Construction increase seen as good sign for city

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer
A resurgence in construction projects in Hereford for the first three months of the year is believed by some observers to be an omen of things to come.
A barometer of the economic health of a community, building permits issued in January, February and March are worth $1,739,442, a figure almost as high as the amount for all of 1993 and about half of the total for the entire year of 1994.
In 1994, building permits worth $3,411,020 were issued. The value of 1993 permits was $1,767,390, barely higher than the first quarter this year. Leading the parade of new construction in 1995 is a community center being built by San Jose Catholic Church, a $460,000 job.

For the first time in several years, residential building is on the upswing, also. Since Jan. 1, six permits have been issued for new dwellings, one for $115,000 and five for $49,500 each.
And, an apartment complex of seven buildings with four apartments each will provide housing for senior citizens of the community. The project is valued at $718,372. The first three months of '95 are far ahead of the 1994 totals for the same period. Last year during the period, 12 permits were issued with a value of $250,700.

Several good months during the year -- $213,106 in April, $198,600 in June and $827,414 in July -- brought the total to $1,544,850 for the first seven months.
Then, a whopping $1,528,070 in August spurred the worth toward a year-end total of $3,411,020.
So far this year, the city has issued

25 permits -- nine in January for $623,500; five in February for $52,372; 11 in March for $263,570. Since the announcement that Premium Standard Farms of Missouri would build a pork processing plant in Deaf Smith County, just northwest of Hereford, city and county officials have been concerned about housing.
The plant is expected to employ several hundred workers when opened. Construction at the site also will draw workers to the community.
The five new homes on Hickory are in partial response to that concern.

City officials have reported that inquiries have come from contractors in other cities about the possibilities for new home and apartment construction.
The construction permit total in 1994, at $3,411,020, was the highest in a year since 1988, when the value was $3,419,000.
The low point in permits occurred in 1991 with only $838,614, the lowest since 1958 when the total was $831,450.
In 1985, building permits exploded to $11,840,861, the highest on record for a year. But the crunch in building came on the heels of that big year.

In 1986, the total was only $2,017,775 but a rebound came in 1987 when $6,117,955 in permits were issued.
After 1988, the amounts dropped to $2.2 million in 1989; $2.5 million in 1990, and $1.4 million in '92.
Civic leaders and officials in Hereford and Deaf Smith County look on the building permit rise in the first quarter of the year as a good sign that the construction business will experience a big year.

Drug facilities undergoing audits after problems found in programs

DALLAS (AP) - The Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse is recommending in-depth audits of nearly a third of its taxpayer-funded chemical dependency programs because of problems found at the substance-abuse facilities.
The Dallas Morning News reported Saturday that the agency also is recommending a less-detailed review of 209 other facilities it funds.
The on-site inspections of 368 of the agency's substance-abuse providers were made after some state leaders admonished the agency for not keeping a closer watch on its programs.
Commission vice chairman Michael Hull of Austin said he is "concerned" with the findings and said the agency has been lax in regulating its providers in the past.
"I think there are some potential problems out there," he said.
The Morning News obtained a copy of the commission's report on the reviews, which is expected to be made public at its board meeting next week. In the report, commission staffers said they found problems serious enough at 107 of the facilities they visited to warrant audits.

the Senate General Investigating Committee.
Hull said it is up to the committee whether to proceed with the proposed audits.
Meanwhile, a private accounting firm is currently auditing the commission's 52 largest providers.
Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, who earlier this year forced the resignation of the commission's executive director, Ben Bynum, is the driving force behind the investigation.

Bynum stepped down after Bullock criticized him following reports of misuse of public funds at two facilities in Austin and Corpus Christi.
Those facilities are under investigation by the county district attorneys in those cities. One of the facilities, Austin Rehabilitation Center, has agreed to reimburse the state $1 million.

New houses under construction

Work is proceeding on new homes being constructed in the 400 block of Hickory. The City of Hereford has issued building permits for $1,739,442 since Jan. 1. The figure exceeds the 1993 amount and is about half of the total recorded in the entire year of 1994.

Ballot positions set for May 6 elections

With absentee voting set to begin for the May 6 city, school and hospital elections, ballot positions for all races have been determined.
The final ballot drawing was held Friday at Hereford Regional Medical Center, where three candidates are seeking three at-large seats.
In that ballot, Mal Manchee will appear first, Jo Beth Shackelford second and Scott Keeling third.
Manchee, who serves as board president, and Shackelford are seeking re-election, while Keeling is running for a full term after having been appointed to an unexpired seat.
In the Hereford Independent School District board of trustee election, contested races are being run for both the District 4 and District 5 seats.
In District 4, Elizabeth Agan will appear on the ballot first, followed by Roy Dale Messer.

In the District 5 race, Jeff Matsler will appear on the ballot first, followed by Cherry Holt McWhorter, then Steve Wright.
Wright, who is board president, is seeking re-election. Mike Veazey, incumbent in District 4, is not running again.
With only one candidate in each race for the City Commission election, ballot position is easy -- Silvana Juarez is on the Place 1 ballot, Scott Hall on the Place 3 ballot and Bob Josserrand on the Mayor ballot.
Juarez and Josserrand are seeking re-election, while Hall is running for a full term after having been appointed to an unexpired term last month.
Early voting begins on April 17, with the election set for May 6.

Those facilities are under investigation by the county district attorneys in those cities. One of the facilities, Austin Rehabilitation Center, has agreed to reimburse the state $1 million.

Health Fair set here Monday

Hereford Regional Medical Center will host its third annual Health Fair on Monday, April 10, in the hospital, 801 E. Third Street.
The fair will begin at 10:30 a.m. and will feature more than 25 exhibitors. It will be open until 2 p.m.
Those exhibitors represent a number of organizations and will have on hand information about their services and can answer questions.
In addition, there will be several health screenings.
"Those attending the fair are invited to have lunch in the hospital cafeteria for a small charge," said Jim Robinson, hospital CEO.
A number of in-house participants are scheduled to take part in the fair. They include: the hospital business office, Deaf Smith Home Care Services, HRMC's Nursing Department, WorkSmart, Respiratory Therapy, Laboratory, Physical Therapy, HRMC Hereford Emergency Medical Service and the HRMC Auxiliary.
"Part of Hereford Regional Medical Center's mission is to serve as a resource for good health information for the community. The Health Fair is one way we can provide this information in an enjoyable format," Robinson said.
Out-of-hospital participants include: Golden Plains Care Center, the Hereford Police Department, the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Safety Committee, South Plains Health Providers, American Red Cross, King's Manor Methodist Home Inc., Texas Department of Human Resources, American Heart Association, Texas Department of Health, AeroCare Medical Helicopter, Crown of Texas Hospice, Hereford Senior Citizens, National Home Health and Panhandle AIDS Support Organization.
Also, the Social Security Office-Amarillo, Hereford Care Center, Problem Pregnancy Center, Family Support Services, Panhandle Regional Planning Commission (911), Planned Parenthood, Home Medical Store, massage therapist Jody Keese, Hereford Home Health Care, massage therapist Becky McDonald, Texas Poison Control Center, Deaf Smith Health Care Foundation, VA Hospital, American Home Patient and Coffee Memorial Blood Center.

Cap-tivating!
Bluebonnet Intermediate School principal Darla Underwood-Baggett sits with fourth-grade students of Lynda Brown on Friday, as students all over the school celebrated Hat Day. Students were allowed to wear caps, hats, berets, chapeaux, tams, fezzes -- or other headwear -- after making a 50-cent donation to the Cystic Fibrosis Society. Shown with Mrs. Baggett are: standing, from left, Shantiel Delgado, Viola Cano, Cassanianda Delgado, Tamra Smith, Larry Lopez, Roxanne Dominguez and Russell; and seated, Cody Oursbourn and Amanda Fellers.

Action taken in court here

Probated sentences of two defendants were modified during a session Friday in 222nd District Court. Another defendant entered a plea of guilty to the charge against him.
A plea of guilty to aggravated assault was entered by Raul Nava Jr., 17. He was given a seven-year sentence in Texas Department of Criminal Justice and ordered to a term in the special alternative incarceration program.
On a motion by the state to revoke probation of Raymond Cantu Jr., convicted previously of sexual assault of a child, Judge David Wesley Gulley ordered intensive supervision for six months. The original six-year sentence was extended a year.
Another defendant, serving deferred adjudication probation on a conviction for aggravated assault with a deadly weapon and a 10-year probation sentence on conviction for aggravated sexual assault, was ordered to jail for 90 days. John Nava also will be under intensive supervision for six months.

Advertising, sports, photo prizes noted Brand wins awards at press convention

The Hereford Brand's sports and advertising departments won awards at this year's Panhandle Press Association's annual convention in Amarillo this weekend.
The advertising department, headed by Mast Montgomery, the best place award presented at the convention was the latest in a series of PPA awards dating back to at least 1982.
The Brand has won at least an honorable mention every year since then. The honorable mention award was given last year. It was unknown what award was won in 1989, 1990 and 1991.
In addition to the advertising award, the Brand captured a second place plaque in the "Best Use of Photography" category and a third place award in sportswriting.
All awards are given in the daily newspaper division.
The sportswriting award is the third in four years for sportswriting by Sports Editor Jay Feden. Feden's writing was recognized in 1991 and 1992 as well, with second place awards those years.
In other awards, the Southwest Daily Times in Liberal, Kan., won the General Excellence award in the daily newspaper category, while the Miami Chief won the Community Service award.
The Centre County News in Danville did for general excellence in the weekly newspaper category with the Sayre Journal.

Local Roundup

School board sets session

The Hereford ISD board of trustees will meet in special session at noon Monday, April 10, to discuss a variety of construction-related issues. On the agenda will be bids for construction at Shirley Intermediate School, discussion of a computerized control system and continued debate on the West Central and Tierra Blanca school heating and air conditioning systems. In addition, trustees will discuss a health curriculum.

County agenda posted

Deaf Smith County Commissioners' Court has a short agenda for a regular meeting Monday, beginning at 9 a.m. In addition to routine items, commissioners will consider release of funds for a summer assistant in the extension office, adopt a safety policy and hear a report on the county's insurance program.

City slates work session

During a work session Monday of the Hereford City Commission, plans for the grand opening of the new Hereford Aquatic Center will be considered and the commission will hear recommendations on paving the area where the old swimming pool has been razed. The city's extra-territorial jurisdiction will be discussed and improvements needed at the Community Center will be reviewed. The meeting will begin at 5 p.m. in the City Hall Commission Chamber.

Juvenile board to meet

A short agenda has been posted for a meeting of the Deaf Smith County Juvenile Board on Thursday, at 10:30 a.m., in the courthouse. The board will hear office reports and re-certify the youth center for 1995.

County court jury cancelled

A call for a jury panel for April 17 in Deaf Smith County Court has been cancelled. Prospective jurors who received instructions to report are relieved of the responsibility.

Commodity distribution postponed

Because of a shortage of commodities, Panhandle Community Services has announced it will not hold a distribution session this month. That distribution had been scheduled for Thursday, April 20. The next commodity distribution will be on June 15.

Ito denies O.J. defense right to challenge DNA

By MICHAEL FLEEMAN
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - A judge has refused to let O.J. Simpson's lawyers challenge the admissibility of the prosecution's most crucial evidence: DNA tests on blood found at the crime scene and in Simpson's car and home.

Superior Court Judge Lance Ito says the defense gave up its right to a challenge when it waived a hearing in January.

"The defense's argument that their waiver of a pretrial... hearing applies only to DNA tests completed up to the time of the waiver is not persuasive," Ito wrote in a decision issued late Friday.

Simpson is on trial for the June 12 slayings of his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman. Court was canceled Friday because three jurors were still sick with the flu. No testimony is scheduled for Monday.

The DNA tests are crucial because, with no murder weapon and no known eyewitnesses, prosecutors will rely on scientific evidence to link Simpson to the crime scene.

Prosecutors are trying to prove that blood drops at the crime scene have genetic characteristics matching those of Simpson, while blood from his Bronco and estate resembles that of the two victims.

Simpson's lawyers have objected to the word "match," saying a DNA test result yields only a statistical probability, not a definitive match.

But Ito ruled Friday that prosecutors can use the term, although they also would be required to submit evidence about the statistical significance of any "match."

Ito also said that prosecutors must demonstrate the DNA tests in this case were conducted properly before they can introduce the results into evidence.

Meanwhile, a dismissed juror added to her portrait of a jury torn by racial animosity when she alleged Friday that a fellow juror kicked her while they were in court and that deputies gave whites preferential treatment on a shopping trip.

In her third television interview since being removed, Jeanette Harris denied that she ever said jurors violated the judge's instructions by speaking to each other about the case. She said jurors did form cliques, but not because of the way they felt about the case.

"I've never said that I personally heard any of the jurors talking about the case," said Harris, 38. "I have no knowledge of any jurors talking about the case. The only things that I said were possibilities, that the possibilities did exist."

Harris, who is black, said the Sheriff's Department had not acted in an overtly racist manner toward the jurors it is charged with guarding, but she did complain of a "lack of professionalism in some of the sheriffs."

"We got treated different," Harris said. "It wasn't that slurs were being thrown around. The treatment was different."

Harris recounted a shopping trip when black jurors were allowed less shopping time than white jurors.

The panel has eight blacks, three whites and one Hispanic. Of the six remaining alternates, four are black, one is white and one Hispanic.

The Sheriff's Department responded with a statement that all comment must come from Ito. The judge has so far declined to comment but has ordered an investigation of Harris' allegations.

Clinton slaps GOP welfare proposal

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) - President Clinton, striving to contrast his vision for the nation with that of House Speaker Newt Gingrich, said today that Republican welfare reform plans neglect children's real needs and don't put poor people to work.

"Newt Gingrich spoke eloquently about the need to reform the welfare system," Clinton said in his weekly radio address.

But the president said cutting costs is the primary goal of the Republican welfare plan and that cost cutting is simply a means of obtaining the money "to pay for their tax cuts."

Clinton said he agrees costs should be cut but said his goal is to get people off welfare and into work.

make in the Republican welfare proposal," he said. "Before I'll sign it into law it's got to have a stronger work component."

Clinton said the Republican bill is also "too tough on children."

"These children didn't choose to be born to single mothers," he said.

"So I say to Speaker Gingrich and the leaders of the Senate and House in both parties, let's work together to get this job done," Clinton said. "It is time to end welfare as we know it, to put people to work without punishing children."

The president vows to use the veto when efforts to reach out to moderate Republicans fail to obtain compromise on crucial legislation.

Research league releases report noting tax burdens

AUSTIN -- The Texas Research League has released its annual report on appraisal practices and local tax burdens for the year 1993-94, including statistics from Hereford, Deaf Smith County, Hereford Independent School District and Deaf Smith County Hospital District.

The public policy research group publishes its tax data annually, but do not include tax changes in 1994-95 because statewide data has not been made available.

For Hereford and HISD, property taxes were 2.4372 percent of value in 1993-94. That rate consisted of .4307 percent levied by the city, 1.2707 by HISD, .2297 by the hospital district, .4979 for the county and .0082 for other taxing entities.

In Hereford, the tax bill on a house that would sell for $80,000 in 1993-94 averaged $1,959 if rented, or $1,897 if the homeowner claimed homestead exemptions.

For a single-family house that would sell for $80,000, the highest tax bill in Texas was $2,860 in Pecos and the lowest was $1,249 in La Grange. If the house were eligible for various homestead exemptions, the lowest tax would have been $1,154 in La Grange and the highest $2,659 in Robstown.

The report pointed out that homeowners over age 65 are eligible for both state-mandated and local-option exemptions and would pay less. In addition, school tax bills for the elderly are frozen at the level in place when the homeowner turned 65.

Equitable appraisals among different types of property are a significant factor in attracting new industry and jobs to a community, the report notes.

The 1993-94 property tax on industrial equipment and inventories valued at $80,000 ranged from $1,260 in La Grange to $2,900 in Meadows.

For property worth $80,000 in Hereford, the report shows a combined average tax of $1,950 for all types of property, $1,901 for industrial equipment and inventories and $1,876 for commercial inventories and fixtures.

The report cites two reasons for the wide range of taxes.

First, local officials adopt budgets and set tax rates and the amount of homestead exemptions.

Second, unless all property is appraised uniformly, tax burdens will vary. The lowest average ratio of tax appraisals to market value (selling price) was 81.8 percent in Childress ISD, while the highest rate was 151.9 in Kenedy Countywide ISD.

For school districts in Deaf Smith County, a ratio of 102.6 percent for all types of property in the Hereford ISD was noted, while the ratio in the Walcott ISD was 117.1 percent.

Taxes levied by counties ranged from $0.150 per $100 of market value in Leon County to $1.203 in Brooks County.

Including countywide special districts, those rates were from $0.150 in Leon County to $1.252 in Fisher County.

In Deaf Smith County, the true rate was $0.498 per $100 valuation or $0.736 if countywide special districts are included.

Gary Wood, president of the league, cautioned that all figures are for last year. Taxpayers have already paid their 1994-95 taxes.

Exhibit shows Titanic artifacts

By ANNE GEARAN
Associated Press Writer

FREDERICKSBURG, Va. (AP) - Frank Aks was wrenched from his mother's arms and hurled over the side of the sinking Titanic. His grieving mother was certain he was one of the hundreds who perished when the great ship went down.

But 10-month-old Frank landed in the arms of a rescuer, and he was reunited with his mother aboard a rescue ship after the Titanic made its final, groaning lurch under the waves, the orchestra playing "Nearer My God to Thee" on the flooded deck.

His rescue was always Frank Aks' favorite story, even though he remembered none of it, says his widow, Marie.

She and several Titanic experts came to Fredericksburg on Friday for a special exhibition of artifacts pulled from the wreck.

"He really did feel he was a lucky person - special," Marie Aks said. "Sometimes I asked him why he thought he was saved from the Titanic. And he said, 'I know. It was because my children had to have a father.'"

Until his death in 1991, Frank Aks lectured about the Titanic and collected souvenirs of the voyage - many of them bequeathed to him by some of the other 704 survivors. Titanic historian John P. Eaton said eight survivors are still living.

The Titanic set sail on its maiden voyage from Southampton, England, on April 10, 1912, as the gilded jewel of its age.

It took 300 master carvers five years to carve all the heavy oak woodwork. Two enormous first-class staterooms with working fireplaces and such unheard-of luxuries as double-bowl sinks in the bathrooms cost more than $5,000 to rent for the trans-Atlantic passage.

But there were only 16 lifeboats for 2,228 passengers, and the Titanic took 1,523 souls with it when it hit an iceberg off Newfoundland and sank 2-1/2 miles to the bottom of the freezing Atlantic.

Leah Aks was one of the few passengers in third class, many of them immigrants like herself, who found a spot in the lifeboats.

The wreck was discovered a decade ago, the mighty hull split between the third and fourth of its towering smoke stacks.

The exhibit at Fredericksburg Historical Prints includes a crystal wine decanter from the vast, opulent, first-class section of the ocean liner, a glass serving dish and a $10 bill discovered by divers.

The Chamber and You

Mark your calendar for some upcoming events that we urge you to attend.

The Hereford Regional Medical Center Health Fair will be held Monday, April 10, at the hospital from 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Be sure to stop by and take part in this event and take time to appreciate one of Hereford's most important assets -- our hospital.

If you would like more information you may contact the Chairperson of the Chamber Health and Education Committee, Peggie Fox, at the hospital at 364-2141.

April 28-30 is the date of the 1995 Cuby Kitchens AAU Basketball Tourney. More than 1,600 players are expected with more than 80 teams in attendance.

This is a big deal and we need volunteers to help take tickets or man some of the tables. If you can help, contact the Chamber at 364-3333, or Elaine McNutt at 364-8408.

Attacks aside, Contract pulls Demo support

By MICHELLE MITTELSTADT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Vice President Al Gore describes the 100-day Republican "Contract With America" as a "highly partisan, extremist" manifesto that benefits the well-heeled at the expense of everyone else.

House Democratic Leader Dick Gephardt has branded the contract as "immoral."
But the same GOP blueprint that Democrats attacked in a frenzied public relations blitz this week as Republicans sprinted to the "Contract" finish line has drawn a significant measure of support among conservative Democrats.

That backing is especially noticeable in Texas, where seven of the state's 19 House Democrats voted for more than half of the key "Contract" items - everything from a constitutional balanced-budget amendment to regulatory relief and wider use in court of unlawfully seized evidence.

With the 230-member Republican class voting in near-unison on just about every "Contract" item, the Democratic support helped beef up GOP victory margins.

The Texas Democrats parted company with the Republicans on term limits, welfare reform and parts of a GOP crime bill that undoes much of the anti-crime package adopted last year by Congress.

That notwithstanding, a core group of conservative Texas Democrats found a large area of accord with their GOP colleagues on the 16 major "Contract" provisions that hit the House floor.

One, conservative Rep. Ralph Hall of Rockwall, voted for 15 of the 16 GOP agenda items. The eight-term lawmaker, who has fended off numerous media queries about a possible change in party affiliation, broke with Republicans only once. That was on a vote that would have forced the administration to plan for deployment of a national antiballistic missile system. Hall also was one of 204-nine Democrats in the 204-member caucus voting for the GOP welfare plan.

The Republicans' second-most dependable votes within Texas Democratic ranks came from conservatives Pete Geren of Fort Worth and Greg Laughlin of West Columbia, who voted for 13 of the 16 major provisions. The two parted company with Republicans only on term limits, welfare reform and deployment of the missile system.

Hall, Geren, Laughlin and another "Contract" sympathizer, Chet Edwards of Waco, didn't return calls seeking comment. Unlike the others, Edwards is in the party leadership, having been tapped this year as one of four chief deputy whips. As a member of the whip organization, Edwards is tasked with lining up Democratic votes for - and against - legislation.

Other Texans embracing major "Contract" items frequently were Reps. Jim Chapman of Sulphur Springs, Charles Stenholm of Stamford and Charlie Wilson of Lufkin.

Hall, Geren, Laughlin and Stenholm are among 23 members of a newly-formed group of conservative and middle-of-the road Democrats known as "The Coalition." The group, which hopes to steer the party to the right, meets regularly with Republican and Democratic leaders and has garnered sitdowns with everyone from Clinton to House GOP leader Newt Gingrich.

Despite the high-powered Democratic barrage against the GOP agenda, party officials are careful not to criticize Democrats who sided with Republicans on much of their early agenda.

"We absolutely believe that members are entitled to vote the way they see fit and in the best interests of their district," said Tricia Primrose, spokeswoman for the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, which funds House campaigns.

Dallas Democratic Rep. John Bryant, who voted against most of the "Contract" provisions, wasn't surprised that many of his colleagues supported key GOP initiatives.

"All of that was predictable," he said in a recent interview. "The same Democrats who have voted with Republicans 100 percent of the time during their careers voted with them on the 'Contract.' Nothing is new."

Texas Democratic Party executive director Ed Martin blasts many elements of the GOP blueprint - but says the Democratic Party is big enough to embrace many diverse viewpoints.

"Within that big tent we have people who run the political spectrum," Martin said. "And I think frankly you're going to find the voting patterns of most of these people (who supported the 'Contract') are fairly consistent in their voting philosophy."

Martin also contends that welfare reform, the line-item veto and balanced-budget amendment are things many Democrats advocated "long before Newt Gingrich came up with a public relations gimmick called the 'Contract With America.'"

When it really counted, the Democrats hung together, Martin adds. "When you get down to really basic economic issues of whether we are going to be giving most of the tax breaks to the wealthy, whether we are going to deprive children who really are in need of funding ... there were some critical votes where I think you saw all the Democrats stick together," he said.

Martin and Bryant are firm believers that the hoopla over the Republicans' resounding successes early in the session won't be a factor in next year's elections.

"It's been 100 days of public relations," said Bryant. "None of it is going to change the way American people live. What people want is greater prosperity at the end of the day and most of this is ideological claptrap."

Only a handful of other Texas Democrats joined Bryant in rejecting nearly every "Contract" initiative: Ron Coleman of El Paso, Lloyd Doggett of Austin, Henry B. Gonzalez of San Antonio, Sheila Jackson Lee of Houston and Eddie Bernice Johnson of Dallas.

Assault weapon ban repeal offered by House members

WASHINGTON (AP) - Conservative House Republicans, supported by several Democrats, have put forward a proposal to repeal the ban on assault-style weapons. The measure also could overturn some state and local gun laws.

Members of the House Firearms Legislation Task Force introduced the repeal bill on Friday. Republicans have made a top priority of lifting the assault weapons ban, which was part of last year's $30 billion anti-crime law initiated by the Clinton administration.

The House plans to vote next month on the bill, and Senate Republican leader Bob Dole, a gun-control opponent, has said he hoped to have such a measure on President Clinton's desk by the summer. Clinton has said he will veto any such repeal.

"If the gun task force and the pro-gun lobby believe that they will repeal the assault weapons ban without a fight, they've got another think coming," said Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., who led the battle for the ban and the Brady handgun control law.

Schumer said he was particularly concerned about a provision in the bill that reaffirms the right of individuals to use any firearms at home for self-defense. People who were denied that right could bring civil lawsuits in federal court seeking damages.

"It repeals hundreds of ... laws that allow states and localities to determine who could have a gun in their home," Schumer said in an interview.

Freshman Rep. Bob Barr, R-Ga., chairman of the firearms task force, said the provision "could very well" negate some state and local gun laws.

The ban, which prohibits the manufacture, sale and possession of 19 specific types of assault-style firearms and scores of copycats, is supported by major law enforcement organizations.

It's too bad that citizens are not as interested in budget and tax hearings as they are in the condition of the golf course. The city hosted a public meeting Tuesday afternoon to explain watering problems at the golf course. About 50 people attended.

The meeting apparently went well and solved a problem that continually crops up in organizations and business—lack of communications.

A few folks apparently misinterpreted the report of the golf course operations budget of $288,000. After revenues are subtracted, the course operates at a cost of about $45,000 to $50,000 a year. The parks and recreation budget this year is $193,360.

Some folks don't know a sandstorm from a day with a little dust in the air.

Having been raised in Lamesa, I can tell you about sandstorms. They have the real rootin' tootin', paint-blasting, driver-blinding sandstorms down south of Lubbock.

A real sandstorm is when you're driving down the highway and the middle stripe is barely discernible. You know you're in a real West Texas sandstorm when you come to an intersection and wonder whether to make a dash across it or not.

I can remember days at school in Lamesa when they had to turn on the lights in the classrooms because the thick sand made it too dark to read.

And, I can recall a few times when we started cleaning up our house after a sandstorm. We used a shovel, inside, to start moving dirt out the door.

This is not a West Texas tall tale; it is the truth. But James Roberts, Andrews publisher, recently topped any story I've heard. His column, appropriately enough, is called "Drifting Sands."

Roberts says he remembers one day in the late 1960s when the sand was really in the air and the wind was howling. Huge tumbleweeds came flying down the streets. Many of them were coming straight out of New Mexico.

Anyway, one huge tumbleweed came barreling into Andrews doing 60 mph. It rolled through the countryside picking up whatever was in its path, until it rolled into the middle of town and hit a telephone pole head on. The weed spun in a circle after the force of the crash and began spinning out its contents.

Roberts says it deposited one confused milk cow, four really dizzy jackrabbits, a couple of odorous skunks, two country stop signs complete with bullet holes, a couple of rural mail boxes, and a 1958 Volkswagen van with six hippies screaming something about a bad trip.

And this, too, is the truth...sorta.

Soaking the rich is the solution many Washington, D.C., politicians try to use to come up with more tax dollars.

But the world outside the nation's capital knows that higher tax rates merely force capital to seek tax shelters, says George Marotta, a research fellow at Stanford University's Hoover Institute.

"A society that is more concerned about redistribution of wealth than about creation of wealth will only produce an equality of poverty," says Marotta.

Soaking the rich presumes that the government will put the money to better purposes. However, the rich can only do a few things with money:

Spend it (and create jobs); save it (and provide funds for banks to lend); invest it (and create new jobs); give it to charity (which will put it to better use than the government); or leave it to their heirs (where about half of it will be taken in taxes).

He also said that taxes are too high, too complex and discourage savings and investments. Reckon anyone in Washington heard his remarks?

AND SUDDENLY THEIR SON UTTERED HIS FIRST WORD.

Assorted notes from the back of my Bible

Out of the Blue

By Garry Wesner

For many years now, preachers of churches I've attended have urged us to take notes in our Bibles.

My current pastor told us last week that we should bring our "writin' Bible" to church each week.

Well, recently (probably one week when the sermon got a little dry) I got flipping through my Bible on a kind of trip back through memory lane to notes from previous sermons and passages that meant a lot to me for one reason or another.

One section I have devoted to a variety of quotes that have been collected from many different preachers over the past 13 years I have owned this particular Bible.

I thought you might enjoy some of these things. I hope they speak to you like they did to me. I don't remember who said them, or when. They're just good, sound wisdom (that really doesn't apply just to Christians, or to a particular religion or denomination, or even to church activities at all).

There is no end to what we can do when we don't care who gets the glory.

The biggest hindrance to Christianity today is the inconsistency of Christians.

- Worry is praying to yourself.
- People in the sunshine may believe in faith, but people in the shadow must believe in faith.
- Sometimes we get so busy doing what we are doing that we forget about who we are doing it for.
- Forty percent of worries are about things that never happen. Thirty percent of worries are about things in the past that cannot be changed. Twenty-two percent of worries are about petty trifles. Eight percent of worries are about things with any consequence in our lives.
- Just as we don't trip over large boulders in our path, neither do we fall into sin from blatant, large temptations. It is the small stones -- and temptations -- that trip us up.
- Four things we need to do to be - an impacter: be consistent, be real on the inside, be selfless and be tireless.

- The Apostle Peter: Rare potential wrapped in abject insecurity.
- Doubt is no sin; there is a little doubt in faith. If not, you could see it and it wouldn't be faith.
- It is not liberty to do as you please, it is liberty to do as you ought.
- God sends visions in pairs -- one of the need and one of the means to meet the need.
- Fellowship only comes when both people want to be there.
- Worry is assuming responsibility for things that are out of your control.

-- Today is the tomorrow we worried about yesterday.

-- This one I quoted before, but it bears repeating: If the Christian flag and all it stands for falters and falls, then a natural consequence is that the U.S. flag and all it stands for will falter and fall.

One little quote I recorded is dated, with the name of the speaker attached.

It was Rev. Paul Byers, a missionary to the Philippines, speaking in October 1990.

He simply said, "The pressure is worth the payoff."

I really think he knows about pressure -- he is a full-time missionary, but also is blind, working in total darkness in a country not really noted for being politically or religiously stable!

This past week we had the privilege of hosting my wife's niece, her husband and their baby in our

Cockleburrs and Devil's Claws

By Georgia Tyler

People out in Arizona have the right idea about Daylight Saving Time. They don't like it and don't abide it.

Now, those are the people I really would like to get to know. They represent the rugged individualism that made the West great. They also don't suffer through the throes of changing clocks to benefit the East and West Coasts.

A television newsman whose wit I admired when he was anchor on a New York station said it best, in a semi-tirade about the spring-forward phase of Daylight Saving Time: They always tell us we get the hour back in the fall, but I never have found it, said Robert Trout.

Amen.

Parents know that from the first school day after DST becomes effective, they're going to have cranky kids, unwilling and, often, unable to crawl out of bed in the morning.

Who wants to go to bed before the sun goes down? Not even the chickens.

When my daughters were pre-teens into teenagers, we resisted continually with one going to bed. She didn't want to. If bedtime was at 9 p.m. and the sun wasn't set, she really didn't want to.

The solution to that problem was arrived at, but barely enforced. She went to her room at 9 p.m. and went to bed whenever the spirit moved her. Now, daughter No. 2 was, and still is, one who needs her sleep. When she got tired, she usually handled it by going to bed.

But, DST changed all that. The whole neighborhood-full of kids in the city where we lived ran up and down the street until it was dark-thirty.

Every parent on the block complained about fatigue. Not only in the kids, but in Mom and Pop, too. None of that has changed, I'm told by young parents these days.

In another city I called home, the loudest complaints I ever heard from teachers were about Daylight Saving Time and youth baseball starting at about the same time.

Said a teacher-friend, "You can't believe how hard it is to teach these kids who are so tired they can't even hold their heads up." She may have exaggerated slightly.

With some amazement, I listen to stories about people who forget to change their clocks for DST. With all the media harping, "Don't forget to spring forward tonight before you go to bed," how could anyone forget?

The most ridiculous excuse is an honest confession of yours truly. Whoever changed clocks and then forgot it had been done?

Well, me, for one. One spring, under a great deal of stress with events and activities, I made the rounds of my home, changing every clock and watch in sight for the beginning of Daylight Saving Time.

Including clock radios, oven clocks, wall clocks and watches, I think about seven or eight timepieces received my attention.

Finally, about 11 p.m., I went to bed, secure in the knowledge that the family would wake up in time for church the next morning.

When I awoke, and looked at the bedside clock, I wondered, briefly, if I had changed it the night before. After I got up, I made the rounds and found all the clocks with the same time.

Had I finally gone around the bend, I wondered, as all the clocks the night before?

There was a way to find out -- call the time-temperature number. I did and the same time was announced. Then, my fuzzy brain questioned whether the recorder had been updated.

Finally someone in the family wandered out of a bedroom and asked if I had changed all the clocks the night before. Yes, I replied, but now it can be told, I wasn't sure until we got to church on time.

A good lesson was learned through this exercise in forgetfulness: I always leave one clock unchanged, whether going into or out of Daylight Saving Time.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

President Bill Clinton is still at it. First he insulted Vietnam veterans by showing up at the Vietnam Wall for memorial services. Now, he has insulted all World War II veterans, living and dead, by changing V-J Day (Victory in Japan) to "The End of the Pacific War," because V-J is offensive to Japan.

Japan was the aggressor in World War II, not America. That Sunday morning, Dec. 7, 1941, Japan didn't suddenly decide to bomb Pearl Harbor. For about 50 years before the sneak attack on Pearl Harbor, Japan had been preparing and planning for complete world domination.

Beginning in 1894-95, Japan attacked China, Russia, Manchuria and seized the Marianas, Caroline and Marshall Islands in the Pacific from Germany. In 1940, Japanese forces began capturing the British Colonies of Hong Kong, then Indo-China and Burma. They brutalized and slaughtered millions of innocent victims in countries they invaded in their quest to create a "Greater East Asia" with Japan in complete control.

America was next. As early as 1909, Japan planned a Pacific War and named the United States as their (hypothetical enemy). They planned to attack, invade and "neutralize" America. They would send Japanese citizens into this country to "colonize" the States.

Study Japan's history before it is completely re-written. That is offensive.

Two of Japan's "peace envoys" were in the White House to cement relations with America on Dec. 7, 1941 as their planes were attacking and destroying our fleet in Pearl Harbor. That is offensive.

On that day, without a declaration of war or any warning, their bombs killed 2,403 Americans, almost half of them on the battleship Arizona. That is offensive.

April 9, 1942, Japanese forces overran and conquered Batuan, then forced 78,000 American and Filipino captives on an inhuman 85-mile Death March. Thousands were brutalized and slaughtered. That is offensive.

And, Japan's unspeakable atrocities committed against help American and allied POWs continued throughout World War II. That is offensive.

The proposed stamps, showing the atomic cloud over Hiroshima was changed. The atomic bomb prevented an invasion of Japan that would have been the most horrific campaign in the history of man. An estimated million Americans and 20 million Japanese would have been killed. Some believe those estimate are conservative. Now, Americans should never use the word "Enola Gay," because to do might offend Japan.

What's next? Destroy the Arizona Memorial, built over the sunken Arizona where the bodies of more than 1,100 Americans are entombed? Dismantle and burn the white crosses in our National cemeteries on remote Pacific Islands where thousands of American men are buried? Tear down the Iwo Jima Memorial of six marines raising a flag? Completely rewrite history because all of the above might offend Japan?

Remember, if there had been no Pearl Harbor, there would have been no Hiroshima or Nagasaki!!

God bless America.

Dear Editor:

Thanks to all those persons involved in making our first district-wide Science Fair a success. Our community showed its commitment to its children by the immense support of time and effort of many volunteers.

Thanks to Supt. Greenawalt and Mrs. Veazey for allowing us of the administration building and supplying coffee for our judges. A special thanks to Mr. George Ochs, principal at West Central, for his encouragement and help in all facets of the fair. His dedication to our students is very obvious.

Mrs. Linda Anderson, Science Fair coordinator from Bluebonnet, and Mrs. Tonya Stewart, coordinator from Shirley, were terrific to work with. Both spent many hours helping their students, teachers and me. They helped secure judges, set up tables, assisted the students in placing their projects in the correct categories, and anything else they were asked to do. These teachers deserve a special thanks for going above and beyond their duties to help our children.

I would also like to thank two special people from West Central who spent many hours of their time to help—Mrs. Karen Langford, counselor, and Mrs. Debbie Smith, fourth grade. Mrs. Smith spent Thursday evening and Friday morning helping students find their places, and preparing judging forms. Mrs. Langford stepped in Friday morning to help shuttle students between the schools and ad building, tally scores, and other tasks.

Thanks also go to the parents and teachers of each participant. I know you spent many hours helping our kids. You are all winners.

My deepest appreciation goes to our 26 judges who spent time away from their jobs and gave great effort in determining top winners in their category. They were: Don Anderson, Dave Duncan, Gene Allen, Marco Cortez, Mark Schaessner, Glen Boozer, Jane Furr, Dale Furr, Raymond Coronado, Dave Cummings, Dr. Hap Cavness, Joe Weaver, Walter Davis, Dr. Stan Fry, Al Sinnacher, Lisa Blakely, Dr. Charles Hennessy, Denise Marnell, Dennis Newton, Beverly Harder, Jean Beebe, Gary Billingsley, Rosemary and Phillip Shook, Howard Birdwell, and Mr. Oz (Mel Holubec). A special thanks to Dr. Cavness and Mrs. Beebe for choosing our district winner from more than 175 entries.

As you can see, it took dedication and effort on the part of many to make this fair the success that it was. I am proud to be a part of such a community and school district that put their students needs first.

Sincerely,
Carol Kelley

Dear Editor:

I would like to comment on the local golf course.

As a resident of Hereford since 1951, I don't ever remember the golf course ever coming close to paying its own way.

I resent the fact that our tax money is used to support something that the majority of citizens get no use or good from. It seems to me that those who use it should be willing to pay enough to support it.

I think the tax money could be better spent on the police and fire departments.

The city parks were basically ignored up until the past few years. I'd rather my money went towards them than see so much go to the golf course.

As for water usage, I would think industry would do the general public a whole lot more good. There is certainly a need for more jobs around here.

I'm not much of a letter writer, but I've been steamed about this deal a long time. I don't believe I'm the only one that feels this way.

Thanks for letting me blow some of this steam off.

On behalf of the athletes, coaches and families of Area 16 Special Olympics, I want to thank your wonderful community for its support of our Special Olympic athletes at the Hereford Rotary Club Track Meet last Saturday.

The members of your Rotary Club gave our athletes the royal treatment and provided a splendid track meet where they had a chance to participate in the game of life and know the joy of winning a ribbon.

A very beautiful day, without wind, was provided by your Hereford Chamber of Commerce and we were able to enjoy the delicious lunch provided by some very fine Hereford Rotary Club chefs.

Businessman sues over American deal

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) - A judge is expected to hear a request for an injunction this month in the lawsuit filed to block a deal paying American Airlines to keep jet service in Amarillo.

Roofus Gaut, an Amarillo businessman, is challenging the authority of the Amarillo Economic Development Corporation to pay American $3.6 million in taxpayer money for the jet service. American had planned to save money by substituting turboprop airplanes for flights to and from Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

Amarillo attorney Eric Wolfram, who represents Gaut, said a judge should hear the request for the injunction stopping the payment in the next two weeks.

The lawsuit, against the development corporation and American, was filed Thursday in state district court in Austin.

The Amarillo City Commission last month approved spending the sales tax revenue to subsidize jet service to the city.

Wolfram said he believed that the payments overstep the boundaries set out in state law for economic development corporations.

"We're saying it is not a specified power," he said. "That statute says you can build project - a tangible item. There's nothing in the statute that says you can just give money to somebody."

The agreement will kick in when Amarillo's current six-month subsidy with American expires July 1.

American spokesman Tim Smith said airline officials had not seen the suit and could not comment specifically about it.

But we have done this transaction (with Amarillo) and have been doing it since July of last year," Smith said. "We are quite confident that the economic development agency knows the realm of its authority."

Mike Bourn, executive director of the economic development agency, did not return calls to his office Friday.

Librarian puts together annual 'Who Reads What?' celebrity list

GARDINER, Maine (AP) - Where does baseball hall of famer Yogi Berra turn for a good read? No, it's not "Catcher In The Rye." It's "Something of Value," Robert Ruark's book about the Mau Mau insurgency in Africa.

U.N. Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali prefers "The Grammar of Politics," while Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole delights in reading about a fellow Kansan in "Eisenhower the President."

For the eighth straight year, librarian Glenna Nowell of the Gardiner Public Library surveyed celebrities for her annual "Who Reads What?" list.

Responses "were weighted toward books of a little better literary quality," she said. "It's more on the side of serious fare than fun, entertainment."

Nowell's list comes just in time for National Library Week, which begins Sunday. She gets requests from all over the country for her compilation, which librarians use as a promotion to get people to read more.

Like Dole, who calls Stephen Ambrose's book about Eisenhower his favorite in this year's list, Don McLean prefers to read about presidents.

The "American Pie" singer found "A First Class Temperament," Geoffrey C. Ward's book about Franklin D. Roosevelt, "one of the most enjoyable books I have ever read." Actor LeVar Burton calls "The Road Less Traveled" by M. Scott Peck a "must read" for anyone who is seeking self-knowledge.

J.D. Salinger's "Catcher In The Rye" won top honors from actress Winona Ryder, Microsoft Corp. Chairman Bill Gates and political writer Molly Ivins.

everything they do!

Cleaning up vacant lots, planting bright welcome mats of color for strangers passing through our community, leading recycling efforts...the HEREFORD BEAUTIFICATION ALLIANCE is doing more than its fair share in turning first impressions of our community into return visits.

These volunteers have already begun this Spring with their "Let's Make It Clean And Green" campaign. The month long promotion will feature tree planting, recycling and participation in The Great Texas Trash-Off which is slated for Saturday, April 8th.

This group serves as a reminder for each of us to consider improvements and clean-ups around our own property.

Tammie and Henry are missionaries to El Salvador and are currently traveling the country on deputation, raising the support they need to go to the field.

Henry is a native of El Salvador and now a naturalized American citizen, while Tammie grew up with her parents on the mission field in Mexico. (Daniel is three months old and really doesn't remember much before his last bottle!)

For those of you not familiar with this type ministry, an independent Baptist missionary is responsible for raising his own support from churches.

While there are associations that help collect and distribute funds, this means the missionary spends months and sometimes years on the road, visiting churches and explaining the work to be done in the country of his choice.

Gifts come in usually in amounts of about $25 to $50 a month from different churches.

Once on the field, the missionary must return home periodically to report on his progress and raise more support to cover additional needs and to replace churches that have stopped supporting him.

In Tammie and Henry's case, they preached here Sunday night, in Canyon Wednesday, then left Thursday for Kentucky and a three-week swing there.

From there they're going to Indiana, then back to Texas.

It's not an easy life, but as Paul Byers said, "The pressure is worth the payoff."

Well, that's it for this week. Have a good week and, remember, keep praying for rain -- we need it.

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) - A bemused Ben Crenshaw responded to a request to assess the Masters leaderboard. "Crowded," he said. "Very crowded. And if these conditions continue, it's going to get even more crowded. The conditions are responsible for a lot of people getting into it." Jay Haas made the most of near-ideal playing conditions and led a group of 10 men locked within 3 strokes of the lead - and 18 within 5 - Friday at the halfway point of the first of golf's annual Grand Slam events. "Just one of those days," the 41-year-old Haas said after his 8-under-par 64 staked him to a 1-shot lead. "Every time I looked up, I just knew I was going to hit it close," Haas said. "All I saw was the flag. I didn't see the trouble." But Jack Nicklaus did. He, too, had one of those days. But it was of an entirely different kind. From a position one shot off the first round lead, the only 6-time winner of the Masters played more like a 55-year-old, shooting 78. He just managed to make it past the 36-hole cut, hitting the qualifying figure of 145.

The United States, and the lefty Mickelson each had a 71. Davis Love III, Lee Janzen, Brian Henninger and Corey Pavin followed at 138. Jose Maria Olazabal of Spain, the hobbling defending title-holder and one of three sharing the first-round lead, went to a 74 and 140. Much of his trouble centered around a tee shot into the woods that led to a double-bogey on the 10th.

Pendleton joins Marlins on busy day of dealing stars may still draw the big bucks, but other players will see their contracts slashed. Welch, a former Cy Young winner who made $2.9 million last season, re-signed with Oakland for only $225,000. Grace, a career .303 hitter with the Chicago Cubs, re-signed with them for $4.05 million, a cut of $350,000.

Terry Pendleton found another place to play and John Burkett, Larry Walker and Bill Swift are close to getting new homes. Bob Welch and Mark Grace are staying put, even though their salaries are being cut. Orel Hershiser, Mickey Tettleton and John Kruk are leaving, for sure.

"I hit a cold shank on No. 12," the disgrusted Nicklaus said. "That's the first time I've hit a shank since 1964." He was scheduled to be the first man off the tee in today's third round. Haas, winner of nine titles in a 19-season career, set the pace at 135, which is 9-under-par on the Augusta National Golf Club course that still retained some moisture from daylong rains Thursday. On Friday, there wasn't a hint of a breeze.

He was hardly alone in his difficulty, however. Nick Price of Zimbabwe, Player of the Year for the last two seasons and seeking a third consecutive major-tournament victory, had a wildly erratic round of 73 that included five birdies and an eagle, six bogeys and a double-bogey. He missed the cut at 149.

In one of baseball's busiest days ever, there were nearly 50 deals Friday. The shopping spree was sped along by two midnight deadlines, both involving salary arbitration. All the activity came the same day major leaguers were supposed to report for spring training. Barry Bonds, Ken Griffey Jr., Jose Canseco and Fernando Valenzuela, plus perennial late-comer Rickey Henderson, were among the arrivals. "Rickey's early!" Oakland general manager Sandy Alderson said in Phoenix.

Pat Borders, MVP of the 1992 World Series, got a one-year deal with Kansas City for $310,000; he was to make $2.5 million last season with Toronto. Bud Black signed with Cleveland for $350,000 after making $3 million last year with San Francisco.

As a result, scores again were unusually low. John Huston shot 66 and Scott Hoch, who lost this title on a missed 2-foot playoff putt in 1989, had a 67. They were tied for second at 136.

Haas, nephew of 1968 Masters winner Bob Goalby, one-putted 10 times in his effort that was a single shot off the course and tournament record. Goalby, he said, "has been my teacher since I was five years old, and he's been my sports psychologist."

In Homestead, Fla., a special camp started just for the 100-plus free agents. Dave Stewart and Chris Sabo were some of the 29 players in attendance. "We're calling ourselves the Homestead Homies," infielder Randy Velarde said. Friday's flurry also included the AL and NL releasing revised schedules. Opening day is April 25 when Los Angeles plays at Florida, followed by 13 games the next day, some of them representing one-game series.

Pendleton, a former NL MVP, got a one-year deal for $1.5 million with the Florida Marlins. The 34-year-old third baseman, limited to 77 games last season because of a back injury, made $3.2 million with Atlanta.

Crenshaw, using a new putter and musing over "one last lesson from Harvey," shot 67 and was tied at 137 with David Frost and Phil Mickelson. Frost, a South African now living in

He played the front side in 33, saving par on the two greens he missed with 6-8 foot putts, made an 8-footer on the 10th for birdie, then birdied the last four.

There will be six games the day after the All-Star break. The AL schedule also includes a note that it might be revised again, if necessary, to allow Cal Ripken to break Lou Gehrig's consecutive-games streak at home in Baltimore. The hectic day made it seem like baseball's usual three-month offseason had been compressed into just three days. Earlier this week, Marquis Grissom, David Cone and Ken Hill were traded. Also, the deals seemed to shape the direction salaries will take. Some

"I bring leadership with me as well as my play in the field," Pendleton said. Also finding new teams were reliever Jim Gott (Pittsburgh) and catcher Scott Hemond (St. Louis). In addition, reliever Jeff Reardon reported to Montreal's minor-league camp and reliever Mike Jackson worked out for Baltimore.

Arkansas' Williamson announces he'll go pro

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) - A bruised and tired Cortlis Williamson, who led Arkansas to the last two NCAA title games and the 1994 national championship, is headed for the NBA. With his parents' blessing, Williamson said Friday he would pursue his academic degree later and play professional basketball next season. The 6-foot-7 junior forward, who averaged 19.7 points as the Razorbacks went 32-7 last season, had said after Monday's championship game loss to UCLA that he planned to stay in school. He changed his mind Thursday. "My emotions took over and made me say that," Williamson explained. "I didn't end my college career the way I wanted to. I wanted to go out on top with a victory. Unfortunately it didn't work out that way." (See WILLIAMSON, Page 7A)

Girl golfers 4th in Amarillo

The Hereford girls' golf team was fourth after the first day of the Amarillo Relays golf tournament. Hereford totaled 368 at Ross Rogers West Municipal Golf Course. Hereford trailed Amarillo High at 327; Borger at 353; and Tascosa at 356. Pampa is fifth at 399, and nine other teams trail Pampa. The tournament was to conclude Saturday. Individually, Jana Baird led Hereford with an 86. The other Hereford girls were Jami Bell at 89, Karen Manchee at 95, Krista Beville at 98, and Stephanie Bixler at 99.

Rangers agree on terms with Rogers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - The Texas Rangers announced Friday that left-handed pitcher Kenny Rogers has agreed to terms on a one-year contract for the 1995 season. The Rangers did not disclose further terms, but earlier reports indicated that $3 million to $4 million was set aside for the 30-year-old, who was eligible for salary arbitration prior to the signing. The club announced it will offer arbitration to catcher Ivan Rodriguez and third baseman Dean Palmer. In a surprise move, Texas declined to offer arbitration to John Burkett, whom the Rangers acquired from San Francisco last December. Burkett, who was 6-8 with a 3.62 ERA for the Giants in 1994, is the National League's fourth-winningest pitcher of the 1990s.

NBA's top rookies take aim on playoff spots

By The Associated Press
The league's three best rookies are doing all they can to get their teams into the playoffs.

Dallas' Jason Kidd had his second triple-double in as many games Friday night to pull the streaking Mavericks within 1 1/2 games of the final Western Conference playoff spot.

"All I can say is my teammates are playing very well," said Kidd, who had 11 points, 13 assists and 10 rebounds in a 111-94 victory over Minnesota. "We're a very confident team right now. We've come a long way."

Not to be outdone, Detroit's Grant Hill posted a triple-double of his own against Orlando, beating the Magic 104-94 and keeping the longshot Pistons in the hunt for a berth in the Eastern Conference.

While Detroit is 3 1/2 games behind Boston for the eighth playoff position, Milwaukee was just two games back after Glenn Robinson scored 25 points in a 107-92 win over New Jersey.

In other games, it was Boston 91, Philadelphia 81; Charlotte 98, Washington 93; Atlanta 102, Indiana 90; Chicago 97, Cleveland 88; Portland 127, Houston 109, and the Los Angeles Lakers 113, Utah 90.

Dallas won for the eighth time in 10 games and stretched its home winning streak to five, the Mavericks' longest since a 10-game run in 1990. Jamal Mashburn added 31 points for Dallas, while Christian Laettner had 22 for Minnesota.

Dallas coach Dick Motta had pulled Kidd and the rest of his starters when Minnesota opened the fourth quarter with an 18-6 spurt to reduce a 22-point deficit to 93-83. He put the first unit back in, and the Mavericks went on an 8-0 run capped by Kidd's layup, giving him double-figure points.

Kidd then snatched his 10th rebound with 2:55 to play to complete the sixth triple-double in club history and the first in back-to-back games in the NBA this season.

Bucks 107, Nets 92

Milwaukee started fast and kept going, leading New Jersey by at least 14 points throughout the final quarter.

The Bucks, who had lost four of their previous five games, are now 29-45 and chasing Boston for the final Eastern Conference playoff spot.

The visiting Nets, who have dropped six straight and 10 of their last 11 to fall from playoff contention, were led by Armon Gilliam with 26 points.

Pistons 104, Magic 94

Hill had 21 points, 11 rebounds and 10 assists as Detroit dominated an undermanned Orlando team.

Hill's first triple-double overshadowed a 31-point, 18-rebound performance by Orlando's Shaquille O'Neal.

Orlando pulled to 89-86 with 8:24 left in the game, but Hill had two quick baskets and two assists in a 10-2 run to give the Pistons an 11-point lead with two minutes left.

Allan Houston led the Pistons with 25 points.

The visiting Magic played without injured starters Anfernee Hardaway and Nick Anderson.

Hornets 98, Bullets 93

Charlotte set a franchise record with its 45th victory and beat Washington behind 25 points from Alonzo Mourning.

Larry Johnson added 22 points and 11 rebounds as the visiting Hornets sent the Bullets to their 10th consecutive loss.

Chris Webber led Washington with 23 points, 11 rebounds and 10 assists, posting his second triple-double in 14 days. He also blocked five shots.

Celtics 91, 76ers 81

Dominique Wilkins sparked a 14-0 third-quarter run with two 3-pointers in a 29-second span as Boston beat Philadelphia.

Wilkins finished with 31 points and 12 rebounds. Sherman Douglas added 19 points and 12 assists, while Dee Brown had 13 points for the Celtics, who won their fourth straight.

In their last visit to Boston Garden, the 76ers lost their fourth in a row despite 27 points by Dana Barros and 14 by Shawn Bradley, who also had 12 rebounds.

Hawks 102, Pacers 90

Steve Smith scored 21 straight points during the third quarter, leading Atlanta to its first win over Indiana in four meetings this season.

The Hawks, currently slotted to meet the Pacers in the first round of the NBA playoffs, connected on eight 3-pointers in the period as they built their advantage to 79-55 in the final minute of the quarter. Smith finished with 26 points.

Reggie Miller led the visiting Pacers, who had won eight of their previous nine games, with 15 points.

Bulls 97, Cavaliers 88

Michael Jordan continued to struggle at the United Center, scoring 28 points, but shooting 9-of-27 as Chicago beat Cleveland.

Jordan added nine assists and eight rebounds as the Bulls improved to 7-2 since he came out of retirement March 19.

Scottie Pippen scored 25 points for Chicago, which posted its sixth consecutive victory and took a two-game lead over Cleveland in the race for the fifth Eastern Conference playoff spot.

Bobby Phillips had 22 points for the Cavaliers, who have lost six of seven games.

Trail Blazers 127, Rockets 109

Clyde Drexler's return to Portland brought a warm welcome but little success as Houston fell to the Trail Blazers.

Drexler had 24 points, 10 rebounds and six assists in his first Portland appearance since he was traded to the Rockets on Feb. 14. But he was 8-for-21 from the field and had seven turnovers before fouling out with 6:07 to play.

The slumping Rockets, who have lost seven of 10 games, were without Hakeem Olajuwon and Vernon Maxwell for the sixth straight game. Both players have iron-deficiency anemia.

Rod Strickland, playing despite a sore right shoulder, had 27 points and 10 assists for Portland.

Lakers 113, Jazz 90

Los Angeles' Cedric Ceballos had 36 points and 11 rebounds against Utah in his best game since returning from a thumb injury 16 days ago.

The Lakers never trailed against the NBA's second-best road team and won their seventh straight at the Forum.

O'Bannon receives Wooden Award

By JOHN NADEL

AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Ed O'Bannon remembers when the last things on his mind were championships and awards. As tough as those days were 4 1/2 years ago, he now believes they helped him.

O'Bannon, who tore up his left knee just before his career at UCLA was to start, received the John Wooden Award as college basketball's player of the Year on Friday - four days after playing his final game for the Bruins.

And what a final game it was - O'Bannon's 30 points and 17 rebounds led UCLA to its first NCAA championship in 20 years.

"At the time, you say, 'Why me?'" O'Bannon said of the injury he suffered in a pickup game on Oct. 9, 1990. "Now, I look back, it helped me become a better person. At that time, all I could think about was I wanted to play, even play pickup basketball. I wasn't thinking about championships or individual accomplishments."

O'Bannon suffered a torn anterior cruciate ligament in his knee. Nine days later, he underwent five hours of surgery.

He missed the entire 1990-91 season and didn't make his UCLA debut until the 11th game of the 1991-92 campaign, on Jan. 16, 1992.

UCLA coach Jim Harrick remembers being in Palm Springs, Calif., with his coaching staff when trainer Tony Spino called with the bad news about O'Bannon.

"I couldn't believe it," Harrick said. "We rode back from Palm Springs and hardly a word was said for two hours by any of our coaches. We sat there stunned. We were in shock."

"You always go through adversity before you reach the mountain top. It's a great story."

O'Bannon, a 6-foot-8, 217-pound senior, averaged 20.4 points and 8.3 rebounds for the Bruins, who went 31-2, including a 19-game winning streak to end the season.

The Wooden Award is named for the former UCLA coach who guided the Bruins to 10 NCAA championships in a 12-year span ending in 1975, when he retired. The Bruins' 89-78 victory over Arkansas at Seattle on Monday night in this year's championship game gave them their first title since that time.

Wooden, 84, made the presentation to O'Bannon on Friday at a Los Angeles Athletic Club news conference.

"It's a great honor for me," O'Bannon said. "To me, there's no greater accomplishment as an individual. We got the ultimate team trophy and now the ultimate individual trophy."

O'Bannon finished with 4,396 points to 3,247 for runner-up Shawn Respert of Michigan State; 3,224 for third-place finisher Randolph Childress of Wake Forest; 2,887 for fourth-place finisher Jerry Stackhouse of North Carolina, and 2,511 for fifth-place finisher Corliss Williamson of Arkansas.

Each of the top four finishers attended the news conference, along with Harrick; North Carolina coach Dean Smith; new Michigan State coach Tom Izzo, an assistant to the retired Jud Heathcote this season; and Wake Forest assistant Ricky Stokes.

Not present was Williamson, who announced earlier in the day he will pass up his senior year in school to become available for the NBA draft, nor Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson.

O'Bannon, 22, is the first UCLA player to win the Wooden Award since Marques Johnson in 1977, the first recipient. O'Bannon finished his career as the Bruins' fourth-leading scorer with 1,815 points and ninth-leading rebounder with 820.

O'Bannon was selected in voting by 984 sportscasters and sports writers from throughout the country. Fifteen players were on the ballot. The deadline for voting was March 27, a week before O'Bannon's championship game heroics.

WILLIAMSON

Coach Nolan Richardson said junior forward Scotty Thurman also was considering leaving, but hadn't reached a decision.

"I've visited with Scotty. There is nothing concrete," Richardson said.

Williamson's father said the consistent pounding his son took inside played a role in the decision.

"He got beat up so bad this year down low and never got the call," Jerry Williamson said. "I remember Shaquille O'Neal, who played at LSU. Everyone said because he's big those fouls don't hurt."

"We got to see the battle scars and the bruises around (Corliss') head and neck. He's hurting. If you are going to get hit like that, get paid to get hit."

Often double- or triple-teamed, Williamson made 55 percent of his shots and 67 percent of his free throws.

Arkansas won 65 of 77 consecutive games Williamson started. The Razorbacks' fortunes often hinged on how well Williamson performed. Five of his worst games came in Arkansas' seven losses this season.

On Monday, he made just three of 16 shots - his worst performance of the season - and finished with 12 points. Arkansas lost 89-78.

As a sophomore, Williamson averaged 20.4 points, and the Razorbacks won the national championship with a 76-72 victory over Duke.

Patterson makes Houston hockey successful

By DOUG MITCHELL
The Houston Post
HOUSTON - A world championship ring adorns the finger of Steve Patterson, representing one Houston sports team he helped make a winner. The Houston Aeros, who ended their first regular season this past week, represent his second success.

The Aeros are a Houston sports success story perhaps second only to the 1993-94 NBA champion Rockets. Patterson helped build over nine seasons. More than 470,000 fans - an average of more than 11,500 per game - passed through The Summit entrance this year to see the International Hockey League team. The IHL is widely regarded as the next-best thing to the National Hockey League.

Doubters scoffed at team owner Glenn Hart's efforts, beginning in 1993, to bring hockey to what was at the time the largest American city without a professional team. Patterson, hired by Hart as the team's president and general manager just days after being fired from a similar post with the Rockets by owner Leslie Alexander in September 1993, was the man to make it work.

"It's gone way beyond my expectations going in," Patterson said. "In some respects, looking back, maybe it was a no-brainer, bringing a team to Houston. But I never expected to be where we are today, in our first year of operation."

Getting a hockey team, any team, to be successful in a city requires know-how. Sponsors and advertisers must be secured and promotions aimed at the correct target audience to sell tickets. It required a certain trust, one Patterson developed in his time with the Rockets.

"What makes Steve a special breed of cat is his relationships in the community," Hart said. "Steve knows the market, can make numbers jump off a page and work. He makes the numbers happen."

Patterson also is smart enough to realize he can't do it all alone, and is quick to heap praise on those who make the Aeros' engine run. The team's front-office staff consists of 12 people who worked alongside Patterson with the Rockets, help quickly picked up following Alexander's housecleaning.

"I see my job as a facilitator, to try to get the most out of the staff and maximize the situation for us," Patterson said. "On the business side, we have a lot of people with experience in this market, people that have put on NBA All-Star games and set records for ticket sales and attendance."

"They've brought those skills to the hockey team, and they're as good as they've been before. That's the only way you're successful in business - give credit to the people who do the job for you, and if something goes wrong, take the blame for them, especially if it's publicly."

Patterson's staff operates under a philosophy of being able to do his job with the freedom to make ideas work. It has fostered an environment that has produced appearances at Aeros games by the Houston Symphony, The Village People, Doug Supernaw and Tiny Tim.

"There are a couple of factors with Steve," said Brad Ewing, the Aeros' director of business operations and a former Rockets employee of 11 years. "He allows you to do your job without sticking his nose in every little decision, puts a lot of trust in you. It's rewarded with loyalty."

The philosophy was taught to the University of Texas law school graduate by his father Ray, who exposed Steve to the world of being a general manager while serving in that capacity with the Milwaukee Bucks and Rockets.

"I knew he could run the Aeros since he ran the Rockets," Ray Patterson said. "It's hard to evaluate him, being his father, but he has a good reputation."

"Running a professional franchise has more common denominators than differences - plus taking 90 percent of his staff from the Rockets to the Aeros helps. You have to find a way to develop credibility for a franchise, which he did."

The Aeros set IHL season ticket sales records before the drop of a puck. Special promotions for Elvis Night, Brady Bunch Night, Disco Night and Aerosstock have introduced cross-sections of the community to the game.

"What we have is a good product at an affordable price," Patterson said. "We are all about marketing affordable, family entertainment. It's been a learning experience for me because when I was with the Rockets, you forget how removed you've become from most of the working people, on the basis of price."

"There's so many entertainment options now that professional sports has to be constantly cognizant of who they're competing with and how to maintain an audience. If you constantly disenfranchise the young and the less well-heeled, sooner or later your audience base shrinks."

"If we can get someone in to try (hockey) once... they're hooked. It's fast, graceful, with occasional brutality. It gets in your blood, and if we get them there with the symphony or Tiny Tim one night, so be it. We have to provide an entertainment vehicle that will draw fans, that draws attention, which provides us the opportunity to service the customer."

The tune of 470,000 paying customers could be classic in-your-face, told-you-so from Patterson to a Rockets organization that fired him before the championship season, and has been unable to sell out consistently despite its league title.

"I don't perceive it that way," Patterson said. "To be upset about not being part of an organization, you have to have some respect for the evaluation process or the evaluator. I know very well how the organization stacked up, how I and the people who worked for me performed. I never had any doubts about my talents or the people who worked for me."

"Seeing the championship happen in Houston was an emotional, moving experience from the standpoint of seeing a culmination of 20 years of work on the part of my father, the owners, me and (coach Rudy Tomjanovich). Whether you get the public recognition or not is not really the key; it's knowing you did the job and did a good job personally."

"I know how much work it was and who did what to get it there. It's something you want to see happen. The reality of the Houston Rockets is that the franchise is going to be here now and more or less forever. It's as entrenched as any business or cultural icon of the community."

Patterson does not long for a return to the pressures of salary caps and making the right NBA lottery draft choice. Seeing what the big business the NBA has become, and those who run its teams, undoubtedly has made him appreciate his role with the Aeros.

"To have great owners to work with, a staff that is very loyal, those are the things that are important to me more than the adulation," Patterson said. "I like being able to work with people I can trust."

"I think what's been most important to me is to be able to do the kind of work I enjoy in a city I love. The key for me is to create something, a lot of it out of thin air and harebrained schemes. If you're in a fertile, creative environment, it's a lot of fun. If you're in an environment where you're being mandated to, it's no fun."

Keeping the Aeros popular, and profitable, is Patterson's chief challenge for the coming years. He relishes the opportunity.

"The fun is watching 15,000 in the stands, the kids having fun and the players responding to the community. The sky's the limit with this thing. We can be sitting here three years from now and be just as amazed as with where we are today."

"You always try to set higher goals, have additional pressures. I don't think people are coming just for the novelty. All our surveys say they'll be back, they had a good time. We have something people want - entertainment at a good price."

Argentine fans love their sports

By JAIME ARON
AP Sports Writer
ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - Now that the baseball strike has been settled, we'll never know how many people would've showed up for replacement games. For Astros and Rangers beancounters, that's probably good.

But it would've been interesting to see the size of the crowds, whether attendance would've increased or decreased as it went along and especially how vehemently fans would've rooted. Just wondering.

The curiosity comes from spending three weeks in Argentina covering the Pan American Games and seeing that country's phenomenal fans.

Anyone who saw a World Cup match last summer knows all about the flag-waving, face-painting and drum pounding. For soccer, that was expected.

But didya know they do it for baseball (which is as foreign to them as soccer is to us)? How surprised would you be to hear that one of the hardest tickets in Buenos Aires was for team handball? Even shooting drew a crowd!

Those passionate people are wonderful sports fans. They love their athletes and are filled with a national pride that percolates here during Olympiads. It was understandable that the stands at Ezeiza Stadium would be jammed on a beautiful Saturday afternoon for the opener of the baseball tournament, which happened to pit Argentina and Team USA.

There was plenty for fans to cheer about in a 6-4 victory - and they did by setting off fireworks, exploding a cannon and singing more songs than even the rowdiest bunch of summer campers.

But what made an even bigger impression on this norteamericano (that's the South America equivalent of a "gringo") was the similar reaction during a 22-12 LOSS to Mexico.

Yes, even while watching their team get pounded the fans remained in the stands. As nightfall came and the Texas-sized mosquitoes descended, the seats were nearly as jammed for the last pitch as the first.

Every out by the defense was cheered as if it was a step closer to a perfect game, not the sarcastic jeer we'd hear here. Roars followed every single by the good guys.

Even though the mercy rule ended the game after seven innings, there was a standing ovation and enough cheering to think the Argens had won by 10.

Baseball may be a new sport to them, but they still knew what being waxed looked and felt like. Yet they didn't care. Those were their guys and they were going to support them simply because they kept trying.

When was the last time that happened here? A bigger surprise was the way the stands were packed for the opener of team handball.

A nice-sized crowd saw the women play, then the arena turned into a fire hazard by the time Argentina's men played Cuba. Imagine the Cowboys playing at Reunion Arena.

The building shook; you couldn't walk between people in the stands and it sounded practically as loud outside as it did inside. The only comparison would be an Indiana gym for an important high school hoop game.

But this was team handball for goodness sakes!

All that mattered, though, was that the players were wearing the powder blue and white of their country and that was enough for the fans to love them.

Back here, that's what replacements would've been. Fans would've had the chance to show their unconditional loyalty to their teams by rooting for those no-names simply because of the jerseys they wore and nothing else.

It would've been interesting, but, of course, it's probably better for everyone that we didn't see it.

Final Four provides setting for job hunting

By KEVIN SHERRINGTON
SEATTLE - The lobby of the Sheraton is crawling with coaches: head coaches, assistant coaches, would-be coaches, coaches on the move, coaches on the run.

Kevin Fricke has been here since 7:30 Thursday morning, when he estimated there may have been as many as 300 coaches in the lobby, and he will be here until midnight. He has been looking for a job since TCU turned over its basketball coaching staff last year, and he is wide, wide open.

"I have," he says, "no geographic problems."

Few of the people milling about the lobby where the National Association of Basketball Coaches has quartered its members have any limitations. This is the place to be seen, to be heard, to make face-to-face contact with people you might only reach by telephone any other time.

For college basketball fans and players, the Final Four may be the ultimate sporting event. But for many of the coaches who gravitate to their sport's Mecca every year, the Final Four is one thing.

A job fair.
 "He might be the No. 2 assistant at Indiana," says former Cowboys personnel director Gil Brandt, referring to the typical lobby inhabitant, "but for a chance to be the No. 1 assistant and get a raise, he picks up and goes."

The ubiquitous Brandt serves these coaches in his unofficial role as a "broker." All manner of people serve the same purpose. The Southwest Conference's Bill Foster does, though he seems uncomfortable with the description. Not Brandt. For the Final Four, he has two rooms. One is at the Sheraton, the other at the Westin. He mingles with coaches during the day at the Sheraton, then retreats to the Westin at night, where he consorts with administrators and the like. He finds out where the jobs are, putting in a word here, a recommendation there.

Brandt says he does this because college basketball is his "hobby." But he also is a college sports consultant for Playboy magazine, and maintaining these connections can't hurt.

Working the lobby is all about connections. In the lingo of the coaches, it is all a matter of how "aggressive" a coach wants to be.

One of the stories making the rounds is that some assistants, seeking the undivided attention of head coaches, find out their room numbers and call them in the middle of the night. The story probably is apocryphal. But it is not unusual for assistants to slip a resume under a coach's door. Tailing a head coach also is common. Make a habit of bumping into your prey, coaches say. Get someone to say something nice about you.

Most coaches don't expect to get a job while they're at the Final Four.

Fricke says. The real work is done later. But this is a good opportunity to be noticed, and there is no better place to be seen than the lobby.

"This is a good lobby," Fricke says, looking over the room, where coaches mill about in packs among the scalpers trying to acquire their Final Four tickets. "Some hotels in other cities are not set up as well. Seattle is good. New Orleans has a good lobby. Some are too small, and you don't get the opportunity to get around in them."

Fricke made his own arrangements to reach Seattle. He used a complimentary ticket he earned from mileage accrued on airline travel. He spent last season as a volunteer assistant at Moberly (Mo.) Junior College, and it was a tough year. As of Thursday afternoon, he had no leads on another job.

"But it's pretty early yet," he says, looking hopeful.

Few should get their hopes up, Brandt says. Most of the good jobs already have been filled. Ten years ago, athletic directors went to the Final Four to interview job applicants because it was cheaper and more convenient. Now, Brandt says, most administrators do their shopping before they get here.

The hottest commodity at this Final Four, Brandt says, is UCLA assistant Lorenzo Romar. He turned down head coaching positions at Oregon State and Nevada-Las Vegas, which makes him a rarity.

Most strain to appear casual, at least to an outsider. Ronnie Arrow, fired from his job as head coach at South Alabama this season, says he is "working on a few things." Coach of three national champions when he was at San Jacinto College in the mid-1980s, he doesn't want to go back. "Naturally, I'd like to be a head coach," he says, "but if an assistant's position at a Division I school came open..."

As Arrow talks to a reporter, fellow coaches interrupt to offer a handshake and best wishes. In the midst of a soliloquy about the joys of what is, for now, his former profession, Arrow is interrupted by a coach who whispers something to him.

"Hope so," Arrow says, turning aside to the coach. "If you hear anything..."

They come from all levels: high school, junior college, big schools, little schools. TCU assistant Richard Bacon, formerly of Lincoln High School in Dallas, made a connection with new Horned Frogs coach Billy Tubbs at last year's Final Four.

They come from all over. A high school coach from Kentucky walks across the lobby to shake hands with Rice's Willis Wilson. He makes no pitch. He tells Wilson he saw him from across the room and thought he should walk over and say hello. He repeats this line several times before leaving.

Wilson hates the lobby.

"This is a miserable experience," he says. "Absolutely miserable."

After Wilson was hired as the head coach at Rice, he was all but buried by coaching applicants at the next Final Four. He stopped answering his telephone. His wife screened calls, or the hotel operator did. It took him 30 minutes to walk across the lobby. To everyone who asked about a job, he told them to call his office the next week. When he got home, he had 150 messages from potential applicants.

"Maybe they weren't following me around," Wilson says of that week at the Final Four, "but it sure seemed like it."

Asked how many coaches in the Sheraton lobby were looking for jobs, he shakes his head.

"I don't want to know," he says.

Most of the coaches aren't so shy. Bill Muse of Connors State College in Warner, Okla., acknowledges he is interested in the Tulsa job, left vacant when Tubby Smith went to Georgia. The occasional head coaching vacancy is beyond the reach of nearly all the aspirants who work the lobby. But Muse is undaunted.

He just has one problem in presenting himself to the Tulsa athletic director.

"I can't find him," Muse says.

Everyone is looking for someone. Scott Edgar, head coach at Murray State, is rumored to be a candidate for Tulsa. But, as a coach who already has a job, he can't seem outwardly interested. As he talks casually with a reporter while checking in to the Sheraton, the hotel clerk tells him that Gary Cunningham wants him to call. Cunningham is the athletic director at Fresno State, where the basketball position is vacant.

Turning to the reporter, Edgar turns about three shades of red. "Great timing," he says.

The majority of these coaches should be so lucky. They won't get a phone call or much more than a handshake. Coming all the way to Seattle is no guarantee it will further a career. When Mississippi's Rob Evans shook up his coaching staff after his first season, he interviewed 50 potential assistants at the Final Four.

"And I didn't hire any of them," he says.

But even Evans encourages young coaches to go. Head coaches are looking for bright, aggressive young men who go to all the seminars and meetings and say all the right things. A contact here might be good for a job somewhere down the line, coaches say.

Most will go home before the championship game Monday. But they didn't come to watch basketball, anyway.

They came to hang out in a lobby. "It's a neat experience," Fricke says. "I'm always a little awe struck, just watching the lobby."

Slimmer Swindell surprises some

HOUSTON (AP) - There's a lot less to see of Greg Swindell these days, and the formerly portly Houston Astros pitcher hopes his detractors now have less to complain about.

"Now they'll have to find something to get on me about," said Swindell, who by his own admission tipped the scales at nearly 260 pounds before the baseball strike.

"I got on a scale in Cincinnati (in late July 1994) and I couldn't believe it. I felt good, but that got me serious about losing some weight. I lost about 20 pounds and I'm at about 240 right now, so you can guess where I was before."

Swindell watched his offseason diet and his fat intake. Now he walks into the Astros' spring-training clubhouse in Kissimmee, Fla., and some people have to look twice.

The pitcher's weight was the topic of much derision after he signed a big free-agent contract with the Astros before the 1993 season, and it remained a criticism as he compiled records of 12-13 and 8-9 over the past two years.

"I'm going to keep trying to lose another 10 pounds or so, and then maybe people will judge me on the way I pitch," he told the Houston Chronicle. "Last year, I started out strong and nobody said anything. Then I had a few bad games, and it was because of my weight."

Swindell said that in addition to his diet, he put in lots of time on a treadmill at his home in Houston. Later he switched to running six to nine miles four days a week.

And get this: His enthusiasm for running has grown so much that Swindell's goal is to run in the Houston Marathon next January.

"I'm not saying I can run the whole way, so I'll run for as long as I can, walk a little and then run some more," he said. "But it's something I want to do, something that will push me."

As strange as it might seem, Swindell might be one of the better-conditioned Astros players as they start a strike-delayed spring training.

He and pitcher Shane Reynolds said they have been throwing three or four times per week so they'd be ready when the work stoppage ended.

It will be an important season for Swindell, who has two seasons left on his contract. He hopes this will be the year he lives up to his promise. "I want to have the kind of season I know I can have," he said. "I feel good about my weight, my arm feels good and I want to get out there and put it all together."

The American Baseball League was organized in 1900, but did not gain recognition as a major league until 1903.

Farm and Ranch

Farmer/son operation diversifies with exotic birds

Raising ostriches provides alternative source of revenue for Christie pair

By SHELLY SCHILLING
Staff Writer

Diversification can be a life-saver in the world of agriculture. It assures producers that if one enterprise suffers a loss, hopefully another will not.

Some agricultural businessmen find it better not to put all of their eggs in one basket.

Of course, there are those who put more than a few in a basket --- or an incubator if you will.

Dale and Robbie Christie, father and son, are among those few who like to diversify -- they have operated an ostrich ranch for about four years, according to Robbie.

The ostrich market has taken a turn in recent months. Instead of raising the birds primarily for breeding pairs, many producers are turning to the meat production aspects of the business.

More than 10,000 U.S. ranchers and farmers now raise ratites (flightless birds), according to Earthwide Enterprises, Inc. The natural products from these birds will include meat.

According to Earthwide, the feedlot programs will steadily grow for the birds.

Processing-manufacturing-marketing operations now emerging authenticate the movement of the U.S. ratite industry out of the breeder phase and into the commercial phase.

In the U.S. and internationally, consumers are discovering the nutritious, low-fat red meat.

"We have taken birds to Floydada for custom slaughter," Robbie said. "We take primarily the males that we no longer use for mating".

Most of the Christies' production thus far, has been for mating pairs. Although the cost of the pairs have decreased, a reasonable profit is still attainable because of the meat production trend that is on the rise.

If ostrich meat is widely accepted, the ostrich industry will probably go to mass production, Robbie predicts.

The probability of an ostrich feed operation is very likely.

The larger birds bring about $1,200 at slaughter and a producer can forward contract a price with the processor, Robbie said.

He also said that most of the meat from the birds come from the leg, which will add up to about 100 pounds. The rest of the meat is usually ground.

"An ostrich steak is very red even when the meat is well done," Robbie said. "Most people think it is raw when they cut into it, but it's not and it is very good."

Robbie also is considering the possibility of having the birds put out on pasture and grazed.

"In Africa the producers put their birds out on fields of clover and herd them with long sticks with white flags tied on them," he said.

At the present time the Christies feed their birds corn and alfalfa. Robbie estimated that they gain about one pound per day. "The birds grow very fast," he said.

There are three types of birds, according to Robbie. The Reds, Blues and the Blacks.

The Reds are the largest of the three and are grown primarily for meat. The Blacks are the smallest of the birds and were grown mainly for the feathers, especially during the late 1800s and early 1900s he said. The Blues fall somewhere in between.

"Now that the feather demand is not as high, the Reds are raised more than the Blues or the Blacks," Robbie said.

The laying females that the Christies use, are mainly the large Red birds.

When the female lays an egg, the Christies take it from the nest (which the male builds) and puts it in the incubator to ensure that the female continues to lay.

A female can lay up to 20 eggs in a clutch, and they will produce from March to July.

After the egg is gathered, it can be held for up to 10 days and then incubated at 97 degrees for a total of 42 days. The egg will loose 14 percent of its weight during incubation.

If the egg looses more than, or less than, 14 percent of the weight the egg will have problems.

To ensure the weight is maintained properly, the Christies have to weigh the eggs regularly.

"An ostrich can live to be 80 years old and a female can be in full production for 50 years," Robbie said.

When asked what the biggest problem in raising the exotic birds Robbie said, "They are really tough animals and do not need that much attention."

"If you can get them to six-months-old you are pretty well assured they will make it," he said.

"We learned about the birds as we went and I found that they are not mean animals," Robbie said. "The way that they act depends on how they are raised."

Dale and his wife Carolyn farm and ranch in the Summerfield area. Robbie and his wife Emily have a ranching operation and live in Hereford.

The Christies are in the business for the long haul and hope the market stays promising. They are also optimistic that the meat consumption trend will continue to rise.

Waiting for What?!

These ostriches located at the Dale Christie farm west of town, seem to be unaware of the fate they will soon encounter. They are presently waiting to be shipped to a processing facility in Floydada. The Christies have been raising the exotic birds for four years and are increasing the amount of birds they will be raising for meat production.

Researchers say marbling not accurate indicator in variations of tenderness

WASHINGTON (AP) - If you're like most consumers, you try to pick out a tender cut of beef by looking for a piece that is well marbled.

It may not be a reliable tool, but it's the only one a consumer has. Trouble is, Agriculture Department researchers say, these flecks of fat have little to do with variations in meat tenderness.

In other words, you really don't know what you've got until you cut into it.

Agricultural Research Service scientists searching for a truer test are focusing on genetic indicators, and they hope in the next decade they'll learn enough to classify meat reliably according to tenderness and taste.

"Beef tenderness or toughness, controlled about 70 percent by environment and 30 percent by heredity, may involve expression of many genes," said animal physiologist Mohammad Koochmaria at the U.S. Meat Animal Research Center in Clay Center, Neb.

Marbling accounts for about 10 percent of the variation in meat tenderness, he said in the March issue of Agricultural Research magazine.

The largest factor - controlling 44 percent of the variation in tenderness - is an enzyme-inhibiting protein called calpastatin. Scientists at the center have found various forms of a gene for calpastatin on chromosome 7 of the beef genome - a map of the genetic makeup of beef cattle. And they have developed ways to search for specific forms of the gene, the article said.

Scientists believe they will know within three years how well these "diagnostic probes" will work in the search for tender beef, but it will take longer to develop strategies for producing more tender beef.

In the meantime, researchers hope to develop a way to measure calpastatin routinely as part of a classification system. That way, beef could be marketed with predictable tenderness quality. They also hope to be able to measure calpastatin levels in live animals so that carcasses from cattle rated unacceptably tough could be given special tenderizing treatment.

They also are working on breeding tenderizing traits into cattle, said Larry V. Cundiff, an animal geneticist at the center.

"When we can identify desirable genes in individual animals, we can more freely use breeds for the traits they bring to a crossbreeding system," he said.

One advantage to using genetic markers as an indication of tenderness is that marbling would be regarded as a less important factor in predicting quality. In other words, there would be less emphasis on fat, and less spent on efforts to fatten the herd.

"That means that when consumers can be reliably assured that beef is tender, though not heavily marbled, the beef industry will be able to provide a leaner product at less cost," the article said.

Flax harvested in late summer produces the best quality linen.

Local FFA and 4-H students compete in Clarendon, WT

Livestock judging

The Deaf Smith Co. 4-H and FFA Livestock Judging Teams participated this past weekend in a competition in Clarendon. The contest was held Saturday, April 1, at the Clarendon College Campus. Deaf Smith County was represented by two senior teams, a junior team, and two alternates. 4-H and FFA members from across the panhandle attended the contest.

The Senior 4-H team made up of Karon Harder, Caleb Brumley, and Erin Auckerman, were sixth high team overall. This team was also the high point team in the sheep division, and second high point team in the swine category.

Karon Harder was third high individual in sheep. Caleb Brumley was high point individual in swine judging, and ninth high overall individual. Erin Auckerman was seventh high point individual overall.

The Junior 4-H team consisting of Kylee Auckerman, Jerad Johnson, Brent Carlson, and Trey Bezner were eighth high overall team in the junior division. They were third high team in cattle, and Brent Carlson was fifth high individual in cattle.

Chad Christie was tenth high overall junior individual, and Michelle Bernhardt was eighth high junior individual. Also participating in the contest were Ted Peabody III, Justin McDowell, and Rusty Dutton.

The FFA team that won second place at Clarendon consisted of Colby Christie, Moriah Olson, Cassie Abney and Clint Robison.

The Farm Business Management Team consisting of Stephen Wheeler, Jeremy Smithee and Jory McKibben finished third in the business competition.

Colby Christie and Jeremy Smithee won third high individual at Clarendon, with Moriah Olson receiving sixth high individual.

The FFA teams also attended the Moore county Traveling Trophy Contest at WTAMU University on March 31.

The results of that competition are: Twelve place Livestock Judging; Colby Christie, Moriah Olson, Cassie Abney and Clint Robison.

The FFA Farm Business Management team consisting of Jeremy Smithee, Quintin Gillian and Stephen Wheeler received third place.

James Payne and Jeremy Smithee received 6th high individual with Colby Christie and Quintin Gillian placing ninth high individual.

Also competing were the Dairy Judging team. Those members are Crystal Wortham, Jay Wilson and Robert Holmes.

Horse judging

This past weekend, the Deaf Smith Co. 4-H and Hereford FFA Horse Judging team's were in competition. They participated in the Moore County traveling Trophy Contest at WTAMU on Friday, March 31, and in the Clarendon College Contest on Saturday. The teams judged both halter and performance classes and gave oral reasons for their placings.

In the 4-H competition at the Moore County Competition the Senior Team was 3rd Place Overall Team and High Point in the Halter Division. Individual results are:

Courtney Crawford, 1st High Individual in Reasons and 1st High Individual in Halter.

James Payne, 3rd High Individual Overall and 3rd High Individual in Performance.

Tommy Mather, 4th High Individual in Halter.

At the Clarendon College Contest the Senior 4-H Team won Second Place honors overall. Individual placings are:

Courtney Crawford, 3rd High Individual in Halter.

Loretta Camp, 1st High Individual in Halter and 4th High Individual Overall.

Jessica Matsler, 2nd High Individual in Performance.

In the FFA competition at Clarendon the results were: 1st in Horse judging; Loretta Camp, Tommy Mather, Courtney Crawford and James Payne. Loretta Camp, 2nd high individual and James Payne, 5th high individual.

In the FFA WTAMU competition on Friday the results were: 1st in Horse Judging; Courtney Crawford, Loretta Camp and James Payne.

James Payne also received 6th high individual.

Perry encourages growers to approve area boll weevil eradication program

AUSTIN -- Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry encouraged cotton growers and landowners in the High Plains boll weevil zone area to approve the Boll Weevil Eradication Program.

Perry said it is crucial that farmers and landowners return their ballots promptly. More than 20,000 ballots were mailed in the High Plains zone which has more than 3 million acres of cotton and $1 billion in annual cotton sales.

Boll weevils annually cost Texas cotton farmers $20 million in crop losses and $22.5 million for boll weevil control.

Election in the High Plains will end April 15, with ballots mailed on or before April 3 by the Farm Service Agency. Voting will be by mail or at county extension offices.

In addition to deciding whether to participate in the eradication program, growers will vote on a director for the Foundation board and on the maximum assessment rate for the program's funding.

The proposal will pass if two-thirds of those voting approve, or if more than 50 percent of the zone's cotton acres are represented by a favorable vote.

Eligible voters are producers or landowners who shared in the proceeds of cotton production in 1994, based on Farm Service Agency determinations.

In a cost-share lease situation, the operator and landowner vote their share of the acreage, based on the lease agreement. Acreage may be voted only once.

Cattle numbers to increase over time

SAN ANTONIO -- Cattle-Fax, a Denver-based marketing service, reported recently that the U.S. cattle industry in the coming years can expect cattle numbers to increase along with beef production, flat beef demand, slow growth in exports and higher production costs. This is an extended trend that began in 1992, according to Topper Thorpe, executive director of Cattle-Fax.

The veteran market analyst warned the board of directors of Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association that the cattle numbers have yet to peak. Beef replacement heifers have been growing in numbers since 1986. Since that time there has been an expansion in the factory (cow) numbers, which means more calf and feeder supplies.

Thorpe told the cattle producers to expect a tremendous increase in ted cattle numbers until 1998.

Compounding the production problems for cattle producers is the steady and continuing increase in pork and poultry production.

However, the domestic beef demand is stable after declining in recent years.

Exports will continue to play a key role in the industry's profitability, growing from one percent of domestic production in 1980 to six-to-seven percent today. However, the growth of that market segment is stabilizing.

Low-cost producers can weather the downturn, but more and more producers have told Cattle-Fax that they are operating at or near break-evens in recent years.

Cotton crop predicted to be largest ever

WASHINGTON (AP) - Agriculture Department economists are predicting the 1994 U.S. cotton crop will be the largest ever at 19.73 million bales.

The 1993 crop was 16.13 million bales.

The department last week forecast total U.S. cotton supplies at 23.27 bales, which is 5,000 more than last month's forecast.

During calendar 1994, U.S. textile exports rose to a record 2.8 billion pounds, up 9 percent from 1993. At the same time, textile imports hit a record 7.4 billion pounds.

Agriculture Briefs

WASHINGTON (AP) - The government's forecast for U.S. corn exports rose by 50 million bushels this month to 2 billion bushels, bolstered largely by dry weather that is reducing corn yield prospects in South Africa.

The forecast for the season average farm price of U.S. corn is $2.15 to $2.25 per bushel.

The projections for U.S. sorghum exports remained unchanged at 5.6 million tons, the Agriculture Department's Economic Research Service said.

The sorghum price range was narrowed to $2.00 to $2.10 per bushel.

Lawmakers' salaries padded above $7,200 level

By BEN WEAR

Austin American-Statesman
AUSTIN - Texas legislators make a measly $600 a month. Sub-poverty level. Baby-sitter's wages. Public service for a pittance.

It's the hoariest of statehouse truisms. The only problem, the basic premise is no longer true.

Certainly no legislator is getting rich off state treasury checks. But all legislators get more than the constitutional salary of $7,200 a year - an amount that the public has not agreed to increase in 20 years.

During the past three years, lawmakers have seen their allowances for daily living expenses more than triple, to $95 a day, seven days a week during the five-month session. Even in pricey Austin, legislators admit they pocket some of that as a salary supplement instead of spending it to live here during legislative sessions.

And for two types of lawmakers, the state's expense allowance is a windfall. Some legislators spend surplus campaign funds on everything from rent to cable TV and keep the taxpayers' $95 as income - and must pay federal income taxes on it. And, though Austin-area members live and work in the state capital, they are paid the per diem as income in addition to the $600 base salary.

"The reality is that we're paid a good deal more than that ($600)," says Rep. Mike Krusee, R-Williamson County. Krusee, like all Austin-area lawmakers, accepts the $95 allowance.

"We're not overcompensated by any means," Krusee says. "But a lot of the moaning that goes on, a lot of complaining, kind of understates the amount that we are actually paid."

If a House member were to claim the maximum allowed for daily living expenses, the member would be paid $28,984 in odd-number years when the Legislature meets and $21,744 in even-numbered years when they don't convene. A senator's maximum in salary and per diem would be slightly lower.

Since 1975, voters have rejected the idea of raising lawmakers' salaries in Texas. But legislators finally were able to stretch their state compensation when, in a constitutional amendment in 1991, the voters agreed to create the Texas Ethics Commission. Among its duties, the ethics commission, whose members are appointed by the governor and the Legislature, is empowered to suggest legislative pay raises to voters.

What voters may have missed in the complex amendment, however, was language scrapping the traditional $30-a-day per diem allowed under the constitution in favor of authorizing the ethics commission to determine what to grant lawmakers for daily living expenses.

So far the commission has not put a pay raise on a statewide initiative. But it immediately hiked the per diem to $85 and has increased it twice since.

Most Texans, Krusee says, probably have no idea that legislators have gotten what amounts to two pay raises in the past 16 months without their consent.

"The state constitution pretty much clearly states that the people get to decide on what compensation will be, and on every increase," Krusee says. "Now you've got a system where basically the ethics commission can increase our compensation without going to the people."

Asked about this extra income, most lawmakers admit that their pay exceeds the purported $7,200 a year. But it's still no bonanza, they say, given that many of them forgo income on their normal jobs or, even if their companies continue to pay them, job off extra work on partners or co-workers.

"I guarantee you, for me it's a losing proposition," says Sen. John Montford, an attorney from Lubbock. "I'm convinced I could make more money in the productive hours if I wasn't a legislator. But that's a decision you make."

Aside from the base $7,200 salary, all legislators this year will get another $13,300 from the $95 per diem. The Legislature meets 140 days in odd-numbered years, unless the governor calls them into a special session.

Between sessions, House members can collect a slightly higher per diem rate ($101) for up to 12 days a month of out-of-town legislative business. The Senate caps this at 10 days a month.

What all this means to the bottom line of individual legislators varies widely, depending on factors ranging from geography to personal wealth to legislators' position in the Capitol hierarchy.

The Austin American-Statesman, using payroll data from Comptroller John Sharp's office, looked at payments to 140 legislators who served throughout the 1993 and 1994 fiscal years, from September 1992 through August 1994. The payments included salary, per diem and travel reimbursement, and ranged from a high of $70,507 for Rep. Layton Black, D-Goldthwaite, to a low of $29,040 for both Rep. Paul Sadler, D-Henderson, and now-retired Sen. Ike Harris, R-Dallas.

Alone among their colleagues, Sadler and Harris drew checks only for their salary and normal per diem during a brief special session in late 1992 and the regular 1993 session. Everyone else charged the state for other expenses and per diem for days purportedly spent on legislative business during the interim between sessions.

While Black said his workload justifies his compensation, his example shows that in the right circumstances the state can become a legislator's primary employer.

Black was named chairman of the House Administration Committee at the beginning of the 1993 session. Chairing a committee, in some cases, has little impact on a legislator's time in between legislative sessions. Not so with House Administration, whose chairman becomes in effect the office manager for the 150-member body. And during Black's time at the helm, the restoration of the Capitol and attendant shuffling of offices increased the load.

"Everything they do, from pencils to furniture, office space to travel, all the vouchers, all the expenditures come across my desk," Black says. "It's a pretty large operation, and it requires an awful lot of time to do that."

Black estimates that he has spent 85 percent of his time in Austin over the past two years. The payroll data seem to support that.

For the 1992 special session and the 1993 regular legislative session, Black was paid $14,640 in per diem. Aside from that, the state paid him another $6,990 in the 1993 fiscal year and $13,050 in 1994. Using the per diem rates in effect at the time, that means Black spent about 80 extra days in Austin in 1993 and 145 (the limit) in 1994. He received $12,945 in mileage reimbursement, which equates to more than 200 round trips to Goldthwaite.

"I don't apologize for that at all," says Black, who says the state work killed his business buying cattle at auction for ranchers.

Curiously enough, many prominent legislators - men and women likely to spend considerable off-session time laboring in Austin - don't appear until well down the payroll list. Names missing from the top include House Speaker Pete Laney, D-Hale Center ($50,331); Montford, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee ($50,815); and Rep. Rob Junell, D-San Angelo, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee ($32,200). Despite their heavier-than-usual workload, they collect less from the state than many of their colleagues.

The difference is that Laney, Montford and Junell have something that Black doesn't have - clout - and the plump campaign war chest that generates. To one degree or another, Laney and the others legally subsidize their travel and Austin expenses by charging costs to their campaign funds. For instance, Laney was paid almost $220,000 in 1993 and 1994 by his own campaign fund to reimburse him for using his Piper Cheyenne to:toprop plane on both political and state business travel. Despite the heavy spending, Laney still managed to raise about $400,000 more than he spent over the past two years.

(One reason they do this is because some trips are for both state and political business. Charging everything to the campaign avoids questions from opponents.)

Black, on the other hand, chairman of a committee much more important to fellow legislators than to lobbyists, has less than $40,000 in surplus. And unlike Sadler, a wealthy trial lawyer who chooses not to charge the state for expenses and can afford to make that lofty choice, Black needs the money.

At least eight legislators took in more than $60,000 in state checks over the two-year period and another 31 received between $50,000 and $60,000. Short of auditing the comings and goings of each higher-earning legislator, it's difficult to tell if any or all of them could justify their expenses. Rep. Edmund Kuempel's situation offers an interesting example, however.

Kuempel, a Republican from Seguin, did not chair a committee during the 1993 session. And he lives only 55 miles or so from the state Capitol. Nonetheless, Kuempel charged $21,245 in per diem during the interim as well as $3,004 in mileage. Those numbers - which do not include time or mileage related to the regular session and special session held during that period - equate to around 240 days in Austin and the equivalent of about 100 round trips to Seguin.

Kuempel said he chooses to do his routine legislative business during the interim in Austin instead of in his Seguin legislative office, which has no staff members.

"I'm in Austin probably during the interim two to two-and-a-half days per week doing legislative work," says Kuempel, who keeps an Austin apartment year round.

If he did that same work in Seguin, Kuempel would not be paid per diem.

Legislators making most, least from salary, extras

By BEN WEAR

Austin American-Statesman
AUSTIN - Here are the legislators who were paid the most and least in salary, per diem, mileage and travel expenses during fiscal 1993 and 1994, according to the Austin American Statesman's analysis of data from Texas Comptroller.

Many of those in the top dozen live far from Austin, so much of their extra money came from mileage and travel. But the legislator at the top of the list, Layton Black, hails from a town just 100 miles northwest of Austin. On the other hand, Paul Sadler, who was paid the least, commutes 220 miles to his hometown.

A legislator who accepted only salary would have made $14,400 during the two-year period, but $29,040 if he or she chose to take the per diem. Every legislator, including those who live in or around Austin and stay at home during the session, took the per diem.

In some cases, lawmakers turn to lobbyists, instead of taxpayers, using campaign funds to pay rent, travel, utilities and other expenses. Yet they still receive the state allowance for daily expenses while on state business.

NEW YORK (AP) - Fay Vincent's co-author has tossed him a curveball.

The former baseball commissioner has been sued for $600,000 by David Kaplan, who was supposed to help him write his autobiography.

Vincent and Kaplan signed last April to write the book for Little Brown & Company, but Vincent changed his mind in November.

Kaplan, a legal affairs editor and senior writer for Newsweek, wants to go ahead with the project. He's asking the court to rule that he has the right to use material gathered for the book, "Baseball Breaks Your Heart."

LONDON (AP) - David Fisher won't be stealing any bread for 15 kids the next two weeks. He'll be on a strict diet of matzo.

Fisher, who plays Jean Valjean in the West End's "Les Miserables," is taking a two-week break to perform cantorial duties at a Catskills resort during Passover, an eight-day Jewish holiday which begins on April 14.

Observant Jews eat matzo instead of leavened bread over the holiday.

Massage therapy not just for rich, famous

By BECKY CAMP
Lifestyles Editor

It's not just a fad. It's not just for the rich and famous. It's not just a luxury that only a few can afford.

Massage therapy is an affordable form of healing that is here to stay. And Hereford has two registered massage therapists who say they are here to stay.

What is massage therapy?

"The basis of massage is touch and there is increasing medical evidence to show the value of touch," said Becky McDonald of Hereford, registered massage therapist.

Massage therapy is therapeutic treatment of the muscles by rubbing or kneading.

"I am into muscles," said Jody Keese, who is also a registered massage therapist practicing in Hereford.

What are the benefits of massage? Proponents say massage is one of the easiest ways of attaining and maintaining good health, that it increases the circulation of the blood and lymph systems, carrying off harmful waste by-products that may accumulate in the muscles due to overwork or from tension and fatigue.

Headaches, sore muscles, insomnia, tension and stress can be alleviated with massage.

Do I have to undress completely? According to McDonald and Keese, this is one of the most frequently asked questions. The answer is "No."

A massage can be given with the client fully dressed.

A client is only asked to disrobe to a point where they are comfortable. The client is always draped with a sheet or towel while they are on the massage table.

How long does a massage take? A treatment can last for half an hour, an hour, or one and a half hours. This depends on the client.

What is a registered massage therapist? In order to include the word "registered" in their title, a massage therapist must be licensed by the Texas Department of Health.

Both Keese and McDonald are registered massage therapists. They completed a 300 hour course with the Austin School of Massage Therapy, then completed an exam for the Department of Health that included both a written test and a practical test (giving a massage).

"My goal is to put emphasis on wellness and prevention," said McDonald.

In the past, massage has often been associated with questionable intentions.

"This is not what massage is about," said Keese. "Both Becky and I want people to understand that massage is a very powerful form of healing. We conduct ourselves as health professionals."

A client must complete a questionnaire before receiving any treatment. Any medical problems that would be affected by massage are discussed and the effects of massage are explained before the treatment begins.

Massage therapists do not attempt to diagnose disease or prescribe for it. This is the responsibility of a physician. However, doctors do recommend to patients that massage treatments can be beneficial in some instances.

"The atmosphere in a treatment room is very important," said Keese. "I try to create a relaxed atmosphere at all times."

A client must be as comfortable and relaxed as possible to receive the full benefits of massage therapy. "An important part of the treatment is 'aromatherapy,'" said McDonald. Therapists use a scented oil during a treatment and select a fragrance based on the individual and the reason for the treatment.

Regardless of the length of the treatment a client receives, certain principles are applied. Once a treatment begins, the therapist's hands are in constant contact with the client.

Massage therapy is applied to muscles, not bones. Therapists have to know all 206 bones in the human body and where they are located, so they will know they are not applying pressure on a bone.

Pressure is applied to muscles in varying degrees, with special attention to "trigger points". A trigger point is a knot in a muscle and the massage will help the knot to relax.

Massage therapy, which, according to McDonald, goes as far back in history as the existence of man, is increasing in usage. "Massage can be beneficial for infants, pregnant women, elderly, diabetics, people with arthritis or anyone who wants to improve their overall health," said McDonald.

Both Keese, who is originally from Minnesota, and McDonald, who is a Hereford native, will be participating in the upcoming health fair at the hospital. They will be networking from the same booth. McDonald will be doing feet and ankle work while Keese will be doing chair massage.

Seniors of 1995 seeking pictures

Members of the Hereford High School senior class of 1995 are looking for embarrassing pictures of classmates.

Pictures can be given to Pam Wilson or Sue Taylor at the Tuesday and Thursday prom meetings at Sugarland Mall.

For anyone not attending the meetings, the pictures can be sent to school with your child.

Pictures are needed by the end of April.

Library week program

National Library Week is April 10-15, and the American Library Association and McDonald's, are co-sponsoring Solve a Mystery—Read, a program designed to heighten children's interest in reading. McDonald's in Hereford is helping sponsor the program at Deaf Smith County Library with incentive prize coupons good for drinks, cones and meals. McDonald's manager Galen Cogburn (left) and Joe Weaver, library assistant director, look over a poster about the program. The reading program is open to children 5 years old through the 6th grade. Further details may be obtained at the Deaf Smith County Library.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

It's been said that you'll learn more about a road by traveling it than by consulting all the maps in the world. The Junior Historians proved that on their trip to Dallas. The trip was successful and profitable in that the group learned more about the area with our numerous stops.

This was the third consecutive year that I have spent "on the road" on my birthday with teenagers, but this year I did have a "first". I was serenaded with "Happy Birthday" via walkie-talkie from the lead van and then by the students in the van I was driving-- in English and then in Spanish!! Now, really, have any of you had such an experience? I always take the best of young people on these trips!

Junior Historians will be assisting at the Deaf Smith Museum with a display of World War II artifacts. If there are any of our readers who have items that could be loaned to the museum; from that period of time, please contact the museum or HJH. The display will be in a locked area for security and we will "handle with care!"

Another opportunity for students to have casual pictures made will be on April 11. These will be taken before school, during the lunch hour and after school.

During the month of April, scoliosis screening will be done for all eighth graders. This is a required procedure, according to Nurse Rudd. Parents will be notified if any abnormalities are observed.

Josh Stubbs will be attending the Natural Resources conservation Banquet at the Country Club on Tuesday. He will be recognized for his winning entry in the annual essay contest.

Excitement is building about the April 19 Austin trip for the "Build the Capitol" team. We do not have all the details, but we do know that we will leave Hereford at 5 a.m. on that date and will arrive in Austin at 8:45 on Southwest Airlines special flight. We will be back in Hereford at approximately 10 p.m. An exciting day is planned for the students from the ten winning schools across Texas. After a few repairs, our model of the capitol will be shipped to Austin where it will be displayed at the capitol until April 30.

Report cards will be sent home late this week. Do take time to visit with your student about this report and then have it returned to the first period teacher.

One of God's greatest miracles is to enable ordinary people to do extraordinary things. We see this happen daily at HJH. When you see some of these students, let them know that you are proud of them!

The Congregation and Community
Are Cordially Invited To Attend

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I read with interest the compelling letter you printed from Bruce Bowden, chairman of the National Kidney Foundation. He was asking readers to become organ donors.

Let me tell you from firsthand experience what a delicate and difficult task it is for an attending physician to approach the family of a dying patient and request the patient's organs to help save the life of another.

Often, family members are convinced that the patient WILL survive and are shocked and dismayed at the unwelcome news of impending death. They view the bearer of such news as a monster and are certain the doctor could save the patient if he really wanted to.

The demand for donor organs far exceeds the supply, even though the potential number of organs available is more than enough to meet our requirements. Asking people to sign donor cards has not done the job.

There is, however, a method of obtaining organs that has worked well in Belgium, and I see no reason why it wouldn't work here or in Canada. It reverses the usual donor-card procedure and assumes that people who die are automatic donors unless they have signed a card denying the use of their organs for transplant purposes.

This way, everyone's rights are protected, and if there is an objection, religious or otherwise, the organs are not touched. I hope this letter makes your column and helps move this concept forward. -- Pennsylvania

DEAR PA.: I would not feel comfortable pressing for such legislation. Organ donation is an intensely personal act. Even if a law were passed that made everyone an automatic donor unless he or she had signed a card stating otherwise, many people would be outraged at the assumption that the organs of their loved ones could be automatically harvested.

A better approach is for physicians to be trained in precisely how to broach the subject of transplantation with family members for whom there is no hope.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 32 and married to a man I have never loved. My parents thought he would be good to me. I was 20 at the time. We have two children and get along OK, but there never was that special spark, and I always felt cheated. Now for the messy part.

I met a man at my part-time job who made me feel like a teen-ager again. "Ron" is married, has three daughters and will never be divorced. I knew this when we started to see each other, but the pull was so strong, I didn't care.

I am now pregnant with Ron's child and have just learned I am carrying a boy. Ron has always wanted a son and is thrilled. My husband knows about this and says we are going to stay married no matter what.

I want to put Ron's name on the baby's birth certificate and name the baby after him. Would this be OK? - Helen in Houston

DEAR HELEN: If you want to name the baby after Ron, go ahead, but according to the Cook County Department of Records, putting his name on the birth certificate, at least in Illinois, would be no simple matter. Talk to a lawyer, and get advice on how to proceed. It sounds as if your marriage could use some repair work, Helen. Please consider counseling.

Becky's Camp Site

By Becky Camp

It seems the feelings I expressed in last week's column are shared by a rather large number of people.

And they haven't always been brought on by daylight savings time. A poem by Robert Louis Stevenson, which supports some of my ideas, was brought to my attention.

Since I know that others share my opinions, the subject is closed, and we can all get on with adjusting to daylight savings time.

A man should live if only to satisfy his curiosity.

Bed in Summer

In winter I get up at night
And dress by yellow candle-light.
In summer, quite the other way,
I have to go to bed by day.

I have to go to bed and see
The birds still hopping on the tree,
Or hear the grown-up people's feet
Still going past me in the street.

And does it not seem hard to you,
When all the sky is clear and blue,
And I should like so much to play,
To have to go to bed by day?

Kooky cowboy couture of Chinese prints will fill wardrobe of fashionable women

By FRANCINE PARNES

NEW YORK (AP) - How will fashionable women dress this fall?

If they're fans of jokester-designer Nicole Miller, their wardrobes will be packed with kooky cowboy couture done in Chinese prints. If their tastes run to the classic, they'll reach for Ellen Tracy's refined wool separates in monochromatic pastels or brights. And if terminally hip Richard Tyler is their man, then super-funky rubber dresses and flared pants are their calling.

As fashion week continued, Miller unveiled her fall collection Monday night, followed on Tuesday by Ellen Tracy design director Linda Allard and Tyler.

Miller, best known for her wacky prints that have rocked the men's neckwear industry, loves to design clothes to make her customers smile. Her fall collection, dubbed "Chinese Snowbound Rodeo," did not disappoint.

It's a wild ride based on a collage of Miller's recent escapades - snow boarding in Colorado, staging a fashion show in El Paso, Texas, and viewing an Asian design museum exhibit in New York.

Thus was born an East-meets-West collection of cowboy shirts and home-on-the-range boots and ski sweaters, all exuberantly printed with Chinese kids on snow boards.

On a more subdued note, Allard opened her Ellen Tracy show with a voice-over that said, "Welcome to the real world."

That meant pretty, easy-to-wear monochromatics such as plain, finely tailored coat-and-dress ensembles or pants suits, all with matching skinny belt, suede ankle boots and gloves.

To replicate the look, you start with a man-tailored cotton shirt and a short, straight skirt. Add a cashmere cardigan or long, fitted menswear-style jacket, then accessories to match and an ankle-length wool coat.

"First and foremost," said Allard, "we try at Ellen Tracy to relate to what real women are going to wear. These are women who have real jobs and real bodies, so I'm trying to interpret the trends for them."

Which is why Allard faltered when she showed low-slung ball skirts with crop tops. Even the reed-thin mannequins had midriff bulge bobbing from side to side as they sashayed down the runway.

But for those with unreal bodies, there's Richard Tyler, the bicoastal designer who dresses Daryl Hannah, Janet Jackson and Julia Roberts, among others.

The Australian-born designer, who built his reputation by dressing Tinseltown's trendiest for Oscar night, was head designer at Anne Klein until November.

Military Muster

Navy Seaman Recruit Jessica M. Polk, daughter of Maria S. Robinson of Hereford, recently completed U.S. Navy basic training at Recruit Training Command, Great Lakes, Ill.

During the eight-week program, Polk completed a variety of training which included classroom study, practical hands-on instruction, and an emphasis on physical fitness. In particular, Polk learned naval customs, first aid, fire fighting, water safety and survival, and a variety of safety skills required for working around ships and aircraft.

Polk is a 1994 graduate of Hereford High School.

attended West Texas A&M, and is a candidate for May graduation from U.T. Southwestern Medical Center in Dallas with a bachelors degree in physical therapy.

Speer graduated from Texas A&M University in May, 1991, with an industrial engineering degree. He is currently employed by Haliburton Energy Services.

The first American magazine for women was Godey's Lady's Book, founded in 1830.

SHANNA DANIEL, JUSTIN SHULTZ

Amarillo wedding planned for Daniel, Shultz in July

Shanna Daniel and Justin Shultz plan to marry July 1 in Pleasant Valley Baptist Church in Amarillo.

Miss Daniel is the daughter of Gary and Cheryl Daniel and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Biggs and Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Daniel, all of Amarillo.

The prospective bridegroom is the son of former Dimmitt residents, Joe and Jerre Shultz of Arlington and is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. J.B.

Noland of Summerfield and the late L.L. Shultz of Hereford.

The bride-elect attends Texas A&M University-Kingsville. She is majoring in education/kinesiology and is a member of the basketball team.

The prospective groom received a bachelor of science degree in education/kinesiology from Texas A&M Kingsville. He teaches in the special education department for the Dimmitt Independent School District.

Cool lunch box surprises

Thumbing through outdated magazines in the waiting room of the doctor's office the other day, I spotted some articles for perking up kids' lunches. Though the topic was intended for last fall's back-to-school enthusiasts, I was nonetheless inspired in the middle of winter to search for ideas to add zing to my kids' noon meal.

Problem was, I couldn't find any concoctions my kids would go for. Yes, they'll try tuna (without celery) in a pita pocket or on heavy, organic whole wheat bread (as long as I trim the crusts), but there's no way they'll rave over julienned asparagus, sliced egg and Muenster cheese on pumpernickel!

Resolved once again to set up the early-morning assembly line with our family standbys — peanut butter and jelly, fruit, carrot sticks and a cookie — it's still fun to spice up the kids' lunches in other ways. Here are some noontime surprises you may want to try:

— Using acrylic paint in squeeze bottles, help your child draw a tick-tack-toe grid on the outside of a plain, plastic lunch box. Let dry. Place a few paper clips and small buttons or pennies to represent X's and O's in an empty film canister and tuck the canister in the lunch box. Your child can play tick-tack-toe with a friend after lunch.

— Use a black marker to write a short note of encouragement, a goofy saying or a funny face on a paper napkin, the shell of a hard-boiled egg or, best of all, the skin of a firm banana.

— For a midday chuckle, ever teenagers will enjoy finding a comic strip or a page from your "Far Side" calendar hiding discreetly between an orange and a sandwich.

Lunch packing tip: Set small plastic margarine tubs filled with quarters and dimes in the same kitchen drawer as your sandwich bags and napkins. Milk money is handy when making lunches early in the morning. No need to go rummaging through purses, pockets and piggy banks as the kids fly out the door to catch the bus.

Do you have an idea for packing school lunches? Send your suggestion to: Donna Erickson, P.O. Box 16188, Minneapolis, MN 55416.

Between the Covers

By JOE WEAVER

Why is it, that, when you reset all the clocks in the house, there's always one that you don't find or notice until several days afterward???

I am not a particularly speedy reader, and I seem to have little time for reading at all, so I am a little reticent when someone hands me an article or tells me about a book, and insists, "You've got to read this." I figure that I'm the best judge of what I should be reading, but lately several instances have made me grateful for those folks who have told me to read something or other.

Fred Frye attended the Open House the other evening, and was impressed by what speaker Bob Wylie had to say about the changes we face in the computer age. The next day he handed me the April 3 issue of New Yorker. I thought he was referring to the dumb cartoon on the page, but instead he wanted me to read the article. Titled DOS Miserables, the gist of the article was about how, in the 1500s, those who could adapt to the printed word and the changes it brought survived and excelled compared to those whose source of information was the cathedral, with its biblical stories magnificently, yet statically, carved in stone. It's a brief article, but to the point about what we can expect in the "information age."

Giles Boone recently returned A

Texan at Bay, and strongly suggested I read it. It's an old book (1961), a collection of newspaper columns by Paul Crume, a columnist for one of the Dallas papers. I haven't found anything earth-shattering or new, but reading the book has provided some relaxation, and reminded me that old books, like friends, are not to be discarded in favor of the new.

Genevieve Miller recommended we purchase a book a few months back — Bridge of Courage, by Jennifer Harbury, comprised of stories of oppressed Guatemalans, and how they are fighting back against the power structure. The end-page info about the author states that her husband was being "held and tortured in a clandestine army prison." Genevieve tells us (if I remember correctly) that recent information discloses that he was killed and that there was a big cover-up involving the CIA. I believe she told me that a movie about the author's story was in the works.

If you read Mary Kate Tripp's book reviews in the Amarillo Sunday News Globe, you know that local author/adventure Jim "Indian James" Steiert has written a new book about the history, ecology, economy and what-have-you regarding playa lakes. If this sounds like a dull, scholarly work of interest only to naturalists, rest assured that it is not.

Playas: Jewels of the Plains is a fascinating look at one of the generally overlooked resources of our region. For centuries, the water—or lack of it—accumulated in the playas has meant life—or death—to animals, plants, and man: prehistoric, Native Americans, soldiers, buffalo hunters, surveyors, cattlemen, farmers...the list goes on. The text is accompanied by some magnificent photography by Wyman Meinzer. Thanks to Jim for giving the library a copy.

And if you've ever wondered just how mean a woman can be...read Don't Get Mad--Get Even by British (I assume, by some of the terms and language) authors Jane Inder and Hilary Eyre. The title gives an accurate summary of the book, but these ideas are plain diabolical!

Oops! I almost forgot... this week, April 10-15, is National Library Week. To celebrate, the American Library Association and McDonald's have produced Solve Mysteries -- Read. The purpose is to promote kids' reading. This will be run somewhat like the Summer reading Program, with a few notable changes. First, the program will only last three weeks beginning Monday, April 10 and lasting through Saturday, April 29. Rather than keeping time, children will count the number of books read to obtain prizes. AND, there will be no crafts or programs. As of press time, the details were still being fleshed out, so call or come by the library to get the scoop!

Ladies Auxiliary elects officers during meeting

The Ladies Auxiliary to Roy Wedderbrook Veterans of Foreign Wars Post #4818 elected officers during its regular session April 3 with Betty Boggs presiding.

Elected were Betty Boggs, president; Anita Vardell, senior vice president; Pixie Forbus, junior vice president; Marie Goheen, treasurer; Peggy Oakes, conductress; Erma Loving, chaplain; Dora Lea Howell, guard; Sandra Sutton, 3 year trustee; Ruth Morris, two year trustee; Erma Murphy, one year trustee.

Appointed officers were Linda Dutton, secretary; Terrye Rhync, patriotic instructor and Marie Goheen, historian.

The meeting was preceded by a fried chicken supper. Special guests were Pat and Shirl Michael and Robert Kubacek, Post Commander.

Following the supper, Linda Dutton presented Pat Michael with a citation plaque in appreciation for all the help he has given the auxiliary through the year as a police officer.

During the business session, minutes were read and approved, treasurer's report was given and General Orders #5 was read.

State Auxiliary president, Wanda Workman, will be in Amarillo for her official visit to Districts 9 and 13 on Friday and Saturday. On Friday, District 13 will treat her to dinner at the Big Texan at 7 p.m. On Saturday, Districts 9 and 13 will treat her to a luncheon at the home of Post #1475 in Amarillo. The official meeting will be at 2 p.m. followed by a steak dinner at 6:30 p.m. and a dance starting at 9 p.m.

The next meeting will be May 1, which is Loyalty Day. There will be a flag raising ceremony at the flagpole in the circle at 6 p.m. at which time Pat and Shirl Michael will sing. There will be a supper at 7 p.m. followed by the meeting at 8 p.m.

Members present were Boggs, Dutton, Goheen, Howell, Loving, Essie Martin, Morris, Oakes, Rhync, Vardell and Forbus.

Extension News

County Extension Agent/FCS
Americans are certainly getting older. In the next 10 years, the largest population growth in the United States will occur in people 85 years old and older. That is because of improved living standards, technology and education. Since good nutrition and exercise are a requirement for health maintenance, then what accounts for the 25 percent of Americans 65 years old and older who still suffer from poor eating habits and irregular activity?

Older Americans have malnutrition because of the following contributors: poverty or reduced income; loss of appetite due to depression and social isolation; taste diminished due to drugs, lack of taste buds and reduced ability to smell; and poorly fitting dentures.

Seniors (and their caregivers) need to ensure that they eat enough food each day by planning ahead and using food dollars wisely. Remember to include enough grain products such as breads, cereals, pasta and rice everyday. If chewing is a problem, choose soft cereals and breads. Remove the bread crust, if present. Then check to include vegetables whether fresh, canned, dried or frozen everyday. If chewing is difficult, then slice, chop or grate fresh vegetables so you can eat them raw or cooked.

Try a variety of preparation methods when preparing them. Experiment with a variety of seasonings to add interest and variety to the vegetables. Don't forget to add at least two servings of fruit. Fruit tastes delicious and certainly contributes minerals and vitamins as well as carbohydrates and fiber in the diet.

Another food group that older adults need at least two or more cups everyday is milk, yogurt or cheese. That's the best known source of calcium in the diet. That is of importance to older adults to prevent osteoporosis—porous bones. So try to add extra milk or cheese in your daily food preparation.

Many elderly have loss of appetite because they are bored with eating, their sense of taste and smell have diminished or they feel that food is too bland. Eating alone is also a factor in diminished appetite.

Start eating daily following the daily food guide recommendations. Call your local county agent today for a copy of the USDA Food Guide Pyramid so you can select foods wisely to prevent malnutrition.

American English creates polyglot of a language

By TED ANTHONY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) - We the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, created our own unique polyglot of a language along the way.

And what variety: Liberal cultural experiences and thorough borrowing, Americans have amassed such linguistic morsels as "gerrymander," "varmint," "kitchenette" and the sadly obsolete "slobberchops."

Author Bill Bryson puts it all together in "Made in America," an engaging account of how the American experience helped American English part from its British elder brother and spread its influence across the globe.

It's hard to imagine someone better suited for this than Bryson, an Iowa sports writer's son who fled to Britain two decades ago. Today, he cantankerously eyes American culture from afar, a sort of trans-Atlantic H.L. Mencken.

Equal parts droll and detective, Bryson follows the routes of revolution, immigration, advertising, sex, dining, transportation and war to exhume origins of words Americans take for granted.

Bryson, who skewered and cheered small-town America in his travelogue, "The Lost Continent," and tackled Europe in "Neither Here Nor There," is not new to popular linguistics. His book, "The Mother Tongue," traced British English in a similarly anecdotal way.

"Made in America" (or "Freedonia," as some wanted to call the country) is great fun but also an impressively broad piece of research. He found everything from the origin of "tycoon" (Japanese, from "taikun," or military leader) to "how come?" (a phonetic translation of the Dutch word "hoe kom").

"Doing this book was so indulgent," Bryson said in a telephone interview from his home in Yorkshire, England. His words come out in an odd mix of British accent and Midwestern twang.

"I could look up anything I wanted," he says. "But it seemed at times that the research was infinite."

Two themes emerge: No language

KIMBERLY EDWARDS, SHANE RICHARDS

Grandson of residents will marry in Florida

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh C. Edwards of Lake Geneva, Florida, announce the engagement of their daughter, Kimberly Charon, to Gregory Shane Richards, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gregory H. Richards of Dayton, Wyoming.

The prospective bridegroom is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Myron Richards of Hereford and Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Lookingbill of the Black community. Mrs. Gladys Craig of Hereford is his great grandmother. The couple will be married at Trinity Baptist Church in Keystone Heights, Florida, on May 20 at 7 p.m.

The bride-elect is a candidate for December graduation from the University of Florida with a degree in animal science.

The prospective bridegroom graduated from the University of Wyoming in Laramie in 1993 with a degree in finance.

The couple will be employed at the Elk Mountain Ranch at Buena Vista, Colorado, for the summer.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Approximately what is the period from the first appearance of cataract to the full-blown problem? I was at the doctor's office a year ago, and he checked my eyes and said there were no problems. But I noticed one day I saw a sharp flash of light when I blinked, and when I came in from outdoors and was unlocking my white front door, I had a cobweb sensation. — Mrs. V.S.

ANSWER: No one can predict the rate at which a cataract will progress to the point of requiring surgical removal. The important thing to consider is that thousands of people with cataracts retain adequate vision. Many go to their graves without treatment.

When do you know it is time to seek treatment? You do that as soon as it becomes evident that you can no longer carry on regular daily activities. For those whose occupation requires intense use of the eyes, that time would arrive sooner than for others.

Your symptoms are not those of cataract. With a cataract, you get a gradual decrease in vision and you might see halos around lights. You are having light flashes and the appearance of cobwebs. That points more toward something amiss in the retina.

You should be re-examined right away. Retina problems demand prompt attention.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Where can I go from here? I am a man who has been suffering the effects of oral herpes cold sores for years now. But now they are becoming more frequent, averaging an outbreak every three weeks. My doctor has prescribed Zovirax pills, which do lessen symptoms and hasten healing of the sores. But they come back, and I start over again. Is there something else you might suggest for me? Could something else be behind my problem? Can it be a low-grade infection? — C.C.

ANSWER: I have one thing you can try, and I am not saying it is going to produce miracles or even stop your recurring problem. But it is so simple, that it is worth a try.

It's sunscreen. Use it everyday on your lips. The rationale is that blocking ultraviolet light deactivates the herpes virus trigger.

That leaves unanswered the question about why you seem to be getting so many oral herpes attacks. I cannot answer that. I don't think it is from a low-grade infection.

It is time to check out your general health. A breach in a person's immunity system can produce recurrences of such problems. I suppose that has occurred to your physician, but if not, it might something to begin checking out.

Read the herpes report I am sending you. Others can order a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue—No. 17, Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539. Enclose $3 and a self-addressed, stamped (55 cents) No. 10 envelope.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: What is a liver profile blood test? I had intestinal cancer removed four years ago. From my recent blood test, my doctor said the CEA is normal. Does this CEA tell if there is cancer present elsewhere in the body? — A.B.

ANSWER: Carcinoembryonic antigen (CEA) is a protein made by cancer cells of the intestinal tract. It is not useful in detecting intestinal cancers, because you can find the protein in blood from many other conditions, cancerous and noncancerous.

Child abuse prevention campaign supported by businesses, schools

April is child abuse prevention month. Deaf Smith County Social Services, in conjunction with the Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Services, is conducting a public awareness campaign.

More than 100 Texas children lost their lives in 1993 because of child abuse. Preventing child abuse and neglect, complex and ongoing problems in our society, is the responsibility of all citizens.

Social Services is distributing flyers through local grocery stores to help increase public awareness of this problem. The flyers are designed to help educate parents on ways to increase their children's self-esteem and also provide child safety tips.

A flyer will be given out at local restaurants that will provide tips for parents who eat out with young children.

The schools, both public and private, are participating in the awareness campaign by sending a printout with report cards.

During April, citizens who are concerned about the problem of child abuse and neglect are asked to wear blue ribbons as a symbol that they can make a difference.

Bookmarks with the prevention slogan "I feel happy today" are available from County Social Services. Organizations and individuals who are interested in participating in the campaign or anyone with questions, call Judy Baker at 364-1584.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: I am doing some redecorating in my home and I noticed there is a small black spot on one of my mirrors. I would like to treat it while the mirror is down. This is a rather large mirror and I would not be able to take it down myself. — Shirley Grosshans, San Angelo, Texas

Since it is a small spot, you can easily disguise it by painting the area on the back side of the mirror with aluminum paint. However, the spot will no longer reflect an image, but it shouldn't look bad.

To still have a reflection from that area, try to find a piece of thin mirror (unframed) and glue it to the back of the mirror on the bad spot. In most cases, this should do the trick to bring your mirror back to life. — Heloise

BUNNY PROBLEM
Dear Heloise: I had problems with rabbits eating my young and tender plantings in my slightly elevated flower beds and ground-level pots. I tried almost everything except unsightly wire fencing, including commercial repellents and soap shavings. The tactic that worked best was lining the outer edges of the beds and pots with artificial silk or plastic greenery.

Apparently they're the wrong flavor—the bunnies haven't been back. — Sue Murphy, Cave Creek, Ariz. I can sympathize with you. In my area there are a lot of deer that just love plants. Many of the homeowners have started "planting" silk flowers in order to save on gardening bills. — Heloise

REUSING PLASTIC BAGS
Dear Heloise: Whenever I'm involved in a spray-painting project, I cover both hands with plastic bags and use rubber bands to secure them. It works as well as gloves. — Donna Bruney, Hypoluxo, Fla.

This is a great way to recycle plastic bags from the newspaper and such. Glad you wrote. — Heloise

SLOW THE ROLL
Dear Heloise: If you bend the cardboard on a roll of toilet tissue before putting it on the holder, it keeps it from rolling off so freely and therefore you don't use it up so fast.

The bend inhibits the easy rolling and helps make tearing it easier. This is especially good for kids' bathrooms. — Carolyn Moore, Keller, Texas

A good scare is worth more to a man than good advice. — E. W. Howe

Lifestyles Policies

The Hereford Brand welcomes news articles of interest from local readers, clubs and organizations. Because this is a daily newspaper, we must have guidelines on timely submission of news items.

*General news items for the Lifestyles section must be submitted by 1 p.m. the day before publication and by 9 a.m. Friday for the Sunday edition. Club reports should be submitted the day following the meeting, and no later than three days. Late contributions are subject to considerable editing.

*Listings for club meetings and special events in the "Calendar of Events" should be submitted by Wednesday of each week.

*Photos of new club officers, donation presentations, etc., can be made by appointment at The Brand office Monday through Friday after 2 p.m. We do not take photos for engagements, weddings, anniversaries or showers; however, loaner cameras are available and should be reserved 24 hours in advance. The Brand has forms available, upon request, for preparing engagement announcements, wedding stories and bridal showers. These are usually too lengthy to take over the phone.

*Engagements should be announced at least a month before the wedding, if both an engagement and wedding photo are desired. Photos should be in black and white; some color photos may be approved if contrast is suitable for reproduction. Wedding and anniversary writeups should be submitted at least five days before publication.

*The Brand will take on-location photos for special events. Call at least two days before the event to see if arrangements can be made.

*Notices of birthday celebrations will be written for Hereford residents 80 years of age and up. The Brand advertising department will quote prices and prepare all other birthday greetings or announcements, including Quinceaneras.

*Notices of new arrivals are obtained from Hereford Regional Medical Center. Information on local babies born elsewhere, or with grandparents in Hereford, should be reported to The Brand within two weeks. Brief items of interest about college students, or former residents, are welcome concerning degrees, academic honors, career promotions, etc. Please submit as soon as possible to ensure timeliness.

To submit an article or obtain more information, call Becky Campbell or Shelly Schilling at 364-2030 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. After 5 p.m., information may be placed in the night drop at our front door.

Tornado season brings on fears

By JEAN NASH JOHNSON
The Dallas Morning News
LANCASTER, Texas - Before restaurant outings and shopping trips with his family, fifth-grader Rusty Price scopes out shelter spots in case of a sudden twister. His mom says it's a routine for them now.

Kristin Clark and her older sister run to their parents' bed whenever there is severe weather. "They're just scared to death ever since that night," says Cynthia Clark, their mother.

A fourth-grader ritualistically lines up the family's shoes on the steps outside each night so that members won't be caught barefoot if a tornado strikes and they have to run.

The children of Lancaster are healing, but they are still afraid. Two schools and many homes in the southern Dallas County town were destroyed last April 26 when a tornado struck.

As tornado season approaches, Lancaster and other communities are gearing up to help children understand and cope with severe weather. Schools, computer chat lines, organizations such as the National Weather Service and local television stations are working to ease concerns by educating parents and youngsters.

"The more the understanding of storms, the less fear in kids," says Lancaster school district spokesman Gary Faunce.

Parents, schools and groups such as the Lancaster Outreach Center are working together to rebuild both structures and a sense of confidence torn down in the devastation.

"We were displaced. Grades K through second conducted classes in the gymnasium, which had portable walls," says Terry Parsons, principal of West Main Elementary, one of the schools destroyed. The school's rebuilding was completed in January.

Parents and teachers pitched in to help with the finishing touches. "For some of the students who had lost homes, this was their first form of stability since the storm," Parsons says.

Things are settling down. West Main students are embracing the idea of a remembrance come anniversary time. "I wasn't even sure I should broach the subject," says counselor Jeanne Masters. "These kids have come a long way."

The school was so shaken that officials only recently resumed routine tornado drills. "We warned students well in advance. (But) some of the kids didn't like it because it reminded them of last year," Parsons says.

The drill was successful and well-organized, he says. Each classroom has an assigned space to go to in an emergency, and in this exercise, students were keenly aware of those places.

In "The Wizard of Oz," Dorothy and Toto didn't know what hit them when a twister suddenly hurtled toward Kansas. That kind of oblivion, according to weather experts and authorities on children, can be avoided.

Alan Moller, meteorologist with the National Weather Service, strongly recommends that schools treat the tornado drill, which is not required, with the same amount of intensity as the fire drill.

"Most schools have protective shelters and should consult with architectural engineers to help them locate safe spots," he says. "In helping the child cope, they should teach them that if safety rules are followed, a child will survive."

Moller, who specializes in severe weather and has worked in preparedness, has high praise for the safety effort by the Lancaster community.

Schoolchildren react very favorably to education, Moller says. Many parents have praised films and presentations by the service. One such film, Terrible Tuesday, about the historic 1979 tornado in Wichita Falls, contains real footage that children have reacted to "with positive and clear understanding. The film teaches respect and not fear, and that's good for kids," he says.

Weather broadcaster Mike Burger agrees. "If we're not aware of what's happening, it can be a terrifying thing. Youngsters in the third and fourth grades like to tell weather stories that their parents have told them," says the KDFW-TV meteorologist, who visits two to three elementary schools a week.

"What I like to do is get the kids to participate, interact... I just lead them in discussion. A baseball shows what baseball-size hail looks like. I'll ask, 'Can you imagine the wind speed needed to hold this (ball) up?' It's fun to watch. Children have a natural curiosity.

"If you teach them respect for the weather, there's less fear. The fear is more of a lack of understanding."

Burger says one thing children always want to know is, "Will it happen again?" He says he's always happy when he can reassure the children: "Chances are it won't."

Until recently, the children of the Rochester Park area didn't have such great odds. Before the construction of a levee three years ago, there was nothing comforting to say to youngsters whose homes were frequently folded during heavy downpours.

Travis Perry, a 10-year veteran guidance counselor at H.S. Thompson Learning Center, recalls those trying times in the pre-levee years. "How can you tell a child that it won't happen again, when you know it will the next time there's a hard rain?"

Perry says children in the southeast Dallas County community would complain about their fears of drowning and rattlesnakes.

Both Perry and principal Robert Ward agree that things calmed down quite a bit when the levee was built to control flooding.

"These kids constantly had been traumatized. The school was their shelter, literally. Their homes were ruined. How can you concentrate on schoolwork under those conditions?" asks Ward.

At Lancaster's West Main elementary, Ms. Masters, the counselor, understands the challenge before her. Many students, she says, still have trouble dealing with the aftermath.

"It's sort of like a protection or coping mechanism. They can't think in terms of 'normal.' And until we get through this tornado season, that apprehension and fear will exist."

Rusty, the fifth-grader, also was afraid to leave his mother, Patti Price, alone in bad weather.

Mrs. Price says she was concerned. "We feel so lucky to have survived. When we saw the damage, all I could think of was, thank God my husband was here, and we were not asleep. An entire car was found in our bedroom (in the aftermath). I wanted the children" - including the Prices' college-age daughter - "to feel safe again. Moving into their own home again will make things better."

The Prices expect to move into their new home in two weeks. Mrs. Price made a special point of taking her two sons out of school for the installation of the house address numbers. "We even had Rusty's pictures taken in front of the numbers."

She says she was hoping that the makeshift ceremony would help bring about some closure. "It's caused Rusty to smile a lot. He knows that we'll be going home soon - to our own home."

Cynthia and Mark Clark have made progress with their four children since the tornado, in which they lost their home.

The children appear to be coping well, says Mrs. Clark - until thunder rolls in.

The Clark's new Victorian-style home has a tin roof. "During a recent hailstorm, the girls got so frightened, I woke up to find them curled up next to me," says Mrs. Clark.

"It's been a hard year for everybody. Whenever they get scared, I tell them, 'God took care of us last April; he's gonna take care of us in a thunderstorm.'"

Principal Parsons and Ms. Masters say they know they've got a long way to go with the children, but overall they are pleased with the progress shown. "On the whole, I don't think most kids overworry about it," Ms. Masters says. "I was in the classroom for 25 years before counseling, and I know that any change affects kids' moods."

The storm occurred after dark, and that, Ms. Masters says, has made it even more difficult for some children. The fourth-grade girl who lines up family members' shoes at the back door each night remembers that during the tornado they were barefoot because of the haste in which they had to evacuate in the dark.

School librarian Linda Nash has told Ms. Masters that her second and sixth-grade sons don't want to be away from home very much. "They feel strange about school. You must remember, it looked like a bombing zone around here last year," says Ms. Masters.

Still, she says, some children say the storm and rebuilding have brought their families closer together.

"It'll be a new beginning once we get through April and May."

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

HIGH-STAKES HIRING

Hiring employees is a little like gambling. The stakes are high, you've got a lot to lose and most of us don't have much experience.

According to the latest research, most small businesses are not large enough to support a personnel professional. This puts unskilled and inexperienced owners in the position of recruiting, interviewing and selecting new employees.

I've asked several owners and managers about their most difficult management tasks. They tell me the most difficult challenge is finding and keeping good employees.

The difficulty of this task is highlighted in a study by the U.S. Labor Department. The study shows that approximately 50 percent of the people hired for a specific job, stay in that job fewer than 6 months.

I can't train you to become a personnel professional in this column, but I can give you a few tips as a starting point. If you can eliminate a mistake or two I'll be happy.

A Quick Start

There are six steps in our quick start process.

- Define the job. Create a job description for the position you wish to hire for so that the qualities, skills and experience needed are obvious. Don't get caught in the trap of describing the work to be done without detailing what it takes to do it. Before you hire anyone, determine if the skills and experience exist in your present work force. Perhaps, the work can be done by your current staff or at least partially reassigned.
- Recruit Qualified Applicants. The first step in finding something you want is knowing where to begin the search. Your goal is not to attract a huge number of candidates. Rather, it should be to appeal to a few very qualified individuals. Ask yourself if you were a candidate for this job where you would look for it? The help wanted section of the newspaper? A trade journal or publication? Or, would you depend on your network of friends?
- Screening the Field. Unless you receive only a handful of qualified resumes or applications, you'll have to eliminate some applicants. Don't be fooled by slick resumes. Most are good news, bad news stories, without any bad news. Look for results, not credentials. Look for profitable performance, not thoughtless trivia. Seek patterns of stability and consistent career direction. Watch out for someone who can work, not someone who has been around work.

Interviewing Candidates. Know where you're going with the interview process. Try to put the candidates at ease and let them do most of the talking. Guide the discussion with prepared questions. Take good notes.

Selecting the Best. The natural tendency is to hire someone whose background and experiences are similar to your own. This isn't good as it often limits your ability to grow and change direction.

Look for enthusiasm, good attitudes, a willingness to work hard and a person who is results oriented. Make a fair offer and implement a long-term training program.

Know the Rules. Finally, it is important to understand the rules and regulations that affect your employment decisions. These include: The Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Equal Employment Act of 1972 and the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1992.

Additional Information

On Tuesday, April 18, the Panhandle Human Resources Association will present a seminar titled, "Interviewing from A to Z". It will help you master personnel basics.

You'll learn how to conduct a good interview, deal with problem employees, handle hot legal issues how to conduct an exit interview if it doesn't work out. The all-day workshop costs $50 if you register early. Call Debbie Hrcir at 806-355-9696 for details.

You may write to Don Taylor in care of "Minding Your Own Business," Box 67, Amarillo, Texas 79105.

Oak Lawn superchef shares decadent cake recipe

By WALTRINA STOVALL
The Dallas Morning News

DALLAS - Superchef Stephan Pyles recalls that when he was growing up in Big Spring, Texas, where his family ran a truck stop, he found it hard to choose between his mother's angel food and devil's food cakes.

"Both were childhood favorites," he says. "But I think I like the devil's food a bit more - perhaps because of the name. It just seemed a little decadent."

At Star Canyon, Pyles' acclaimed Oak Lawn restaurant, diners don't have to choose between the two cakes.

The restaurant's signature dessert holds two layers of each, sandwiched with peanut butter mousse and iced with chocolate ganache. Pyles calls it Heaven and Hell cake - and he's had the name trademarked.

"I was thinking about what I could do for a Star Canyon signature dish that I hadn't done at Routh Street (his former restaurant)," he says of the dessert's creation.

"I started playing around with combining the two cakes, and I thought, What goes well with chocolate? Well, peanut butter goes well with chocolate, but it would be heavy with the angel food, so I turned into a peanut butter mousse." Heaven and Hell Cake is not only the best selling dessert at Star Canyon, it has also been successful as a mail-order product.

Dallas-based Horchow Collection featured the cake (priced at $48) in its holiday gift guide last year. "A company here made the cake, using my recipe," Pyles says. "It was being shipped all over the country." Michele Hubbard, a spokeswoman for Horchow, says she can't release sales figures for the cake, but that the catalog company "was very satisfied with the way things went."

Heaven and Hell Cake is not in any of the current Horchow catalogs. However, the Horchow Cook's Collection, mailed in February, offers several Star Canyon food products.

Although you can no longer mail-order the Heaven and Hell Cake, you can make it. Pyles shares his from-scratch recipes. It's a bit of a project: Before you start the assembly, you need to bake and cool the devil's food and angel food cake layers and whip up the peanut butter mousse and chocolate ganache.

For an easier version, he says you could use packaged cake mixes - or even buy the angel food already baked.

HEAVEN AND HELL CAKE

Angel Food Cake

2/3 cup cake flour
1 cup confectioner's sugar
1 cup egg whites (about 7 or 8) pinch of salt
1 teaspoon cream of tartar
2/3 cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 teaspoon almond extract
Preheat oven to 375 F. Cut parchment paper or wax paper to fit the bottom of a 10-inch round cake pan. Do not grease the pan or paper. Sift together the flour and confectioners' sugar. Set aside.

Place egg whites in bowl of a heavy-duty mixer. Beat slowly while adding the salt and cream of tartar, then continue beating for 1 minute or until soft peaks form. Increase speed to medium; add sugar by tablespoons until it is all incorporated, then beat 1-1/2 minutes longer. When egg whites have stiff peaks, add vanilla and almond extract.

Remove bowl from mixer and sprinkle half of the confectioners' sugar-flour mixture over the egg whites. Fold in with a rubber spatula; sprinkle with remaining sugar-flour mixture and fold again, using a minimum number of strokes so that the egg whites do not deflate. Gently spoon the mixture into prepared pan and bake for 40 to 50 minutes or until golden brown. Do not over-bake or the cake will sink in the center.

Devil's Food Cake

1/2 cup powdered cocoa
1 cup strong coffee
1/2 cup shortening
1-1/2 cups sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 eggs
1-1/2 cups cake flour
3/4 teaspoon salt
3/4 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
Preheat oven to 350 F. Oil and flour a round 10-inch cake pan.

Sift cocoa into a mixing bowl, then drizzle in the coffee while whisking to make a smooth paste. Set aside. Combine shortening, sugar, vanilla and eggs and beat for 2 minutes at medium speed.

In a separate bowl, sift together the flour, salt, baking powder and baking soda.

Alternately add the cocoa-coffee mixture and the flour mixture to the sugar-egg mixture and continue beating until incorporated. Pour batter into prepared pan and bake for 30 minutes.

Peanut Butter Mousse

12 ounces cream cheese
1-3/4 cups confectioners' sugar
2 cups peanut butter, at room temperature
3/4 cup heavy cream

In the bowl of an electric mixer, whip the cream cheese until light and creamy. Gradually beat in the confectioners' sugar, then the peanut butter. Continue beating until thoroughly incorporated and fluffy. If mixture looks lumpy, add 2 tablespoons of heavy cream. It may not smooth out, but it will be easier to blend.

Transfer mixture to another bowl and set aside. Place the heavy cream in the electric mixer bowl and whip until stiff. Carefully, but thoroughly, combine both mixtures. Set aside.

Ganache

2 pounds milk chocolate
2 cups cream

In a saucepan over medium heat, bring the cream to a boil and stir in the chocolate. Remove from heat, cover pan and let the chocolate melt. Whisk to combine thoroughly, then let cool to room temperature.

To assemble:

When both cakes have cooled, carefully slice them in half horizontally with a sharp serrated knife (the longer the better), so that you have 4 cake layers.

To slice the angel food cake, spray the knife with oil. Holding the top of the cake with your flat, open hand, use a sawing action to slice through. Do not put pressure on the knife, or the cake might tear; just let the sawing action do its work. (If the cake sinks in the center, fill it in with some extra mousse. Make this the top layer and it will be easier to level off.)

Place 1 layer of the devil's food cake on a plate and spoon a third of the peanut butter mousse on top. Add a layer of the angel food, then spread with another third of the mousse. Add second devil's food layer, then remaining mousse. Top with remaining angel food layer.

Whisk the ganache, then spread over the cake with a spatula, frosting both the top and sides generously. Refrigerate for at least 2 hours before serving. Serve chilled; slice with a warm, wet knife. Makes 16 servings.

Note: This cake picks up refrigerator odor easily, so wrap or cover it well. Any leftover cake may be frozen, tightly wrapped, for up to a month.

Optional garnishes

Star Canyon serves the cake on drizzled raspberry sauce, propped up with chunks of swirled chocolate.

Raspberry sauce: Puree frozen raspberries; strain through a sieve. Sweeten to taste with sugar.

Chocolate pieces: Melt milk

chocolate and white chocolate. Spread milk chocolate in cookie sheet lined with wax paper. Scatter spoonfuls of white chocolate around the dark, then create swirls with a toothpick. Allow to cool, then break into pieces.

FUMC to host program

Tourists visiting 'The Last Supper' now required to be clean of body

MILAN, Italy (AP) - Purity of soul isn't essential, but admirers of Leonardo Da Vinci's deteriorating masterpiece "The Last Supper" now must submit to another purification - this one physical.

The installation of climate-control and air-filtering equipment forced a seven-month closure of one of the favorite tourist destinations in this northern Italian city. It reopens Saturday.

Now, though, visitors must pass through two separate glass cabins. They will pause for about 15 seconds in one, where filters imperceptibly will take impurities outside and pump in clean air.

"The new system eliminates 99.97 percent of the dust, sulfuric acid and sulfur dioxide. Polluting substances, taken in by the flow of visitors, were threatening the preservation of the fresco," Lucia Gremmo, superintendent of the city architectural properties, said Friday.

The purification system cost about $1.4 million.

Leonardo painted the renowned work on the wall of a friars' refectory in 1497.

Pollution is only the latest threat to it. Napoleonic troops used the refectory as a stable, and Allied bombs fell on it during World War II.

Leonardo's use of tempera - a technique less durable than true fresco painting, which is done on wet plaster - also caused the work to deteriorate severely.

The painting has undergone 19 known restorations in four centuries.

A huge one, started in 1978, has restored colors and details to about half the wall and is expected to continue for several more years.

Officials said each group of visitors will be allowed to stay roughly 15 minutes, limiting the daily flow to about 400.

A type of machine gun used in the 1500s consisted of several guns bound together in a bundle or spread out in a row.

EASE YOUR EYES AT THE COMPUTER

People who spend long hours at the computer often complain of eyestrain, headaches, blurred vision, double vision, burning eyes, afterimages and eyes that are so-o-tired. What you should know is that working with a video display terminal (VDT) won't cause any permanent damage to your eyes. And that you can avoid the eyestrain.

First step is to have your eyes checked to make sure there are no vision problems causing the discomfort. Lightly tinted lenses and middle-distance prescription may ease the eyes' workload.

Adjust the monitor so that the screen is at eye level or slightly below. This not only eases neck strain, it helps avoid the "dry eye" that comes from staring at the screen and not blinking completely. Try to achieve equal brightness throughout the field of view: in the room and on the screen. If you can't avoid glare in the room, protect your eyes with a visor. And most important, rest your eyes and look away from the screen every 10 minutes or so.

The symmetrical and stately colonial two story front porch provides an elegant Colonial exterior. The design enrichment is underscored with practical features such as the almost perfect rectangle for the foundation and roof.

The foyer is accented by a two story section that is surrounded by a balcony upstairs. Direct access is provided to the formal living and dining rooms of the home. A family room is to the rear and bookshelves and fireplace are indicated. A rear circular stair and half bath are strategically placed between the family room and kitchen breakfast area of the home. An ideally sized laundry room with freezer space, large pantry and rear yard access is located behind the garage.

One of the two splendid master suites consumes an entire side of the first floor. A walk in closet and double vanity with separate shower and toilet compartments provide a luxurious setting with an island tub enhancing the ambiance.

There are three additional bed rooms on the second floor, two of which each have a large walk in closet and share a central hall bath with linen storage. The second master suite has a distinctively larger bath with another island tub and separate shower and toilet compartment. An oversized walk in closet is indicated over the garage.

This brick colonial home's exterior is highlighted by combination hip and gable roofs, colonial columns and an ornate front entrance. The plan includes 3,582 square feet of heated living space and an optional traditional front is available. All W. D. Farmer plans are drawn in accordance with FHA and VA requirements. All W. D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency.

Quarterly Newsletter, April 1995

Items for the auction

Debbie Foerster (left) and Charmayne Klett, members of the auction committee, display items that will be included in the Celebrity Auction to be held April 29 at the HISD Administration Building. Pictured are a birdhouse, porcelain doll, handbag, handthrown pottery piece, cowhide throw rug and cookbook autographed by Julia Child.

Celebrity Auction scheduled to benefit Health Care Foundation

The Deaf Smith Healthcare Foundation will be holding a "Celebrity Auction" on April 29 at the Hereford Independent School District Administration Building. The auction will be a major fundraiser to benefit the Foundation's Endowment Fund.

Beans and cornbread will be served at a cost of $2.50 per person between 6-7 p.m. The meal will be provided by K-Bob's Steak House. Also at this time, items to be auctioned may be viewed and silent auction bids may be placed. The live auction will begin at 7 p.m.

Featured will be items donated by nationally recognized celebrities as well as other items donated by our generous local merchants and citizens -- our own celebrities!

A sampling of items to be auctioned includes a football personally signed by Troy Aikman, football personally signed by Emmitt Smith, basketball personally signed by Hakeem Abdul-Olajuwon, coffee mug signed by President and Mrs. George Bush, music tape signed by Clint Black, and T-shirt signed by Chris Everett.

Also, a cookbook signed by Julia Child, bronze sculpture by Andrew Wilks, pewter sculpture by Kenneth Wyatt, two U.S. flags certified as having flown over the Capitol, and personally signed pictures of various celebrities.

Also included will be a pennant from the Dallas Cowboys signed by Jones and Switzer, a Brighton handbag, a piece of Indian handthrown pottery and numerous other items.

The Foundation is currently selling chances for two airline tickets donated by American Airlines to any destination in Europe. The drawing will be held during the live auction.

The Foundation is still accepting items to be auctioned if anyone would like to have their name added to the list of local celebrities.

For further information, please call Sylvia Khuri at 364-2141.

The Board asks for your participation and support.

Board of Directors

The Deaf Smith Health Care Foundation is under the guidance and leadership of an independent board of directors, composed of the following members:

Dr. Nadir T. Khuri
President

Sylvia Khuri
Executive Director

Dr. Stan Fry Jr.
Shirley Garrison
Patrick G. McGinty
Don Graham
Bob Josserand

Doug Manning
Ruth Newsom
O.G. "Speedy" Nieman
Cliff Skiles
Jerry Smith

Foundation tabs trio for Board of Directors seats

The Deaf Smith Health Care Foundation has announced the addition of three new members to its Board of Directors: Dr. Cliff Skiles, Mrs. Ruth Newsom and Dr. Stan Fry Jr.

Also, Bob Josserand, Doug Manning and Dr. Nadir T. Khuri all agreed to serve another term upon expiration of their current terms. Mrs. Argen Draper resigned after her term expired.

Other continuing Board members are: Shirley Garrison, Patrick G. McGinty, Jerry Smith, Don Graham and O.G. "Speedy" Nieman.

"The Foundation and the community are particularly fortunate to be served by such a group of people who generously give of their time, experience and funds to ensure the availability and quality of health services in this community," said volunteer Foundation Executive Director Sylvia Khuri. "We were very fortunate to have Argen on the Board for the last two year and thank her for her service.

"Unlike other rural communities, Hereford enjoys a good health care system. The Foundation, through its endowment fund, will help ensure that this will remain the case."

Mrs. Khuri added, "We are very happy to announce that we will be awarding four scholarships to cover the fall semester for students going into the medical field and who intend to come back and work in Deaf Smith County. Also, the Foundation is currently preparing for a 'Celebrity Auction' to be held on April 29. We hope the whole community will be behind this effort. The Foundation was created to serve every single citizen in the community."

President's Message

By DR. NADIR KHURI
Foundation Board President

The tradition of "good works" has outlasted the most advanced civilizations, including those of ancient Egypt, Rome and Greece. It is a tradition that will undoubtedly outlive all of us.

The generosity involved in improving society forms a tradition that endures. Today, the tradition is more alive than ever.

The Deaf Smith Health Care Foundation is preparing to hold its "Celebrity Auction" on April 29 to benefit its Endowment Fund, which, when large enough, will be the most significant accomplishment of the Foundation.

We will only use investment and interest income to fund our projects, leaving the principal intact to generate more income.

As we approach the Auction, I ask you to support this local charity, which is of benefit to every single citizen, by attending and participating.

It also promises to be a lot of fun.

Life insurance policy unique way to donate

Today more than ever before, charitable organizations have to rely on the generosity of private individuals as government funding has been dramatically reduced.

Many people would like to make donations to different charities, but often feel that their gift is not substantial enough to make a difference—but YOU can make a difference you may never have thought possible. One individual's charitable act does make a difference.

A life insurance policy is an easy way to establish an endowment without placing a bind on family finances. It makes possible a much larger gift than most people can otherwise afford. Life insurance is unique in that it multiplies a few dollars into many for a major future gift.

It is reassuring to know that virtually anyone has the power to make a lasting difference; and, making a difference with life insurance benefits you and the charity. (Our lives are certainly enriched through the charitable support of our favorite charities.) It is simple and convenient.

*You decide whether to make the charity as the owner of the policy or maintain policy ownership yourself. If you name the charity as owner, you receive a tax deduction for your donations each year.

*Since the policy proceeds are intended specifically for a charity, your other assets will be undisturbed and available for your heirs.

*Policy proceeds are free from probate and flow quickly to the charity.

The Deaf Smith Healthcare Foundation welcomes the opportunity to work with you on this avenue of charitable giving.

REMEMBER, HONOR A FRIEND

A special friend or a loved one may be honored or remembered with a "gift of love" that keeps on giving by making a donation to the Deaf Smith Health Care Foundation.

When your gift is received, an appropriate notification will be sent immediately to the person you indicate. The notification will bear the name of the person remembered by you and will indicate you have made a gift to the Foundation in the memory of that person.

The amount of your gift will not be mentioned. You, as the donor, will receive our acknowledgment of your gift.

Items for the auction

Debbie Foerster (left) and Charmayne Klett, members of the auction committee, display items that will be included in the Celebrity Auction to be held April 29 at the HISD Administration Building. Pictured are a birdhouse, porcelain doll, handbag, handthrown pottery piece, cowhide throw rug and cookbook autographed by Julia Child.

Celebrity Auction scheduled to benefit Health Care Foundation

The Deaf Smith Healthcare Foundation will be holding a "Celebrity Auction" on April 29 at the Hereford Independent School District Administration Building. The auction will be a major fundraiser to benefit the Foundation's Endowment Fund.

Beans and cornbread will be served at a cost of $2.50 per person between 6-7 p.m. The meal will be provided by K-Bob's Steak House. Also at this time, items to be auctioned may be viewed and silent auction bids may be placed. The live auction will begin at 7 p.m.

Featured will be items donated by nationally recognized celebrities as well as other items donated by our generous local merchants and citizens -- our own celebrities!

A sampling of items to be auctioned includes a football personally signed by Troy Aikman, football personally signed by Emmitt Smith, basketball personally signed by Hakeem Abdul-Olajuwon, coffee mug signed by President and Mrs. George Bush, music tape signed by Clint Black, and T-shirt signed by Chris Everett.

Also, a cookbook signed by Julia Child, bronze sculpture by Andrew Wilks, pewter sculpture by Kenneth Wyatt, two U.S. flags certified as having flown over the Capitol, and personally signed pictures of various celebrities.

Also included will be a pennant from the Dallas Cowboys signed by Jones and Switzer, a Brighton handbag, a piece of Indian handthrown pottery and numerous other items.

The Foundation is currently selling chances for two airline tickets donated by American Airlines to any destination in Europe. The drawing will be held during the live auction.

The Foundation is still accepting items to be auctioned if anyone would like to have their name added to the list of local celebrities.

For further information, please call Sylvia Khuri at 364-2141.

The Board asks for your participation and support.

Foundation tabs trio for Board of Directors seats

The Deaf Smith Health Care Foundation has announced the addition of three new members to its Board of Directors: Dr. Cliff Skiles, Mrs. Ruth Newsom and Dr. Stan Fry Jr.

Also, Bob Josserand, Doug Manning and Dr. Nadir T. Khuri all agreed to serve another term upon expiration of their current terms. Mrs. Argen Draper resigned after her term expired.

Other continuing Board members are: Shirley Garrison, Patrick G. McGinty, Jerry Smith, Don Graham and O.G. "Speedy" Nieman.

"The Foundation and the community are particularly fortunate to be served by such a group of people who generously give of their time, experience and funds to ensure the availability and quality of health services in this community," said volunteer Foundation Executive Director Sylvia Khuri. "We were very fortunate to have Argen on the Board for the last two year and thank her for her service.

"Unlike other rural communities, Hereford enjoys a good health care system. The Foundation, through its endowment fund, will help ensure that this will remain the case."

Mrs. Khuri added, "We are very happy to announce that we will be awarding four scholarships to cover the fall semester for students going into the medical field and who intend to come back and work in Deaf Smith County. Also, the Foundation is currently preparing for a 'Celebrity Auction' to be held on April 29. We hope the whole community will be behind this effort. The Foundation was created to serve every single citizen in the community."

President's Message

By DR. NADIR KHURI
Foundation Board President

The tradition of "good works" has outlasted the most advanced civilizations, including those of ancient Egypt, Rome and Greece. It is a tradition that will undoubtedly outlive all of us.

The generosity involved in improving society forms a tradition that endures. Today, the tradition is more alive than ever.

The Deaf Smith Health Care Foundation is preparing to hold its "Celebrity Auction" on April 29 to benefit its Endowment Fund, which, when large enough, will be the most significant accomplishment of the Foundation.

We will only use investment and interest income to fund our projects, leaving the principal intact to generate more income.

As we approach the Auction, I ask you to support this local charity, which is of benefit to every single citizen, by attending and participating.

It also promises to be a lot of fun.

Board of Directors

The Deaf Smith Health Care Foundation is under the guidance and leadership of an independent board of directors, composed of the following members:

Dr. Nadir T. Khuri
President

Sylvia Khuri
Executive Director

Dr. Stan Fry Jr.

Odd Couple is reincarnated as NBC's Hope & Gloria

BY AMY HIBBERT

Ever since the introduction of Felix Unger and Oscar Madison, the concept of putting two completely opposite people in a situation together has been repeated continuously.

With an idea recycled so often, there just couldn't be anything else done with it to make that situation appealingly funny, again.

Hold on. Hope & Gloria, NBC's new series, is attempting to prove that is not true.

Airing Thursdays, the cleverly written series takes an old idea and spruces it up with a different angle, a young child and a Pittsburgh setting.

Of course, the biggest differences are the two prime protagonists are women, and they're neighbors, not roommates. However, according to co-executive producer Cheri Steinkellner, this series is not a "women's show."

"This is a show about friendship, and these two people's lives," Steinkellner says. "We want to have all the sexes' points of view, and all types of people."

"You want a lot of different types of humor to play, a lot of different points of view so that you can explore any different topic and any different story from all different angles."

Structured as an Odd Couple of the '90s, the series stars Cynthia Stevenson as Hope Richardson, an annoyingly perky Felix character. Her character, according to Stevenson, is "just eternally optimistic."

"I mean, someone who just isn't perfect but she's really trying," she says. "She really tries to look for the good, and quite often falls on her face."

Hope's counterpart is her next-door neighbor, Gloria Utz, portrayed by Jessica Lundy. Gloria, the Oscar type, is a strong-willed mother, divorced twice from Louis Utz (Enrico Colantoni).

"I got a sense throughout the whole script that, as opposed to being a dish, this was a really a tough woman, very no-nonsense," Lundy comments. "And I really admire that, because to be able just to cut through everything and to say the truth - I just wish I could do that more often. I like the character very much for that."

The duo not only have very different personalities, they have completely opposite careers.

The extremely Pollyanna-like Hope works as an associate producer for a local television talk show. The host, Dennis Dupree (Alan Thicke), is a pompous, self-centered man who pretends to care for others, when his only concern is for himself.

While Thicke portrays his character perfectly, Dennis can be too much for the average viewer to digest at times.

With Gloria working as a hairdresser, opportunities for her and Hope to experience each other's workplace are unlimited.

"(The talk show) is Hope's work arena that Gloria can come into whenever there is a Jewish holiday, or a bank holiday or anything," Steinkellner says. "Issac, the regular hairdresser, can be out for any number of reasons. And we can bring Gloria into that arena."

"But Gloria also works in a southside salon that we will be seeing in subsequent episodes, and taking Hope to. So we've got water for both fish to be out of."

Viewers should not give up hope on this show even if the Odd Couple relationship idea is a bit overused.

Hope & Gloria has found a fresh outlook on the opposites-attract scenario. Combine that with good humor and talented actors, and the result is a series that can endure all odds.

A Special Story For You: The Lonely Easter Bunny

It was almost Easter and the Easter Bunny was very lonely. He thought no children loved him, and he had no one to give his treats to. His friend, the Easter chick, saw how unhappy the Easter Bunny really was. She ran to find her many children friends to make the Bunny a special Easter surprise. They made the Easter Bunny the biggest and most beautiful Easter card ever! And then they got him some delicious chocolate eggs! The Easter Bunny became very happy, and he shared his many treats with all of the kind children! No one should feel as lonely as the Easter Bunny once did.

BY TAYLOR MICHAELS

Q: Tell me everything you can about Jeff Fahey (The Marshal). -Michelle Edwards, Florence, Vt.

Q: Is Jeff Fahey the brother of actress-of-yore Myrna Fahey? -J.M.K., Pottsboro, Texas.

Q: Didn't Jeff Fahey used to play Marco Dane's brother on One Life to Live? -Peggy Mooney, Lennon, Mich.

A: One of 13 children - none of them Myrna - in an Irish-American family, Fahey grew up in Buffalo, N.Y. At 17, he left home and hitchhiked to Alaska, then backpacked around Europe, worked on a kibbutz in Israel and celebrated his 19th birthday in India.

Finally, he returned to New York City and supported himself with a series of jobs before landing a scholarship with the Joffrey Ballet.

A Broadway revival of Brigadoon kicked off a stage career that also included a Paris production of West Side Story, a tour of Oklahoma! and a London stint co-starring with Albert Finney in the drama Orphans.

His many film credits - no TV soap operas mentioned - include Silverado, Wyatt Earp, Psycho III, Lawnmower Man, Body Parts, Iron Maze, Freefall, In the Company of Darkness and The Hit List. He lives in Los Angeles, is single and, according to his publicist, "in his mid-30s."

Despite glowing reviews, The Marshal is struggling in the ratings. You can write to Fahey and voice your support for the show C/O ABC Television Network, 2040 Avenue of the Stars, Century City, Calif. 90067.

Q: Where can I write to the U.S. Figure Skating Association? -Lyle Elwood, Livermore, Calif.

A: The address is: U.S. Figure Skating Association, 20 First St., Colorado Springs, Colo. 80906.

Q: What was Alice's last name on

Jeff Fahey

The Brady Bunch? Why were Cheers and The Cosby Show canceled? -C.J.M., Beaumont, Texas.

A: Neither was canceled. Bill Cosby decided to end his show's run after eight seasons. Ted Danson said he was ready to leave Cheers for other projects and the rest of the company agreed they would rather end on a high note than continue without him. Alice's last name was Sherman.

Q: I love Chicago Hope, but I wish they'd turn down the music in the surgery scenes. I can barely hear the dialogue. -Valerie in Massachusetts.

A: Wow! Scores of readers are voicing the same complaint about several (and almost never the same) programs.

I wish I had an easy solution, but I can only suggest you write to the producers of the show that bugs you and let them know there's a problem. In the case of CBS shows like Hope, that's C/O CBS Inc., 7800 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90036.

Baroness P.D. James presents new mystery

English author brings back popular character for 'Original Sin'

EDITOR'S NOTE - P.D. James, one of the mystery genre's best-selling authors, has brought back her readers' favorite character, Cmdr. Adam Dalgleish. In her new book, "Original Sin," Lady James began with Innocent House on the Thames. The snake slithered in later. This book is available at Deaf Smith County Library.

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) - Sometimes author P.D. James chooses symbols deliberately and sometimes mere objects turn themselves into symbols. James' new novel, "Original Sin," uses Innocent House as its Garden of Eden. It sits on the bank of the Thames, "a dark stream, a rather sinister unifying theme through the book." Innocent House is the home of a London publishing company, which is about to be forced to leave it.

But she wasn't thinking about the Garden of Eden when she introduced a snake.

James says, "I have a friend who's nearly 90. I go once a week, sometimes twice, to play Scrabble with her. She has a long velvet snake she calls Hissing Sid, a draft excluder, she puts along a windowsill or against the bottom of a door. I was playing with the snake one day, putting it around my neck, and I thought, 'My victim could be adorned with this.'"

So Hissing Sid went into Innocent House, where he adorned a murder victim. "I realized fairly soon that this does tie up with the Garden of Eden," James says.

The book, published by Knopf, was No. 7 on The New York Times' best-seller list in its first week of publication, then moved up.

Passing through New York on a recent book tour, the 74-year-old author took time off to explain where Hissing Sid came from, and other elements of the writer's habits.

James doesn't look at all like a mistress of mayhem, more like an American's idea of an English lady. For an interview over tea at a hotel, she wears a dark print blouse, cardigan, black skirt and sensible shoes. Her pleasant expression turns into a frown only once, when she mentions people who suggest she should do mainstream fiction because she writes so well.

"It's so irritating!" she exclaims.

"I don't see why people who enjoy detective stories aren't entitled to have good literature. 'Jane Eyre' and 'Pride and Prejudice' have a Cinderella theme. Nobody says their authors were too good to write a Cinderella theme."

In 1991, James was given a title, Baroness James of Holland Park. She's properly addressed as Baroness James or Lady James. Her friends still call her Phyllis.

She was a magistrate until she was 70, served a five-year term as a governor of the BBC and still is on both the Arts Council and British Council, which promotes British culture abroad. She sits in the House of Lords as a political independent.

"I think people expect, when there's a debate on language or literature, I ought to go and contribute," she says. "I rather agree."

For her new mystery, James brings back her readers' favorite character, Cmdr. Adam Dalgleish of New Scotland Yard, his ninth appearance in her 14 books.

When she started "Original Sin," James says, her first idea was to make the setting a publishing house, "in the closed society so beloved of detective writers, and I would set it on a river. Setting is so important to me."

Then she decided to tell the story from different points of view. "I like the richness and complexity of that," she says. "For instance, with Blackie or Mandy, we can get a character's view of herself and then other people's view of her."

Mandy is a young temporary employee. Blackie was longtime confidential secretary to the old head of the firm who recently died. Gerard, the new boss, likes Mandy and is unkind to Blackie.

"He's a bully," James says. "He knows by instinct who he can bully and who he can't. I like to feel I know the truth of these people. I get so interested in the people that the plot, the puzzle, almost is subordinate."

Though she doesn't set out to make a moral point, James says, "Moral choices are fascinating to a writer. One wants a murderer who is educated and intelligent. There's no interest in a psychopath or perpetual criminal."

"I love things to be a bit ambiguous. I think life is ambiguous. And I like people to come to some self-knowledge. James mentions two characters who slowly understand themselves. After the books ends, she says, "They will marry and I think it will be a happy marriage."

She adds, "I like very much when I'm writing to have a sense there are lots of novels contained and encapsulated in the main novel."

"We almost get a novel about Blackie, with her life with her cousin. And Mandy is a touchstone in a way. We see so much of what is going on through these very clear, unsentimental, young eyes."

James writes in scenes, the way a movie is shot, instead of in chronological order, and knits the scenes together at the end.

She gets up early, writes a scene in longhand and dictates onto a tape, to check the rhythm of the prose. "I write quickly," she says. "My handwriting is very bad. While I'm still capable of reading it, I put it onto tape."

Her secretary comes in the afternoon and types it. The next morning James revises.

She writes at the kitchen table, "entirely alone," she says. "There are women who can write with children around their feet in the kitchen. I admire it. But I can't do it."

BY CANDACE HAVENS

Dear Candace: With so many old shows going into syndication, and being shown again and again, why can't they do this with soaps?

In particular I would like to see the first episodes of The Young and the Restless, with Brad Elliot, Lesley, Chris and Snapper - all the original cast. Or maybe they could put them on video for sale or rental to the public. Has no one thought of this yet? -Susan Fox, Charlotte, N.C.

Dear Reader: What a great idea. There are several parts of the world where the soaps are syndicated and run anywhere from five years to a few weeks behind what we see. But none of the current soaps is syndicated here.

There has been some talk about starting an all-soap opera cable channel. In order to fill a 24-hour period, some of the older soaps would have to be brought back. But nothing has happened in this area yet.

Before starring in Roseanne, John Goodman appeared in films ranging from Eddie Macdon's Run (1983) to Raising Arizona (1987).

SOAP TALK

The prime-time soaps have done well in syndication. Knots Landing, Dallas, Dynasty and even Falcon Crest have made money for their syndicators.

Dear Candace: I watched Thorne (Jeff Trachta) and Macy's (Bobbie Eakes) Amsterdam concert on The Bold and the Beautiful. I would like to know if they have a cassette with the songs on it that I could buy. -Karessa Shifflet, Anderson, S.C.

Dear Reader: The album hasn't been released here yet, but they are hoping for one some time this year. The B&B album went platinum in Europe.

Dear Candace: I would like to know why Rex died on Y&R. It was a shock to see him leave the program. I never saw anything written about him. -Felicia from Florida.

Kevin Costner will direct, produce and star in The Kentucky Cycle, a six-hour miniseries for HBO. Filming begins in the summer of 1996.

Comprehensive coverage of local news, social events, sports and happenings in Deaf Smith County is yours ONLY in The Hereford Brand. Good news and good advertising go together. Large ads or small ads pay off in The Brand!

Dear Reader: Quinn Redeker (Rex) was written off the show for story-line reasons. His character had been on the back burner for several months, and Redeker didn't mind leaving. He would have stayed, though, if the writers had come up with something decent for him.

What you should know about our Pricing Policy: Not all items in this publication are on sale. Percent and dollar savings are off regular prices on in-stock items. Selection may vary by showroom; some items may not be available through Mail Order. An item's reference retail price, indicated by the † symbol, is your guide to its regular selling price at department stores and similar retailers. It is not our present or former selling price. It is either the retail price suggested by the mfr. in this publication's distribution area or our own determination of full retail price based on customary retailer markups for similar merchandises.
