attitudes toward school; achieved higher scores in social studies, languages and math; had im-proved relationships with adults and peers; were better able to express their feelings and showed higher self confidence levels.

Urbanczyk urges adults from all walks and backgrounds to become a mentor.

"This is a short term commit-ment, only 45 minutes a week for 29 weeks. All they have to do is give some time to a kid. It can make all the difference in the world."

Individuals interested in volunteer-ing should contact Urbanczyk at the local Big Brothers, Big Sisters office.

During the past several months, county, the county Juvenile Probation Depart-ment, HISD and the city have been dealing with rising costs in housing juvenile offenders. At a recent county commission meeting,

Serrano, who also is a member of the school board, reported the agency will spend about $200,000 outside the county this year for juvenile detention. When the county approved the Fiscal 2000 budget that went into effect Oct. 1, 1999, the commissioners had budgeted

$50,000 for juvenile detention. Also, a the July 18 city commission meeting, Serrano said the feasibility study is needed because it will give the three entities - city, county and school district the information they will need before deciding to build a detention facility.

"The study will look at current expenditures and deter-mine whether it is beneficial to build," Serrano said.

Benefits of construction of a detention center would be the creation of jobs, both in the building phase and in the operation of the facility, and the money now being sent out of county to house juvenile offenders would remain in county, Serrano said.

In other business, the juvenile board is expected to approve its Fiscal 2001 budget.

WTAMU veterans raising funds

Special to The Brand

CANYON — The West Texas A&M University Student Veterans Association is spearheading an effort to en-sure that WTAMU veterans of foreign wars are represented at the Panhandle War Memorial The association, through a trio of timely fundraisers, hopes to raise enough money to erect a WTAMU monolith at the memorial, located at South Georgia Street and Interstate 27 in Amarillo's Veterans Park.

Bobby Moss, a senior social work major from Amarillo and secretary/treasurer for the Student Veterans Association, said the monolith will cost about $5,000. He said money will be raised through an on-going raffle, a Labor Day golf tournament and a 16-mile relay run from WTAMU to the war memorial on Veterans Day (Nov. 11).

This monolith, is to honor all the WT students, faculty or staff-living or deceasedwho have served our country in time of war," Moss said. "It will be a standing tribute to all who served."

Tickets for the raffle are already on sale at the WTAMU Gold Card Office and the University Bookstore, which donated prizes that in-clude a $100 gift certificate, a leather brief case and a WTAMU sweat shirt. Tickets are also available from association members. The drawing is set for Sept. 13.

The golf tournament is planned for Sept. 3 at Comanche Trail Golf Course. The entry fee is $50 a person or $200 a team. Association members will also seek permile donations for their relay run to the monolith dedication ceremony. The relay will begin at Old Main on campus. If the association surpasses its monetary goal, excess proceeds will be donated to the general war memorial fund. For more information about the project or .the events, contact Moss at 467-8592.

One of these days, perhaps, L.J. Vallejo will become a big enough household name that everyone, including sports announcers who read his name from a football program, will be able to pronounce his name correctly.

Invariably, Va-YEH-ho is read by sports commentators as Val-LEH-ho.

Fox Sports announcers stumbled all over L.J.'s name again when he outshined 69 other Texas high school football stars this past week in the Southwestern Bell All-Star Football Game at Rice Stadium in Houston.

Grumpy John's going back

rumpy John is going back to Germany. I got a call from my old Army buddy last week and for the first time since I first met him in 1966, Grumpy John doesn't seem so grumpy.

When I met him in the winter of 1966 shortly after I arrived in Berlin, he was about a year away from rotating back to the States. He was a large, rumpled Arkansan who got his nickname not long after arriving in Berlin. He earned the nickname because of his personality, although he wasn't sullen or hostile. Grumpy John enjoyed a good laugh as much as the next person; but he was, for want of a better description, grumpy. It was a grumpiness that began soon after he enlisted. When he finished high school, he already had made plans to enlist in the Army. On the day after he had taken his final exams, he told his parents he was going to join the Army, but his mother begged him to wait until after the graduation ceremony, which would be on June - about a week later - because seeing him receive his diploma would make her so proud of her first-born son. Grumpy John decided to please his mother and wait a few days longer before joining the Army Security Agency. On June 2, he went down to the recruiting station and signed up for a four-year stint in the ASA. Only later did he learn that had he joined in May, like he planned, his enlistment would have been only three years. The additional year for the ASA went into effect on June 1. That's when John became Grumpy John.

crossed Herr Becker's face when he heard my south Arkansas drawl mangle his native tongue. "Ach, Herr Cooper, you Southerners, you peak French so well, but what you do to German ....'

Grumpy John went back to Arkansas about 18 months before me, and I didn't hear from him again until about three months after I got back to Texarkana. He knew I had lived in Texarkana, so he just called Coopers until he found the right one. He came to Texarkana for a weekend and I visited him in Fort Smith a scious thoughts — the implications are taken very good, really. Even though liberals would disagree, it wasn't the Republican's fault my dream's-setting was bathed in black and white, despite the millions spent to make this election year's production one of the most red, white and blue

I suppose, beyond having an alter ego that is greying as quickly as my hair, I have run so many rolls of black and white film through my Nikon cameras during the past 20 years that my subconsciousness rarely allows me to dream in vivid Kodachrome.

Years ago, I used to thrill all the kids on my block by flying like Superman in my dreams — now I was grounded by additional girth.

But putting the grayscale and youthful inspirations aside, I greatly enjoyed my sleepwalking through Philadelphia's First Union Center.

During this, the most momentous meeting of GOP pachyderms, the "city of brotherly love" was opening its arms and its cash registers to the nearly 400,000 visitors ex-

He will certainly be worth watching when he suits up for the West Texas A&M Buffaloes, whom he signed with as an HHS senior last year.

COMMENT

McCain should have gratitude of Republicans

There were tears in John McCain's eyes Sunday afternoon when he formally released his delegates to George W. Bush. There will be tears in the eyes of his delegates when the Arizona senator addresses the Republican National Convention tonight.

Yes, the faithful have gathered to anoint George W. Bush, but it's unquestionably John McCain who still stirs the more passionate emotions. And for good reason. It has been a long time since an American politician was so genuinely passionate about his beliefs.

Far be it for the senator to try to upstage the party's standard-bearer. McCain continues to be a loyal soldier. This never clearer than when he addressed the so-called shadow convention of dissidents and politically disgruntled. Some tried to boo him off the stage. As if he had abandoned the revolution.

How quick they were to forget that McCain led the revolution. He forced the field to address real and contentious issues head on. When he was in the race, meaningful pronouncements for once outnumbered sound bites. With his extraordinary campaign, McCain raised the bar for candidates of both major parties.

He may not have his party's nomination, but he ought to have its eternal gratitude.

NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

I don't know what it was about Germany that appealed to him so much. There were a lot of things about Germany, especially Berlin, that were very attractive to young men fresh out of their teens, many from small towns where they had chafed under the social and cultural restrictions. But to Grumpy John, it was as if he had found himself.

While most of us who went to Berlin to be German linguists were satisfied just to get by in the language, Grumpy John worked hard to master the Berliner dialect. By the time I arrived in Berlin, Grumpy John spoke the Berliner dialect so well that even native Berliners thought he was one of them.

I know his fluency would have surprised our German instructors at the language school in Monterey, Calif., because they said Southerners speech pattern isn't suited for German.

I'll never forget the pained expression that month or so later.

After that, we lost touch until 1993 when he again tracked me down. This time we've stayed in touch.

He's been a high school teacher in Arkansas and Oklahoma, gone through a couple of bad marriages, and has had to take care of his mother since his father died about five years ago - all of which have managed to keep him, well, grumpy.

But it seems Grumpy John's never gotten over his love affair with Germany, even making a couple of trips back there over the years, even going to Berlin in a futile effort to find Elsa, a big blonde Norwegian who had infatuated him.

Earlier this summer, Grumpy John applied for a teaching job with the U.S. military in Germany and last week, 34 years after he flew out of Berlin, he got word that his application had been accepted and he will be teaching at a military middle school in Kaiserslauten. It's not Berlin, but Grumpy John doesn't care it's still Germany.

And, to make things even better. Grumpy John's been, able to track down Elsa, who moved back to Norway.

"I know she doesn't look like she did 35 years ago," Grumpy John said. "But I don't either.'

When our call ended the other night; Grumpy John didn't sound grumpy anymore.

She got kid's attention

've done the unthinkable. I've punished a child in the worst way imaginable. Matter of fact, the punishment is so severe the child may never recover from the trauma.

Of all the discipline, penalties and deprivations I have inflicted on a child, this may be the worst yet. Tears came to her eyes and the most unconcerned bystander would surely wonder how a loving parent could inflict such dire punishment on a cherished child.

The punishment left no marks, no signs of physical abuse, no emotional scars, but for the first time in many years, I got the child's full attention.

Spankings only left us both frustrated and angry. Extra chores were scoffed at and only half-heartedly done. Normal grounding meth-ods didn't even phase the kid. Disallowing phone calls and visitors only allowed her more time to do as she wished. With only three fuzzy channels, TV privileges are a joke. So I finally resorted to a punishment I said I would never use. Books.

I took away the child's reading privileges until such time as her room reaches a near spotless state of cleanliness.

By this point, most people who know her know I am talking about my fair-skinned green-eyed, book-devouring daughter, Rebecca.

Teachers, students and some parents who know Rebecca, know she is never far from a book of some sort. She would rather read than do just about anything. History, romance, thrill-ers, mystery, or travel all hold the same appeal to Rebecca. If it is in written format, printed on a page and bound together between covers, Rebecca will read it. Unfortunately, she will read to the exclusion of everything else. Time, chores, people and events all fade away in insignificant unimportance when she finds a book. I would like to stress a good book, but Rebecca reads them all. What she considers good books will be read repeatedly, others are doomed to deep study over the key issues rising to the top of the Republican platform, from which GOP delegates would later define and coin Republican policy. They would talk about abortion, affirmative action, education, social security reform, health care, crime, tax cuts vs. tax surpluses, the economy, a large variety of new topics.

Full of rancor, they had a lot of bushwhack-ing to do, these talking heads.

But where did one start?

The liberal press, most of Hollywood and the rest of the Democrats had been flustered since the campaign trail had opened. Bush had ransacked Democratic voters and Democratic campaign money. There had been Presidential peccadilloes. And dag nab it, they had too many targets to flush and hit with accuracy — a Bush here, a Bush there, everywhere a Bush, Bush.

Geraldo, who has never stopped running away from conventional wisdom or running toward his self-perceived visions of grandeur, was determined to sully Bush and his minions for trying to appear "inclusive" (a fancy Y2K word for ethnically tolerant and politically bipartisan) in their bid for the presidency.

"The Bushes will stop at nothing to win," he filibustered. "Now they are all trying to learn Spanish in order to win the Hispanic vote. And they still can't role their Rs like I can."

Not to be outdone, Rev. Jesse Jackson wondered why there were only a handful of blacks speaking at this year's convention, and furthermore, why was this dream in black and white? What was the Rainbow Coalition to make of that?

And beyond not being able to see the forest for the Bushes, these liberal pundits were exasperated with the patently unfair conditions

First, it was my Republican dream and they were forced to limit their carping about the Republicans. Second, time was very pre-cious. They didn't have much time. None of us knew when my wife would end this charade and my snoring with one well-placed knee jab, or elbow thrust. "What do you think?"

Both King and Richards turned to look in my direction.

"Who, me?" I asked, taken by surprise in my very own dream.

The cameras, the sound booms and the lights suddenly swivelled over to my leaning perch against the set wall. I jerked to attention, straightened the ill-fitting and chili-stained white shirt that had only recently begun to cut into my armpits and quickly tried to recall what they had been discussing.

Sure enough, they had caught me -

Well, hmmm, Tm not sure I agree with everything George Bush advocates, nor do I think his business resume and his tenure as Depriving Rebecca of books is paramount to cutting off her oxygen supply, or so she thinks. I really can't fault Rebecca for her love of reading. She comes by it quite honestly. Her parents and grandparents are all avid readers. As a child, I know, I often got in trouble for reading when I was told to do something. Making the decision to cut of the reading material was no easy thing, but when I attempted to enter her room, I realized drastic measures had to be taken. I also realized why she always kept her bedroom door closed. The only thing in the room that had any semblance of order

The only thing in the room that had any semblance of order were the various books on the bed, nightstand, dresser and in the shelves. All else was in chaos.

It's not that Rebecca is lazy, it's just that she gets started doing something and comes across a book and just can't help taking a quick peek. The problem is the quick peek turns into an hours-long reading marathon. I can nearly guarantee she will never even be involved in a sporting marathon, but let someone sponsor a read-a-thon and see who is the first to sign

I left her with the ultimatum: "Clean this room, or lose your books.

Let me tell you, when I got home, I could once again see the carpet, the bed and the tops of all the furniture. The guinea pig cage smelled of fresh cedar, the clothes were neatly hung in the closet and the flowered bed spread lay smoothly atop the bed. Curlers, curling irons, hair ribbons and do-dads lined her bathroom counter. (You must realize, this child occupies the master bedroom and has a bathroom all to herself.) All that was left was to sprinkle some carpet freshener and re-vacuum. There is peace in the house once more. I'm happy because Rebecca's room is clean. She's happy because she once again has her books.

Threats may never get you anywhere, but in this case, it chieved miracles.

It's crunch time for the Democrats.

Heading into Los Angeles, the challenge for Al Gore, is to match the boost in the polls that the Republicans received from their just-concluded convention. Leaving Philadelphia, Bush has a and has moved ahead among such key groups as women and independents.

For months, Democrats have repeated the mantra that it's too early to worry about polls and voters aren't yet paying attention. But with the Democratic National Convention set to begin 10 days from now. those days are just about over.

"Campaigns use issues, positions, principles and the personality of the candidate to add brushstrokes to the picture by Election Day," said Republican pollster Ed Goeas. "The picture is beginning to be painted." Republicans in Philadelphia went to great lengths to portray their party as more diverse, more tolerant and more positive than in past years. The convention seemed to play well across the country, even if the TV audience was limited.

Polls bore that out. The Bush lead over Gore grew to 19 points by Friday in a bipartisan tracking poll of 1,000 likely voters taken Wednesday and Thursday, 50 percent to 31 percent. He led by 11 points, 47 percent to 36 percent among 511 registered voters in an NBC poll taken Thursday night.

Bush often fares better in polls of likely voters because of intensity of support and the voting habits of Republicans. The Battleground Poll had an error margin of 3 percentage points and the Bush has made significant gains among two groups where the two had been tied - independents (about a 20-point Bush lead) and women, just under 10 points.

Democrats were incensed by the GOP's efforts to present a more diverse image by asking blacks, Hispanics and a gay congressman, among other minorities, to address the convention.

"They're using these people as props," said Joe An-drew, Democratic national chairman. "We don't have to go out and find African-American and Hispanic kids to put on

While many people enjoy virtual reality, there are those who suffer adverse side affects like blurred vision, headaches, nausea, and sweating. According to a recent study reported in Optometry and Vision Science, these people cannot visually adapt to the virtual environment. Virtual Reality

VR) involves computer simulations of real-world environments that use 3-D graphics and external devices to allow users to interact with the simulation. Users wear a VR head-mounted display (VR HMD).

Those who have no physical problems with VR, quickly and easily adapt to the VR HMD environment, which is very different from the real-world visual environment. Those who are affected, experience a mismatch between what their eyes are telling them and what the rest of their sensory systems and the brain are saying. People who experience severe symptoms with VR should be cautious and avoid potentially harmful situations.

heney used deferments to avoid draft

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) -Nominated to be secretary of defense in 1989, Dick Cheney came under close questioning about how he had managed to avoid the draft and Vietnam. The issue is likely to arise again now that he's George W. Bush's running mate.

But while Bush, Bill Clinton and Dan Quayle - vice president under Bush's father ---all have had to answer suggestions that they pulled strings to avoid the draft, there's not been any such suggestion about Cheney.

Cheney received deferments, first as a student and then as a father in the 1960s, according to draft records. He attended college and graduate school and his first child was born in 1966.

Cheney's draft deferments were last scrutinized after his nomination by President Bush to be defense secretary in 1989.

ing. "I complied fully with the requirements of all the statutes, registered with the draft when I turned 18. Had I been drafted, I would have been happy to serve." Military experience - or the lack of it - during the Vietnam War has become an issue as the Vietnam generation has come of age in national politics:

Clinton was accused of ducking the draft, receiving an induction notice at one point and getting a deferment when he promised to participate in an ROTC program he never joined. He later withdrew his deferment but drew a lottery number too high to be drafted. George W. Bush joined the Texas Air National Guard, saying he wanted to be a pilot like his father. He has denied allegations that his father's friends were influential in gaining him the guard slot, which allowed him to do most of his service in Texas.

Dick Cheney and his wife, Lynne, wave to the delegates at the Republican National Convention. Questions are likely to be raised about the GOP vice presidential nominee's deferments during the Vietnam War years.

TOKYO (AP) — The NBA has done it. The NHL, too. And this year even major league baseball loaded a couple of teams on a trans-Pacific flight to open their seasons in Japan.

Japan. But for the growing legions of Japanese fans hungering for American football, preseason exhibitions are all there is.

And, commissioner Paul Tagliabue says, that's not going to change anytime soon.

ing to change anytime soon. This weekend, the NFL returns to the 50,000-seat Tokyo Dome when the Dallas Cowboys play the Atlanta Falcons. This is the 10th time the league has played in Tokyo, the most of any overseas city. The league skipped Tokyo last year but wants to keep this market alive.

"We have a very different situation from baseball and basketball in that our teams only have eight home games in the regular season," Tagliabue said Friday. "It is very difficult to take one of those games away from the home fans."

Tagliabue noted the significant interest in football in Japan the past decade. The NFL has opened an office in Tokyo, held numerous clinics and supported the development of flag football in the country.

Even so, football remans a relatively minor sport, but with something of an exotic, Americana cachet for the Japanese.

According to the NFL, about 30,000 Japanese play football at the high school through corporate level. By comparison, baseball counts about 160,000 participants in high schools alone.

And compared to other American Bowl sites, the Tokyo Dome hasn't pulled big crowds.

Attendance peaked at more than 51,000 in 1991 and 1992, but dropped to just more than 40,000 in 1996 and 42,000 in 1998. Mexico City drew 106,000 that year and Sydney drew 73,000 last year.

Still, NFL fans are a devoted lot, and the league certainly has good connections, as Tagliabue demonstrated Friday by dropping in on Prime Minister Yoshiro Mori, a former rugby player. And to add local flavor to

And to add local flavor to Sunday's game, three Japanese players will suit up receiver Masato Itai and linebacker Masafumi Kawaguchi for the Cowboys and tight end Nachi Abe for the Falcons.

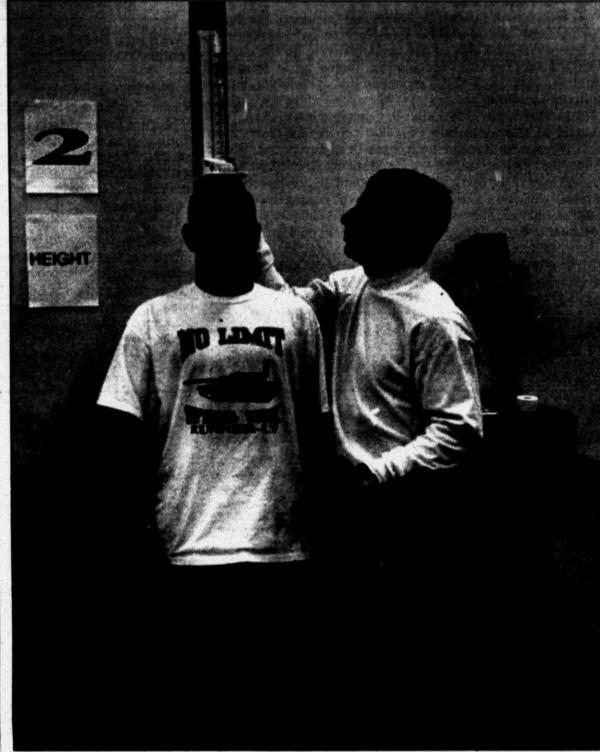

Though this will be the first international appearance for the Falcons, the Cowboys have been in Japan — and just about everywhere else — before.

They were in Tokyo in 1992, and lost to Houston 34-23. The Cowboys have also played in London, Mexico City (twice), Toronto and Monterrey, Mexico.

The Cowboys are 0-6-1 abroad.

Anderson becomes a Spur

Former Kentucky star replaces Mario Elie

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The San Antonio Spurs have signed L.A. Clippers free agent Derek Anderson, who will replace Mario Elie as shooting guard, team officials announced Friday. The Spurs did not release details of the contract.

Anderson, 26, has appeared in 168 regular season games during his three-year NBA career, averaging 13.4 points, 3.5 assists, 3.3 rebounds and 1.33 steals per game.

He ranked seventh in the NBA for free throw percentage last season with a mark of .877 from the line. He scored 35 points — his career high — during this year's Jan. 27 game in Dallas.

Anderson, who is 6 foot 5 inches and weighs 195 pounds, began his career with the Cleveland Cavaliers as the 13th overall pick of the 1997 draft. He earned his degree in pharmacy at Kentucky.

Find out how well they did!

A lion update, and 50 years of the Sport Fish Restoration Art

ome weeks ago I wrote about mountain lions in this column--specifically about the fact that lions were not being stocked by any state or federal wildlife management agency at the Buffalo Lake National Wildlife Refuge. Wildlife officials related that they certainly weren't interested in stocking large predators in the presence of livestock and a sizable mule deer herd.

I did not state that there are no lions in this area. In fact, there is a very distinct possibility that one or more lions are currently stalking the local scene.

A number of livestock depredation incidents involving horses, cattle, and goats have been reported by local residents in recent weeks. Some of the incidents were on the eastern outskirts of Hereford. Speculation, fueled by at least one sighting of tracks, is that a mountain lion-possibly a female with cubs, is implicated.

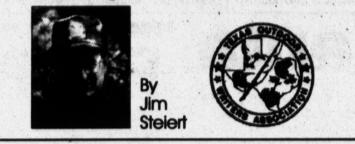

No doubt, it is possible that a mountain lion has made its way onto the local scene by migrating down creeks and draws from New Mexico, or wandering up from the many ravines of the Palo Duro Canyon and into the Tierra Blanca Creek drainage.

Local tales relate that a wandering mountain lion that roamed a territory of about 50 miles wreaked havoc among livestock in Castro County a few years ago.

Habitat to harbor a lion is certainly present on Tierra Blanca Creek, including caliche caves.

Ricky Gilliland and Joe Zotter with USDA Wildlife Services at Canyon have been notified of the livestock damage, and they've done some preliminary looking, although they haven't yet spotted a lion. Neither discounts the possibility that one is out there. In fact, word from the Canyon Wildlife Services office is that if problems continue, they may bring in a lion specialist from South Texas who has a pack of dogs trained to track lions.

We'll keep an eye on how this little drama of natural history continues to unfold.

The 50th anniversary of the Federal Aid in Sport Fish Restoration Act will be marked this week (August 9).

The Act levies federal taxes on fishing equipment, electric trolling motors, motorboat fuel, and imported boats and motors. These tax monies are subsequently allocated to the states based on their total water area and the number of licensed anglers.

During the life of the Act, almost $4 billion in these excise taxes have gone to state fish and wildlife agencies to boost recreational fishing and boating opportunities.

Texas anglers and boaters have paid the lion's share of aquatic resource management costs through their excise taxes.

Over $168 million in Sport Fish Restoration Act funds have been returned to fund research, management, hatcheries, resource protection, aquatic education and boating access in Texas.

In order to use these funds, state agencies are required to subsidize at least 25 percent of each project's total cost. This is not restricted to just funds, but can include in-kind services and materials, as well as property.

Sport fishing has an economic impact of nearly $6.5 billion annually in Texas, and Sport Fish Restoration Act funds are vital in ensuring the future of the state's aquatic resources.

Thanks to funding from the Act, Texas freshwater fisheries management is on the leading edge of technology. The state's largemouth bass fishery is nationally acclaimed. That status is at least partially due to the resources that the state has been able to dedicate to research and management, given excise tax funds.

The TP&WD's Freshwater Fisheries Center was built using Sport Fish Restoration Act dollars. This facility focuses primarily on largemouth bass fishery management, given the overwhelming interest in largemouth bass in Texas. This center includes a state-of-the-art fish hatchery and aquariums where visitors can get a fish-eye view of things.

The Wallop-Breaux Amendment to the Sport Fish Restoration Act permits states to use up to ten percent of the Sport Fish Act funds for education. A variety of aquatic education programs have been established by TP&WD to promote angling responsibility, conservation, and enjoyment of the outdoors. Efforts such as Aquatic WILD and Boating Education increase public knowledge, conservation, and enjoyment of the outdoors. In the period from 1987 to 1999, more than $12 million in Sport Fish Restoration funds were expended on 92 boat access projects in Texas, including freshwater and saltwater facilities.

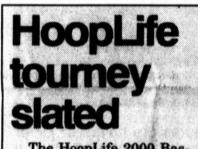

Jim Steiert is a multiple award-winning member of the Texas Outdoor Writers Association, and recipient of TOWA's first "Outdoor Book of the Year" Award.

Houston's Holt injured by line drive

HOUSTON (AP) - Chris Truby never expected to be in the big leagues this season, so Friday night was an extra thrill for him.

Truby, called up June 16 after veteran third baseman Ken Caminiti was injured, hit two home runs to break out of a hitting slump and power the Houston Astros over the Montreal Expos 7-6 Friday night.

"To hit two home runs in the major leagues is an amazing feeling," Truby said. "I think I've only hit two home runs in a game one other time in my entire life and that was a long time ago.

I'm not a home run hitter. I just got two pitches today that I was able to drive."

Truby, in a 3-for-20 slide coming in, went 2-for-3, improving his average to .245.

"This should give him a pretty big lift," manager Larry he put a couple of pitches up Dierker said. "He had and they got to him," Alou struggled a lot lately and for said. him to come out of it with two homers tonight should help give him some confidence. "When you have as many young guys playing as we do, you're going to see some of them struggle until they get used to major league pitching. He showed tonight maybe he's got a little more power than we thought." Truby hit safely in 11 of his first 13 starts in June. rushing to a .306 average his first two weeks. But he had gone 0-for-21 through much of July and had been benched in several games.

since then. Young guys can get frustrated when that happens. But he has been working hard and kept a good attitude.'

That made Friday's game all the more important for Truby.

"I could use a night like tonight," he said. "I hadn't hit very well lately."

It impressed Expos manager Felipe Alou.

"I don't know what he hit that first time, but it was quite a hit," Alou said.

Alou thought Expos starter Javier Vazquez pitched well for two innings. "Then I guess Vazquez thought the two home runs in the third inning, one by Truby and a three-run homer by Daryle Ward, came off good pitches. "If I had them to do over, I'd pitch the same pitches," he said. "They were good pitches. They were just hit well.' The home runs gave Houston a franchise-record 83 homers at home this season. The Astros, who moved from the spacious Astrodome to homerfriendly Enron Field this season, broke the record of 82 set in 1998 with 32 home games remaining this season. Houston starter Chris Holt left in the fourth inning after getting hit in the left cheek by a line drive off the bat of Peter Bergeron.

Holt, who sustained a small cut on the cheek, left the field under his own power and was taken to a hospital for Xrays, which were negative. Holt was diagnosed with a bruised cheekbone.

Holt allowed five runs and seven hits in 3 2-3 innings with three strikeouts. He left leading 5-4 but Wayne Franklin gave up an RBI single to Wilton Guerrero.

Jason Green (1-0) pitched 1 2-3 scoreless innings for the win. Octavio Dotel got four outs for his fifth save. The Expos lost for the ninth time in 10 games.

Julio Lugo led off the sevainst Steve Kline

Guerrero tried to stretch a double to right center into a triple. Lugo's relay throw to third sailed into the dugout allowing Guerrero to score. Geoff Blum hit a leadoff homer in the fifth to give Montreal a 6-5 lead.

Javier Vazquez allowed six runs and nine hits in six innings for Montreal. Notes: Houston 2B Craig Biggio, out for the season with torn ligaments in his left knee, will get a second opinion from Dr. James Andrews.

Blacklisted writers get credits

LOS ANGELES (AP) - The Writers Guild of America has corrected the credits of eight blacklisted writers on 14 films released between 1951 and 1964, including seven by the late Dalton Trumbo.

"I'm very pleased that the WGA has done this," Trumbo's son, Christopher, said. "It's worth noting that many of the movies are ones that I don't believe he would have worked on had there not been a blacklist. It reflects that he had to write whatever was available." The films written by Trumbo, who died in 1976, include "Terror in a Texas Town," "The Boss," "The Green-Eyed Blonde," "He Ran All the Way," "The Brave One," "Cow-boy" and "The Prowler."

By Dianne F. Dandridge Hereford Brand Staff Writer Some gifts carry a heavy price. Some gifts are priceless. And some gifts have both a heavy price and offer a pricess return.

Local teens who participated in a mission trip to the Fort Worth inner city recently learned just how much the gifts of love and sharing can do to help change someone else's life. A group of 16 teens, aged 13-17, from the Hereford Church of the Nazarene and more than 50 other teens from Friendship and the Lubbock Nazarene Church, took their ideas, beliefs, and abundant love for others to the crime and drug infested big city on a mission doors are common and people know their neighbors. The teens' mission sounded simple enough - to help build a church in a decaying neighborhood and demonstrate the love of Christ through their actions to others.

Traveling to Fort Worth and experiencing the life styles of people living in massive projects and slums or on the street was a new experience for most of the kids who have been raised in small towns, where unlocked

"For a lot of these kids it was the first time they had really seen how hard life can be," said Dwayne Porter, an adult sponsor of the group. "What these kids saw and experienced broke many of their hearts and left them with a clearer picture of God's love." The basic plan for the trip had been to help work on an inner city church, which is now lead by Tim Adams, the former youth pastor of the Church of the Nazarene in Lubbock. The teens knew they were going to do some painting, a little car-pentry work and even feeding some hungry residents of the area, but few had any idea of the people they would encoun-ter and were unprepared for the world they entered.

"The Friendship House was broken into three times while were there," said Rebecca Davis, an eighth grade student at Hereford Junior High. "Once while we were next door at chapel."

While in Fort Worth, participating teens reached out to many of the less fortunate kids in projects through PB&J Clubs - a simple sharing of peanut butter and jelly sandwiches and teen oriented talk about Christ. Teens bagged groceries at a Fort Worth food pantry and visited children at a federally funded AIDS day care center.

"These kids learned a lot probably more than we are aware of," said Kelly Bullington, assistant youth minister. "They learned self-sacrifice, the importance of putting others' needs before their own. More importantly they learned to be thankful for what they had and what they have been spared. They learned to have a deeper relationship with God."

A major part of the trip for the kids was the interaction with many urban street kids, who have seldom if ever been given the opportunity to talk to kids from an outside culture.

The kids met other kids, who they may never have talked to or who they may have been afraid of," Bullington said. "The trip left teens with a lifetime of memories and experiences they may never have experienced, had they not gone on the trip. "This trip took many kids out of their comfort zone," said Porter. "They came away knowing how blessed they are, just to live where they do, without the constant threat of violence or drugs and knowing that someone cares."

"The caring is what these trips are all about," explained youth pastor Tim Bullington. "Christ loved us just as we are and this trip allowed many of our kids to pass along that love. The blessings they received were as great as the blessings received by those they witnessed to."

Teenagers from Hereford Church of the Nazarene took to the streets of Fort Worth and demonstrated the love of Christ through their skits and songs.

Art of learning to ride bicycles continues

It has been a number of years since my daughter learned how to ride a bicycle, but the methods haven't changed very much I have noticed as I've watched one of the boys on my block learning the rudimentary details of staying upright on a vehicle with only two in-line wheels.

He and his dad spent nu-merous late summer afternoons on the sidewalk which connects several of the houses

Sometimes riding was no small task because not only did our house occupy the mott, got her bicycle so did the water trough that was used daily by sheep, goats and cows. And none of these animals ever yielded the right of way to two girls on bicycles, regardless of the noise be? we made. Actually, they mostly just ignored us as they were used to hearing noisy girls on a daily basis and knew we didn't pose a threat - serious or otherwise. Now we lived in the same house my mother had grown up in so she learned to ride a bicycle over the same roads my sister and I did. And apparently for her this was no problem.

grandmother to look where she wanted to go and not be distracted by what was around her. (Any of us who have learned how to ride a bicycle know that the reason for this is that, at first, you tend to steer in the direction you are looking.)

My grandmother noticed the cow and whether or not she was worried about whether the cow might bother her, she off the cow and get her attention back on the road. Consequently, she began to steer toward the cow despite repeated warnings to "get back on the road."

on our block. They were still practicing the old-fashioned method of "kid pedaling bicycle while parent holds back of seat to keep bicycle upright."

And this still seems to be an effective method because the young man is now successfully riding his bike right along with the "big kids" on the block.

Watching this has brought back memories of my childhood days and the time I spent on a bicycle. I rode lots of miles on the caliche road in the seven-acre mott surrounding our home in the country. My sister and I would pretend to be going to the store or taking a trip and it was important to remember the route so that the return trip was done accurately in reverse.

This frequently led to some rather heated "discussions" about exactly what the reverse route should be.

But my grandmother proved to be a different story.

I don't really know why she had not learned how to ride a bicycle before she reached adulthood. Maybe bicycles weren't as readily accessible in those days. After all, we are talking about my grand-mother and that goes back a not until she was in high school - my grandmother de-cided she should learn how to ride.

However, when my mother

After all, how hard could it

Please remember she was attempting to accomplish this feat in a mott which even then contained the only water trough for sheep, goats and cows. (The primary word here is cows.)

As my mother told the story, my grandmother had managed to get the hang of keeping the bicycle upright as she pedaled. She just wasn't very adept yet at steering it where she wanted it to go nor at stopping without falling over.

She was pedaling success-fully along the caliche road toward the cattleguard, but standing just a few feet off that same caliche road was the family milch cow grazing contentedly.

My mother warned my

And since she wasn't well versed in stopping that warn-ing didn't work, either.

So my grandmother pedaled on saying, "Oh, oh, oh," until she broad sided the unsuspecting cow.

Fortunately, neither of them suffered any injuries, but my grandmother never did learn how to ride a bicycle.

'Eppie' receives incredible mail deluge

Dear Readers: I recently printed a letter from Robert Herington of Holland, N.Y. He learned from a cousin that his mother, whose name was Ethel, was called "Eppie." Since that is my name (short for Esther Pauline), I asked, "Are there any more Eppies out there?" That simple question produced an incredible deluge of mail. Would you like to look over my shoulder?:

From Chapel Hill, N.C.: This will probably be one of many letters you will receive from the Women's College of the University of North Caro-lina (now UNC-Greensboro), class of 1942. Our senior class president was Eppie Epps. She was the most popular girl on campus, and won the presidency by a walk.

Mount Prospect, III.: About 60 years ago, my favorite uncle was a salesman for the National Biscuit Company. They had a breakfast cereal called "Eppy Nuts." I was so crazy about that cereal, my family called me "Eppy," and the name stuck.

ma, Fla. My stepdad, Seymour Epstein, owned a men's clothing store in Brook-

Eppy's Men's Wear. He lived over the store until he married Mom. Seymour was always known as Eppy. Grand Island, N.Y.: In the '30s, my brothers belonged to a fraternity in Kenmore, N.Y. They had a German shepherd named Eppie.

Oak Ridge, Tenn.: Toonerville Trolley, drawn by Fontaine Fox, was a popular comic strip of the '20s and '30s. One of the main characters was Aunt Eppie. She was enormous, but never knew her weight because no scale could handle it.

Alton, III.: Both my husband and my father-in-law are called "Eppie." Their last name is Eppenheimer. El Paso, Texas: My given name is Epimenia Ortiz. I am 66 years old. When I was in the first grade, my teacher publisher of The Denver Post was a man whose name was E. Palmer Hoyt. He was known around the shop as

"Ep." He was the greatest. Bonsall, Calif.: I am 9 years old. Eppy is my real first name, and not a nickname. My parents named me after the little girl in the book "Silas Marner."

Boise, Idaho: Idaho is home to one of the largest concentrations of people of Basque descent in the United States. We have a fine Basque restaurant here called "Epi's," owned by Chris Ansotegui and Gina Urquidi. It was named after their grandmother, Epifania. She was well-known for her wonderful meals.

Canton, Ohio: My grandfather, Ben Apstein, went by the nickname "Eppy," and Most folks in town thought that was our real name. Two years after I was born, our family legally changed "Apstein" to "Eppy." Latrobe, Pa.: My name is Ethel, but I was nicknamed Eppie after the character in "Silas Marner." The little orphan girl's name was short for the biblical Hephzibah. Santa delivered me to my family on Christmas Day in 1929. My mom said my father boarded up the fireplace to make sure there were no more deliveries.

Hermitage, Tenn.: My parents named me Eppie. I never knew why, except they liked the name. I read that Eppie is your name, and discovered that in Yiddish it means "clear thinker." It fits.

Dear Hermitage: Clear thinker? I've never heard that one, but thanks for the compliment. I had no idea there were so many "Eppies" out there. It's nice to know I have a lot of company.

Getting Rich Slowly: The Only Sure Way

Question: "Do you want to be a millionaire?" Answer: "Yes"

Question: "Is that your final answer?" Answer: "Yes, that's my final answer."

f you're like millions of Americans, you have a dream to be a millionaire. Many people feel that all of their problems would disappear if they had a million dollars. They dream of living the good life.

Unfortunately, the only hope most folks have of becoming a millionaire is by winning the lottery or getting lucky on a TV quiz show. Even if they are regularly purchasing lottery tickets, they have a better chance of getting struck by lightening than they do of acquiring wealth.

So how do you become a millionaire? How can you secure wealth for your retirement years? I only know one sure way, and that is the slow way.

You see most millionaires in America today were not born into wealth. Most are first generation millionaires, and only a few are overnight successes like the "dot.com kids." The majority have built their fortunes using the slow way. Here are some of their strategies for building wealth slowly."

Slow but sure.

· Invest early. There is no substitution for early savings and investment. The compounding of interest takes on a near magic proportion over time. Teach your children the value of saving for their futures.

· Invest regularly. If you're normal, you're a little short of personal discipline. It does take discipline to invest regularly. Try payroll deductions to bolster your investment plan. If you never see it, you never miss it.

 Invest windfalls. Occasionally everyone gets a little unexpected cash. Maybe your aunt dies, you get an income tax rebate or you have some other windfall. Invest it. It's a long-term blessing. You don't have any obligation to spend it, so save it.

· Invest in appreciating assets. Some assets gain value, others traditionally lose value. Investing in the wrong things will diminish your wealth.

Let me give you a great example of one area where unwise spending can kill your millionaire chances. The second largest purch that most Americans make is their transportation. Now let me make this perfectly clear: I don't care what you drive. I'm less impressed than most people are by what you drive, because I know it has no bearing whatsoever on your financial success and personal wealth. However, you can drive whatever you please.

John and Mary are a young couple in their early 30's. They have two growing children and want a bigger car. They both work and have good carning power. They decide to buy that really nice 4-wheel drive, sports utility vehicle. They put up their old car as a down payment and agree to moderate monthly payments with a big balloon at the end of 5 ycars.

If John and Mary were to buy a slightly used car of lesser value, taking advantage of the first year depreciation that typically runs from 20 to 30 percent, they could easily add as much as $200,000 to their retirement wealth. I've done the math and I can prove it. If they were to continue the practice over their lifetimes the results would be significantly greater.

· Live on less. Cicero said, "Men do not realize how great an income thrift is." One of the common characteristics of America's millionaires is that they live well below their means. They drive older, non-luxury cars. They live in modest houses. They don't buy designer clothing. They don't consume expensive food or wine. They live on less.

There you have it. The sure-fire way to be a millionaire. Of course, you'll be the only one who'll know just how rich you are.

We have to ask why they went to the trouble to register, but not participate. Was it too hard? Too easy? Too uninteresting? Were the children too busy? Did they not have enough encouragement and support at home?

We'll never know the answers for certain, but we must ask them and assess the information and impressions we have. Many librarians all over the area confirm the same sort of results in their summer programs. Declining enrollment and participation are not uncommon.

There is an ongoing discussion among librarians about the Accelerated Reading Program. It is obvious that the program has some good results. However, we have to wonder when a child leaves the library without a book, because he couldn't find one to fit his AR requirements. What happened to reading just because the book looked and sounded good? ## consolidates Marketing association plans move torward

By Dianna F. Dandridge

Hereford Brand Staff Writer Cattle producers in Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico may soon have a new advomay soon have a new advo-cate in marketing their cattle. The Consolidated Beef Pro-ducers Inc., a non-profit cattle marketing association, has met its first goal of 750,000 con-signed head of cattle, more than 60 days prior to the end of the membership drive. "Consolidated Beef Produc-ers Inc. is now official. In less than 60 days after our first than 60 days after our first meeting, Consolidated Beef pro-ducers has surpassed our mini-mum goal of 750,000 head," board chairman Paul Hitch of Guymon, Okla., said. "And, we still have more than 60 days, for other producers to join our marketing effort." Scott Keeling, a Hereford producer and founding mem-ber of the board, said 36 feed-ers so far have joined, with at least 14 from the Deaf Smith, Castro, Parmer and Oldham counties.

Jim Gill, an information specialist with the Texas Cattle Feeders Association, said there has been a good representa-tion from feeders throughout the area.

"Both small and giant corporate feeders have joined. In the long run it will make the marketing process better for everyone concerned," he said. The new venture is based on the concept that true value-based negotiated pricing will optimize the value of cattle by presenting the packer the right cattle at the right time to meet the packer's needs. Hitch advises uncertain feed-ers to ask themselves three questions: Are you satisfied with the way you market cattle? Do you believe the way you are marketing cattle will change in the future? Do you want to participate in the change or let someone else do it for you?

Keeling said members from all member feedyards to give packers the numbers they need to provide for their buyers.

"I can't say if meeting the first goal of 750,000 head 60 days early is good or bad," said Gill. "The key to how Marketing makes the difference -- Cattle may still be fed in the same manner as always, but once they are ready to be marketed, Consolidated Beef Producers members will have more say on how and when the animals are sold.

well Consolidated Beef will do will be the number we have on Oct. 1, the day membership closes."

eers i

Members can join the new marketing venture by paying a $3,000 membership fee and purchasing a minimum of 5,000 marketing rights at $1 per head.

Consolidated Beef Producers board of directors will now begin its search to find a general manager and staff so operations can begin as soon as possible after the membership enrollment deadline o Oct. 1.

"The strong interest and confidence that cattle feeders have in Consolidated Beef Pro ducers shows that they be lieve in the program and are ready to change the way they market cattle," Hitch said. "Our goal with Consolidated Beef Producers is to consolidate our marketings so w can remain independent a cattle feeders. The industry is changing and we are standing on the cusp of an incredible opportunity to shape that change, to nudge the ball in a way we want it to go."

on the way cattle are marketed across the industry. It's pretty much a revolutionary idea," Keeling said. "It won't be an overnight deal, but it's a start."

Gill said Consolidate Beef Producers is not a part of TCFA; however, TCFA will offer help and technical support until Consolidated is up and running.

HOUSTON (AP) - The long-running Texas drought is wreaking havoc on a fungus that usually keeps grasshop-pers in check, contributing to increased insect populations this summer, agriculturalists

Grasshoppers, in what could amount to a $200 million plague in 2000, are ravaging Central Texas farmland that is already besieged by drought, state agriculture officials said this week.

The ravenous insects this year are infesting an unusu-ally large area stretching from College Station west to Comanche. Favorite targets are pastures of coastal bermuda grass and fields of grain sorghum.

pers have also damaged lawns, shrubs and fruit trees.

Extension agent Dan Phillips in Hamilton said the insects in late spring and early sum-mer heavily damaged pastures, forage crops, gardens and orchards.

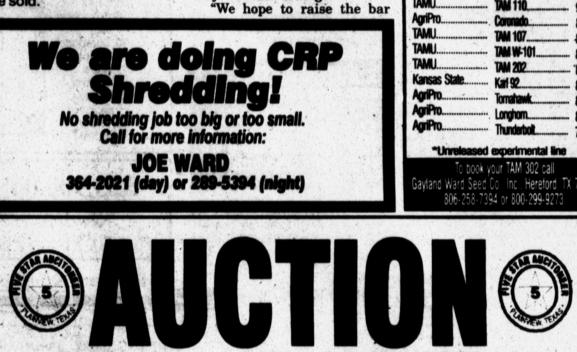

"It's getting so dry, there's not a lot for them to eat on now," he told the Houston Chronicle on Tuesday.

The agriculture department, citing reports from extension service offices around the state, said the heaviest infes-tations and the most severe damages are in Hamilton, Comanche, Erath, Falls, Bell, usually helps control grasshop-pers isn't flourishing this year because of drought. Texas A&M University entomologists said the state has 140 species of grasshoppers, seven of which are harmful to crops, including the differen-tial, red-legged and two-striped grasshoppers.

Phillips said his area had three consecutive years of weather conditions favorable to grasshoppers. One area problem is a reduction in feed for cattle, sheep and goats. State officials said $190 million could be lost to grasshoppers this year, up from only

The estimate includes forage losses — and replacement forage — as well as costs for controlling the insects, officials said.

Peanuts endure drought, high temps

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas peanuts look promising this year, despite high summer temperatures and little rain, the Texas Agri-cultural Extension Service reports.

District Extension director Jett Major of Lubbock said peanuts are doing well this season in the South Plains because the crop deals well with heat and the region has not experienced heavy rains or storms, which reduces retention of pods.

"Peanuts are a very hearty crop in this region," said Ma'jor. "They are faring better than any other crop we've got.

Texas ranks second in the United States in peanut pro-duction, harvesting more than 310,000 acres annually. The South Plains and Rolling Plains regions produce more than 70 percent of the Texas peanut crop. Dr. Calvin Trostle, Exten-sion agronomist in Lubbock, said some fields were planted earlier than usual this year and are about two weeks ahead in terms of maturity. He said producers should begin harvest on runner and Virginia market types in four weeks.

All peanuts in the South Plains region are irrigated, said Trostle, which has prevented the crop from being damaged in this summer's hot, dry weather. Some counties have reported 26 days of temperatures more than 100 degrees.

District Extension director Galen Chandler in Vernon said dryland peanuts are wilting in the afternoon and showing heat stress. He said irrigated peanuts look good.

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

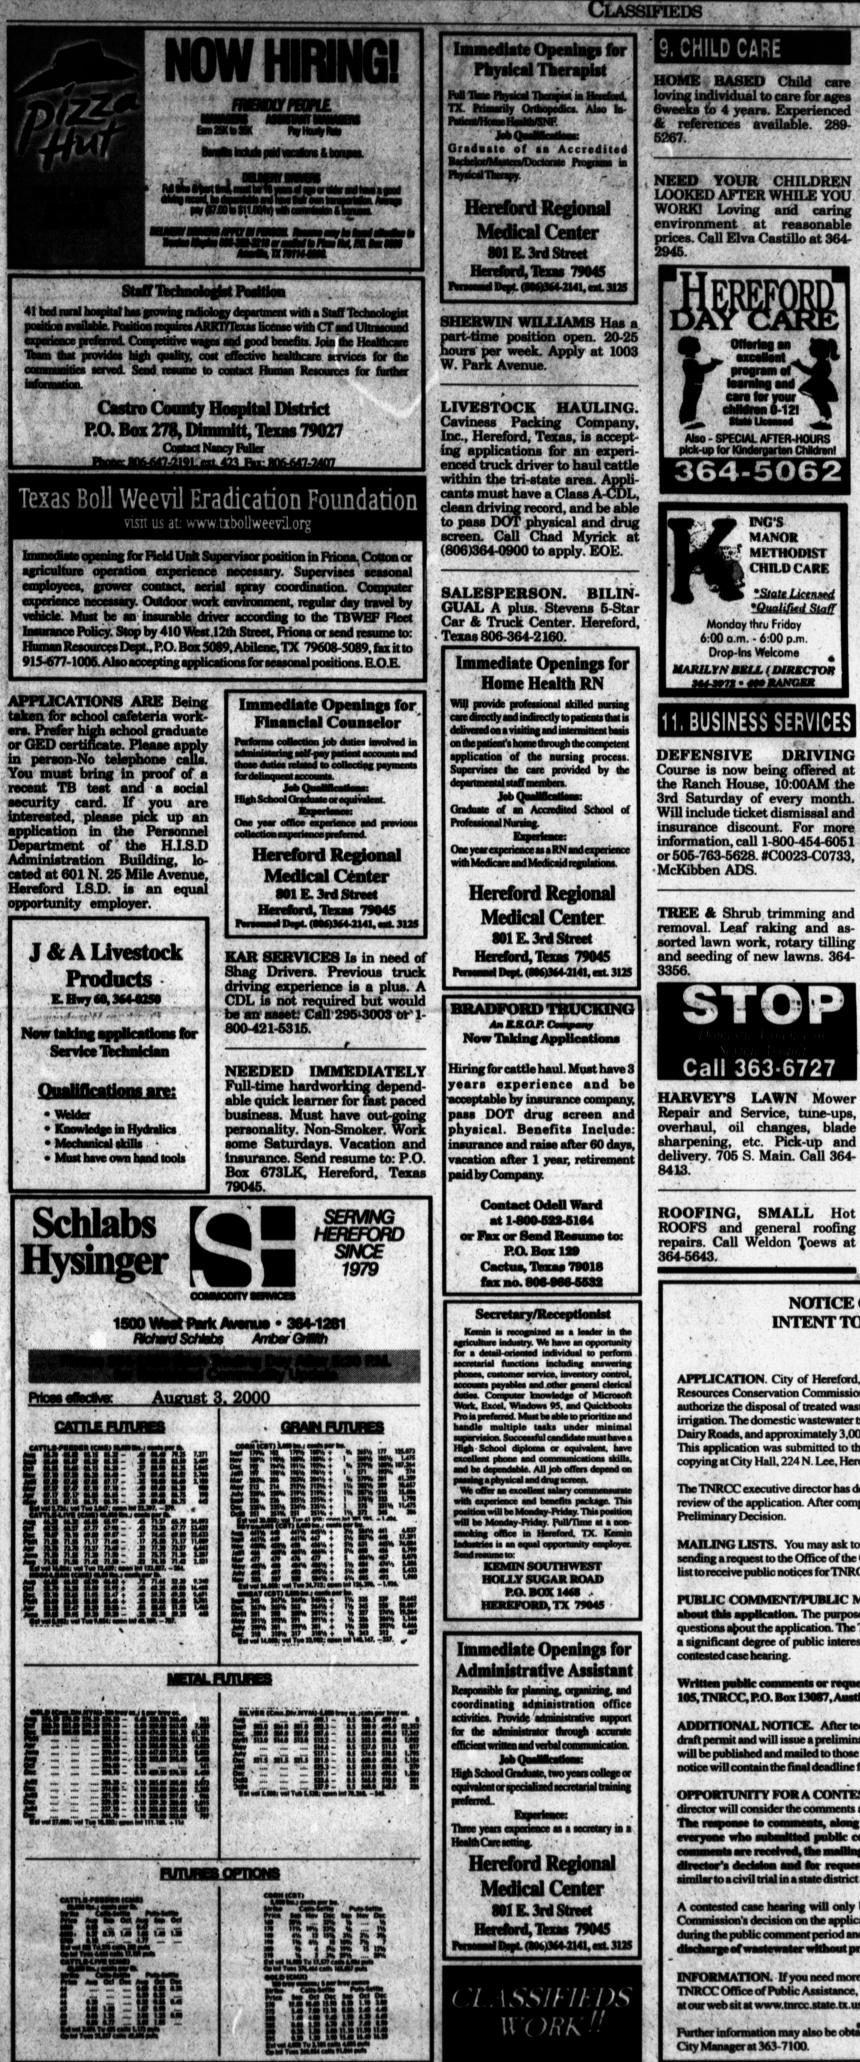

For starters, look at ads which offer the same intem/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set; maple, six chairs." Then remember these hints:

· Give the price. A newpaper consultant says 70 percent of

• Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.

• Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.

Singer-songwriter hopeful Kaytee is just one of a handful of teen-agers documented in American High, which follows the fives of suburban Chicago high-school seniors. Created by filmmaker R. J. Cutler, the new Fox series, siring Wednesdays, offers an all-sccess look at what it's like to be a teen dealing with daily pressures.-

By Josh Greene oTVData Features Syndic

With the recent onslaught of such gimmicky shows as Survivor, Road Rules and Big Brother, the reality genre has been stretched thin by situations anything but real. Watching people trapped on a remote island, roaming the country, competing in various events or barricaded inside a house are amusing but hardly true to life.

So, it's kind of refreshing to find a reality show that's actually based on some semblance of reality.

Enter American High, a new series airing Wednesdays on Fox. Created by Oscar-nominated filmmaker R.J. Cutter (The War Room), American High gives a firsthand account of the ups and downs of being a high-school student today. No punches are pulled when documenting everything from pressures at home to the seemingly tougher ones at school.

The series follows a select number of suburban Chicago high-school students through their senior year. There's Kaytee, a gifted entertainer; football placekicker Kiwi; the popular Anna; jock Robbie and his girlfriend, Sarah; Brad, the first student to come.clean about his homosexuality, fun-loving Morgan and his girl, Salima; Allie, who's battling a difficult home life; singer Suzie; Pablo, a poet with a wild side; and Tiffany, who's just trying to fit in at a predominantly white school.

"I was interested in that remarkable moment in life," Cutler says, "where there is the part of you that's a child rushing to grow up, and the adult in you is desperately trying to hold on to childhood as ferociously as possible." The biggest challenges to Cutler's project were finding a community willing to cooperate and subjects willing to bare their most intimate moments in the most tumultuous time of their lives. In an effort to retain their anonymity, the students' last names aren't being used in conjunction with the show. Other than that, it's anything goes with American High.

In addition to the "low-impact situation" of three-man film crews, the teens help document their typical days with the help of personal video cameras. And yes, school administrators were more than tolerant of the minimal high-tech intrusions.

American High also reminded Cutler that he was working alongside more than just the stereotypical teen.

"What I found out was that there is a certain layer of sophistication," he says, "but really, when you peel away the surface, what you're really dealing with is confused, excited, baffled, passionate teen-agers.

"There is remarkable candor, remarkable honesty and remarkable emotion. I can't think of a single thing that we wanted to learn more about that we weren't able to film."

Capturing a school year's worth of dating, homework, parties, football games, parental interference and some tough decision making about the future, Cutler thinks his series is TV's truest attempt at airing something "authentic," a word other programs seem to take for granted.

"We live in a very Orweflian time," Cutler says about society's voyeuristic nature. "Reality television is a phrase being used to describe something that's everything but real.

"Where American High stands out is that it is real. These kids are going to high school and living their lives, dealing with their relationships, and confronting difficult decisions. They're growing up right in front of our eyes whether we're there to film them or not."
