U.S. students do not know U.S. History

By SALLY BUZBEE
AP Education Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - More than half of American high school seniors lack basic knowledge of U.S. history, a national report card released today shows.

And they are unable to use their spotty knowledge to reason, analyze or back up opinions, the National Assessment of Educational Progress found.

"The strikingly poor performance ... indicates a major problem in how history is taught and learned - or not learned - in American schools," said William T. Randall, Colorado's education commissioner and chairman of the board that oversees NAEP.

The scores - coming just two months after Education Secretary Richard Riley pointed to improvements in other test results and declared that U.S. education was "on the right track" - are certain to intensify political debates over the quality of America's schools.

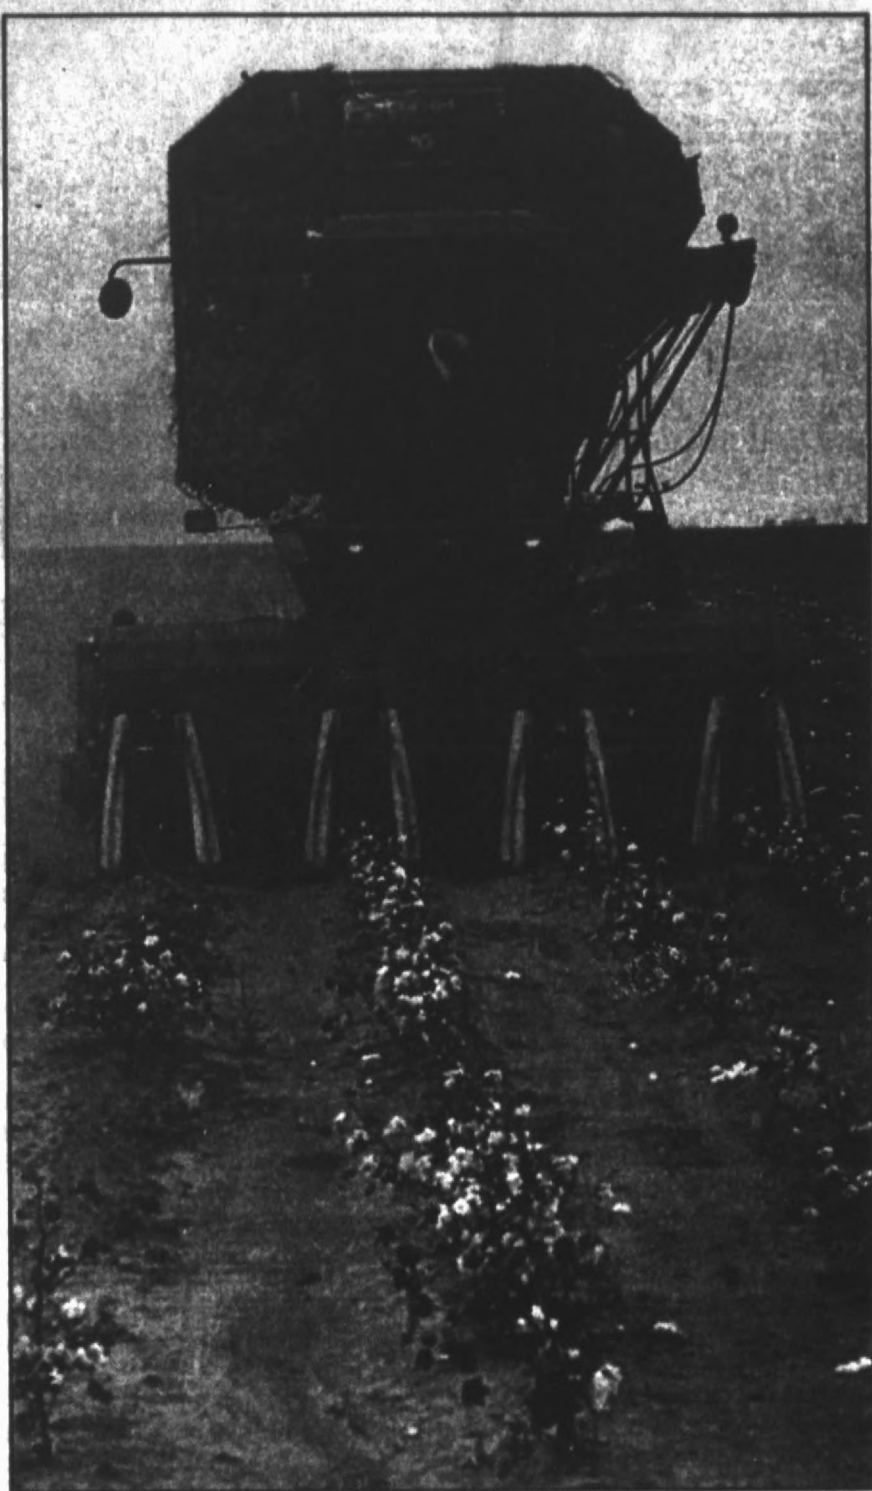

Riley noted the history test's difficulty and tough grading scale, both set by the independent NAEP citizens' board established by Congress.

"It's a tough test - much more rigorous than what most students are used to seeing in school," Riley said in a prepared statement.

The test used a 0-500 point scale with achievement ranges denoted as either basic, proficient or advanced. A high school senior had to score 294 to reach a rating of basic in history. But in the 1994 geography test, a score of 270 was enough for basic, Riley noted.

NAEP officials acknowledged the tougher scoring. But Randall said the test measures knowledge youngsters need to keep strong "our system of

Cotton pickin'

Cotton stripping is underway in the Deaf Smith area. The crop is not netting the weight and grade that most producers were expecting this year. Brent Bean, soil and plant scientist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Station in Amarillo, attributes the low yields to the lack of moisture and short season the area encountered. See related photo, Page 2.

County crop yields down for producers

By SHELLY SCHILLING

With harvest well under way for milo and cotton, and winding up for corn, the outcome may be less than favorable for most producers.

Brent Bean, soil and crop sciences extension specialist at the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Amarillo, said that most fall crops are coming up more than a little short this year.

"Our milo (sorghum) production is down -- mainly due to the lack of moisture," Bean said. "The early light freeze we experienced three weeks ago surely didn't help."

Most dry land milo did not produce any grain and most irrigated acres were down at least twenty percent, and in some instances more, Bean said.

He also went on to add that most of the milo that was planted later than normal produced more grain.

"The milo that was planted at the normal time or earlier -- just burned up. Anything planted later than normal benefitted from the few rains we received and did much better," he said. "That, of course, won't happen every year."

The corn production in the Deaf Smith and Randall County area was also down.

"The corn looked very good early in the season, but in August the area experienced some hot dry winds that stressed the crop," Bean said.

The lack of sufficient moisture hurt both the dry land and irrigated acres of corn.

Even corn that was irrigated more than several times had significantly lower yields, Bean said.

As far as the cotton crop is going, Bean said that he had heard several farmers say that the cotton looks better in the field than in the module.

"The weight is just not there," he said. "Some producers say the quality is also not the most desirable. I'm sure it is also due to the lack of rain and earlier cooler temperatures. Some cotton just didn't have enough time to make," Bean said.

Few marking ballots in early voting here

Voters have until 5 p.m. Friday to mark ballots prior to the Constitutional Amendment election set for next Tuesday.

Early voting in the election has attracted a sparse turnout -- the total Wednesday morning was 146 ballots, reported Connie Urbanczyk, deputy to Deaf Smith County Clerk David Ruland.

Texas voters have a slate of 14 proposed amendments to the state's Constitution, a document already burdened with 338 amendments since it was adopted in 1876.

One of the amendments proposed by the Legislature for voter consideration this year would abolish the office of state treasurer.

Supporting the proposal is the current office-holder, Martha Whitehead, who ran for state treasurer two years ago on a platform that called for doing away with the office.

Whitehead has traveled the state encouraging adoption of the amendment. Duties of the treasurer could be transferred to the state comptroller, she says, and eliminate overlapping of responsibilities.

Other amendments are related to ad valorem tax issues, issuance of bonds for educational loans and increasing the amount of bonds that may be issued for veterans' housing assistance. Elimination of the office of constable in Mills, Reagan and Roberts Counties also will be decided.

Clinton to sign two budget-cutting bills

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - President Clinton is expected to sign spending bills for energy and transportation that contain deep cuts in renewable energy and nuclear fusion research and for Amtrak and urban mass transit systems.

The Senate approved the spending bills - two of 13 that fund the federal government's operations - by wide margins Tuesday, sending them to the White House.

Clinton has vowed to veto several of the 13 bills for the fiscal year that began Oct. 1 because of disagreement with the Republican-led Congress over spending levels and restrictive provisions involving some federal programs.

But he has made known he will go along with the $37.5 billion Transportation Department measure and the $19.3 billion legislation that provides money for the Energy Department and an assortment of federal water projects.

The Senate approved the transportation measure, 87-10, on Tuesday; the House passed it 393-29 last week. The bill provides $1 billion more than the administration requested and allows the Federal Aviation Administration to streamline its procurement practices and speed up modernization of the air traffic control system.

The legislation "allows our critical programs to move forward," said Transportation Secretary Federico Pena.

The energy and water bill, which won 89-6 approval in the Senate after passing the House 402-24 earlier Tuesday, sets Energy Department spending at $1.1 billion below the administration request. It includes a 30 percent cut in renewable energy programs such as solar and wind power research and a 35 percent reduction in spending for nuclear fusion research.

But it essentially maintains DOE, including its nuclear weapons cleanup programs, at levels acceptable to the administration, even though earlier this year Republican leaders had talked of dismembering the department.

Meanwhile, House and Senate negotiators worked out an agreement on a contentious mining provision that sets the stage, possibly later in the week, for final action on a $12 billion Interior spending bill.

Clinton already has said he would veto the Interior bill because of steep cuts in money for Indian programs, restrictions on protection of endangered species and expanded logging in the Tongass National Forest in Alaska.

Community Heroes needed to take part in Olympic run

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

With the 1996 Summer Olympic games coming to the United States, there is a chance a Hereford person could be involved in a very special event -- the Hero Run.

When the Olympic Flame arrives in the United States next April, a 10,000-person relay will begin that will take the torch across country to Atlanta, where it will light the 1996 Centennial Olympic Games.

"The Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games chose the United Way across the United States to help them with the torch run," said Karen Sherrod, executive director of the United Way of Deaf Smith County.

Among the torch bearers along the 15,000 cross-country route will be 5,500 Community Heroes -- individuals chosen for their contributions to local communities.

"Community Heroes are the foundation of America's greatness," said Billy Payne, president and CEO of the Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games. "These men and women, with their diverse backgrounds, are the catalysts of the programs and institutions that contribute so much to the future of our communities. Who better deserves the honor of carrying the Olympic flame than these local heroes who every day, in every action, bring to life the meaning of the Olympic Spirit."

Mrs. Sherrod said it is the job of local United Ways across the country to collect applications from individuals who will be considered Local Heroes for the torch run.

Those applications are available, beginning today, at the YMCA, the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce, KPAN Radio and The Hereford Brand.

Individuals may nominate themselves to be a torch runner, or may submit the name of a community leader for the honor.

Mrs. Sherrod said there are four qualifications to be a Community Hero. Judges will select based on one or more of the following:

- Outstanding volunteer work;
- Leadership, role model or mentor;
- Acts of generosity or kindness; and
- Extraordinary feats or accomplishments, locally or nationally.

Mrs. Sherrod said all nominations must be sent to one address, where they will be sorted by Zip Code for evaluation.

There will be 150 judging regions throughout the country, with no more than 10,000 applications -- or one million nationwide -- forwarded to each judging region.

If more than 10,000 applications for a judging region are received, a random drawing will be held to reduce the field to 10,000.

In the first phase, judges will make preliminary judgments on the nominations.

Those finalists will then be sent to a second panel -- both of which are comprised of outstanding citizens who live within that judging area -- for final selection.

Community Heroes, Mrs. Sherrod said, will be asked to carry a 3-1/2-pound torch up to one kilometer.

The torch run winds its way from Los Angeles north to Seattle, then through Idaho, Utah, Colorado, Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma before entering Texas.

In all, the run will pass through 42 states.

Mrs. Sherrod said any Community Heroes chosen from this area will be given a stretch of run in the portion closest to here.

The closest stretch to Hereford will be the leg south from Oklahoma City to Fort Worth. The run will then wind east to Dallas, south to Houston, then out of Texas at Baton Rouge, La.

"The only cost would be getting you there," Mrs. Sherrod said, adding that community sponsorship of Community Heroes is allowed.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says blessed are those who have nothing to say and cannot be persuaded to say it.

The trouble with being normal these days is that it eliminates your chance of being on a TV talk show.

Holiday open houses at Hereford retail stores and floral shops signals the start of the Christmas shopping season Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m. The Brand's Holiday Shopper edition Sunday also adds to the traditional pre-Christmas events.

Many businesses will have in-store drawings for prizes at the open houses. The holiday blitz continues Nov. 16-18 with the Festival of Trees at Hereford Senior Citizen Center, and Nov. 29-30 with the "preview night" and holiday Fun Breakfast.

Whiteface athletic teams were in the spotlight over the weekend. The Lady Whiteface volleyball team wrapped up its first-ever undefeated season; the Herd tennis team was second in the region finals, and the girls' cross country finished second in district and advances to regional. At the same time, the HHS Band performed well in the region marching contest.

The local hospital district ended its fiscal year in September, and some of the yearend balances were reported from a board meeting last week. An error in the article reported the operating loss for the year at $82,889, making it appear much better than it was. Actually, this was the loss just for September. The yearend loss was $946,164.

We didn't notice the error until a former board member called to question the figure. The operating loss is without tax revenue. When non-operating income--totalling $1,183,664--is added in, the bottom line is a net gain of $236,500. Most of those funds come from local property taxes. However, the bottom line net gain last year at this time was $899,037.

An apple a day . . .

Participants in the Hereford Aquatic Center's first annual Halloween party had water in the pool for swimming and water in a tank for apples. Between turns at bobbing for apples, youngsters took part in other games, swam and played in the water to their hearts' content. Decorations turned the center into a Halloween festival.

Local Roundup

Here comes winter

Mild temperatures -- 66-degree high Tuesday and 45-degree low Wednesday morning, for instance -- are expected to give way to some real winter readings. Wednesday night's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies with a 20 percent chance of light rain, a low in the upper 30s and a southwest wind, 10-20 mph, shifting to north, 15-25 mph, about midnight. Mostly cloudy skies and much colder temperatures are on tap for Thursday when the high will be in the upper 30s. A 30 percent chance of light rain, possibly mixed with sleet or snow, also is forecast. Wind will be from the northeast at 20 to 25 mph, and gusty.

Recycle collection Saturday

Recyclable materials, including glass, metal, batteries and paper, will be collected Saturday, from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m., at the St. Anthony's School parking lot. Sponsors are Community School and Hereford Beautification Alliance.

Heroes. Those people also will be provide a uniform to all Community able to purchase the torch they carry.

The application process for Community Heroes includes a requirement that nominees submit a 100-word essay why that person should be selected.

Community Heroes do not have to be athletes.

Paid employees and agents of The Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games, the United Way and selection process judges and their families are ineligible to be selected as Community Heroes.

Also ineligible are public office holders and candidates for elected office.

Mrs. Sherrod said a portion of the torch run will be conducted by Olympic athletes.

The final runners-in the torch procession will be chosen through a "Share the Spirit" contest to be launched by Coca-Cola in February 1996.

The torch run is being sponsored by Coca-Cola.

HISTORY

democratic self-government, which depends on knowledgeable citizens."

The test, given in early 1994 to a national sample of 22,500 fourth-, eighth- and 12th-graders, found:

-Among 12th-graders, only 43 percent attained at least the basic level; 11 percent were proficient; and 1 percent to 2 percent advanced.

-Among eighth-graders, 61 percent attained basic; 14 percent proficient; and 1 percent to 2 percent advanced.

-Among fourth-graders, 64 percent attained basic; 17 percent proficient; and 1 percent to 2 percent advanced.

The test consisted of both multiple choice and essay questions.

The multiple choice questions measure strict knowledge. For example, seniors were asked what the Monroe Doctrine was "intended" to do: (a) promote United States trade with China; (b) help keep the peace in Europe; (c) discourage European involvement in the Americas; or (d) protect United States business in Japan and Korea.

The answer is c.

The essay questions are meant to measure knowledge and reasoning abilities, and involve objective scoring.

Seniors, for example, were shown an 1876 magazine cover with an illustration of American Indians and the caption, "What shall we do with our Indians?" Students were asked what historical events would have led to this picture appearing on a popular magazine in 1876, and what attitude displayed toward American Indians by other Americans is suggested.

A correct answer would discuss disputes about Western land and the issue of putting American Indians on reservations. Partial credit was possible.

Riley said the low scores prove the need for voluntary national academic standards. But conservative critics argue the voluntary standards infringe on local control of schools.

Scores on other NAEP tests over the past decade have shown students improving in math and science and holding steady in reading and writing.

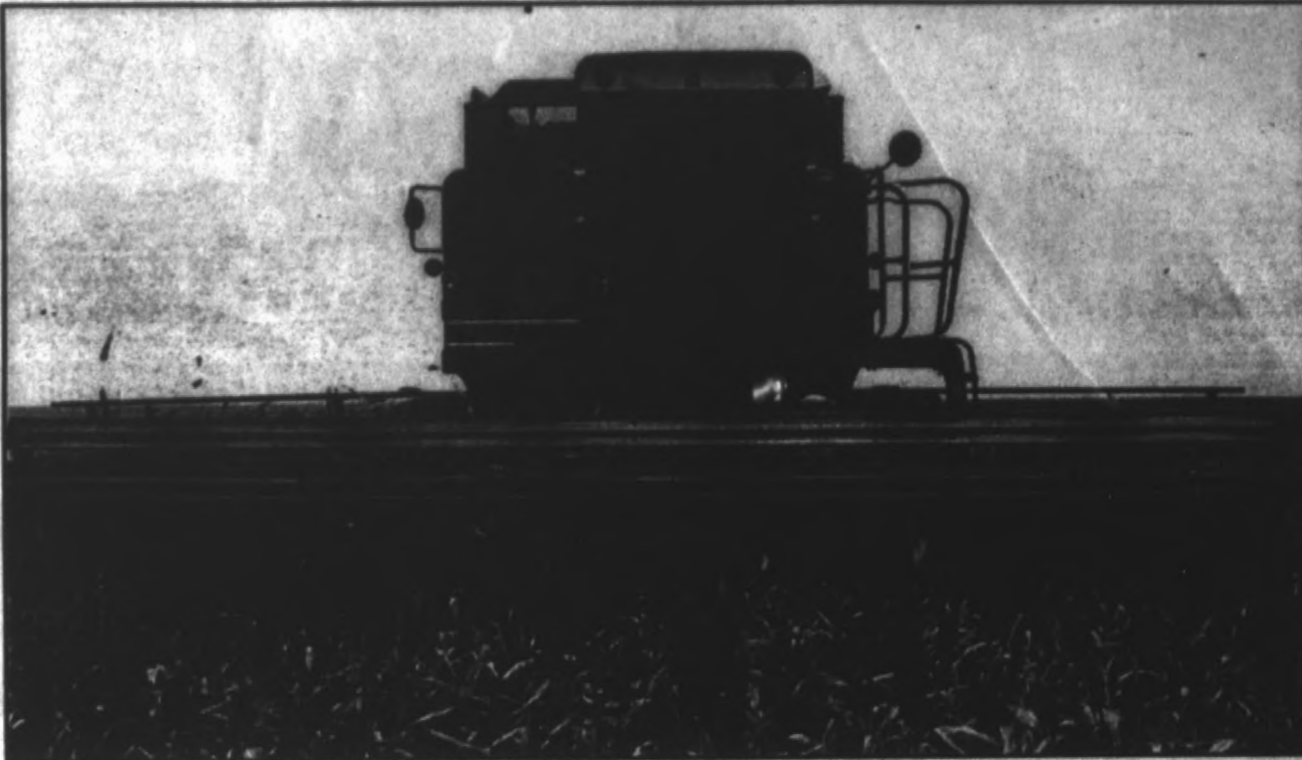

The 1994 test results can't be directly compared to 1988 NAEP results because the test form and content have changed. But Randall said an informal comparison indicated general consistency in scores.

The 1994 test showed sharp differences by race. About half of white and Asian seniors, but only 20 percent of black and Hispanic seniors, were at or above the basic level.

Boys and girls did the same in fourth and eighth grades, but boys scored better in 12th grade.

The test also found, as other NAEP tests have, that children of more educated parents did better.

Students in private schools did better than those in public schools.

Milo harvest under way

This field of dry land milo is unusual for the county. It actually has a few heads of grain to be harvested. Much of the dry land acres did not produce grain due to the lack of rain this summer. Brent Bean, soil and plant scientist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Station in Amarillo, said that the irrigated milo yield has been 20 percent lower this year. In some instances much lower. Milo, cotton and some late corn is currently being harvested in the Panhandle.

Quebec government begins search to replace premier

By DAVID CRARY
Associated Press Writer

MONTREAL (AP) - Quebec's separatist government begins the search for a new leader today after the dramatic resignation of Premier Jacques Parizeau, who appalled even supporters by blaming immigrants for an achingly close loss in the independence referendum.

Parizeau, a key player in the French-Canadian separatist movement for two decades, expressed hope that his departure would help, not hinder, the crusade for independence of Canada's largest province.

Lucien Bouchard, head of the Bloc Quebecois separatist party in Parliament, distanced himself from Parizeau's remarks, in which he blamed Monday's defeat on "money and the ethnic vote."

"His declaration does not reflect what sovereigntists feel," said

Bouchard, who was the separatists' most passionate orator during the referendum campaign.

Bouchard, who lost a leg to a near-fatal flesh-eating disease last year, refused to say if he wanted Parizeau's job. His future, and that of his party, were on the agenda of a party leadership meeting today.

Parizeau, 65, was elected premier last year after promising to hold a referendum on secession. His side lost Monday, but only narrowly - 50.6 percent to 49.4 percent - just 53,000 votes out of 4.6 million cast.

Fifteen years ago, Quebec's first secession referendum lost much more handsily, 60-40.

Instead of savoring the separatists' strong showing this time, Parizeau shocked even his colleagues with a vitriolic speech Monday night, blaming immigrants for the narrow defeat.

Prime Minister Jean Chretien and other politicians, as well as numerous minority leaders and anti-racism groups, denounced Parizeau's remarks.

At an emotional news conference Tuesday, Parizeau said he would step down as premier before Christmas. He denied he was resigning because of the previous night's diatribe, but it was clear that his even closest allies had repudiated him.

Parizeau said he used terms "that could have been much better chosen." But he reiterated his view that Quebec's French-speaking majority had, in effect, been thwarted by non-francophones.

About 90 percent of English-speaking, Cree Indians and immigrant Quebecers opposed secession; French Quebecers - who make up 82 percent of the population - voted for independence by a 60-40 margin.

Chretien, a Quebecer himself, said he understood Parizeau's decision to resign and offered to work with whoever replaced him.

Chretien also proposed talks with provincial premiers on recognizing Quebec as a distinct society - it has one-sixth of the territory and one-fourth of Canada's population - and transferring certain federal powers to the 10 Canadian provinces.

But Bouchard made clear Quebec considered these to be inadequate half-measures.

"Nobody's going to get us sovereignists involved in another 30 years of sterile discussions," he said.

Bouchard reiterated the separatists' promise to mount another independence drive. Quebec law bars another referendum until after new legislative elections, but separatists control the legislature and could change the law or call early elections.

Parizeau blamed himself for failing to rally more English-speakers and immigrants to the separatist cause, but said he was hopeful the goal of independence would be reached.

"How should that step be taken that will lead to that inevitable rendezvous with sovereignty?" he asked. "It is not up to me to say... Now others will have to take it forward to its final conclusion."

Detective's investigations match tombstones, graves

AUSTIN (AP) - Over 100 years after Hugh K. Holt and Walter A. Moore died, a police detective is still on the case.

From Clarence Wood's office in the basement evidence room at Austin Police headquarters, Wood has waged a five-year investigative campaign to return stolen headstones to cemeteries from which they were taken by vandals.

"Tombstones are for posterity, so that people know that an individual once lived," he said. "When one is stolen, there's nothing left to show that they were here."

The detective and amateur genealogist has returned 18 headstones to their proper places since 1990 in cemeteries and small, rural graveyards. Most were taken by young people, he said.

"Not all of them are university kids, but a lot are," said Wood. "They want them for Halloween parties or as a joke. We've found them in dormitory rooms or in a field or alley where they dump them."

In 1993, police investigated 13 cases of displaced monuments. Seven were reported last year and two have been reported this year.

Since most headstones are found after they have been abandoned by vandals, prosecutions are rare.

But Wood warns that destroying or stealing headstones is a third-degree felony, punishable by two to 10 years in prison and a fine of up to $10,000.

"If you steal even one flower off a grave, you've violated a law called desecration of a venerated object. People need to know there are consequences," said Wood.

Wood sifts through computer and microfilm records kept on people buried in the five cemeteries owned by the city of Austin. His work reunites headstones with the proper graves.

Records in the Texas State Archives are also studied. And Wood consults with hobbyists who have amassed cemetery records for Travis and surrounding counties.

New book has no plot but lots of information

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Want a portrait of America? Read a book, just out, that sizes up the country in a thousand-plus pages of tables, numbers, percentages and dollar figures.

There is little linguistic baggage in the new Statistical Abstract of the United States. Just stacks of stats. You have to conjure up your own images.

The raw material's there - from the labor force to labor rooms - the kind of stuff important to public officials, business analysts, educators, librarians, research workers, students and the merely curious.

Here's a sample. One in three Americans is still exercising after 75. Rock music sales are twice those of country and 10 times those of jazz.

Thirty-four percent of Americans 26 and over have smoked marijuana at some time in their lives, but only 3 percent are current users.

Eight percent of households have herb gardens.

A family of four pays more state and local taxes in Newark, N.J., than in other big cities.

The 115th edition of the statistical abstract, published by the Census Bureau, is a book of more than 1,000 pages, some with enough facts for a game of "Jeopardy!" or "Trivial Pursuit."

You learn that lottery ticket sales totaled $2.3 billion in 1980 but $28.5 billion last year.

That of 187.7 million adults in the 1993-1994 period, 69 million had no cable television.

That in 1992, there were 6.4 million pregnancies, 4 million births and 1.5 million abortions. The rest were miscarriages. Seventeen percent of women of childbearing age used contraceptive pills; 10.5 percent relied on condoms. Thirty percent were surgically sterile.

Also in 1992, there were 400,000 injuries involving beds, mattresses and pillows; 44,000 involving cleaning agents and 24,000 involving cigarettes. But the most injuries of all by far, 1.8 million, had to do with stairs, ramps, landings and floors.

The book is a set of statistics in itself, bringing together the most recent figures from the last year or two or three. The government has put it out since 1878, drawing on both public and private sources.

The new edition, selling in the Government Printing Office for $37 in paper cover, adds 76 new tables for a total of 1,512. They include estimates of undocumented immigrants, use of computers, bond ratings for states and cities, union membership by state and home ownership rates.

It drops some, too. No more does the abstract list household pet ownership; medical device implants by age, sex and race; or summary of operations of intercity bus lines.

One of the new tables gives statistics on mothers who smoked during pregnancy. Nearly 18 percent of white mothers smoked during pregnancy, as did 14 percent of black mothers. Mothers who never attended high school or were high school graduates were less likely to smoke during pregnancy than those who finished their educations at grades nine through 11. Those with more than 12 years of education were even less likely to smoke.

Of reportable diseases, which include rabies, tetanus, tuberculosis and typhus, the largest number by far was for cases of AIDS - 103,691 in 1993. The second-ranked was aseptic meningitis, 12,848.

On a less somber note:

-In 1993, movies took in $48 billion, an increase of nearly $5 billion over the previous year. There were 2 billion books sold, 1.2 billion

Economic indicators show loss on index

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The government's main forecasting gauge of future economic activity fell 0.1 percent in September, its second decline in the last three months.

The Commerce Department said today its Index of Leading Economic Indicators, which is about to be turned over to a private group, has advanced only two times this year.

The index's surprisingly weak performance seems to contradict other evidence that the economy is expanding.

The government reported last week that gross domestic product, the broadest measure of economic activity, advanced at a robust 4.2 percent annual rate in the third quarter - or more than three times the increase of the previous three months.

Many economists said the growth in GDP was overstated in the July-September quarter but still expect moderate expansion the rest of the year.

"It's really very much on trend and that's where you would want to see it," said economist David Munro of High Frequency Economics, a New York City forecasting firm. "The inflation figures have been especially benign."

The stock market opened on a positive note, with the Dow Jones industrial average up 4.70 points in early trading. Bond prices rose sharply after the National Association of Purchasing Managers reported that prices and orders fell in its October index.

In another report, the Commerce Department said construction spending jumped 1.2 percent to a record high in September, marking the fourth consecutive advance as both residential and government outlays increased.

In a cost-cutting move, the Index of Leading Economic Indicators soon will be turned over to the New York-based Conference Board, a private research group. The transfer could take place next month, the Commerce Department said.

The barometer's retreat in September, after a scant 0.1 percent increase in August, carried some more good news on inflation.

Raw materials, one of 11 components of the gauge, made their largest negative contribution to the index in 15 years. It also marked the 12th time in the last 13 months that the compilation of price components of materials exerted a drag on the index.

Three other components of the index contributed to the September decline: slipping consumer confidence, rising initial weekly claims for state unemployment insurance and slowing factory orders for consumer goods.

The seven components that made positive contributions to the index, listed according to their impact, were new business orders for plant and equipment, stock prices, manufacturers' unfilled orders for durable goods, money supply, average work week, slower business delivery times that signal rising demand and building permits.

The index is aimed at predicting activity six to nine months down the road.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: Here's a helpful hint I learned from my mother.

When the kitchen sponge begins to smell bad, or is pretty grungy, don't throw it out. Run it through the dishwasher (on the top rack - Heloise) next time you do a load of dishes. It will come out looking and smelling like new.

Be sure, however, to wedge it between a plate and the prongs on the rack so that it doesn't slip or drop onto the heating element. — Indianapolis Bachelor, Indianapolis, Ind.

THERMOS CLEANING

Dear Heloise: I have a thermos bottle that I use quite often and there is a buildup that normal washing is not removing. Do you any suggestions or is it time to buy another thermos? — A Reader

No need to throw the thermos away, unless it's broken.

Here's a money-saving cleaning solution that should give you better results.

Put 3 to 4 tablespoons of baking soda in the thermos (more if the thermos is larger than 1 quart), fill with hot water and let sit overnight. Next morning, give it a shake or two, rinse well and dry.

If there are some particularly stubborn stains, you may want to repeat the process.

Jones: Cowboys must win it all

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
IRVING, Texas (AP) - Jerry Jones has spent most of the autumn challenging the NFL. On Tuesday, he put the heat on his team, saying there can be no excuse short of catastrophic injury for not winning the Super Bowl.

"There can't be one acceptable excuse except for losing one of the triplets (Michael Irvin, Emmitt Smith or Troy Aikman)," said the owner of the Dallas Cowboys. "I still haven't been able to accept the fact we didn't win last year even with the injuries that we had. I wanted to win three Super Bowls in a row."

The Cowboys lost 38-28 to the eventual champion San Francisco 49ers in the NFC championship game.

"I know what three turnovers in the first five minutes can do," Jones said.

Jones said coach Barry Switzer will be safe even if the Cowboys fail to win the Super Bowl this year.

"No one gets fired if we don't win," Jones said. "The pain is enough. It was enough for me last year. Pain is all the penance I need. We've just got to figure out a way to do it this year. All we have to remember is how we're going to feel if we don't win."

Jones has been battling the NFL on two fronts and there are reports of a third problem swirling about the franchise.

The NFL has sued Jones for $300 million over a property rights hassle and Jones has sued back. The NFL has ruled Deion Sanders' $35 million contract invalid and the issue is before a special master in New York City.

Now there are reports defensive lineman Leon Lett and cornerback Clayton Holmes have run afoul of the league's drug abuse policy.

Jones refused comment on the matter Tuesday, saying the NFL has yet to contact the club. Under NFL rules, a club can be fined $500,000 for comment on the drug issue.

"The area of drug abuse needs to be confidential and I can live with that," Jones said. "I do think the leak for the (broadcast and published) reports had to come from a league source. I have yet to be contacted by the league."

On the Sanders matter, Jones said he didn't think anything would happen that would hurt the Cowboys for the 1995 season.

"Nothing is imminent and I have no concerns anything will affect this year," Jones said.

NFL owners will meet in Grapevine, Texas, next Tuesday and Wednesday. Club vice president Stephen Jones said he didn't think his dad will be on the agenda.

"I know the schedule includes realignment and the issues with Al Davis," the younger Jones said.

Someone quipped: "Well, Jerry you have a week to work on it to get on the schedule."

The Cowboys play the Philadelphia Eagles on Monday night at Texas Stadium. The last time the Cowboys were on national television was the season opener in which Jones paraded Nike president Phil Knight about the sidelines heralding a deal with the company. It angered numerous owners and led to the lawsuit.

Butts tells Thomas to forget fumbles

By MIKE DRAGO
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) - Marion Butts has coughed up his share of fumbles as an NFL rookie. He remembers it well, if not fondly.

worked closely with Thomas last week on three cardinal rules of ball-carrying: splitting the fingers over the tip of the ball, protecting it with the forearm and pressing it into the rib cage.

So the Houston Oilers' veteran running back had some advice for Rodney Thomas when the rookie had trouble holding onto the ball.

"You have to just forget about it and put it behind you," Butts said. "If you harp on it and stay focused on that, you're thinking, 'Oh my gosh, I can't fumble the ball,' and boom - you fumble it."

Thomas, the Oilers' third-round draft pick from Texas A&M, has been impressive in his first season, leading the team with 103 carries for 376 yards and two touchdowns. He also has shown a propensity for fumbles.

He lost the ball five times through seven games, and opponents came up with the ball four times. In losses to Minnesota and Chicago, Thomas dropped his first carry of each game.

After that, head coach Jeff Fisher gave Thomas' starting job to Butts. Though he didn't start, Thomas got a bulk of the carries in Sunday's 19-7 victory over Tampa Bay. He ran 23 times for 89 yards, propelling Houston's ball-control offensive scheme.

More importantly, the rookie got a grip.

Thomas, a 22-year-old who speaks with the self-assurance of a middle-aged veteran, said his earlier mistakes never got him down.

"I never once doubted myself, and that's one thing that helped me to be able to look at myself and say 'Hey, Rodney, you can't doubt what you're capable of doing,'" he said.

"There's no limit to what I can do when put in a certain situation, when the guys around me are doing their job. There's no limit."

Fisher said the coaching staff

"There's three pressure points on the ball and if you can secure all three pressure points, the ball just doesn't come out," Fisher said, adding that Thomas wasn't holding his fingers properly over the tip.

"He worked on it hard all week. We've convinced him, he's convinced himself, that the ball-handling problem is behind him. (On Sunday), not only did he protect the ball but he was still able to break tackles and get into the secondary."

Even after the improvement, Thomas wasn't convinced that technique was his problem.

"I've said it many times, those things are important," Thomas said. "But the main thing is being able to go out as a running back and, when you have that ball, realizing how valuable it is, being conscious of it being close to you. That's the most important thing."

"Everything about this game is mental. You get here on your physical merits, but I think everything about this game is mental."

Fisher said Butts will start against Cleveland, but Thomas is likely to get plenty of playing time again this week.

As for Thomas, he's not promising an end to his fumble trouble. He is still a rookie after all, and "this game is physical, it's intense," he said.

"The only thing I can do now is just keep playing hard," Thomas said. "I won't say what won't happen. I just keep on playing."

Tyson breaks thumb, calls off next bout

LAS VEGAS (AP) - For $39.95, Mike Tyson can watch the telecast of the Riddick Bowe-Eyander Holyfield fight Saturday night. Or he can attend in person.

Whatever he does, a spectator is all he can be. A broken right thumb has knocked him out of his fight against Buster Mathis Jr. on free television at the MGM Grand, a short cab drive from Caesars Palace, the site of the Bowe-Holyfield match.

The injury will keep the former undisputed heavyweight champion out of action for from four to six weeks.

"This is a really serious setback," Tyson said. "I was really anticipating this fight."

Actually it was a reinjury of the thumb that forced the fight to be postponed.

Tyson broke the thumb approximately two weeks ago, but hoped he would heal in time. Then he rebroke it while sparring either Monday or Tuesday.

"I'm very upset because this was a great opportunity for me," said Mathis, who was to get $800,000, by far his biggest paycheck. Tyson was to get $10 million.

"Hopefully, this opportunity will rise up again and there will be a Buster Mathis-Mike Tyson fight."

John Home's Tyson's co-manager, said the contract would be honored and that Tyson would fight on Fox Network, which was to telecast Saturday night's match.

At a news conference earlier in the day, Mathis said he thought Tyson was bluffing when he said his hand was sore. But Tuesday night, at the announcement of the postponement, he was no longer skeptical.

John Home's Tyson's co-manager, said the contract would be honored and that Tyson would fight on Fox Network, which was to telecast Saturday night's match.

At a news conference earlier in the day, Mathis said he thought Tyson was bluffing when he said his hand was sore. But Tuesday night, at the announcement of the postponement, he was no longer skeptical.

worked closely with Thomas last week on three cardinal rules of ball-carrying: splitting the fingers over the tip of the ball, protecting it with the forearm and pressing it into the rib cage.

"There's three pressure points on the ball and if you can secure all three pressure points, the ball just doesn't come out," Fisher said, adding that Thomas wasn't holding his fingers properly over the tip.

"He worked on it hard all week. We've convinced him, he's convinced himself, that the ball-handling problem is behind him. (On Sunday), not only did he protect the ball but he was still able to break tackles and get into the secondary."

Even after the improvement, Thomas wasn't convinced that technique was his problem.

"I've said it many times, those things are important," Thomas said. "But the main thing is being able to go out as a running back and, when you have that ball, realizing how valuable it is, being conscious of it being close to you. That's the most important thing."

"Everything about this game is mental. You get here on your physical merits, but I think everything about this game is mental."

Fisher said Butts will start against Cleveland, but Thomas is likely to get plenty of playing time again this week.

As for Thomas, he's not promising an end to his fumble trouble. He is still a rookie after all, and "this game is physical, it's intense," he said.

"The only thing I can do now is just keep playing hard," Thomas said. "I won't say what won't happen. I just keep on playing."

Thomas, a 22-year-old who speaks with the self-assurance of a middle-aged veteran, said his earlier mistakes never got him down.

"I never once doubted myself, and that's one thing that helped me to be able to look at myself and say 'Hey, Rodney, you can't doubt what you're capable of doing,'" he said.

"There's no limit to what I can do when put in a certain situation, when the guys around me are doing their job. There's no limit."

Fisher said the coaching staff

reports had to come from a league source. I have yet to be contacted by the league."

On the Sanders matter, Jones said he didn't think anything would happen that would hurt the Cowboys for the 1995 season.

"Nothing is imminent and I have no concerns anything will affect this year," Jones said.

NFL owners will meet in Grapevine, Texas, next Tuesday and Wednesday. Club vice president Stephen Jones said he didn't think his dad will be on the agenda.

"I know the schedule includes realignment and the issues with Al Davis," the younger Jones said.

Someone quipped: "Well, Jerry you have a week to work on it to get on the schedule."

The Cowboys play the Philadelphia Eagles on Monday night at Texas Stadium. The last time the Cowboys were on national television was the season opener in which Jones paraded Nike president Phil Knight about the sidelines heralding a deal with the company. It angered numerous owners and led to the lawsuit.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Which is more important to Americans, sports or religion? I'll bet nine out of 10 people would say sports. Well, they would be wrong.

The late Associated Press writer, George Cornell, whose beat was religion, did some research in 1992 and found that $56.7 billion was contributed by Americans to religious groups. That is 14 times more than the $4 billion spent that year on professional baseball, football and basketball combined. According to the Gallup Poll, attendance at religious functions totaled 5.6 billion in 1993. That is about 55 times greater than the 103 million Americans who attended professional football, baseball and basketball games that year.

In 1990, the overall attendance at U.S. sporting events was estimated 388 million. This includes both professional and college football, baseball, hockey, basketball, boxing, tennis, soccer, wrestling and harness, auto and dog racing. In comparison, the religious attendance in 1990 was estimated at 5.2 billion -- more than 13 times the overall sports total. More people turned out for worship in one month in 1990 than for all these sporting events for the entire year.

I just thought we ought to set the record straight. I was surprised at these figures. Were you? -- Seymour, Ind., Teacher

DEAR TEACHER: Yes, I was surprised. If I didn't have so much respect for the Gallup Poll and the late George Cornell, I would think someone were cooking the books.

Speaking of sporting events and religion, I believe the effort to put an end to a brief moment of prayer (by players giving thanks) was wrong. Individuals should be allowed to pray silently wherever and whenever they want.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I read your column every day. I especially enjoy letters that inspire, challenge and bring out the best in us.

Here's something that should get your readers thinking. I cut it out of a local newsletter. -- Susan in Miami
DEAR SUSAN: Thanks for your kind words and the enclosure. I liked it a lot and want to share it with my readers. Here it is:

You Can Bank On It
Imagine you had a bank that each morning credited your account with $1,440 -- with ONE condition: Whatever part of the $1,440 you failed to use during the day would be erased from your account, and no balance would be carried over.

What would you do? You'd draw out EVERY cent EVERY day and use it to your best advantage.

Well, you do have such a bank, and its name is TIME. Every morning, this bank credits you with 1,440 minutes. And it writes off as forever lost whatever portion you have failed to invest to good purpose.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm sure I will never win one of those $10 million sweepstakes, but I hope you can answer a question that is of interest to a great many elderly people.

The prizes we read about are usually paid out over a period of several years. If the winner should die before the final payments are made, does that end the payout, or is the organization legally obligated to pay the remaining money to the person's estate? -- Just Wondering in McLean, Va.

DEAR JUST: If the winner of a sweepstakes should die, the remaining payment must be made to the estate.

An alcohol problem? How can you help yourself or someone you love? "Alcoholism: How to Recognize It, How to Deal With It, How to Conquer It" will give you the answers. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.75 (this includes postage and handling) to: Alcohol, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

"Modular" takes place of vintage postal facility in Lemitar, N.M.

EDITOR'S NOTE: "Inadequate facilities?" Really? Including a weathered bench for reading the mail outside the antique adobe post office? Ah well, the official word is that "modular" is now in vogue and a dozen such vintage "facilities" must be replaced. Adios charm.

By KATHERINE D. RAMIREZ, Associated Press Writer
LEMITAR, N.M. (AP) - The rhythms of life do not vary much from day to day, year to year, out here in the boonies 70 miles south of Albuquerque, so the recent news brought some anxiety to the town's 800 contented souls.

The government's going to close the post office.

They're going to open a new one, all right, a "facility" just a block away. It is described as "modular," which sounds to many of the 800 people here about as impersonal as a ZIP code.

"Just a cold place with no charm," says one resident, Cynthia Coffee, 46. But, then, Cynthia was peeved a year ago when the government required post office boxes with a wall separating customer and postmaster.

"Armda used to get your mail for you before you were even in the building," Coffee explains.

Armda is Postmaster Armida Crespin. She represents the third generation in a family that has provided the postmaster in Lemitar for as long as there has been a post office here.

Indeed, Armida Crespin was born in the 85-year-old tan adobe house just off Lemitar's main road that had been deemed good enough to house the post office for 43 years.

Nonetheless, it is one of about three dozen small, rural post offices throughout New Mexico that the U.S. Postal Service says need to be replaced because of what the agency regards as "inadequate facilities."

She says she will always cherish the memories the little adobe house evokes of her customers, her mother, her childhood. These can't be replaced with modular efficiency.

Crespin's grandfather, Pedro Vigil, built the house himself in 1910. He added a room in front for a little grocery store which also served as the post office. Ten years later Pedro's daughter, Ramona Gonzalez, added separate space to the store for the post office and became postmaster.

"My mother juggled five little ones and the post office," Armida Crespin says. "We were in and out, and I'm sure getting in her way. But it was convenient. It was in her own house and she could cook dinner."

Other towns in New Mexico have similar feelings about their post offices now marked for closing.

Tiny San Ysidro is an example, a village of 350 about 100 miles north of Lemitar. Postmaster Viola Garcia's 80-year-old adobe home, which has served as the San Ysidro post office for the past 36 years, also will be replaced by a free-standing modular building.

As far as she is concerned, Garcia says, having the post office in a room of her old adobe home is more a convenience than an intrusion.

Although the office itself lacks a bathroom and other comforts for the customers, Garcia says it is handy for her to walk from her living room to her job.

"I don't ever have to get out there and fight the cold weather, the heat," she says. "And there's no wear and tear on the car."

The adobe building is something of a San Ysidro landmark. It is 80 years old and over the years had served as a school, a bar and a general store.

Garcia says that just as in Lemitar, the post office in San Ysidro has been a family concern for years. She took over in 1973 from her mother-in-law, Benita Garcia, who started as postmaster in 1959.

Garcia says her husband Robert, who is the San Ysidro mayor, and her children never complained about the post office being in their home.

"It was kind of nice for them," she says. "Their mom was home when they came home from school."

Here in Lemitar, Postmaster Armida Crespin says both the town and the workload have grown since her mother held the job for 22 years.

"When Mom ran the post office it was a lot smaller and it didn't have a whole lot of rules and regulations," she says.

Armda took over in 1974 and does everything from sorting the mail to mopping the floor. But she says she manages to keep up because there is not enough room to leave any work on the side for too long.

"I liked working in my house; it was convenient," she says. "It has a different feel because it is in a home. The people around here have thought of it as being a friendlier place."

As for "inadequate facilities," that might depend on the judgment of the customers as well as the Postal Service.

The small adobe structure's front entrance is a screen door which, admittedly, squeaks. But beside it is an outdoor bench that Crespin's father made of Coca-Cola crates 40 years back. Here customers sit and read their mail before going back to their cars parked in the dirt carport.

And others besides resident Cynthia Coffee have complained about the wall separating the customers that was added to accommodate the new boxes (and is now littered with postings for firewood for sale).

"People complained," Crespin says. "They say they enjoyed watching me sort the mail, and I used to like handing it to them."

Some residents, like 77-year-old Cristanto Cordoba, a retired farmer, have not yet become used to the changes that have taken place in Lemitar since he was a young man four decades ago. He says he misses the days when he and other immigrants would pick chili on the local farms to support their families in Mexico.

Back then, people would play horseshoes and talk in front of the post office all day long, he says. "We were like a big family. Before, everyone used to come together. Now people just come and go."

Trademark of holes on golf course to be decided in federal court trial

By TERRI LANGFORD
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) - It's a question more likely to be overheard at the clubhouse or the pro shop: Is a golf course hole a trademark?

The debate is hardly rhetorical as three of the nation's most famous golf courses - Pinehurst, Pebble Beach and Harbour Town - went to federal court in a high stakes gamble over whether the courses' holes are sacred, legally speaking.

The nonjury trial began Tuesday. At issue is whether Tour 18 of Humble, just north of Houston, has violated trademark law by duplicating and repackaging some of the nation's most famous golf course holes.

"They are taking a free ride on what we have done over the years," plaintiffs' attorney Jim Gambrell said during his opening statement before U.S. District Judge David Hittner.

"The only value they had was in copying famous holes."

For between $55 and $70, a golfer can go to Tour 18 and play a replica of say, the "lighthouse hole" at Harbour Town (No. 18), or the "Amen Corner" from Georgia's Augusta National (Nos. 11, 12, 13).

But plaintiffs' attorneys say Tour 18 is making money on the other courses' reputations and designs and is confusing the golfer into believing permission was given by the venerable fairways.

"It is about copying our unique trademark, using our marks and names," Gambrell said.

Not so, says Tour 18's attorney William Durkee, who painted the three as "The Big Resorts" and labeled their attempt to shut down Tour 18 as squelching the little guy's "American Dream."

"We're not saying our hole is Pebble Beach," Durkee said. "We're saying our hole is a replica."

In fact, disclaimers are posted on the course, Durkee said. Pinehurst is located in North Carolina, Harbour Town is in South Carolina and Pebble Beach is in California.

In his opening statement, Durkee explained how Tour 18 emerged as the brainchild of Texan Dennis Wilkerson, who thought amateur duffers might want to test their mettle against holes similar to the ones played by the pros.

"The design of a golf course is not protectable," said Durkee, who said there is a clear distinction between copying a product and passing off a product as the real thing.

"Our free society allows the copying of products."

Tour 18 claims the plaintiffs' suit, which seeks to prevent the duplication of courses, has cost the Texas entrepreneurs some $20 million.

Before the Humble course opened, Wilkerson consulted the famous Fulbright and Jaworski law firm about his idea and was told it would not violate trademark laws, Durkee said.

An idea does not have to be registered to be a trademark. If unique enough, some ideas or institutions are considered trademarks under American law.

Tour 18 recently opened its second course in Dallas and has plans for a third in Atlanta and eventually, a public stock offering.

Gambrell painted Wilkerson and his associates as unscrupulous businessmen who secretly videotaped different courses and made under-the-table payments to designers of the golf courses.

Durkee countered that Wilkerson legally obtained maps of the courses. Wilkerson did take video of the courses as he played them, but videotaping on the courses was not barred.

The trial is expected to continue through the week.

What is it?

Kay and Jim Cavin of Hereford acquired this unknown object from the estate of Jim's grandfather, the late Joe Osterander of Amarillo. It is estimated to be around 100 years old. The couple have tried to find out what the antiquity was used for but have failed to find anyone with that knowledge. The heavy metal object is an estimated 30 inches in length and has a trigger release located in the handle. If anyone has an idea of what it may be please contact Kay at 364-7686.

Winter pastures suffering from dry weather

COLLEGE STATION, Texas--Dry weather conditions have caused problems for winter pastures across Texas, but producers may have some relief on the way, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service reported.

Charles Stichler, extension agronomist in Uvalde, said winter pastures in the Southwest region desperately need rain.

"Wheat, oats and rye grass were dry-planted and are waiting for a rain to germinate the seeds," Stichler said. "The area is receiving a fine, misty rain, but there is no subsurface moisture."

"Without a good rainfall, the pastures will be a disaster," he said.

Galen Chandler, county extension agent in Denton, said producers in Denton County have had to replant wheat pastures.

"If wheat comes up and just sits there without getting any rain, it will die and have to be replanted," Chandler said. "We got some rain yesterday, but it was not enough."

"Things are not looking good," he said.

Lin Wilson, district extension director in Corpus Christi, said pastures are in terrible shape.

"The soil moisture is very short," he said. "Wheat planting has been delayed and it looks like winter pastures are in trouble."

But Karen Shelton-Mur, meteorologist at the National Weather Service Agricultural Service Center in College Station, said rainfall is on the way. The Coastal Plains and Lower Rio Grande Valley have just received a significant amount of rainfall and the rest of the state can be expecting rain.

"An upper level low pressure system and a stationary front brought 8.75 inches of rain to Corpus Christi, 7.33 inches of rain to Hebbronville, and 4.14 inches of rain to Palacios over the weekend," she said. "A low pressure system originating in Mexico will move through the rest of the state Tuesday through Thursday, producing cloudy skies and scattered showers and thunderstorms."

Ms. Shelton-Mur said to expect some colder temperatures as well.

"A strong cold front will move into the Panhandle late Wednesday, and continue across the rest of the state Thursday through Saturday," she said. "Much colder temperatures will spread behind the front, with continued chances for showers and thunderstorms."

Don Wilkerson, extension horticulturist in College Station, warns that if it looks like temperatures are going to drop below 50 degrees in your area, it is time to bring plants in.

"One night below 50 is enough to kill quite a number of tropicals," he said, "so once temperatures dip, it is time to make that commitment to bring things inside."

Wilkerson said when you bring plants inside, you want to find an area where light and temperature are going to be somewhat constant.

"You don't want to put plants near appliances, like a television, because there is an excessive amount of heat generated," Wilkerson said. "Also, be aware of fireplaces, heating ducts and gas heaters, which could present obvious problems."

"The ideal location would be near a window on the south side of your home," he said.

Wilkerson adds that when you get the plants inside, be prepared for them to look unhealthy for a period of time.

"Plants acclimate over time and change to match their environment," he said. "As they are doing this, their leaves may look yellow and they may experience significant leaf loss."

Wilkerson said remember in most cases that plants are not growing in the interior, they are just being maintained.

The following specific livestock, crop and weather conditions were reported by district extension directors:

PANHANDLE: Soil moisture very short to short. Pastures, ranges declining. Some hard freezes reported. Harvesting corn, peanuts, potatoes, pumpkins, sorghum, milo, sugar beets. Some boll weevil damage seen in cotton. Cattle in good condition.

SOUTH PLAINS: Soil moisture short to adequate. Ranges, pastures in good condition; experiencing warm, dry weather. Corn harvest complete. Harvesting cotton, sorghum. Wheat planting near completion. Livestock in good condition.

ROLLING PLAINS: Soil moisture very short to short. Pastures, ranges in good condition; beginning supplemental feeding in drier areas. Harvesting cotton, peanuts; fair to low yields. Wheat planting near completion. Livestock in good condition.

NORTH TEXAS: Soil moisture very short to short. Pastures in need of rain; some winter pastures lost due to dry weather. Harvesting cotton, peanuts, soybeans, sweet potatoes, pecans. Planting wheat, sunflowers, oats. Livestock in good condition.
