Trustees eye changes in term length, grading

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

Changing the way classes are graded and the length of terms at one school were highlights of Thursday's regular monthly meeting of the Hereford Independent School District board of trustees.

Trustees were asked to approve waivers applications that would change Shirley Intermediate School from the district-wide six-week grading system to a nine-week quarterly system, and to allow teachers to grade students using "portfolios" rather than traditional grades and report cards.

In addition, the district's first grade teachers presented a request for a policy change that would allow them to grade students using letters rather than numbers.

Assistant superintendent Bena Veazey said that when she began working with teachers to revise the promotion and retention guidelines for the district, a question arose about the use of number grades for students.

Teacher Susan Adams said that currently, teachers grade students on daily assignments, then average those grades for a six-weeks grade.

"It doesn't give a true picture of the progress a first-grader makes," Mrs. Adams said, adding that some students do well in their daily work, but are not performing at the level they should be.

As a result, parents receive a report card noting their child has grades in the 90s, but is not passing to the second grade, even though teachers mark on the report card the level where the students is working.

By changing to a letter system -- E for Excellent, S for Satisfactory, I for Improvement Needed and U for Unsatisfactory -- teachers can continue to grade daily work on a numerical basis, but give six-weeks grades that better reflect where a student is in relation to where he should be for the year.

For example, Mrs. Adams said, a student may be several units behind at the end of the fifth six-weeks, but still doing well in daily work. In that case, the six-weeks grade would be an I or U because the work is unsatisfactory.

Because the request involves a change in district policy, trustees were not allowed to vote on the matter Thursday.

However, they asked Greenawalt to place it on the action agenda for the next meeting on July 26. The Shirley waivers were two of three presented to the board for action.

All waivers must be approved by the local district, then submitted to the Texas Education Agency for final approval.

Greenawalt said the high school has requested a waiver granting one elective credit for TAAS remediation.

Shirley principal David Fanning and teacher Shelia Straughan waited until 10:15 p.m. to ask that they be allowed to change the current six-week reporting period to a nine-week quarterly system, saying it would be easier to get parents to come to conferences if they were held four times a year rather than six.

In addition, said Greenawalt, school officials have told him that it would be easier to present classroom materials on a nine-week system.

Fanning said a survey of parents conducted at the end of the year showed 90 percent like the portfolio grading system that was used in science and social studies last year.

As a result, he said, the school wants to use the portfolios for all

Hereford ISD due $613,000 from state for attendance

The Hereford Independent School District is owed more than $600,000 by the State of Texas for under-reported school attendance during the 1993-94 school year. Superintendent Charles W. Greenawalt said Friday.

The Amarillo Daily News reported in its Friday edition that HISD owed the Texas Education Agency $613,702.

"That information is incorrect," Greenawalt said. "We do not owe them $613,000, the state owes us $613,000."

The superintendent said Norm

Smith, controller of school finance, has been in contact with TEA and received confirmation that Hereford is owed the money.

Greenawalt said Texas school districts were told last year to estimate average daily attendance (ADA) for the next five years, beginning with the 1993-94 school year.

State funds were allocated based on those figures, with the provision that districts which over-estimated 1993-94 ADAs would have their 1994-95 state allocations reduced a corresponding amount.

On the other hand, districts that under-estimated ADAs for the school year would be owed a refund.

That money would be refunded -- in whole or in part -- only if funds were available, Greenawalt said.

As a result, he said, no plans have been made for spending that $613,000 until the district actually receives a check or notice that the money is coming.

Bids to be let for roof, A/C at Shirley, board decides

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

Shirley Intermediate School should receive a new roof and air conditioning system sometime this fall -- that is, unless the HISD board of trustees decides to further delay a project that has been in the discussion phase for nearly a year.

Trustees voted 5-2 during their regular meeting on Thursday to authorize district architect Larry Harvey to assemble blueprints and gather bids for the system, which is estimated to cost some $900,000.

The action reaffirms votes from previous board meetings, but was taken after considerable deliberation about possible alternative systems and ways to cut costs.

Harvey told trustees that a standing seam metal roof -- like the one installed last summer over the back portion of the Stanton Education Services Center -- would cost $275,000 at Shirley.

However, he added, the district would not be able to get a contractor to issue a 40-year warranty on the installation because of dozens of holes from roof-mounted air conditioning units that could leak in the future.

He instead recommended the school install a heating and air conditioning system similar to that installed last summer at Hereford High School, in which a water chiller would be used to cool classrooms and boilers would heat them.

Cost of the project would be $900,000, but Harvey said that includes new ceilings, insulation and lighting in the school.

Discussions on the need for a new roof at Shirley began in July 1993 when Harvey was directed to look at what could be done there.

Thursday's meeting with Harvey was the latest in several sessions with the architect about the project.

Superintendent Charles W. Greenawalt said there is currently $117,000 in the district's construction budget, and $800,000 will be appropriated for next fiscal year for construction.

While the Shirley project would wipe out that fund until the 1995-96 school year, Greenawalt said, it would mean that trustees could then focus on construction needs on other campuses.

Trustee Randy Tooley questioned whether the Shirley project needed to be done before other work in the district, asking how the work fits in with other district and board goals.

"Shirley's already waited two years," Trustee Mike Veazey declared, while Greenawalt said there are no other major projects pending.

Harvey reminded board members of a building needs assessment done a couple of years ago, in which the Shirley was a top priority.

In fact, he said, that project is next in line on that list, since roofing work at Stanton and the high school air conditioning are finished.

Harvey said installing a modified bitumen roof -- like that installed on the old Stanton building last year -- would cost nearly as much as a standing seam roof, but a slope would have to be built into the Shirley roof for water runoff.

The life expectancy of that roof is much shorter than the 40-year warranty on a standing seam metal roof.

Harvey said one option other than roof-mounted air conditioners or the water chiller system would be to install window-mounted refrigerated air units.

But, he said, the problem with those is that their energy efficiency rating is far lower than that of a chilled water unit.

Community activist Davis Ford asked why existing evaporative units could not be moved from the roof to windows.

Board president Steve Wright explained that trustees have eliminated that option as being unlikely.

Tooley asked why refrigerated units could not be mounted on the standing seam roof, but Harvey reminded him of the dangers of roof penetrations and added that trustees have previously indicated they want to maintain the aesthetic look of the building. Roof-mounted units, he said, would be visible from the west and north if they were put on top of the new roof.

Trustee Jim Marsh made a motion that the project be put on hold until trustees can develop a construction priority list.

That was seconded by Tooley and supported on a vote by Trustee Raul Valdez, but failed 4-3.

Trustee Ron Weishaar then made a motion that Harvey proceed with preparing blueprints and bid documents and solicit bids for the project.

That motion passed with Valdez and Tooley voting against it.

In an unrelated construction item, assistant superintendent Don Cumpston presented trustees with the need to deal with changing regulations surrounding the district's fuel tanks.

Cumpston said the district will be required this year to install spill and overflow protection devices and by 1998 must make sure the tank is corrosion-proof.

He said the district could upgrade the existing 17-year-old 11,700 gallon in-ground fuel tank with corrosion protection, spill and overflow protection and annual testing for $8,300.

However, he recommended spending an estimated $29,000 -- which he said his maintenance budget would absorb -- for a new in-ground, 20,000 gallon split tank to hold 10,000 gallons each of diesel fuel and gasoline.

That, he said, would allow the district to buy diesel by the tanker load, saving 5 to 10 cents a gallon and would eliminate the current above-ground diesel tank.

Another estimated $5,800 would be needed to install an automatic monitoring system, which would report on inventory, usage, leakage or possible theft and would eliminate the need to spend $500 a year on testing for leaks.

Trustees agreed informally to allow Cumpston to prepare bid documents for the new tank and monitoring system.

The items had not been placed on the agenda as a formal action item, but will require board approval before bids are awarded and contracts let.

King's Manor plans renovations

Keith Perry, left, CEO of Sears Methodist Retirement System, and Shirley Garrison, chairman of King's Manor development program committee, look over renovation plans for the Manor and Westgate Nursing Center. The pair outlined plans for a $200,000 capital improvement program to a committee here Thursday at noon. The Sears system, with headquarters in Abilene, acquired the Manor three weeks ago. Future plans will also be outlined at the annual King's Manor Founder's Day Barbecue Saturday evening.

Plans for a $200,000 capital improvement program at King's Manor and Westgate were outlined Thursday when Keith Perry, chief executive officer of Sears Methodist Retirement System, spoke at a development program committee meeting.

The major expense of the improvement will be installation of central air conditioning in both the Manor Center and Westgate Nursing Center. Other work at the Manor includes new furniture and carpet, upgrading dining room service, and upgrade of lighting in the hallways and library. Some renovations are also set for Westgate.

Board approves $114.6 million for building 152,000 prison beds

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock says speeding up the state's massive prison-building program is what Texans want.

The Legislative Budget Board on Thursday approved another $114.6 million for the construction, a program designed to give the state more than 152,000 prison beds by August 1995. The board had authorized $102.7 million to prisons in April.

Bullock said lawmakers are following through to meet the top concern of Texas citizens.

"That's where the priority of Texas people is," Bullock said.

"I don't believe in government by polls ... but the vast majority of the people that talk to me still rank their safety at home and their place of business as No. 1."

Thursday's action gave the prison-building program $33.4 million from the Treasury's unclaimed money fund, which includes money from dormant bank accounts, and shifts $81.2 million from the state employee group health insurance. Officials said that money had been saved through use of a "managed health care" system.

Another $11.4 million for prison expansion is expected to come from savings within the Texas Department of Criminal Justice itself, officials said.

With state prisons full to capacity and state convicts backing up into crowded county jails, Texas has been on a massive prison expansion program.

From a total of 52,000 beds in 1991, the prison system will grow to break-even point by October." He also announced that several grants to help on the capital improvements are "a distinct possibility."

L. Reeder Huddleston, interim administrator, spoke to the group about fundraising. He is also president of development for the Sears system.

Garrison said the capital campaign is planned for four weeks. Members of the committee were to turn in prospect lists before next Friday, when the group meets again.

Perry is expected to outline future plans and explain the operations of the facilities at the annual King's Manor Founder's Day Barbecue Saturday evening.

more than 152,000 beds by next year.

John Keel, budget board director, said that total would include nearly 99,000 prison beds, 23,270 beds in a new state jail program for nonviolent offenders, 13,000 spaces for inmates being transferred, and 10,600 beds for substance abuse treatment. The final total also includes 6,712 temporary emergency spaces in counties.

The faster building program was ordered by state leaders in January.

Bullock acknowledged that the funding for new prisons was taking money away from other state programs. But he noted that, "If we weren't putting the money into prisons, we'd be owing the counties for the (inmate) backlog."

The board also approved spending $11.8 million from the unclaimed money fund on science, math and other needed textbooks.

Brothers denied motion for rehearing in assault case

Two brothers who were convicted of aggravated assault last October will not have their case heard in the Seventh Court of Appeals.

The appellate court overruled a motion for rehearing of the case of Edward Martinez, 24, and Joe Martinez Jr., 28.

They were convicted by a jury of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon in connection with a fight that erupted in the early hours of Jan. 18, 1993.

Originally indicted for attempted murder, the brothers' conviction on the lesser charge resulted in a three-year prison sentence and $10,000 fine each, imposed by a 222nd District Court jury.

Denial of the motion for rehearing was based on the fact that the appellants failed to file a written notice of appeal within a specified 90-day period after sentencing.

The appellate court ruling notes that the written notice was filed on Jan. 27, 91 days after sentencing.

Edward Martinez was tried for shooting Consuelo Avila after he and his brother followed a car to a residence in the 700 block of South Texas.

During the incident, Joe Martinez allegedly shot Alfredo Martinez, a relative of the Avila family.

Both were charged with attempted murder but the trial jury took the option of a conviction for aggravated assault with a deadly weapon.

Charges of attempted murder and aggravated assault still pend against Edward Martinez for allegedly shooting Ruben Avila.

The Martinez brothers have been free on bond.

Blood could link Simpson to crime

Analysis may be key to prosecution's case

By LINDA DEUTSCH
AP Special Correspondent
LOS ANGELES (AP) - With a preliminary hearing near conclusion, prosecutors must directly link O.J. Simpson to two killings to support holding him for trial. Blood analysis may be their key.

"We're not at the end, but we're getting close," said Loyola University Law School Professor Laurie Levenson. "What they have to put on now is blood typing and the coroner to tell us about the wounds and how the killing took place."

Levenson, a former prosecutor, said the coroner also could link a knife Simpson bought to wounds on his ex-wife and her friend.

"They have put on fairly strong circumstantial evidence," she said. "Now they have to get down to hard physical evidence."

Some of that physical evidence will be allowed even though detectives didn't have a warrant when they found it at Simpson's estate, Municipal Judge Kathleen Kennedy-Powell ruled Thursday.

The defense had sought to bar a bloody right-hand glove found on the estate, blood spots in the driveway and a blood spot on the handle of Simpson's Ford Bronco. A left-hand glove that appeared to match the one found at the estate was recovered at the crime scene.

Simpson, 46, is accused of murdering Nicole Brown Simpson, 35, and Ronald Goldman, 25, on June 12 outside Ms. Simpson's condominium. The preliminary hearing is to determine whether he will stand trial.

On Thursday, Detective Tom Lange testified that five droplets of blood at the crime scene failed to match the blood of the victims. A police expert on blood evidence was preparing to explain how he compared the blood of Simpson and the victims to the droplets when court recessed for the day.

If Simpson's blood matches the droplets, prosecutors could argue that he cut himself fighting with the victims, trailed blood on his way home and dropped the bloody glove at his estate.

Simpson had a cut on his left middle finger when he returned to Los Angeles the morning after the killings. He said he cut it on a drinking glass in his Chicago hotel room when he received news of the deaths.

The lead investigator, Detective Philip Vannatter, acknowledged under cross-examination that there were no cuts on the left glove to match those on Simpson's hand. But he said the gloves could have been dropped during the struggle.

Vannatter testified that he believes the killer lost the left glove at the crime scene and that the right glove was dropped at the estate.

A witness who lived in Simpson's guest house testified earlier that he heard thumps the night of the slayings in the area where detectives found the glove the next morning. Vannatter said he thought the glove was dropped by the person who made the thumps.

Levenson said prosecutors may theorize that Simpson scaled a fence, bumped into the guest house and dropped the glove in his haste to return home and be ready for a 10:45 p.m. limousine ride to the airport. A trace of blood was found on top of the fence, according to a search warrant affidavit.

Simpson left for Chicago before the bodies were found. His lawyers suggested Thursday that someone else could have dropped or thrown the bloody glove on a pathway.

"The defense strategy seems to be to throw out any kind of doubt and hope it sticks," said Levenson.

In their motion to suppress the evidence, defense lawyers said police violated Simpson's constitutional rights by scaling his wall without a warrant.

But Kennedy-Powell said police clearly were trying to notify Simpson of his ex-wife's death and ensure the safety of those inside.

The detectives "were in fact acting for a benevolent purpose in light of the brutal attack and that they reasonably believed that a further delay could have resulted in the unnecessary loss of life," the judge said.

Opposition to federal program growing in conservative groups

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) - The State Board of Education is being pressured by conservative groups to turn down millions of federal dollars offered through the Goals 2000 education improvement effort.

"This money doesn't just come with strings attached. It dangles a noose," Diane Hensley of Alvin, representing Concerned Women for America, told the board Thursday.

The program "is an invitation to bring Surgeon General Joycelyn Elders' condom crusade to Texas," said Anne Newman of the Texas Family Research Center in San Antonio.

State Rep. Carolyn Park, R-Eules, asked the board on behalf of the 73-lawmaker Texas Conservative Coalition to reject Goals 2000 money. She said it "represents federal intrusion into local control of education."

Stephanie Cecil of the Texas Eagle Forum said the program would lead to school-based health clinics offering "reproductive services to children."

But supporters of state participation in Goals 2000, which could mean about $60 million to Texas over two years, said the federal legislation is meant to boost academic achievement and wouldn't require establishment of school health clinics or any other program.

The legislation signed this year by President Clinton requires participating states to develop, but not implement, education reform plans that set voluntary standards in various areas. It authorizes grants to states and local school districts for education reforms.

The federal program "isn't trying to force anybody to do anything," said John Stevens of the Texas Business and Education Coalition. "We want to achieve excellence in education."

Joe Randolph of Longview said the federal program's emphasis on high academic standards dovetails with a similar state effort.

Added Ermalee Boice of the Texas State Teachers Association, "I believe it would be criminal to turn down what could be almost $60 million for our children because of a disinformation campaign." The Texas Family Planning Association also supports Goals 2000.

Opponents said while the legislation's goals are broad, such as "All children will arrive at school ready to learn," it includes references to providing students with access to social services and health care. State officials said those references aren't binding.

Ms. Hensley of Concerned Women for America, noted that the federal funds would be just a tiny fraction of the billions in state money spent on education.

The board plans no action before its September meeting. Members could decide whether to create a Goals 2000 advisory committee and ask for $7.7 million in planning funds this year. If the legislation is fully funded the following year, Texas could receive another $52 million.

Education Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno said the state wouldn't apply for the federal funds if such items as school-based health clinics are required. But he said in two readings of the legislation, he could find no such requirements.

"My reading of it is that it's the most flexible piece of federal legislation we've ever had, and that it allows this state to basically determine its priorities," Meno said. "What I'll be doing is looking at putting a proposal in front of them (the board) that will focus the use of this money on basic skills."

grading beginning this year.

Mrs. Straughan said the school has added a grade conversion chart to the portfolios that makes it easier to convert portfolio grades -- 5 for "Independently," 3 for "With Support" and 1 for "Not Yet" -- to numerical grades for promotion to junior high or for students who leave town.

The grades, she said, show if the student has mastered a particular skill, can do it with some assistance or has not reached that level yet.

Trustee Ron Weishaar's motion to approve all three waiver requests passed unanimously.

In other district business Thursday: -- Assistant superintendent Corky Lockmiller presented preliminary copies of a district technology plan and a draft language development plan.

The technology plan outlines proposed technological acquisitions at all schools over the next five years, while the language plan addresses ways to improve bilingual education.

Both plans will be presented to the board for approval at a later date.

-- Greenawalt gave trustees the preliminary campus action plan, a massive document compiled by the District Leadership Team.

He asked trustees to review the document and make suggestions.

-- Trustees approved a plan to enroll the HISD in Texpool, a statewide investment program.

Trustee Jim Marsh argued against the proposal, saying the district needs to support local banks that contract with the district as a depository.

Weishaar's motion to approve Texpool passed by a 4-2-1 vote, with Marsh and Tooley opposing and board president Steve Wright abstaining.

-- Greenawalt reported that a "desktop" audit of the district by State Comptroller John Sharp's office showed the only area they recommended cutting funds was in extracurricular activities.

The review compared Hereford with 25 similar districts and showed district funding here is below recommended levels in all areas but extracurricular activities.

However, he said, the review may include club funds as well, which are paid by students and are included in that budget line-item.

PROTECTING AGAINST CATARACTS

Sooner or later, if they live long enough, everyone will get cataracts, the clouding of the natural lens over the eye. In most cases, cataracts are part of the normal aging process and slowly the lens less able to focus light to help us to see.

To some extent, it is possible to protect against cataracts, or at least to delay their appearance. Basic: wear sunglasses outdoors to protect against ultraviolet light. Stop smoking; smokers are more susceptible to cataracts than non-smokers. Recent studies indicate that good nutrition and adequate levels of vitamin C and E also can help to prevent cataracts.

If your vision has gotten worse over a period of time, if colors do not seem as bright as they used to be, or if you notice glare from lights at night, these may be symptoms of a developing cataract. But there may be no symptoms at all, so regular eye examinations are recommended.

Tour de France fares well in England

PORTSMOUTH, England (AP) - The Tour de France had a successful two-day run as the Tour de England. More than 2 million English spectators lined the streets, perched on hills and hung out of pub windows to watch the world's biggest cycling race.

"We waited 20 years before we came back with the Tour de France, and I'm very sure it won't be 20 years before we come back again," tour director Jean Marie Leblanc said. For the first time since a single stage was held in Plymouth in 1974, and only the second time in its 81 years, the tour came to England - this time for two legs, from Dover to Brighton, and an out-and-back course from Portsmouth. The crowds were treated to another tight finish Thursday. Italy's Nicola Minali won the fifth leg in a sprint, edging Germany's Olaf Ludwig by less than a wheel. Another Italian, Silvio Martinello, was right behind in third. All but 35 of the 182 finishers were given the same time of 4 hours, 10 minutes, 49 seconds. Flavio Vanzella of Italy maintained the overall leader's yellow jersey. Belgium's Johann Museeuw kept second place, with tour favorite and three-time champion Miguel Indurain of Spain in third. The riders returned to France after Thursday's stage. The sixth leg - the longest of the 20-stage tour - was a 169-mile journey from Cherbourg to Rennes today. "We had two exciting stages in Britain," Leblanc said, "But one of the things which has really shocked the people that follow the Tour de France has been the reception we've had from the British public. It has been incredible.

LeMond drops out of bike race

RENNES, France (AP) - Three-time champion Greg LeMond dropped out of the Tour de France today, fatigued and out of contention only a third of the way through the three-week race. LeMond, 33, became the first American to win the world's premier cycling race in 1986. After an amazing recovery from a serious accidental gunshot wound, he won again in 1989 and 1990. But he finished seventh in 1991, dropped out in 1992 and didn't start in 1993.

Canyon beats Hereford in All-Star tourney here

Canyon's 13-year-old Babe Ruth All-Stars played near-flawless defense and hit the ball hard, and that resulted in a 14-4 win over the Hereford All-Stars in the opening game of a three-team district tournament in Hereford. Canyon is to meet Plainview at 7 tonight at the Kids Inc. Complex. The loser will play Hereford at 7 p.m. Saturday. The tournament follows a double elimination format, so the loser of Saturday's game will be out. Hereford opened the scoring in the first when Andrew Ramirez scored on Nicholas Whatley's single. Canyon answered with six runs in the top of the second and had another six-run inning in the sixth. They added single runs in the third and fifth innings. Hereford scored runs in the third, when Ramirez came home on Jeremy Lopez' groundout, and in the fifth, when Cody Sargent scored on Lopez' single. Hereford entered the bottom of the sixth trailing 14-3 and needing two runs to avoid the ten-run rule. Hereford only got one, when Brent Huseman singled and scored on two rare errors by Canyon. Canyon totaled 12 hits while limiting Hereford to three.

Russell, J.D. Alaniz and Art and Charlotte Clark. Third place went to the team of Steve Sanders, Jayson Mines, Dave Hopper, Lili Shipman and Jay Johnson. The annual Twilight Tournament is scheduled this evening, and the King's Manor Scramble will be held Saturday morning.

World Cup adds millions of dollars to US economy

DALLAS (AP) - The first American edition of the world's most popular sports event has been a winner at that most American of games: making money.

The World Cup, soccer's world championship, is pumping billions of dollars into the economies of the nine host cities, according to economists, business people and political leaders.

Just like the occasional 0-0 draw in soccer, there have been some misses: Restaurants near the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif., where the championship match will be played July 17, say fear of soccer crowds has cut into their patronage. And hotels near Walt Disney World and other theme parks in Orlando, Fla., say business was down because families didn't want their vacations to coincide with the soccer crush.

But overall, an Associated Press survey at the midpoint of the World Cup found hotels crowded if not overflowing, restaurants and bars doing a steady business, and local officials pleased they lured the tournament to their cities.

"The exposure the city has received, especially because of the opening ceremonies being held here, will do a lot for people learning about Chicago as a vacation and business destination," said Kate Haymaker, spokeswoman for the Chicago

Convention and Tourism Bureau. "The games were worth more advertising dollars than we could ever pay."

In December 1992, a study by two University of Southern California professors forecast the World Cup would pump a total of $4 billion into local economies. That figure included spending by the organizers but did not include such things as air fares and other inter-city travel.

With more than a week to go in the tournament, it's still too early to say whether that forecast was accurate. But most people who had hoped the World Cup would be a financial hit in their cities and shops like what they see:

Nicholas Lyras, the deputy director of the New York City Sports Commission, estimates the cup will pour $215 million directly into the economy of the New York-New Jersey area, and $430 million indirectly. Hundreds of Italian, Irish

Reds rally three times to catch, defeat Pirates

By The Associated Press

The Cincinnati Reds were beat, and the game hadn't even started. An all-night flight from Miami sapped them of their energy, and it seemed that this night would be one to write off to travel trouble.

RED ALERT! RED ALERT!

Demonstrating a resiliency not seen in Cincinnati since the mid-70s and a fighting spirit that would make Pete Rose proud, the Reds rallied three times Thursday night and beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 8-7 in 11 innings.

Kevin Mitchell singled home the winning run with one out in the 11th.

Reds manager Davey Johnson, who let his tired team arrive at the ballpark two hours later than usual after their 4 a.m. return from a 10-day road trip, said his team's wake-up call came in the sixth inning.

"We were kind of flat the whole first part of the game," he said. "We were tired from getting in at 4 a.m., and those 10-day road trips take a lot out of you. In the sixth inning, we realized we were at home."

Pittsburgh took a 5-3 lead into the eighth, but lost it on Tony Fernandez's RBI single and a bases-loaded walk to Hal Morris.

They took a 7-5 lead in the 10th on RBI singles by Carlos Garcia and Jay Bell, but saw that margin evaporate when Mitchell doubled and Morris hit Blas Minor's first pitch over the wall in right-center for his seventh home run.

After Johnny Ruffin (4-0) blanked the Pirates in the 11th, Minor (0-1) gave up a pair of walks and Mitchell's single just inside the third-base line.

Astros 9, Cubs 3

At Chicago, Craig Biggio had four hits against Chicago for the third time this season and drove in three runs.

Steve Finley and Scott Servais added three hits apiece for the Astros, who finished with 17 hits and sparked defensively, turning five double plays.

Darryl Kile (6-3) won for the first time in four career decisions against the Cubs. He was backed by four double plays in his six innings.

Biggio drove in the Astros' first run with a two-out single in the first against Willie Banks (8-7) and added a two-run single in the seventh. Banks lasted 5 1-3 innings, allowing 12 hits and seven earned runs.

Servais hit his seventh homer. Steve Buechele hit his 10th for the Cubs.

Expos 7, Padres 0

At San Diego, Ken Hill pitched a five-hitter to join Jimmy Key of the Yankees as baseball's only 13-game winners, and Darrin Fletcher hit a three-run homer.

Hill (13-3) pitched his first shutout and second complete game, striking out eight and walking one.

Fletcher's 10th homer gave the Expos a 3-0 lead in the first against Andy Ashby (4-7), and Cliff Floyd hit a two-run double in a three-run fifth.

Mets 3, Dodgers 0

At Los Angeles, Jason Jacome blanked Los Angeles on six hits in his second major-league appearance.

Jacome (1-1), who joined the Mets' rotation when Dwight Gooden was suspended for violating his substance abuse aftercare program, did not walk a batter, struck out four and allowed four hits in the final 8 1-3 innings.

He allowed only one runner as far as third base.

Todd Hundley hit his 13th homer to spark a three-run fourth against Tom Candiotti (6-4), who gave up six hits in eight innings.

David Segui hit an RBI grounder and Ryan Thompson had a sacrifice fly.

Giants 5, Phillies 4

At San Francisco, Matt Williams' 31st homer highlighted a three-run sixth.

Darryl Strawberry, robbed of a homer by Milt Thompson in the sixth, went 0-for-3 with a walk in his debut with the Giants and first major-league game since June 1993. He underwent treatment for drug and alcohol abuse last month.

Bud Black (2-0), making his fourth start after off-season elbow and knee surgeries, gave up two runs in six innings. Rod Beck closed for his 16th save.

Darren Lewis hit his third homer in the third against Shawn Boskie (4-5), and Williams connected after Barry Bonds' RBI double.

Rockies 2, Marlins 1

At Miami, David Nied retired the last nine batters in a seven-hitter and Andres Galarraga hit a tie-breaking single in the eighth inning.

Nied (8-4) retired the last nine batters in his third straight victory and second complete game. He walked four and struck out five.

Eric Young reached on an error in the eighth and Walt Weiss walked. An out later, Galarraga hit his game-winner off John Johnstone (1-1).

Florida's Rich Scheid, making his second major-league start and first since 1992, allowed five hits and one run in seven innings.

American League races shaping up

By The Associated Press

Halfway to the expanded playoffs, the American League has three pretty decent-looking divisional races.

The Cleveland Indians became the last AL team to play their 81st game Thursday, losing to the Texas Rangers 6-4 in a matchup of first-place teams.

Texas maintained its three-game lead in the AL West over Oakland and Cleveland saw its AL Central lead shrink to one game over Chicago.

"It would be nice to be in their division, but first place in any division is still first place. I played here for a long time and I know if there's a pennant flying in Texas, this place will go crazy, just like it will in Cleveland," said Indians manager Mike Hargrove, a member of the Rangers from 1974-78.

In the AL East, New York increased its lead over Baltimore to 1 1/2 games by beating California 5-2. The Orioles lost 6-4 to the A's.

No team has been able to coast this season, but the Yankees have been in first longer than the Indians or Rangers.

New York moved into first on May 9 and has been there for the past 60 days. Cleveland has been in front of Chicago for 27 days and the Texas has held first for 39 days.

Among the three, Texas has the biggest lead.

The Rangers kept their advantage at three games over Oakland by getting another surprisingly good outing from Tim Lary, one of baseball's biggest retdreads.

In his second appearance - his first start - for the Rangers, Leary left after 5 2-3 innings with a 6-4 lead and got the victory thanks to Dean Palmer's two-run homer in the fourth that tied the game 2-2 and his three-run, 438-foot blast in the fifth that put the Rangers ahead to stay, 6-3.

It was Palmer's third two-homer game since June 18. Since then, he's had 11 homers, giving him 17 for the season. His batting average also has skyrocketed, going from .229 on June 24 to .268 following Thursday's 3-for-4 game.

Leary, pitching for his seventh different major-league team, is the 12th different starter the Rangers have used this season. In his first appearance for Texas, he allowed only one hit and struck out five in 4 2-3 innings.

Tom Henke pitched the ninth for his ninth save, striking out Jim Thome with the bases loaded to end the game.

Yankees 5, Angels 2

At New York, Jimmy Key ended the Yankees' three-game losing streak and became the first 13-game winner in the AL.

Key (13-2) allowed six hits in seven innings, with Bob Wickman and Steve Howe finishing up. Mark Langston (5-5) took the loss.

Two-out singles by Wade Boggs and Danny Tartabull drove in a pair of runs in the seventh inning, snapping a 2-2 tie. Randy Velarde had a homer and Paul O'Neill drove in the final run with a pinch-single.

Athletics 6, Orioles 4

At Baltimore, Geronimo Berroa singled in two runs to cap a three-run sixth inning.

Scott Brosius had three hits and scored twice for the A's.

Todd Van Poppel (5-7) got the victory despite allowing seven hits and four runs in five innings. Mark Eichhorn (5-2) had his 20 2-3 scoreless inning streak ended and took the loss.

Mariners 4, Red Sox 3

At Boston, Brian Turang singled

in the winning run in the 10th inning as Seattle overcame a 3-0 deficit.

Randy Johnson (10-4) struck out nine, walked three and allowed five hits in nine innings. The Mariners got three runs and six hits in the last two innings off reliever Ken Ryan (2-2).

Royals 8, Brewers 3

At Kansas City, Mike Macfarlane's three-run homer climaxed a six-run seventh inning against Cal Eldred (9-9), the pitcher of the month for June.

Tom Gordon (9-4) won his fourth straight, giving up five hits, walking three and striking out a season-high nine in eight innings.

Blue Jays 4, Twins 3

At Minneapolis, Rick Aguilera's two-out, ninth-inning wild pitch scored pinch-runner Rob Butler and gave Toronto the win.

Tony Castillo (4-1) picked up the win with 3 2-3 innings of four-hit shutout relief and Darren Hall got his seventh save.

White Sox 9, Tigers 5

At Detroit, Chicago won for the 15th time in 19 games.

Wilson Alvarez (10-4) allowed six hits in 5 2-3 innings, striking out seven, and Jose DeLeon struck out five in 3 1-3 innings of relief.

and Mexican fans came to the area to root for their teams, and "they wouldn't have been here without the World Cup, so the games were very positive events for the city," said Joseph Spinatto, executive director of the city's Hotel Association.

about $80 million," he said. The key to all this cash is people-soccer fans from around the world, flooding to the United States to cheer on their teams and get a U.S. vacation in the bargain.

In Boston, organizers are confident the cup will wind up adding $255 million to the tills of the city's merchants. "It's really the entire package: the hotels, food, leisure activities," said Derek Ray, spokesman for Boston Soccer, Inc.

Four years ago, merchants and officials in Italy prepared for a flood of World Cup tourists and a financial bonanza that never came. Attendance for many games was low, fans who did come often camped or stayed with friends and relatives, and the money stayed in their pockets.

In Stanford, Calif., merchants around the game site at Stanford Stadium can't serve the crowds quickly enough. "It's been great," said Janene Gilmartin, manager of the Stanford Track House, a sporting goods store adjacent to the stadium. "Game days have been a little out of control at times, which is good."

In the United States, the crowds have come and they are spending. Stadiums have been sold out for virtually all games, with turnstile counts of more than 90 percent of capacity. The tickets have been extremely hot items, especially in Chicago, Los Angeles, Washington and New York. Even in Dallas, where a tournament-low crowd of 44,000 watched Nigeria beat Bulgaria 3-0 in the first round, interest has stepped up. Saturday's quarterfinal between Brazil and the Netherlands is a sellout and scalpers are asking $175-$250 a seat for tickets with a face value of $55.

Games at the Citrus Bowl in Orlando have been flowing with money for bars and eateries. An informal survey by the Downtown Development Board showed that two downtown bars, Scruffy Murphy's and Mulvaney's Irish Pub, reported sales 300 percent higher than before the World Cup. The nighttime entertainment complex at Church Street Station was turning away crowds every night of the tournament, and three downtown restaurants were reporting more than a 100 percent increase in business. "Business in downtown Orlando is extremely strong. Merchants are very, very happy," said city spokesman Wayne Weinberg. "Downtown-area hotels have had two strong weeks."

Because a high percentage of the fans are from other countries, they don't just go home after games. "Here there were four games and international travel involved, so there was less chance of someone just driving into town and staying with a relative," said Litman, the Michigan economist. "They were more likely to stay at hotels and eat at restaurants."

All sports events, from high school basketball tournaments to the Olympics, leave a trail of dollar signs. Economists often argue the impact is deceiving, because money spent by local fans on a sports event is just money they can't spend on other entertainment or recreation, such as movies and museums.

In Pontiac, Mich., David Littman, senior economist with Comerica Bank, said the four World Cup games at the Silverdome lived up to expectations, bringing in more than $60 million so far. "All indications are there was increased mall activity, with good sales of souvenirs and other goods. It will probably fall right the economy," Littman said. "It wasn't just a redistribution of money. It was definitely an injection of spending and income that boosted the metro area incomes."

That international flavor could also mean other economic advantages.

Orlando Mayor Glenda Hood expects long-term benefits from foreign visitors interested in doing business there, or in paving the way for Central Florida firms to do business in Europe and Mexico. Each of the five nations with teams in Orlando established temporary consulates at City Hall, where brochures and contacts on travel and business opportunities were available.

Not everyone is happy, however. Hotels in some of the World Cup cities were left with empty rooms when organizers over-projected sales and blocked them off for distribution through an expensive - and profit-making - World Cup Accommodations Bureau.

John Marks, president of the San Francisco Convention and Visitors Bureau, said the city's hotel bookings were well below projections.

"The expectations have definitely been readjusted," said Margaret Wilkinson, sales director of the Hilton Suites in Auburn Hills, where the U.S. and Swedish teams stayed before games played at the Pontiac Silverdome. "When reality set in... it's been consistent but definitely disappointing, compared with our original expectations."

Art Carter, director of the Massachusetts Lodging Association, said World Cup traffic was far below projections. Before the games, fans were expected to book the equivalent of 92,000 hotel room nights. At the time of the survey in late June, only 37,000-50,000 room nights had been booked, according to the hotel association.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

THE ANCIENT SCRIBES!

SCRIBES WERE WRITERS WHO WERE EMPLOYED, PUBLICLY, TO WRITE UNDER DICTATION AND TO DRAW UP LEGAL DOCUMENTS (JER. 36:32) (JER. 32:12). A DESCRIPTION OF AN ANCIENT SCRIBE IS GIVEN IN EZEKIEL 9:2 BUT MUCH OF OUR KNOWLEDGE OF SCRIBES IS OBTAINED FROM STATUES AND CARVED BAS-RELIEFS LEFT BY THE ANCIENTS! FROM THE EGYPTIAN DYNASTY IV HAVE BEEN PRESERVED PICTURES OF SEATED SCRIBES WITH THEIR SHARPENED RUSH PENS AND PALETTES. AT ANCIENT NINEVEH, CARVINGS SHOW SCRIBES LISTING THE LOOT AND THE CAPTIVES FROM A TOWN CAPTURED BY SENNACHERIB! IT WAS ONLY THROUGH THE WORK OF SCRIBES THAT THE SCRIPTURES WERE TRANSMITTED FOR CENTURIES---IT WAS ARDUOUS AND FATIGUING WORK AND IN A.D. 301 EMPEROR DIOCLETIAN SET THE WAGES OF SCRIBES AT 25 DENARI! PER 100 LINES, FOR WRITING OF THE FIRST QUALITY, AND AT 20 DENARI! FOR THAT OF SECOND QUALITY! AMONG THE ISRAELITES, LEVITES WERE EMPLOYED AS SCRIBES FOR THE BUSINESS OF REPAIRING THE TEMPLE (II CHRON. 34:13)

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I wonder how many mothers of young children who read your column realize the importance of reading to their youngsters.

I was fortunate in that I had a mother who read to me. When I came across this poem, I thought, "This is something Ann Landers should print." Will you?—Woodland Hills, Calif.

DEAR WOODY: With pleasure. Thank you for asking. Here it is—as relevant as if it were written yesterday, when, in fact, it was written almost 100 years ago.

The Reading Mother
By Strickland W. Gillilan
I had a mother who read to me,
Sagas of pirates who scoured the sea,
Cutlasses clenched in their yellow teeth,
"Blackbirds" stowed in the hold beneath.
I had a mother who read me lays,
Of ancient and gallant and golden days.
Stories of Marmion and Ivanhoe,
Which every boy has a right to know.
I had a mother who read me things,
That wholesome life to the boy heart brings—
Stories that stir with an upward touch,
Oh, that each mother of boys were such!

You may have tangible wealth untold; Caskets of jewels and coffers of gold. Richer than I, you can never be. I had a mother who read to me.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Many years ago, my husband and I enjoyed the friendship of several couples. We got together for various social occasions. Over a long period, we noticed that we were the only ones extending invitations, so we stopped and waited for invitations from them. They never came. We run into these couples occasionally, and we are still on friendly terms. But it ends there. How can a couple in their early 50s develop new friends? We don't belong to any church. We considered inviting our old friends, but since they have not called us in many years, we feel it would not be appropriate.

Sometimes couples can get o wrapped up in work, children and families that they fail to think about the future. One day, they will wish they had friends and a social life. Any ideas?—Just the Two of Us in Providence, R.I.

DEAR R.I.: Almost always it's the women who make the social plans—so start there.

Concentrate on one or two couples whose company you really enjoy. Invite them to a simple dinner (or take them out) and don't feel uncomfortable if they don't reciprocate immediately. If you treat them twice in a row, so what? It's no big deal. It's perfectly OK to be generous if you can afford it. Enjoy!

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Here is a "Gem of the Day" I made up. I hope you like it well enough to print.—Bert McDowell Jr., Lt. Col. USAF (Ret.)
Dear Lt. Col. McDowell Jr.: Here's your gem:

"I can still get into my World War II uniform...but I can't button it!"
And now here's a P.S. from Ann: Dear Colonel, let me assure you, you are not alone.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am a 30-year-old woman. I found out a month ago that I have diverticulosis. I would like to know more about this. Could stress be a cause? Do I have a higher risk for colon cancer? My dad had colon cancer in his late 30s, so I am quite concerned. —S.R.

ANSWER: You are young for diverticulosis. It is rare to have it and be younger than 40. In fact, the incidence of diverticulosis follows an upward curve with age, so that by age 60, at least 50 percent of Americans have signs of it.

No need to dwell on often-repeated facts about the little colon outpouchings that define diverticulosis. But it is well to repeat the salient fact — that refined foods, so much a part of our diet, lie at the heart of the problem. Conversely, emphasis on unrefined foods and other natural fiber sources such as fruits and vegetables is preventive.

Your early diagnosis provides a fortuitous warning, a chance to launch your personal preventive war with addition of special fiber to your meals. Start with two teaspoons of wheat bran three times a day. Try it on cereals, in juices and in soups. Work up to three to five teaspoons with meals.

Bran attracts and retains moisture in the bowel, avoiding the extra stress on the lining from desiccated residue. Note: Please recognize the need for extra fluid intake when on a high-fiber diet.

A family history of colon cancer is a risk factor. That is not to say that diverticulosis and colon cancer are directly related. They aren't. But some of the things you do to avoid further diverticulosis, such as adding fiber, also help prevent colon cancer.

I doubt that mental stress plays a role.

Now, I must make a distinction between diverticulosis and diverticulitis. The latter is inflammation of the outpouchings, and it requires different therapy, with no fiber emphasis at all.

For more information, see the diverticulosis report. Order by writing: Dr. Donohue — No. 8, Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539. Enclose $3 and a self-addressed, stamped (52 cents) No. 10 envelope.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: About eight months ago, my doctor told me I had fibrocystic breast disease. He told me to avoid caffeine and chocolate. I have invested in support bras which, though expensive, have helped. My question regards vitamins. I take vitamin E daily. Will it help? It seems to. Any explanation would be appreciated. —A.L.

ANSWER: Experts cannot seem to agree about caffeine and fibrocystic disease of the breast. The same for vitamin E. We find no general agreement as to its role, if any, in fibrocystic breast disease.

But because the vitamin is harmless in ordinary doses and because avoiding caffeine might just help, both therapies are worth trying.

Some women find that limiting salt and fluid intake at the time the breasts are painful helps.

No many women have the breast cysts, which seem to swell around the time of menstruation, that perhaps the word "disease" should not be attached to the problem.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: After five days of high fevers and headaches I was diagnosed with viral encephalitis and rushed to the hospital in a coma. It took six weeks to recover. I feel fortunate to have done so well (I am 69). Once you've had viral encephalitis, are you immune to it thereafter? I was told about the danger of encephalitis this year, from mosquitoes. —J.H.

ANSWER: Mosquitoes can carry many kinds of viruses, including those types known to produce encephalitis, a brain infection.

Having encephalitis from one virus type does not confer immunity against another type. Only were you fortunate enough to be bitten in the future by a mosquito carrying the same virus type would you be protected by antibodies you formed from the earlier encounter. But even that unlikely event would not confer 100 percent protection.

I can appreciate your concern. But, considering the billions of mosquitoes around and the millions of bites administered each year, the actual number of encephalitis infections reported is surprisingly low. Authorities report 20,000 cases of viral encephalitis in the United States each year.

You had a serious encounter with encephalitis, which most often is far less dramatic, producing little more than a bad headache and slight rise in temperature. Only in serious settings does it produce coma.

I am not certain that the mosquito crop this year is any more numerous or aggressive than in other years, but caution is wise, even in the best of years.

The best preventive measure against mosquito bites is one of the newer, effective repellents. Avoid known high-mosquito areas, especially in the evening, when the insects are on the prowl.

Don't get the idea that mosquitoes are the only way to get viral encephalitis. Some of the viruses are tick-borne, for example.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I would like to know about spondylolisthesis, including cause. My 12-year-old son has it. He was recently diagnosed. —Mrs. C.S.

ANSWER: Spondylolisthesis (SPON-dih-low-LIS-THREE-sis) is slippage of one spine section over another one, rather the way a roof tile might slip down over another. That is a pretty close definition of that long, barely pronounceable medical term, henceforth mercifully referred to as "it."

As many as 1 percent of all youngsters have it. Often it occurs as a spinal-column defect, usually producing symptoms later on.

If it is not causing great pain, and if the slippage is not great, then conservative treatment might suffice. That would include rest, heat and perhaps temporary bracing.

If the slippage is great, if pain is debilitating and if the slippage is worsening, then you might be referred to a back surgeon. Surgery can restore normal backbone position.

For more on back pain, see my booklet on the subject. Order by writing: Dr. Donohue — No. 3, Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539. Enclose $3 and a self-addressed, stamped (52 cents) No. 10 envelope.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am 65. I take my own blood pressure and notice pressure in my right arm is 138 over 70 and in my left arm only 100 over 65. Why? —Mrs. G.K.

ANSWER: I'm not sure. Such differences should not be more than 10 points.

One possible cause is blood-flow obstruction in the low-pressure side. If no such problem is found, you can probably lay the difference to being born with smaller arteries on the low-pressure side.
