Warrant issued in A.M. shooting

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

Charges are pending in connection with the shooting death of Charlie Owens, 71, of Hereford, who died shortly after 2 a.m. today at Deaf Smith General Hospital from wounds to an arm and his chest.

A warrant was issued at about 11:15 a.m. today, and an arrest was to be made this afternoon by Hereford police. Police worked through the night investigating the incident and questioning several individuals about the incident.

The shooting occurred at about 1 a.m. today. Police responded to a call on the incident at 1:10 a.m. at Owens' residence at 541 West-haven in Hereford.

Owens was shot twice, once in the arm and once in the chest, with a .38-caliber handgun. An autopsy was to be performed today by Amarillo forensic pathologist Dr. Ralph Erdmann.

Services for Mr. Owens are pending with Gilliland-Watson Funeral Home.

Because of a new law that precludes the release of information in a felony crime that would identify the victim, police could not issue a detailed report on the incident.

Fourth features flag fervor

By DOUGLAS J. ROWE
Associated Press Writer

Fireworks rocketed through the air and barbecue coals were stoked as usual. But this July Fourth saw flames of flag fervor fanned more than ever following the Supreme Court's recent decision allowing the burning of Old Glory.

Attention on fiery fights for freedom in Poland and China also burned brightly as the United States marked its 213th birthday, while parades extolling patriotism and lampooning other themes marched through streets across the country.

And love blazed on the Golden Gate Bridge.

In one of the nation's naturalization ceremonies, a federal judge in Indiana swore in 141 new Americans from 44 countries.

New citizen Kathryn Weller, a native of Britain who dressed her children in red, white and blue, had stern words for those who would desecrate the flag.

"If you want to be American you shouldn't burn the flag, and if they do burn the flag they can leave," she said.

About 200,000 people turned out for a Boston Pops holiday concert, and the evening of music was capped with fireworks.

Earlier, the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Massachusetts observed Independence Day by honoring the fallen protesters in China's Tiananmen Square.

The ceremonial unit joined Shen Tong, a 20-year-old biology student from Beijing University who is on the Chinese government's "most wanted" list, in unveiling a 6-foot-high floral replica of the "Goddess of Democracy" at the site of the Boston Massacre.

Another country's fight for freedom was the focus in Philadelphia. Solidarity leader Lech Walesa's wife, Danuta, accepted the city's first Liberty Medal on his behalf and said that years of struggle for greater freedom in Poland have reached "a decisive phase."

She accepted the medal and a $100,000 cash award during ceremonies in front of Independence Hall, where her husband was hailed for his "personal triumph" as the leader of the country's only independent trade union and popular opposition group.

In Manchester, Mass., American Legion members staged a ceremonial burning of tattered flags to protest last month's Supreme Court ruling upholding an individuals' right to burn the American symbol under the First Amendment.

The ceremony, which includes prayers and comments by the commander, is observed annually by many posts around the country.

"It's the only way to destroy (flags) officially under the flag code," said John Comer, past national commander of the American Legion.

Vice President Dan Quayle defended the Bush administration's proposal to make flag burning unconstitutional as he spoke in Newport News, Va., at a ceremony to honor the Navy's newest attack submarine.

"Too many Americans have laid down their lives in the defense of freedom to treat this symbol lightly," Quayle said.

North Dakota marked centennial festivities as temperatures across the state soared to century marks of their own. Bismarck set a record of 102 Tuesday, topping the 101 set in 1886, three years before statehood.

In a downtown Los Angeles mission, more than 6,000 homeless people were treated to a Fourth of July lunch including sloppy joes and watermelon, all served on red, white and blue tablecloths, said spokesman Walter Contreras.

New York City celebrated with a spectacular 30-minute nighttime fireworks display that included a Liberty Bell, space rocket and star formations and "America" written across the sky.

In the nation's capital, it rained on the estimated 20,000 people who turned out for the annual parade.

The Doo-Dah Parade, a tradition in Columbus, Ohio, featuring off-beat bands and marchers, was highlighted by the Dental Drill Team, The Marching Fidels - a group of marchers dressed like Cuban leader Fidel Castro - and the Pete Rose Betmobile, combining popular interest in the new "Batman" movie and the Cincinnati Reds manager's troubles with major league baseball over his alleged gambling activities.

As crowds gathered in San Francisco to await fireworks, a couple celebrated Independence Day by getting married in a windy ceremony on the Golden Gate Bridge.

"We're both hopeless romantics," said Jacques Cooper, 22, who explained beforehand that she and fiance Richard Lane often met on the bridge to sip champagne and watch the sunset during their yearlong courtship.

Groups march for, against abortion ruling

By TOM BUERKLE
Associated Press Writer

Abortion-rights activists clashed with police in Boston and burned a flag-draped effigy of a justice in Atlanta during demonstrations against the U.S. Supreme Court decision allowing states to restrict abortion.

Pro-choice protesters who burned an American flag in Minneapolis were attacked by three waiters from a tobacco bar. One man was arrested and several protesters suffered bruises and abrasions, police said.

On a day when Americans celebrated their liberty, thousands of people in at least eight cities heard July Fourth calls to safeguard abortion rights.

Counterdemonstrations were held in two cities, but the anti-abortionists were vastly outnumbered. The rallies came two days after the high court upheld a Missouri law imposing restrictions on abortion, inviting other states to do the same.

"The most fundamental liberty is the right to control our own bodies," Massachusetts Rep. Susan D. Schur told more than 3,000 people at a rally in front of the Statehouse in Boston.

"For if we have not the ability to control our own bodies, we are no more than slaves."

Lt. Gov. Evelyn Murphy also denounced the ruling, and abortion rights groups announced a statewide campaign to vote anti-abortion lawmakers out of office in the 1990 elections.

"Vote with your heart, your head and your stomach," Schur said. "Vote as if your life depends on it."

Protesters waved American flags, held signs with slogans including "My rights have been raped," and chanted "Just Say No!" to the Supreme Court decision.

Demonstrators scuffled with police trying to clear the crowd and two people were arrested, including one on charges of assaulting an officer, police said. Police also blocked about 300 protesters who tried to broadcast their message to tens of thousands of people gathered for the annual Boston Pops concert and fireworks display along the Charles River.

In Indianapolis, speakers told about 350 demonstrators to fight backers of anti-abortion legislation expected in the 1990 General Assembly as a result of the Supreme Court decision.

"You take our rights, you lose your jobs," said Melinda Rider, executive director of the Indiana Pro-Choice Action League.

More than 200 demonstrators outside the Maryland State House in Annapolis also were urged to begin lobbying for the 1990 state elections to preserve abortion rights. A few anti-abortion activists approached the rostrum and interrupted the rally briefly before police escorted them away.

In Atlanta, about 450 abortion-rights advocates marched to the Capitol, where protesters placed a handful of coat hangers on the statue of former Gov. Eugene Talmadge.

As the rally was ending, a small group of marchers set afire an effigy of a Supreme Court justice wrapped in a flag. An unidentified man tried to stop the flag-burning, shouting "This is Nazism," but was pushed back.

The flag-burning in Minneapolis occurred as about 150 abortion rights demonstrators rallied outside the federal building.

When a small group of protesters began burning a flag, three waiters from the Solid Gold nightclub ran across the street and attacked them, said police watch commander Ed Scott. One of the waiters was arrested for disorderly conduct.

In Pittsburgh, an estimated 400 abortion rights advocates in front of the federal building were challenged by half as many anti-abortion demonstrators who gathered across the street singing "God Bless America."

"Let the babies live!" the Rev. Keith Tucci, an Operation Rescue leader, yelled through a bullhorn.

There were no arrests or altercations, although each side tried at times to out-shout the other and police had to keep anti-abortion protesters from mixing with their opponents.

About 200 demonstrators in downtown Milwaukee listened as Daniel Maguire, a theologian and professor at Marquette University, told them: "You are the moral majority. Don't believe that they represent the high moral ground."

Experts replace dirt around tree

AUSTIN (AP) - So many of the curious and sympathetic have come to see the ailing Treaty Oak that authorities posted a security guard on the street near the tree to direct traffic.

Some of the well-wishers continue to leave gifts, either as a symbolic gesture of support or with the fervent belief that they can somehow effect a change.

Among the items left recently are get-well cards, chicken broth, a copy of Joyce Kilmer's "Trees" poem and a pair of steel-tipped, black leather shoes.

Estimated to be about 500 years old, Treaty Oak was poisoned in what police describe as a ritual act. Paul Siedman Cullen, 45, of Elroy has been charged with felony criminal mischief in connection with the poisoning.

Authorities are using a number of methods to try to save the tree, that will include spreading a thin compost mixture of sewage sludge called "Dillo Dirt."

Officials announced over the holiday weekend that all soil tainted by the poisonous herbicide dumped around the tree had been replaced.

Dirt containing the herbicide Velpar was replaced Monday morning with 22 cubic yards of donated planting soil, said city forester John Giedraitis.

"We are out of danger as far as soil contamination goes," said Giedraitis. "What we don't know about is the level of contamination within the tissue of the tree."

Flying high and proud

Flags ringing the Veterans Park area around the Hereford American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars posts wave in the breeze on Tuesday. The flags are posted on several holidays through the year. American flags seemed to be more evident at many Hereford homes, and also were flown at many businesses, on Tuesday.

Reagan injured in 'private rodeo'

SIERRA VISTA, Ariz. (AP) - Former President Reagan was recuperating today from scrapes and bruises after a being thrown by a bucking horse during what he called "my own private rodeo."

The 78-year-old Reagan was flown to Fort Huachuca's Raymond W. Bliss Army Community Hospital after the spill at a ranch in the northern Mexico state of Sonora, said his spokesman, Mark Weinberg.

After four hours of treatment, Reagan returned to the ranch, where he has been vacationing since Saturday, officials said.

Although Reagan did not suffer any serious injury, doctors suggested he stay at the hospital overnight, officials said.

Reagan declined, so doctors assigned the hospital's chief nurse, Lt. Col. Paul Farineau, to accompany Reagan back to the ranch that's owned by William Wilson, a friend and former U.S. ambassador to the Vatican.

The former president plans to celebrate his wife's birthday there on Thursday before returning to his Los Angeles home at the end of the week, Weinberg said.

Capt. Juan Lopez, a U.S. Army doctor who examined Reagan, said he planned a follow-up check today in Mexico.

Lopez said he told Reagan to stay away from stressful exercise for the rest of the week.

While at the hospital, Reagan made jokes and did not complain of any pain, Lopez said.

The spill occurred Tuesday morning.

"The horse Reagan was riding bucked wildly several times on a rocky downhill slope and eventually stumbled," Weinberg said.

The spokesman said Reagan is "an excellent rider and he held on quite a while." He said Reagan joked that the accident was "my own private rodeo." In a telephone interview from Los Angeles, the spokesman said that he didn't know if the horse suffered any injuries.

Lt. Gen. Thurmond D. Rodgers, ranking officer at Fort Huachuca, said Reagan told him to "make sure people know that I was thrown from the horse, I did not fall."

A U.S. Army helicopter flew Reagan to Fort Huachuca from the ranch near Cananea, Mexico, said Maj. Dennis Seely, a base spokesman.

After about four hours, Reagan and his wife, Nancy, left the hospital and returned to Mexico via the Army helicopter.

Gorbachev promises rights protection

PARIS (AP) - Mikhail S. Gorbachev, professing the Kremlin's new adherence to the same ideals of liberty and equality that sparked the French Revolution, has declared his readiness to safeguard human rights.

The visiting Soviet leader also called anew for building a united Europe, for moving beyond the East-West schism that grew from the Cold War.

"The post-war period is over," Gorbachev said late Tuesday at a gala dinner hosted by President Francois Mitterrand. "Today, a way toward a stable peace is opening before us, based not on a balance of forces, but on a balance of real and correctly understood interests."

On the first of three days in France, the Soviet president met with Mitterrand then visited the Place de la Bastille, where 200 years ago this month an angry mob stormed the infamous prison and launched the uprising that swept away the French monarchy.

Thousands of people crowded to barricades placed around the square, and as Gorbachev's Soviet-made Zil limousine pulled up, they shouted, "Gorby, Gorby!" as did crowds on his visit to West Germany last month.

"He doesn't believe in barriers between people, and I agree," said one approving onlooker, Mary-Louise Medir. "He believes there should be peace instead of war, and I agree."

Gorbachev was to meet today with French intellectuals at the Sorbonne, the ancient university on the Left Bank of Paris, and attend a luncheon with Premier Michel Rocard.

Mitterrand and Gorbachev were to sign bilateral agreements then hold a joint news conference to announce the results of their meeting.

In his dinner toast, Gorbachev said the Soviets feel like participants in this month's festivities celebrating the French Revolution's Bicentennial in part "because perestroika, also, is a revolution."

Perestroika, or restructuring, is the name given to Gorbachev's 4-year-old drive to revamp Soviet society and economy. In his remarks, the 58-year-old leader noted that perestroika also includes a keener understanding of the importance of human rights, long an irritant in East-West relations.

"To us, the sentiment of the Declaration of the Rights of Man and the Citizen is now more understandable: 'People are born and remain free and equal in rights,'" said Gorbachev, citing one of the great documents engendered by the French Revolution.

Since Gorbachev became Soviet leader in March 1985, he has repudiated the vast apparatus of state terror put in place by dictator Josef Stalin.

He has also allowed wider expression of dissenting views, including public challenges to the monopoly on power held by the ruling Communist Party.

He told Mitterrand that, like France, the Soviet Union is now ready to defend the rights of "individuals and entire nations."

Gorbachev gave no details, but in a speech Thursday to the Council of Europe in Strasbourg, he is expected to announce Soviet readiness to adhere to the same human rights standards subscribed to by France and other West European countries.

In his dinner remarks, Mitterrand expressed support for Gorbachev's proposals to create a "common European home," one of the themes stressed by the Soviet leader during his visit to West Germany. But he said the division of Europe could only be eliminated within "a community of free peoples."

"Between the two halves of Europe, there are still many obstacles to clear away, distrust to dissipate, barriers to knock down before the inhabitants of the future home can feel at ease and confident there," Mitterrand said.

Court to hear school case

AUSTIN (AP) - The debate over equal funding for Texas public schools moved to another stage today - the Texas Supreme Court.

The state's highest civil court was scheduled to hear arguments in the lawsuit in which poor school district claim the state discriminates against them through its public education funding method.

The court's decision to consider the case comes after the Austin-based 3rd Court of Appeals overturned a state district judge who declared the state's school financing system was unconstitutional.

Poor districts say they are unable to enrich state education funds with local tax funds to the same extent that wealthy, property-rich districts can. The poor districts argue their students are not able to receive an education equal to those in wealthy districts.

Public school financing in Texas is primarily a combination of state and local funding.

During the regular legislative session, lawmakers approved $450 million over a two-year period to equalize funding between poor and wealthy districts, despite the call from state education officials for a "down payment" of $1.2 billion.

Since the state Supreme Court has decided to hear the case, several lawmakers have urged Gov. Bill Clements to consider an increase in the cigarette tax to help bridge the funding gap, but Clements has rejected the idea.

Clements has said the Legislature should await the outcome of the court's decision.

In 1987, a state district court judge declared the state's public education funding system unconstitutional, but that decision was later overturned by the appeals court, which noted inequities in funding, but maintained that wasn't necessarily unconstitutional.

Storm near Dallas causes many to have uncomfortable holiday

By The Associated Press

It wasn't much of a holiday for people in flooded areas of Liberty County, thousands of Dallas residents who spent the sweltering day without air conditioning and even for egrets in North Texas whose tree homes have been damaged by this year's frequent, violent storms.

An estimated 500 residents of Liberty County remained out of their flooded homes Tuesday in low-lying areas swamped by heavy rain from Tropical Storm Allison.

In Dallas, an estimated 9,000 homes were without electricity and air conditioning in the wake of a devastating wind storm, accompanied by two possible tornadoes that swept across much of the city Sunday night.

There were initially about 100,000 homes without power, but TU Electric officials called in extra crews from other towns and summoned off-duty workers back from their planned holiday weekends in an attempt to clear up the worst power outage since the ice storm of 1979.

About 100 crews worked on Tuesday, restoring power in a block-by-block manner, a situation that has left some of the residents angry because they believe power is being restored faster in areas where wealthier residents live.

Poldi Tonin, a resident of Lakewood Heights, complained that TU Electric workers restored power to Lakewood, where residents are wealthier, before coming to her area.

"They were taking trees out of people's front yards in Lakewood, but in Lakewood Heights, they wouldn't even take trees out of the street," she said.

"They (Lakewood residents) have got money; we don't have money," she said, saying "financial discrimination" in the repair project.

Utility spokesman David Fiorelli said that TU Electric has heard the complaints but said it is not true.

"We just don't do business that way," he said. "We do hear that and have heard it before. I kind of understand why people would get so irritated. It's hot and it's muggy. But our crews are working under the same conditions our customers are."

And in Denton County, officials say recent severe storms have created havoc for the egret population, leaving hundreds of them either dead or homeless.

And 260 baby egrets were placed in a bird rehabilitation center because their nests were destroyed.

Dona Batchelor, who runs the center in Arlington, described the situation with the egrets as "overwhelming."

"There are dead birds hanging everywhere," Ms. Batchelor said. "We took everything on the ground that couldn't get back up, all the fledglings that couldn't fly. And we took them out of any nests we could reach, the ones that were dehydrated."

"We actually got some that had just hatched from eggs that the storm had knocked out of the nests," she said.

After two soaking visits from Tropical Storm Allison, some of the flood refugees could manage a little humor Tuesday as they spent the holiday away from the homes.

"I got about four or five acres, beautiful St. Augustine grass ... catfish jumping out of it now," chuckled B.E. Hoffman, 64, who lives in the Knights Forest subdivision but is staying at motel in Liberty.

The remnants of Allison have finally moved out of Southeast Texas, but the high water in Liberty County has barely receded.

Allison caused an estimated $1 billion in damage in Texas alone, officials have estimated.

Officials have cut back released into the Trinity River from Lake Livingston, but the low-lying subdivisions remained under water for the holiday.

The Livingston dam last Saturday was releasing water at a rate of 73,700 cubic feet per second into the Trinity River. The release was down to 62,700 cfs on Tuesday, allowing a small drop in the flood level, said Liberty County Sheriff's Deputy Lin Pruitt.

A foot of water covered Hoffman's yard and home, which is three miles from the river. Hoffman said a road leading to the subdivision was five feet deep in water in some places.

The town of Dayton Lakes, where 200 live, was still accessible solely by boat, she said.

"Some of them have got five or six inches of water in the house and they're staying in it," said Larry Fontenot, chief of the Hardin Volunteer Fire Department.

"We have electricity and phone," said Sally Clay, who left her Knights Forest home a week ago. "Some of the houses aren't that lucky."

Mrs. Clay said the road in front of her house is under four feet of water, but her home, which is on a hill, is dry.

She estimates it will be another week before the water recedes enough to drive on the road. "It took three days for us to be able to drive in last time," Mrs. Clay said, referring to the May flood.

The ancient Greeks believed feeding snakes evergreen berries would destroy their venom. They stopped believing it after the snake bit them.

The body constantly produces new cells for the purpose of growth and repair-about 500,000 daily.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 18 years old. Two years ago, I was raped the night of the senior prom. It was my first experience with sex. When word got around school, I was called "strange" and "stupid" for not giving in to the guy. After all, he did take me to the prom. This was the way they put it. It's almost as if I owed him my body because he asked me out.

Not once was I ever viewed as the victim or told that it wasn't my fault. The reason? I knew him. He wasn't some stranger in an alley. The fact that I had a broken rib, a black eye and bruises didn't seem to make any difference.

For the last two years, I have been celibate. What is wrong with me? Nothing. I have many friends. I enjoy sports and reading. I work full time and go to night school in order to get a college degree. All this at 18.

Unfortunately, I'm afraid of sex. So, according to society, this makes me peculiar. No name, please. I could be your niece, your cousin or your next-door neighbor. Just call me--An "Oddball" in Michigan.

DEAR MICHIGAN: When a woman is forced to have sex against her will, it is rape, whether it happened on a date or in a back alley. The fact that the guy took you to the prom means nothing.

Why in the world haven't you had counseling? This should have been done at once. And did you file charges? It doesn't sound like it.

The shame, guilt and rage at being violated will continue to be a crippling force in your life until you get it talked out. I urge you to get counseling at once.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: There are stories circulating in Decatur, Ill., that the head of Procter &

Gamble appeared on a talk show ("Donahue," I think) and boasted that early in life he sold his soul to Satan in exchange for financial success.

It is further alleged that he said Satan kept the bargain and now that he is enormously wealthy he has organized a Church of Satan, which he supports.

He is said to have boasted that the symbol of Satan is carried on all Procter & Gamble products (a half-moon with stars above). When asked if he feared a boycott by God-fearing persons, they say he replied, "No these people are spineless and don't have the guts to do anything about it."

I didn't see the show and don't know anyone who did. Can you enlighten me? This is tearing our small community apart.--Sandy M.

I used to be like that until my mother said, "See a penny, pick it up and all the day you'll have good luck. See a penny, let it lay and you'll have bad luck all the day."

I've never been superstitious, Ann, but from the day Mom recited that little poem I have never passed up a penny--just to make sure.--Fingers Crossed in Modesto, Calif.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR READERS:

A while back we shared some suggestions on how to get the most from batteries. We recently received some more helpful tips from a leading battery manufacturer and want to pass them along.

Did you know that if you keep loose batteries in your purse and they come in contact with coins or other metal objects, they can short out? Keeping extra batteries is a good idea, but store them in a dry area under normal temperature conditions.

When replacing the batteries in an object, replace all of them. Never mix different types of batteries, like zinc carbon with alkaline.

With some objects like smoke alarms it is difficult to tell when the batteries need to be replaced or how long it's been since you put in new batteries. A favorite Heloise hint is to replace the batteries once a year on your birthday.

When batteries are worn out and no longer work, take them out and dispose of them properly. One note of caution: Never throw batteries in a fire -- they could explode. If batteries are left in any type of battery-operated object, they could rupture and leak and ruin the object and possibly even leak onto surrounding items.

Always read the manufacturer's instructions on the proper insertion of batteries. If an object doesn't work after replacing the old batteries, check to see if the positive and negative terminals are in the right positions. -- Heloise

If some of the residue remains, you may need to use a swatch of nylon net or a nylon scrubbing pad to remove it. -- Heloise

MEDICINE CHEST SAFETY

Dear Heloise: On occasion we have grandchildren at our house and I always worried that they could get into the medicines in the bathroom medicine cabinet. So I came up with an idea.

We have sliding mirrors on the cabinet and I put some dowel pins -- round wooden sticks -- in the mirror track to keep the mirrors from opening. The pins I used were about 12 inches long. They can be purchased at hardware stores for under $1.

I hope this hint helps other grandparents and relatives to feel safe, knowing they have done their best to protect those precious little tikes. -- John J. Sexton, St. Louis, Mo.

At first glance this sounds OK, but my concern is that a child who is old enough to crawl up on a counter is probably smart enough to pull the dowel pins out of the track.

It would be much safer to move the medicines completely out of reach.

Evert, Navratilova advance to semifinals at Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - Two points from defeat against unheralded Laura Golarsa, Chris Evert realized where she was and that she might never return.

It wasn't how the 34-year-old American wanted to end an 18-year success story at Wimbledon.

"I thought, 'This isn't the way I would like to go out of the tournament,'" Evert said Tuesday. "Certainly, if it would be my last year, which probably it would be, it would not be the way to go out."

Inspired by that notion, Evert cracked a trademark two-handed backhand down the line. On the next point, Golarsa missed a volley. In a flash, a match Evert had no chance of winning was hers for the taking.

And she took it.

"I certainly never thought I was going to win that match," Evert said after a 6-3, 2-6, 7-5 victory that put her into the semifinals for the 17th time in 18 years after her greatest comeback at Wimbledon.

Action switched to the men's quarterfinals today, with John McEnroe first up on Centre Court against Mats Wilander, followed by Tim Mayotte against defending champion Stefan Edberg.

On Court No. 1, Ivan Lendl was pitted against unseeded American Dan Goldie, followed by Boris Becker's meeting with surprise quarterfinalist Paul Chamberlin.

Evert was joined in the women's semifinals by her old friend and rival, Martina Navratilova, defending champion Steffi Graf and unseeded Swede Catarina Lindqvist.

Navratilova, edging closer to a record ninth Wimbledon singles title, overpowered Gretchen Magers 6-1, 6-2. Graf avenged her French Open final defeat by Arantxa Sanchez, beating the 17-year-old Spaniard 7-5, 6-1, and will play Evert in the semifinals.

Lindqvist ended the run of Ros Fairbank, who had beaten two seeds. The South African lost 7-5, 7-5.

Navratilova, who shares the record of eight Wimbledon singles titles with Helen Wills Moody, said she didn't want to discuss breaking it - yet.

"If and when I win the semis, I will be happy to talk about the finals," Navratilova said. "I can't say it enough ... you cannot look ahead. If you start looking ahead, you will find yourself packing your bags and going home before you get there. There's no point."

Graf, beaten in three sets in Paris by Sanchez, avenged that defeat easily and hasn't dropped a set on her way to the semifinals.

The Spanish teen-ager, whose bubbly personality endeared her to the crowd, served for the opening set at 5-4 but was broken at love and thereafter struggled on the grass.

Instead of repeating the passing shots that stunned Graf in Paris, Sanchez was hurried into errors. She scurried and scampered for every ball, but this time it wasn't enough.

"She played much better than she did at the French Open," Sanchez said. "She played incredibly. I couldn't do anything."

Graf wasn't so sure of her performance.

"This match was nothing special," the 20-year-old West German said. "I can play much better."

So can Evert. The American eteran, who has won the title three times but not since 1981, looked beaten against Golarsa, ranked 87th in the world.

Playing a perfect serve-and-volley game after shedding her early nerves, Golarsa had Evert in dire trouble and led 5-2 in the final set, then 5-3, 30-0 on serve.

"She was playing so well that I didn't know what to do," Evert said.

"I was wondering in the third set, 'Do I have enough in reserve to pull this match out?' Because I pulled out so many matches in my career, or was there nothing there?"

To her credit, and relief, Evert found something there. After getting back to 30-30, her ripping backhand pass put her up 30-40. She broke serve for 5-4, breathed again and didn't lose another game.

"The last four games, I played the best I have the whole tournament," Evert said. "I don't think she choked or lost the match as much as I won it."

Golarsa said Evert's comeback didn't surprise her. "That's why she's Chris Evert," the Italian said. "With Evert, it is never over."

SI: NFL drug problem not that bad

NEW YORK (AP) - The NFL's drug problem is not as serious as the league makes it out to be, according to Sports Illustrated.

In this week's issue, the magazine said the NFL has turned up "scant evidence" of illicit drug use by players but deliberately gives the impression it has a serious problem because it wants to maintain its strong antidrug policy.

Sports Illustrated said it "has turned up widespread irregularities, inconsistencies and misrepresentations in nearly every facet of the NFL's drug program. League officials have misstated the dimensions of drug use among players ... depending on their public relations needs of the moment."

"They have seldom bothered to distinguish between players who are addicted and those who have used drugs recreationally."

NFL spokesman Joe Brown reacted to the story by saying: "Sports Illustrated has criticized our office in the past for not doing enough to address the drug issue. Now, they apparently are claiming that the NFL drug problem is not that serious. Editorial consistency evidently is not one of the magazine's virtues."

The magazine says a "probable explanation" for the NFL not divulging its low numbers of positive tests is that "to justify its brass-knuckles drug policy, the NFL needs to give the impression that drug use by players is widespread.

"The NFL has seized upon the perception that professional sports has a drug problem, and has used that perception to try to improve the league's image and to manipulate players. The NFL tests players and retests them and suspends them and releases their names and the public assumes that Rozelle & Co. mean business about drugs."

Sports Illustrated said it has seen figures that 6.5 percent of all NFL players tested positive for cocaine, marijuana, alcohol and other drugs (except anabolic steroids) in preseason 1986 and 9.6 in preseason 1987.

However, it said that most positive tests were for over-the-counter medications or alcohol, adding that only 0.7 percent tested positive for cocaine in 1986 and 0.8 percent in 1987. The figures for marijuana were 1.8 and 1.6 percent, respectively.

"The unavoidable conclusion is that NFL officials fear publicizing the figures because then they might have trouble justifying their drug-testing program," the article says.

The NFL is the only league that tests all players for drugs. Since 1982, players have been subject to urinalyses in training camp, as well as unannounced follow-up tests when there is "reasonable cause" to believe a player is using drugs.

Last year, the NFL suspended 24 players for alleged involvement with cocaine, marijuana or alcohol, more than the total number of athletes suspended by major-league baseball, the NBA, the NHL and the Winter and Summer Olympics.

Sports Illustrated said its report was based on transcripts of hearings and court proceedings in NFL drug cases and on interviews with players, agents, team doctors, National Football League Players Association officials and drug experts, as well as information provided by former employees of Dr. Forest Tennant Jr., the league's drug adviser.

Hartford Open draws few big names

CROMWELL, Conn. (AP) - Defending champion Mark Brooks, rebounding after a sluggish start on this year's PGA Tour, leads a field of 156 pros into the $1 million Greater Hartford Open at the Tournament Players Club of Connecticut.

Mark Calcavecchia, Chip Beck, Scott Hoch, Mark O'Meara, Paul Azinger, Ben Crenshaw, Lee Trevino and Fuzzy Zoeller are among those expected to tee off on Thursday. But 48 of the top 100 money-winners will skip the tournament, preferring instead to start their preparations for the British Open, the season's third major tournament, which begins July 20.

Late entries for the Hartford event include two-time U.S. Open winner Hale Irvin, former PGA champion Hal Sutton and 1986 Hartford winner Mac O'Grady.

Tournament officials said the par-71, 6,786-yard course is in good condition, although a bit of rain would help level out conditions on all the putting greens. Eight of the greens are more than 60 years old, but the other 10 are only 6 years old.

Brooks, 28, won last year's $126,000 first prize when he sank a 10-foot birdie putt on the second playoff hole.

Brooks faces formidable odds in trying to repeat. No player has repeated as Greater Hartford champion since the tournament began play in 1952 as the Insurance City Open at Wethersfield Country Club.

Brooks started this year slowly, missing six cuts in eight starts. But he found his stroke in the Canadian Open two weeks ago, finishing in a tie for fifth, his best placing of the year. That finish boosted his earnings this year to $93,230, 82nd on the PGA money list.

Missing from today's celebrity pro-am today was Sammy Davis Jr., the entertainer who attached his name to the tournament for 15 years before calling it quits last year.

"Everywhere I go, the first thing people ask is, 'Who's taking Sammy's place?'" Lydia Bartnik, celebrities chairwoman of the tournament, said. In fact, she said, no one is taking Davis' place.

Officials of the Greater Hartford Jaycees, which organizes and runs the tournament, said they miss Davis and his contributions, but that neither the mood of the tournament nor the attendance will suffer without him.

Daniel E. Kleinman, counsel for the tournament, said that Canon, whose initial five-year contract to sponsor the tournament ends this year, "will remain with the tournament as a sponsor."

FIRST THE SEED

Without a doubt, the one thing that determines the outcome of any crop is the seed that you put into the ground. Good seed produces a good crop - bad seed fails you.

We believe that insect and disease problems this last year have created a need to look at the crops and varieties you plant and your harvest intentions.

TAM 200; a new release from Texas A & M that appeared very promising in limited trials.

TRITICALE; for known grazing or graze-out acreage - triticale showed less damage from insects & disease than wheat in 1988.

Armas' ninth-inning homer sends Angels past Texas, 5-3

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) - The California Angels have hit almost as many home runs as any team in baseball, but their team leader doesn't even rank in the American League's top 15.

The Angels once again demonstrated that their power deserves respect Tuesday night as Jack Howell hit a two-run homer in the third and Tony Armas had a three-run shot in the ninth, giving California a 5-2 victory over the Texas Rangers.

The two homers raised California's total to 73, one less than the major league-leading New York Mets.

"The great thing about it is that we don't even have anyone among the league leaders," Manager Doug Rader said. "Everyone is contributing. I can't fathom us winning too many games without home runs."

Supporting that feeling is the Angels' 2-12 record since mid-May in games in which they have not homered.

California certainly couldn't have won Tuesday without the long ball.

Howell's 10th homer kept the Angels in the game against Kevin Brown, 7-5. Armas then hit his sixth homer for the victory that moved California within one-half game of AL West leader Oakland.

Armas got his chance when Chili Davis, who leads the Angels with 11 homers, drew a two-out intentional walk after Wally Joyner had doubled with one out and moved to third on an infield grounder by Brian Downing. "I saw breaking balls all night, and I expected a breaking ball again," said Armas, who lined a high slider on an 0-and-1 count over the left-field fence.

"This was my biggest hit in a long time," Armas said. "The last two years, I haven't played regularly. I'm not satisfied with that, but I'm pretty happy now."

"There was no other choice," Texas manager Bobby Valentine said of his decision to walk the switch-hitting Davis. "Sometimes it works, and sometimes it doesn't. Kevin hung a slider to Armas and got hurt because of it."

The intentional walk was the only one of the game for Brown, who struck out seven while going the route for the sixth time in 16 starts.

"I've got no excuses. It was just a bad pitch," Brown said. "You can't throw anyone that pitch and expect to get him out."

Willie Fraser, 2-4, earned the victory after replacing starter Mike Witt at the start of the seventh.

Witt squandered his early 2-0 lead by allowing Steve Buechele's RBI double in the fifth and Julio Franco's run-scoring single in the sixth. That was Franco's 61st RBI, tying him with teammate Ruben Sierra for the league lead.

The game at Anaheim Stadium drew 62,390, the largest crowd of the season in the major leagues.

Scott notches 14th win as Houston routs Mets, 10-3

HOUSTON (AP) - It didn't take long for Houston Astros pitcher Mike Scott to realize that becoming the first major league pitcher to win 14 games this season was within reach.

The Astros sent 13 men to the plate in the first inning and scored 8 runs enroute to an easy 10-3 victory over the New York Mets Tuesday afternoon.

"I was just trying to throw strikes with that big lead. I just wanted to let them hit the ball to someone. If I'd had gotten into a jam I would have had to pitch differently," Scott said.

"I'm just in the right slot in the rotation and I'm getting a lot of run support," Scott said. "I think I pitched just as good in '86 and last season, but this season if I give up two runs we score three and if I give up three we score four," Scott said.

It also didn't take long for Mike Ojeda, 5-8, to realize it wasn't his day as he gave up 8 runs and 6 hits in 23 of an inning.

"I had a bad day. I don't get the credit when I am good but when I am bad I get the headlines," said Ojeda. "This one is over and I am looking forward to the next one."

It was the eighth time his last nine decisions that Scott has won to boost his record to 14-4 and it's the earliest in his career that he has won 14 games.

In 1986, for example, he didn't win his 14th game until Aug. 29, but he went on to win the Cy Young Award that season.

"You have to feel like you're going to win every time you go out there when you're on a streak like this year," Scott said.

Scott allowed five hits, walked one and struck out seven in eight innings. Juan Agosto got the final three outs, striking out the side.

Terry Puhl led the Astros' attack with a single, double, triple in three at-bats and three RBIs, but Rafael Ramirez' two-run double was the big blow in the first inning outburst.

In the first inning the Astros also got singles by Bill Doran, Ken Caminiti, Puhl, and a two-run single by Gerald Young.

Houston scored the final run of the inning on a balk by reliever Kevin Tapani. The Astros made it 9-0 in the fourth on a RBI triple by Puhl.

The Mets cut the lead to 9-2 in the fifth. Tim Teufel doubled for the first hit off Scott in the fifth inning and scored on Mackey Sasser's triple. Sasser then came home on a groundout by Kevin Elster. The final New York run came in the sixth on a RBI double by Mark Carreon.

Mets manager Davey Johnson said the Mets just couldn't get anything going against Scott.

"We gave them an eight-run cushion and all Scott had to do was throw strikes," Mets manager Davey Johnson said. "We really didn't make him work too hard. I don't think he threw anything but fast balls after the first inning."

Kansas City pounds Athletics, 10-1

By The Associated Press

Bo Jackson is halfway to joining Jose Canseco in the 40-40 club. Not that it makes any difference to the Kansas City outfielder.

"To hell with 40-40 - you all are more concerned about it than I am. I'm just playing baseball," Jackson said Tuesday night after homering twice to lead the Royals past Oakland 10-1.

At the season's midway point, Jackson has 20 home runs and 20 steals.

"I wouldn't call it dumb," Jackson said of 40-40 speculation. "but it's blown out of proportion by the press. If I don't do it, the sun's going to rise tomorrow somewhere. I just go out there and play ball. And as a baseball player, I'm not satisfied with the way I'm playing."

Bret Saberhagen, 8-4, won his fifth consecutive decision, allowing five hits in seven innings and striking out a season-high 11.

In other games, New York beat Detroit 1-0, California beat Texas 5-2, Baltimore beat Toronto 8-0, Cleveland beat Chicago 3-2, Milwaukee beat Boston 4-3 and Seattle beat Minnesota 3-2.

Matt Young, 0-2, gave up four runs and five hits and walked five in three-inning.

Yankees 1, Tigers 0

Don Schulze, promoted from the minors earlier in the day, allowed six hits in seven innings for his first major-league victory since July 20, 1987, with the New York Mets.

Tom Brookens, who, like Schulze, played in the Detroit organization last season, singled home the only run in the fourth inning off Frank Tanana, 7-8.

Orioles 8, Blue Jays 0

Dave Schmidt pitched a perfect game for 6 1-3 innings and Cal Ripken drove in three runs in the SkyDome. Mark Williamson finished the combined two-hitter with 2-2-3 innings of hitless relief for his seventh save.

Schmidt, 8-7, lost the perfect-game bid when Tony Fernandez beat out a bunt single down the first-base line.

Dave Stieb, 7-5, allowed five hits in six innings, struck out five and walked four.

Indians 3, White Sox 2

Luis Aguayo hit his first home run of the season and Scott Bailes, 4-3, won for the third time in four starts, allowing two runs and six hits in seven innings. Doug Jones got three outs for his 20th save in 23 opportunities.

Melido Perez retired 11 consecutive batters from the second until Jerry Browne walked with two outs in the fifth. Aguayo then hit his first home run since he had one for the New York Yankees against Bailes last Sept. 13.

Bailes held the visiting White Sox scoreless on four hits until the seventh, when Dan Pasqua hit a two-run homer.

Brewers 4, Red Sox 3

Paul Molitor snapped a 2-2 tie with a leadoff home run over the Green Monster in the eighth off Joe Price, 1-4. B.J. Surhoff added a sacrifice fly in the ninth for a 4-2 lead.

Chris Bosio, 8-5, allowed seven hits in 7 2-3 innings, struck out eight and walked three.

Mariners 3, Twins 2

Scott Bankhead, 7-4, allowed three hits and one run in 7 1-3 innings to win his fifth consecutive decision.

Mike Schooler pitched the ninth for his 18th save, allowing a run-scoring single to Al Newman. With the tying run on third and one out, Schooler struck out Tim Laudner and got Randy Bush on a flyout.

Reds' Browning almost perfect in win over Phillies

By The Associated Press

Tom Browning's game of concentration was almost perfect.

Browning came within three outs of becoming the first major leaguer to pitch two perfect games as the Cincinnati Reds beat the Philadelphia Phillies 2-1 Tuesday night at Veterans Stadium.

Dickie Thon hit a drive to right-center field that went to the wall for a double. One out later, Steve Jeltz got a pinch single to score Thon and chase Browning.

"I didn't think I had good stuff before the game. I told (catcher) Bo (Diaz)," Browning said. "I concentrated on every pitch."

Browning pitched a perfect game last Sept. 16 at Riverfront Stadium against Los Angeles. His gem against the Dodgers was the 14th perfect game of at least nine innings.

"We just sat there talking. We've all been in this situation together before. I tried to stay nice and relaxed," Browning said of the atmosphere in the dugout.

For eight innings, the Phillies were unable to find a hole in the Reds' defense or Browning's pitching.

"I was just trying to hit the ball hard somewhere. I hit it pretty good," Thon said. "When he gets in a groove like that, he's really tough with fastballs and changes. He pitched a great game."

Elsewhere in the National League it was Houston 10, New York 3; Chicago 5, San Diego 1; Pittsburgh 5, San Francisco 3; St. Louis 2, Los Angeles 1, and Atlanta 9, Montreal 3.

Browning, 29, said he didn't think of a perfect game until Von Hayes grounded out to end the seventh inning.

"I thought then that I might have a chance," the left-hander said.

Browning threw 80 pitches, 61 for strikes. John Franco relieved in the ninth and got the last two outs for his 22nd save.

The 1-hour, 44-minute game was the fastest in the NL this season. The previous was 1:48, last Thursday between Atlanta and Cincinnati.

Browning started that game, too.

The Reds scored two runs in the first off Terry Mulholland, 1-3, on RBIs by Kal Daniels and Paul O'Neill.

Cubs 5, Padres 1

Andre Dawson had three hits, drove in one run and scored another, leading Mike Bielecki and Chicago past San Diego.

Bielecki, 7-4, allowed no runs, five hits and struck out six in six innings. He left the game because of a bruised hip sustained when he was hit by Tony Gwynn's line drive in the third inning.

The victory ended a streak of six straight home losses for the Cubs, who scored three runs against Ed Whitson, 10-6, in the first inning and added two unearned runs in the third.

Pirates 5, Giants 3

Jose Lind and R.J. Reynolds drove in two runs each in a four-run fifth inning.

Randy Kramer, 3-4, allowed two runs in five innings to win his second consecutive start and beat former Pirate Don Robinson, who lost his second in a row after winning four straight.

Cardinals 2, Dodgers 1

Joe Magrane pitched a five-hitter for his third straight victory.

The Cardinals scored two runs in the first inning off Fernando Valenzuela, 4-7. Jose Oquendo followed Vince Coleman's double and 44th consecutive successful stolen base with a sacrifice fly. Ozzie Smith then doubled and scored on Pedro Guerrero's single.

Since coming off the disabled list on April 30, Magrane has a 7-4 record and a 1.85 ERA. Overall, he is 8-6.

Braves 9, Expos 3

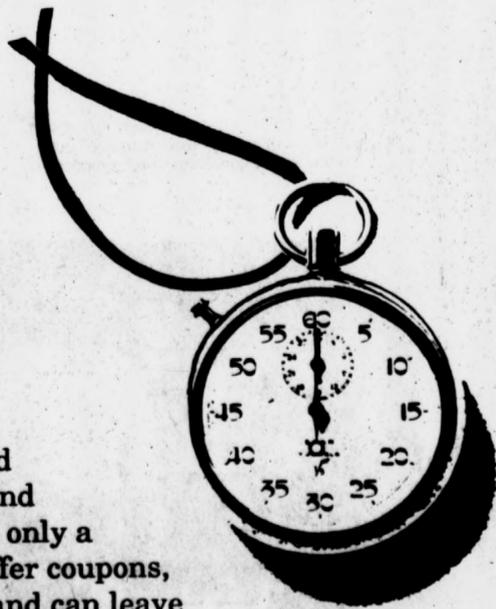

Jeff Blauser had four hits, including a two-run double in a five-run first inning.

Starter Marty Clary, 2-0, allowed seven hits, struck out two and walked none in five innings. Jim Acker pitched three innings and Mark Eichhorn got the last three outs.

Kevin Gross, 7-8, pitched 5 1-3 innings, allowing eight hits and seven runs.

John Deere dealership is family business in truest sense

'It takes a lot of work, money and faith to farm in Panhandle'

By ORVILLE HOWARD
Special Feature Writer

Raymond White talks about his farm equipment as most folks would speak of a next door neighbor or perhaps a backyard pet.

"We have friendly farm equipment," said White, as he slapped the side of a giant threshing machine. "And along with being friendly, it runs like a Deere."

White has spent a lifetime selling and servicing John Deere, a name that has become as American as apple pie. And since bygone days of the legendary "Popping Johnny", White has followed the green line... from the turnrows to the showrooms. "My parents never owned a tractor," recalled White, while speaking of his boyhood days on a Texas Panhandle farm. "Even though the tractors were all around, Dad just sort of stayed with the horses."

Long ago, White lost track of the number of tractors or combines his dealership has sold or the thousands of country runs to repair a crippled rig. But at one time or another he has been directly involved in John Deere dealerships in Hereford, Friona, Vega and Amarillo, an area that touches portions of a dozen Texas counties.

Farm business is big business out at the White Implement Co. on the north edge of Hereford on U.S. 385 where the John Deere dealership is a family operation in the truest sense of the word. White, with a son, Chris, and a son-in-law, Sid Shaw, form the family corporation that services the rich vegetable and grain production area of the Hereford region, along with the vast livestock feeding operations which, as oldtimers say, put icing on the cake.

"American agriculture was hit hard by nearly everything in the book in the 1980s but it is beginning to level out on a fairly good plateau," said White, who pointed out that this season is getting off to a better start than in 1988. "It looks like we're going to have a fairly good year despite the severe winter drought that took such a heavy toll on the wheat crop."

Gross sales at White Implement will tally out at nearly $3 million on an average yearly run with the most popular models being row-crop equipment designed specifically for the vegetable and small grains producer. Corn, cotton and grain sorghum have long been leaders in fiber and grain production of the Hereford region, with sugar beets, potatoes, onions and carrots on an equal basis in the vegetable lines of production. With this billion-dollar Hereford farm industry as a backdrop, White says the farmers are the real players in this giant game of agriculture where a single piece of farming equipment may cost as much as a comfortable urban homestead.

Money, Work, Faith

"It takes a lot of money, a lot of work and a lot of faith to farm in the Texas Panhandle," said White, who has been directly involved in John Deere sales for nearly 40 years. "But this land can promise less and give more than any country in the world."

White is not only proud to be an American living in Texas but also puts the city of Hereford in top priority when it comes to talking of the good things of life. "This is decidedly one of the finest places on earth to live where the people know how to enjoy the good times and make the best out of the bad times." Church work is also high on White's agenda of priorities, with he and his son-in-law both deacons in the First Baptist Church of Hereford. "We have great churches and fine church people here in Hereford."

The latest lingo of John Deere promotions is a catchy one-liner of "Friendly Machines"—a new term from the oldline that "Nothing Runs Like a Deere." Simplified descriptions with accelerated adjectives give the machines added dimensions in sales. The threshing machines, now billed simply as Maximizer Combines, are decked with air-conditioned and nearly soundproof cabs (only 80 dB-A) that's mighty close to a turnrow penthouse on wheels. Fingertouch controls handles everything from the 30-foot grain header to variable speeds to 18 miles per hour—there's no gears to shift or throttles to pull...a readout to tell where a bin or tank is empty or full.

"We're real proud of the John Deere line since we think it is the finest farm machinery ever built," said White, as he recalled how the old horse-drawn threshers gradually gave way to tractors and then the self-propelled rigs. "But you know it's kinda hard to believe, in the midst of all this modernization, but the old original threshing cylinders and concave bars have been improved on very little during the past 40 years. The threshing principal is still about the same as it was back much further.

The same principal also holds true for the plow. John Deere developed the first steel moldboard plow in 1837 in a small blacksmith shop at Grand Detour, Ill., where he hammered out the familiar moldboard curvature from a discarded circular saw blade. The self-scouring moldboard became so popular that he hammered out a thousand the first year. After developing something mighty close to assembly-line production, he moved his plow company to Moline, Ill., where in 1875 he surprised the agricultural world with a riding plow called the "Gilpin Sulky"—a two-wheeled, one-bottom plow pulled with a team of three horses. This invention, you might say, was the first giant step by mankind to get the American farmer off the ground.

'POPPING JOHNNY'

White is quite knowledgeable of the John Deere heritage and keeps one of the earliest models of the old John Deere walking plow on display in his dealership. He can recall every tractor by model and name since the beginning of the two-cylinder John Deeres that quickly became tagged as "Popping Johns". These first two-cylinder tractors ran on kerosene combustion. Then, when kerosene soared to a staggering 5 cents a gallon, John Deere went another step further in providing a water line from the radiator to the combustion chambers where—with the twist of a petcock—steam combustion was added to the petroleum combustion. This provided more power on a little less fuel, but the system was used mostly on the larger 40-horse Model D's designed for wheat farming.

He vividly recalled the farming era of the ever-popular John Deere As, Bs, Ds and Gs, and noted that if one of these older models can be found today in working condition, it would probably bring more than when it was new.

"It is really hard to find one of those older models for sale," said White. "And when you do find one, it's going to bring a pretty good price. Some are still in use and others are being picked up by the tractor collectors."

Though the older John Deere tractors of the Great Depression vintage would burn both kerosene or gasoline, kerosene was more popular because of the price and its safety factor. Kerosene does not produce the abundance of flammable vapor as gasoline. Following World War II, John Deere gradually shifted all tractors to gasoline engines and then introduced the diesels in the early 1950s.

The As and Gs sort of paved the way for the 60s and 70s and then came the 700 series—bigger and more refined...and once in a great while in those days of the 1950s, a tractor cab could be spotted, taking the place of the brightly-colored yellow umbrellas.

During this period of transition of the 1950s, the self-propelled combines pushed aside tractor-drawn rigs and the John Deere 55 combine became one of the most popular self-propelled harvesting machines of the day. Through the past 40 years of modernization in farm machinery, a White put it, John Deere has continuously stressed high-quality workmanship and simplicity in performance. "That's why we call it the friendly machine."

White's affiliation with the John Deere dealership in Hereford dates back to 1950 when White, his father-in-law, O.H. Herring, and a brother-in-law, Dean Herring, formed a three-way partnership to purchase the business from Bill Kerr and changed the name to H&W Implement Co. White and the Herrings at that time also operated the John Deere dealership in Friona and in 1955 White and his wife moved to Hereford to take over management of the Hereford operation.

Following the death of O.H. Herring in 1962, Dean Herring and White ran the Hereford business in a partnership and in 1963, White bought Herring's interests in the Hereford dealership and changed the name to White Implement Co. In 1972, Shaw bought in as a partner in the business and a couple of years later, White's son, Chris, joined the two to form a three-way corporation. Shaw is sales manager and Chris White is manager of a second John Deere firm in Amarillo—Texas Tractor and Equipment Co.

"The John Deere business has been very good to us over the years," said White, as he reflected on a lifetime in the business. "I guess it would be fair to say we've made lots of money and given most of it back in charities, church and other type of community work."

HUSTLE HEREFORD

This year is a little better than last but as we all know the 1980s have not been good to the farm industry."

But White is optimistic about the future of both, Hereford and the nation—"I think we've begun to recover but it hasn't been easy...maybe this upturn will continue as we move into the 1990s."

White was born at Lockney where his parents, W.H. and Myrtle White, operated a dryland farm. Originally from Kansas, the Whites moved on to Sudan when young White was in the first grade of school, and it was here that he was taught the basics of family and farming. Raymond was the youngest of 10 children and from day one in a close-knit family circle that followed the principals of the Golden Rule.

Served In Air Force

After graduation from high school at Sudan, White enrolled at Texas Tech but World War II delayed his graduation at Tech until 1947. He was assigned to the technical training division of the U.S. Air Force in Lubbock and Kentucky and remained state-side to the duration of the war. His wife, the former Avis Herring, also earned a degree in Economics at Texas Tech. The two met and married while blending lifestyles involving advanced education and a shooting war. A couple of decades later, the Whites' oldest daughter, Susan, (Shaw's wife) received a degree in Music Education at Texas Tech.

The Whites' second daughter, Sherry (Tally), was named Miss Hereford during her senior year at Hereford High School 1971 and later won the top talent award in the Miss Texas Pageant. A year later, while a student at Texas Tech, she was named Miss Lubbock and the same year was named second runner-up in the Miss Texas Pageant. Chris, after graduating from Hereford High School, attended one year at the University of Texas, then returned to Hereford to become a partner with his father and brother-in-law. He is now completing his degree at West Texas State University at Canyon while managing the Amarillo business.

Tragedy touched White's life as a senior in high school—his father died unexpectedly of natural causes, and the same year his mother was killed in a traffic accident. "I went to live with a sister and brother-in-law who lived there in Sudan," said White, in recalling that tragic year. "He was a farmer and it was then that I got to drive a tractor. Dad has always farmed with horses."

The Herrings had a farming operation near Amherst when Avis and Raymond were married in 1944 and when the John Deere dealership in Friona came up for sale, Herring and a son, D.C. Herring, made a lateral move in agriculture to purchase the Friona firm. After graduation from Texas Tech in 1947, White taught vocational agriculture at Littlefield for a year and in 1949, joined the Herrings in their John Deere business at Friona.

Shaw, a son of L.D. and Elsie Shaw, is also active in community projects and church work in Hereford and was one of the key leaders who spearheaded a million-dollar fund drive in the early 1980s to build the Hereford YMCA Center. He and his wife, Susan, have two children, Scott and Stephanie.

White has held almost all Lions Club offices on the local level, as well as serving as a district governor and serving on the board and as president of the Lions Crippled Children's Camp in Kerrville. He is also a former president of Deaf Smith County Chamber Of Commerce, and still serves on the board of the Regional Education Services Center in Amarillo. He was named Hereford's Citizen of the Year in 1974.

While attempting to show the end result of inflation at a turnrow level, White compared 1960 and John Deere row-crop tractor prices with 1989 models: "We sold the 1960 models of the 730 series for $4500—complete and ready to go to the field. Our row-crop tractors today, which of course are much larger and have more horsepower, sell for $70,000...twenty-nine years apart and many times the price. "The 730 series were the last two-cylinder tractors built by John Deere."

Great Resale Value

White said one of the main reasons he has stayed with the John Deere lines through the years is the resale value of the used tractors and equipment. "The John Deere records throughout the United States show that its resale value

Medal of Honor recipients not forgotten

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - For James W. Kenney, it's a most intriguing manhunt.

Over four years, Kenney, a FBI special agent for 18 years now based in San Antonio, has sought an army of American heroes, lost in time and in hundreds of quiet graveyards.

Their singular acts of valor in battles spanning more than a century earned them the Medal of Honor. But their final resting places make no mention. Their acts of bravery are all but forgotten.

"In a selfish way, it allows me to participate in history without being a part of history, to travel in time," Kenney said. "But I suppose the real motivation is that these people did something extraordinary at a tremendous sacrifice to themselves. They should not be lost to history."

Kenney has found the graves of 14 recipients in Texas, although the trail is sometimes hard to follow. For example, Simon Suhler, after his Civil War enlistment ended, used aliases twice to rejoin the Army. He received his Medal of Honor during the Indian War campaigns in North Texas and is buried at San Antonio National Cemetery.

In tracking down the San Antonio grave of David B. Barkley, who received the Medal of Honor posthumously in 1918, Kenney discovered that Barkley had hidden his Hispanic heritage - his mother was Antonia Cantu Barkley - with an Anglo name for fear Army officials would make him a laborer, not a warrior.

As a result, Barkley now is recognized as the Army's first Hispanic to be awarded the Medal of Honor.

All the recipients received the medal for acts of military valor "above and beyond the call of duty."

The Medal of Honor was instituted in 1863, and 3,394 medals were awarded through the Vietnam War.

Kenney, 51, a Vietnam War veteran who served in the Navy and Air Force, said he never knew much about the Medal of Honor until he came across the grave of a medal recipient in a small cemetery in San Antonio about four years ago while investigating a case for the FBI.

"Suddenly, here was history staring me in the face. I wanted to learn more," he said. But Kenney was amazed to learn there is no central depository of knowledge about Medal of Honor recipients.

According to Pentagon spokesman Maj. David Super, the paperwork of each award stays with the service branch - Army, Navy or Air Force - that issued it.

"All we have is a thick directory that gives the names, dates and citations for the award for the recipients of all services," Super said. "That's about it."

For Kenney, that didn't seem right. "It's as though you get the award and just fade away," he said.

Enter Raymond Collins, 69, of Alexandria, Va., a walking encyclopedia of Medal of Honor lore.

Collins, while assistant director of monument services at the Veterans Administration in Washington, helped design a special headstone for Medal of Honor recipients as part of the nation's bicentennial celebration in 1976.

Although the federal government provides the headstone free of charge, it does not seek out those eligible to receive it.

While working on the headstone project, Collins became fascinated by the stories of the Medal of Honor recipients. Retired since 1980, Collins, who served in the Army for 20 years and was a paratrooper during World War II and Korea, still goes daily to the National Archives to dig up more information on the lives, deaths and final resting places of medal recipients.

"There are 224 recipients still living. And of the 3,170 dead, we have found the final resting spots for all but 462," Collins said. "The problem is that the records are everywhere."

"I research maybe 12 to 15 files a day at the archives, and we're still finding something about these people," he said. "There's always something to learn."

Using Collins' research, Kenney has a list of about 60 Medal of Honor recipients buried in Texas. The battles in which they earned their medals span more than 100 years - from the Civil War to Vietnam.

"It's like conducting any investigation. You begin with what you know, then you begin beating the bushes, checking newspaper files, old city directories and family to gather more information," Kenney said. "Of course, some leads run a little cold after a hundred years or so."

Once he's found the burial site, Kenney arranges for the special commemorative, pays any cemetery fees and attempts to locate any descendants for a ceremony.

"Usually, I'm met with either indifference or suspicion. They think I'm a con man," he said. "But this doesn't cost them a penny. The government provides the headstone and I'll take care of the rest out of my pocket."

He estimated that the cost to him sometimes runs up to $100 per ceremony.

The ceremony is simple, dignified and brief, Kenney said. "I want it so it can be done by Boy Scouts or old men in ill-fitting uniforms providing the color guard," he said. "I try to find a preacher and someone to blow taps. It's all over in about 20 minutes."

The most recent was in Lubbock, Texas, on Memorial Day honoring Joseph F. Knight, a Medal of Honor recipient from the Indian War campaign, and Herman C. Wallace, who received his award posthumously during World War II.

Kenney also researches the life history of the medal recipient and photocopies any papers, records or other memorabilia that the family may have. He then writes a brief history and sends it to the archives of the Medal of Honor Society in New York.

"The lives of the people involved are more fascinating than the actual incident that got them the medal," Kenney said. "These were all very ordinary people. Some were bums and some were deserters. And most had a hard time dealing with the pressure of receiving the medal."

"But for one brief moment they rose above their own interests and did something monumentally brave that affected them, their fellow soldiers, their family and their country. For that, they should be remembered."

HUSTLE HEREFORD

has been greater than any other line of farm equipment."

John Deere has always concentrated on quality and even though the machinery keeps getting more complicated, the company still tries to keep the working machinery keeps getting more complicated, the company still tries to keep the working mechanism as simple as possible...I believe you will find that John Deere is the only farm equipment company in the United States that has never changed names or merged with another company."

Shaw pointed out that even though the 1989 row-crop lines cost many times more than those 30 years ago, the productivity is also much greater. "The tractors of the 700 series are still in use today but now they're used mostly for your smaller jobs such as digging and filling irrigation ditches or used in dirt work around the farm," said Shaw. "We're talking about a vast price difference but we're also talking about a vast productivity difference. The price span may coincide very closely with the productivity span."

Shaw noted that John Deere has introduced a new line of combines called the 9000 Series...Probably the 9500 is the most popular at this time. Levers have been replaced with push-button power controls with the cab as quiet as the average car. Accessories are nearly unlimited--CB radios, stereo radio, tapes or about anything known in the electronic field can be applied to the cab of a John Deere combine or tractor.

Though the row-crop models are most popular around Hereford, John Deere promotional say its new four-wheel drives are "breaking new ground and shattering old limits." In comparing John Deere's massive 8960 four-wheel drive tractor to the horse and double-tree era of earlier times, it would take 185 spans of horses hitched the length of nine football fields to equal the power of this green giant. An example in showing the enormity of the new combines, the grain bin filled to the hilt would have loaded the average bobtail farm truck of the 1940s.

Big Parts Inventory
Though White has overnight delivery on most John Deere equipment parts, he maintains a parts inventory in excess of $300,000--"We try to keep on hand what the farmers are going need but want without having to order it, but on ordering, most parts can be here on overnight service...we order out parts almost every day of the year."

The most popular row-crop tractors will run in the range of 175 to 200 horsepower around Hereford, but White noted that some of the smaller models are popular with their customers at the Amarillo store. "We have about four row-crop models and couple of four-wheel drive units that are very popular around here," he added.

White Implement Co. boasts one of the finest maintenance and service shops of the Panhandle, with six full-time service men. "We service everything we sell--from the lawnmower to the biggest combine manufactured by John Deere," said Shaw. "We believe we have the best mechanics there is, and all of our mechanics attend regular training sessions at the factory levels as changes are made or equipment updated."

Parts manager Weldon Roberson has been with White for more than 20 years and his assistant, Jay Manion, has been around the front counter for a decade or more. Service manager Dennis Vardeman is another long-time employee at White Implement--"Farmers around here know that Dennis understands John Deere equipment...he's been a great asset to our company."

White moved into his present dealership headquarters on U.S. 385 in the spring of 1975, coming from the 1400 block of East Park Avenue. "When I came here in 1955, the dealership was located right downtown across the street from the courthouse," said White. "There was also a creamery on the same street across from the courthouse at that time. We then built the building on Park Avenue and moved out there in 1957 and when we got sort of hemmed in, we moved out here on the highway."

He noted that margins of profit are much less than 30 years ago but the equipment seems to keep getting better. D.C. Herring and his son, Tim, still operate the John Deere dealership at Friona under the old family name of Herring Implement Co., but the family has sold all interests in the John Deere dealership at Vega.

"At one time in the early 1950s, I handled bookwork for the Herring Implement Co. at Friona, the H&W Implement Co. at Hereford and the Oldham County Implement Co. at Vega," said White, as he traced a bit of the family history. "We had partnerships back in those days rather corporations as we have today. Lloyd Glass was Mr. Herring's partner at Vega."

White Implement Co. is another success story of free enterprise at its finest...another family business that stands tall in Texas from a foundation built in the heart of Hereford.

Drum teacher turns lack of sticks into $2-million business

HOUSTON (AP) - Back in his high school days, all Herb Brochstein wanted was to become a professional drummer. He went one better.

Today Brochstein is drumming up business to the tune of $2 million a year in sales for Pro-Mark, his drumstick manufacturing company.

As a drum teacher and owner of a small Houston music store in the 1950s, Brochstein was dismayed by the quality of U.S.-made sticks that he says often were warped "almost like a banana."

Then a traveling salesman sold him a half-dozen pair of Japanese-made drumsticks. Those 12 pieces of wood became the inspiration for Pro-Mark.

"My goal wasn't to go into business," Brochstein recalls from his south Houston complex where production equipment turns out 80,000 pair of American hickory and maple drumsticks each day. "When I started in 1957, my object was to give customers a better drumstick."

Six months after he bought the Japanese sticks, Brochstein realized they could take a daily pounding and still produce a crisp sound. He decided to buy more to sell to his customers, but the salesman was nowhere to be found.

Brochstein, now 61, wrote the United States Chamber of Commerce and its equivalent in Japan, trying to find the maker of his special sticks.

"I came up with a big zero," he says. "They told me there was no drumstick manufacturer in Japan."

But then Brochstein got an advertisement in the mail for musical instruments, and through that vendor found a drumstick company outside Tokyo. The vendor told Brochstein he could buy a minimum import order of 1,200 pairs.

Since he usually purchased 300 pairs a year for his store, Brochstein asked three other local stores if they wanted to split the merchandise. No one was interested, so he bought them all himself.

Soon wholesalers wanted to buy them, and today Brochstein's company is the sole customer of a Japanese oak drumstick plant near Tokyo.

His business also expanded to production of American hickory and maple drumsticks.

At the present and newly expanded 14,000-square-foot factory in Houston, lathes shape wooden dowels into drumsticks, which are sanded twice and lacquered. The sticks are then buffed, graded as first- or second-quality drumsticks and imprinted with the Pro-Mark name.

"Many professional drummers prefer the weight and density and sound produced by hickory wood, plus that it's less expensive than imported oak drumsticks," Brochstein says.

Maple, softer and less dense, is favored by many symphonic drummers, he says.

How long a stick survives depends on the type of wood, how often it's used and how hard the drummer drums.

The sound it produces depends on the diameter and length of the stick, the size of the tip and tapered neck and the wood quality, as well as how the drummer holds it.

Pro-Mark counts among its customers Ed Shaughnessy of the Tonight Show, Debbi Peterson of the Bangles, Danny Seraphine of Chicago, Simon Phillips of The Who, and Phil Collins. Pro-Mark sells a Phil Collins line of drumsticks.

The only drawback of owning the business, he says, is that it keeps him away from his original ambition - being a drummer.

In junior high school, Brochstein says he wanted to play a clarinet. "But my mother couldn't afford it, so I played the drums. In high school, when most of the boys were interested in cars and girls, I was more interested in going home and practicing."

After graduating from high school, he studied in Chicago under Bobby Christian, working as a busboy and playing various gigs to make ends meet.

"I remember my mother's advice," Brochstein says. "She said I should be a plumber because plumbers would always be needed."

But she came around once he opened a store and began playing professionally with popular bands, he says. "Once I was ... playing professionally on TV and having a business, then I think she was very proud of her baby."

Senator Bivins Reports

AUSTIN — The first week of the special session of the 71st Legislature was productive and strategically very interesting. A worker's compensation bill was introduced into the Senate State Affairs Committee by Senator John Montford and passed within one day. Negotiations went on virtually around the clock. One minute everything seemed to be going, and the next minute the wheels were off. Ultimately, on Friday, the Senate passed a worker's compensation bill.

While negotiations were feverishly ongoing in the Senate, Speaker of the House Gib Lewis and Lt. Governor Hobby worked out a fascinating strategy. The House voted House Bill 1 out of committee hours after the special session began. It was then referred to Calendar's Committee where, it was agreed, that it would be left until the Senate passed a bill.

The strategy was that the House would wait for the Senate Bill to come over so that the House could substitute provisions of House Bill 1 into the Senate Bill and then send it back to the Senate. Once the bill returned to the Senate, it would require only 16 votes to concur in the House amendments. If the House had passed its bill and sent it to the Senate, because of the Senate rules it would take 21 votes to pass. This strategy would make it easier to have a good worker's compensation reform bill voted out of the Senate.

Senate Bill 1, the worker's comp bill voted out on Friday, was far superior to the worker's comp bill passed by the Senate in the regular session. I came close to voting for the bill, but my ultimate decision to vote no was based on the following analysis.

On the positive side, the Senate Bill limits "doctor to doctor shopping". Under the current law, an injured worker can go to doctor after doctor until he finds one who will give him the diagnosis he wants. The Senate Bill prevents the abuse of the system.

The Senate Bill also provides an employer's bill of rights. This bill of rights among other things, enables the employer to be involved in claim dispute hearings.

The Senate Bill prohibits lump sum settlement of medical benefits. This is an area that creates numerous problems under the current law.

To its credit, the Senate Bill also provides incentives in terms of rate reduction for employers who have good safety records and penalties in terms of rate surcharges for those employers with poor safety records.

The Senate Bill would allow groups of businesses to ban together and purchase group worker's compensation coverage. It also allows insurance companies to reduce premiums by as much as 25% from State Board of Insurance promulgated rates. This should encourage more competitive rate making.

The Senate Bill goes a long way to get at the serious problem of medical costs containment in the worker's compensation system.

Finally, while not doing away with a jury trial, the Senate Bill does do away with trial de novo. After an injured worker has exhausted a series of administrative hearings, he will be allowed to appeal an award to a jury trial. However, throughout the administrative appeals process and through the judicial appeal, the rules of evidence are strictly limited. I believe that these new rules address 80% of the problems created by trial de novo under the current law.

On the negative side, the Senate Bill makes worker's compensation insurance coverage mandatory in the State of Texas. In fairness, the interim committee on worker's compensation recommended mandatory coverage; however, they also recommended total elimination of trial de novo and creation of an impairment system, neither of which were provided for in the Senate Bill. Forcing businesses to purchase worker's compensation insurance after rates have increased by over 150% in 4 years, will result in massive violations of the law in many businesses closing their doors.

The Legislative Budget Board's estimate of the cost to implement the Senate Bill was $109.4 million for the next two year period. While most agree that it will take a lot of money to beef up the agency that will enforce the worker's comp reforms, this amount appeared excessive.

The Senate Bill would allow the Texas Department of Health to require employer compliance with safety plans and penalize employers for noncompliance. This provision of the bill, in my view, creates a new Texas OSHA, which is the last thing we need.

It is also my opinion that the Senate Bill makes no real change in the area of lump sum settlements for income benefits. This is an area that was identified by the interim committee as an area needing serious reform.

Finally, my efforts to amend the Senate Bill to include deductible policies were unsuccessful. This was despite evidence from the State Board of Insurance that a $10,000 deductible could eliminate 44% of the losses suffered by an insurance company. If losses make up some 65% of the rate formula, it is clear that deductibles could have a dramatic impact on rates.

I had to consider all of these factors as well as many others in making up my mind on how to cast a vote that would best represent the views of my constituents. My ultimate decision to vote no reflects my belief that while this Senate bill is far better than the bill passed by the Senate during the regular session, we still could have done better.

Moist, chewy and chock-full of flavor and energy.

- GOOD-FOR-YOU BROWNIES
1/2 cup all-purpose flour
1/2 cup whole-wheat flour
1/4 cup unsweetened cocoa powder
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
1/4 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 cup shortening
1/2 cup sugar
1 egg
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 cup milk
3/4 cup pitted whole dates, snipped
2-3rds cup granola

In a medium bowl stir together flours, cocoa powder, baking powder and baking soda. In a large mixer bowl beat shortening and sugar until fluffy. Add egg and vanilla; beat until combined. Add flour mixture alternately with milk to egg mixture, mixing well after each addition. Stir in dates and 1-3rd cup of the granola. Spread in a greased 9- by 9- by 2-inch baking pan. Sprinkle remaining granola over top. Bake in a 375-degree F oven 20 minutes. Cool. Cut into bars. Makes 12.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: From reading your column I now realize that I am not the only person who has profuse sweating of my hands and feet. I would like to know what type of doctor to see about this.

I am a 30-year-old male and the problem is getting worse. Your column has given me hope and motivation to find a solution. That is how I learned that there are medicines and even surgery for this problem.

DEAR READER: Everyone should have a family doctor. Your doctor can route you to a specialist if he thinks it is necessary. There are many causes for excess sweating, and it is wise to have a general medical examination as a first step.

Sweating really is controlled by the number of sweat glands, their location and their control by your nervous system — which definitely includes the brain. One of the ways to control your body temperature is to turn on your heat-loss mechanism, which includes evaporative cooling by sweating. The soles of your feet have the highest concentration of sweat glands and it is not surprising that many people have a problem of excess perspiration of the feet.

It would help you to know what factors normally increase sweating so you can control these and help to limit your problem. I have discussed these in my new Special Report 99, About Sweating and Body Odor, which I am sending you. Others who want this report can send $1 with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER 99, P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713.

In addition to control of your habits, medicines, surgery and anti-perspirants, some people benefit from a process called iontophoresis. This results in passing a very small current through the skin where the sweat glands are producing excess amounts of perspiration. The electric current eventually inactivates a major portion of the glands and helps to control sweating. A recently developed device to do this can be used at home — under the arms, for the feet or for the hands. It is the Dronic instrument. I have discussed these developments in the report I am sending you.

Don't overlook the role of emotional stress as a factor. The seat of emotions is in the hypothalamus of the brain, very near to the center that controls body temperature and sweating. That is why some people may start sweating during stress.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I have been around since 1904. My current worry is that I get a bruise from the slightest bump on my hands or forearms. The hematologist here took a platelet count. It was 350,000. He prescribed large doses of vitamin C several months ago, but I see no change in the bruising. The doctor said one had to expect that sort of thing in old age. I'd appreciate your comment.

DEAR READER: When you bruise easily it is wise to have your blood clotting mechanisms checked. Your platelet count is quite normal. I'm sure the hematologist would have looked for the other factors related to blood clotting that would be important. But I must ask if you take aspirin regularly, which can be a factor. A low vitamin C level can also be important.

As you get older, the skin gets looser because it continues to grow. A lot of the support structures under the skin thin and it is easy for the skin to be moved a considerable distance. As it moves, it pulls and tears small blood vessels that leak and cause a bruise. This cause of bruising is relatively common and not dangerous to your health.

DEAR DR. LAMB: My 10-year-old daughter has an exercise-induced rash. During aerobics she breaks out in a blotchy red rash that itches severely. She has been physically active most of her life, but this problem began to occur recently. Cooling down, soda bath and Benadryl all relieve the symptoms. Is there anything we can do to prevent them altogether?

DEAR READER: Your daughter is probably allergic to exercise. That happens. Just how or why is not clear, but it is another allergy. You probably should take her to an allergy specialist.

There are several approaches to managing exercise allergy. One is to limit one's exercise level to below the point at which the allergic reaction occurs. Then there are the various allergy medications, including antihistamines such as Benadryl. Cromolyn sodium, inhaled before exercise to prevent allergic asthmatic attacks, may be useful.

Often individuals who have an exercise allergy are also allergic to some food. The combination of the offending item and the exercise causes the reaction. In these cases, eliminating the offending food may permit more exercise without a reaction.

Dr. Lamb welcomes letters from readers with health questions. You can write to him at P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713. Although Dr. Lamb cannot reply to all letters personally, he will respond to selected questions in future columns.

The giant among water lilies, the Victoria regia, has leaves six to seven feet in diameter, broad and firm enough to bear the weight of a child.

Here's An Idea That Can Strengthen Your Family

Tonight at the dinner table, read something out loud to your family. Tomorrow night, let another member read something. A news story. A Bible verse. A Robert Frost poem. A cereal box panel. History. Humor. Anything. Each night a different family member can read a selection. Imagine the wide range of subjects your family will read in 365 days. What a stimulating way to have your children develop good reading habits. We have 23 million illiterate adults in America. We wouldn't have one, if each of them had been served reading as part of their nightly diet. It's non-fattening, but enriching. And it doesn't cost a dime.

Tomato Sauce Omelet

Spoil dad on his special day with breakfast in bed. Serve this tangy tomato egg dish on a tray with a newspaper alongside. Plump up his pillow and let him feel like a king.

- 2 egg whites
- 1 whole egg
- 1 tbsp. cold water
- 1 tsp. dash tabasco sauce
- 1 tbsp. margarine
- 1/4 cup tomato sauce, heated

Beat eggs, water and seasonings with a fork until light and foamy. Place omelet pan over medium heat. Add margarine and swirl around in the pan until melted.

Pour egg mixture in quickly. With one hand move the pan back and forth while stirring eggs in a circular motion with a fork held in other hand. Do not scrape the bottom of the pan.

When the omelet is almost cooked, add heated tomato sauce, then fold the omelet over by elevating pan to a 45-degree angle. Roll omelet out onto a plate.

Yield: 1 Serving

Cooking Tip: Use only glass or metal containers for beating egg whites. Plastic retains fat and will interfere with foaming.

Sodium Tip: The sodium content in this recipe can be reduced by using unsalted tomato sauce and margarine.
