'Mickey Mouse' Arrangement, Says President

Reagan Raps Budget Process

WASHINGTON (AP) — As House budget writers resume their uphill search for a spending outline that can attract a majority, President Reagan is on the sidelines decriing the whole process as an "irresponsible, Mickey Mouse arrangement."

House Budget Committee Chairman James R. Jones, D-Okla., began trying to pick up the pieces Friday, suggesting that Democrats and Republicans "split the difference" on their budget arguments and offer the full House a bipartisan proposal.

Jones floated the idea during an informal meeting with more than a dozen members of the committee. The lawmakers also reviewed the problems that led to the defeat of all the budget alternatives brought to the House floor this week.

The budget writers will meet again next week following Congress' Memorial Day recess.

Speaking to reporters in California, Reagan, clearly frustrated over events, denied that House rejection of the budget plans — including one he supported — indicated a repudiation of his economic program.

"No, I don't think so," the president said. "But I will tell you one thing that I think has been made very clear. ... The United States government's program for arriving at a budget is about the most irresponsible, Mickey Mouse arrangement that any governmental body has ever practiced."

Reagan suggested that "some real solid thinking should be given now to a budgetary process that befits the great government of a great nation."

Despite Jones' offer, some legislators remain skeptical about whether a majority can be found for any proposal, given the divisions within the ranks of both parties.

"Politically there isn't any middle ground," said Rep. Timothy Wirth of Colorado, one of several Budget Committee Democrats who had tried unsuccessfully to forge a winning budget coalition with moderate Republicans.

Rep. Phil Gramm of Texas, a conservative Democrat and one of Reagan's budget allies, said Jones' compromise might not be enough for other conservatives.

Any successful budget proposal is "going to have to balance the budget in 1985" and have a deficit below $100 billion for 1983, Gramm said.

Jones said, "I would be willing to go up to, or very close to, the (Republican) position on defense. That would mean we would have to have savings in domestic programs by about $2 billion dollars. I would certainly be willing to make that offer."

"The revenue thing (new taxes) is very sensitive. But I would be willing to at least split the difference or greater on revenues," he added.

Hereford Officer Discusses Cases

'Pedophiliac' Is Nice Word For People Abusing Children

By JERI CURTIS
Staff Writer

Policemen have a lot of names for a person who sexually abuses children. Some can't be printed, but the official term is pedophiliac.

"It's a crime that doesn't get noticed," complains Lt. Vernon Hope of the Hereford Police Department, "because it doesn't get reported."

Although the cases are rare in Hereford, several child molestation and indecency charges have been filed within the past two months. Hope said he does not know why the upsurge, unless one reported case gives others courage to report another case.

Police have handled two exhibition cases and three fondling of a child cases in the past two months.

Hope said eight out of 10 cases involve a family member and usually involve a person the child is familiar with, in contact with daily.

Most of the child molesters just grew up that way Hope said, not having healthy relationships with adults and seeking children and relatives for attention.

Regardless of who is involved, Hope wishes that more incidents were reported so the sick ones could get off the street.

Balloon Club Brings Exercise To Hereford Sunday Morning

The balloonists are coming!

The Amarillo Balloon Club will meet in Hereford Sunday morning, according to Hereford club member Paul Conaway, and the public is invited to watch the activities.

The balloons will be going through their exercises at sunrise Sunday just east of the Allsup's store on S. Main Street. The site is just off Austin Road.

Conaway anticipated the action would start about 6:30 a.m. Sunday. He was not sure how many balloons the meeting would attract. Turbulent weather would, of course, cancel the meeting.

"It's embarrassing for the child and the parent," Hope explained. "But I would rather a kid be embarrassed for about a week than a whole lifetime."

"What they don't stop to realize is what that kid is going through, what it's doing to them. The child is feeling guilt, fear, rejection and trying to decide whether he was right in telling about it."

Hope said, "They are at a point in-between. They want to tell about it, but they don't want to."

He said children will often not tell parents about an incident because they feel a little guilty about it and are afraid of getting into trouble. Adding the child's embarrassment factor, Hope said parents often find out about the problem through a witness or by questioning a child.

"In a lot of cases parents find out without a kid telling them. Then the parents have to confront the child," Hope said.

Often, too, the parents think a child has made up a story.

"It would be rather hard for a six or seven-year-old to make up some of the stuff," Hope said, adding that parents should still report it

State Votes $150 Million For College Funding Bill

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — In a whirlwind special session, the Legislature eliminated a state college construction fund then voted to give 17 schools $151.5 million for buildings.

The special session began Monday and ended Friday night with passage of the college funding bill and an emergency prison construction appropriation, after both measures saw-sawed several times between House and Senate.

Gov. Bill Clements called the Legislature into session to repeal the state property tax, a constitutionally mandated levy that had provided money for buildings at state colleges that do not share in the Permanent University Fund.

The PUF funds construction at most University of Texas and Texas A&M system colleges.

Clements also asked the Legislature to give the 17 colleges that had relied on the property tax a "catch-up" fund to complete current construction projects and make repairs.

The property tax has not been collected since 1979, when legislators reduced it to a .001 percent assessment ratio. Midwestern State University sued the state to collect the tax, arguing the

British Seize Two Key Objectives

By The Associated Press

British troops seized two key objectives in the Falkland Islands, the settlement at Darwin and the airstrip at Goose Green, clearing the way for their pincer movement on Stanley, the islands' capital, the British Defense Ministry said.

The British announced on Friday afternoon the capture of Darwin, population 82, and the airstrip at Goose Green, the islands' second largest runway. They are about 20 miles southeast of the initial British landing area at Port San Carlos, and 50 miles west of Stanley.

An Argentine communique claimed Argentine troops repulsed the attack on Darwin and were still fighting around Goose Green. It said "army troops, supported by planes, forced the enemy back, totally recovering the territory, controlling the tactical situation, and obliging the enemy to retire toward the north."

Argentine communiques, however, have frequently exaggerated the success of Argentine forces during the undeclared war with Britain. Until it reported the fighting at Darwin, Argentina had claimed that the British landing force at Port San Carlos was quite small and completely hemmed in by Argentine troops.

British military spokesman Ian McDonald said the Gutter splints at night to keep his legs from constricting, he is still able to feed himself, assist with household chores, crawl and walk for short distances.

His most frustrating affliction is that he cannot talk. His motor movements needed for speech have been greatly affected.

A student at Shirley Elementary School, Keith has been working with Marge Bell, speech therapist for the Hereford Independent School District. Ms. Bell stated that because he has difficulty moving his tongue, it is hard for him to swallow and to form words.

With the assistance of an electronic communication aid, called the phonic mirror handivoice, Keith is able to communicate. He has been using the machine, with the aid of Ms. Bell, for approximately four weeks on a bi-weekly basis during regular school hours.

Two women were instrumental in acquiring the machine for Keith. Dana Taylor, speech pathologist for Region 16 of the Related Services Team out of Amarillo, was responsible for getting the machine on loan at the school.

Also, Dani Hemelstrand of Canyon, a case worker with the Texas Department of Health, knew of Keith's need and assisted with the coordination of the service.

The only drawback to the loan of the machine is that Keith is only able to use it during school hours and possibly during the summer session.

A fund has been established at the Hereford State Bank to help purchase a handivoice for his home use. The approximate cost is $3,000.

When using the device, Keith is able to access the machine by touching squares with the use of a finger guard. Although, his reading is limited, he is able to learn enough of the vocabulary to make simple sentences, answer questions with single words, initiate conversation and correct his choices.

He is able to locate his word choices fairly rapidly and Ms. Bell aids in his ability to select the squares by attaching small Peabody Rubes to correct squares.

Keith can use 45 signs, showing both motivation to use language and the ability to learn, retain and interact with symbols.

With the help of Ms. Bell, Keith gave a demonstration using the handivoice Thursday morning at the school. He seems to derive a great deal of self-satisfaction from performing well and exhibiting his newly-learned skills.

Ms. Lindell says the use of the machine was very encouraging to her. "It really sparked my enthusiasm. For Christmas Keith received a 'Speak and Read' and I think this helped him to adjust easily to the use of the handivoice."

Keith, even though he is afflicted, still has the interests of a typical 11-year-old. He is an avid television watcher and loves to ride his hot

Police Arrest 28 In Drug Bust

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The last day of classes took some students by surprise as police concluded a four-month undercover investigation and arrested 28 people for selling drugs in and around local high schools.

Police said Friday 28 people, including 13 students, have been charged with delivery or sale of various drugs including marijuana, hashish and LSD.

Investigators began rounding up the suspects at early Friday morning and by evening, 28 persons — 23 adults and five juveniles — had been arrested.

"I would emphasize that these arrests were for sale and delivery of drugs," said Police Chief Ed Rodriguez said. "We have concentrated on the dealer or 'pusher' this time not the user."

Capt. Guadalupe Dominguez, head of the police special investigations unit, said the undercover operation was prompted by "a combination of calls from parents and school officials and information picked up on the streets."

Most of the suspects lived within the vicinity of the schools where they allegedly sold drugs, Dominguez said.

Miss Texas Contest Moves To San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Young women in this year's Miss Texas-USA pageant will be competing with the beauty of the Alamo City instead of El Paso as promoters plan to move the contest to San Antonio's River Walk.

Promoters Rex Holt and Richard Gay of Gayrex Inc., in a San Antonio news conference Friday with the Visitors and Convention Bureau officials, did not disclose how much the city would spend to subsidize the show.

The major reason for the pageant's quest for a new home was the initial reluctance by El Paso officials to help fund the event, which has been held in the West Texas city for each of the past eight years, the pair said.

When promoters went to the city to ask for $25,000 in annual funding for this year's event they met with what Holt called "a negative feeling."

El Paso convention officials had paid such a fee in previous years, but voted in April to limit the contribution to $7,500.

Texas Man Arrested For Marijuana, Hash

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — The confiscation of 760 pounds of marijuana and a pound of hashish led to the arrest of a Texan who has been charged with possession of marijuana with intent to distribute.

Drug Enforcement Administration chief agent Irvin Lightcap said the federal charge was filed Friday against Michael G. Newland, 32, of Fort Worth.

Newland was being held in the Dona Ana County Jail in lieu of $10,000 bond set by U.S. Magistrate John Darden.

The complaint will be turned over to the U.S. attorney's office to see if there would be any other charges filed, Lightcap said. Any charge on the hashish will be left to a federal grand jury, he said.

He said Newland was arrested Thursday afternoon after he was stopped at a Border Patrol checkpoint on New Mexico 26 about seven miles west of Hatch.

"What got him was this is a new checkpoint and he didn't know it was there," Lightcap said. "He apparently was trying to avoid the checkpoint on Interstate 10 and drove right into this one."

Letter to the Editor

Dear Sirs:

I have never been as disappointed with a group of people as I was with the audience as a whole attending Thursday night's commencement exercises. It is beyond me how a community can expect to produce law abiding, decent citizens when absolutely no respect is shown them at an occasion of this importance.

Following are several instances exemplifying disrespect and general lack of crowd control:

(1) After an initial request for persons standing at the rail to take their seats, nothing further was done to prevent persons from so doing, and towards the latter portion of the evening there was such a crowd standing at the rail that it appeared impossible for those on the lower rows of seats to see;

(2) People were allowed on to the track and football field, and during the presentation of diplomas all but engulfed the senior class. Several were taking pictures while others were merely standing by adding to the circus-like atmosphere. Some of the circus clowns actually stood in the aisle separating the two groups of seniors;

(3) It was noted that one elderly gentleman in the stands was struck on the shoulder by an egg during the course of the evening;

(4) After the ceremonies were completed, a fight ensued north of the stands resulting in the summonings of both the police and an ambulance;

(5) Many in the crowd moved towards the exits after the senior whom they had come to see had been awarded his diploma. Not only did this contribute to the general overabundance of chaos, it was also disrespectful to the students (and their parents) who were awaiting the receipt of their diplomas. This was very unfortunate in the case of Carol Zinser, who was the last to receive a diploma. By the time Miss Zinser received her diploma, most of the audience had either left or were headed down the aisles to the exits.

These and other instances, which I probably was fortunate enough not to see, combined to present a chaotic, almost riotous atmosphere. If memory serves me right, it seems that better discipline and crowd control were commanded at athletic events than at the graduation ceremonies. This is especially sad since an entire class of students was involved, many of whom will never have an opportunity to go through another commencement exercise as participant.

It is my opinion that the Hereford Independent School District owes it not only to the graduating class, but to the community as a whole to assume their responsibility of assuring that future ceremonies are more dignified and meaningful.

Finally, those contributing to the atmosphere of disrespect should reevaluate their actions and make future adjustments as necessary.

British

British suffered light casualties in overcoming the estimated 1,000 Argentine troops defending Darwin and Goose Green. He said Argentine troops suffered some casualties, and that some were taken prisoner, but he offered no statistics.

British military sources said the troops in the advancing force would probably try next to seize the high ground around the capital, using that as a vantage point for shell-ings the estimated 7,000 Argentine troops defending the capital.

Well-informed sources, who asked not to be identified, said about 2,100 British marines were simultaneously leading the northern half of the pincer assault on Stanley, using helicopters to advance over boggy terrain known — even prior to the war — as No Man's Land.

British paratroopers led the assault on Darwin and Goose Green, according to the Defense Ministry. They launched the final assault under low cloud cover from Dobie Peak, about five miles away, arriving in the shepherds' village behind a barrage of mortar and bazooka fire. Press Association, Britain's domestic news agency, said hundreds of Argentine prisoners were taken.

The sources said the British may open a second beachhead, landing the 3,000 troops aboard the requisitioned luxury liner Queen Elizabeth 2 somewhere southwest of Stanley. The QE2 is believed to have recently joined the British armada of more than 100 ships, which could be used along with the land forces to encircle the Argentine troops in the capital.

State

Legislature's action had no legal basis.

Clements responded by calling the special session to repeal the levy. Prison overcrowding and miscellaneous other issues were added to the session agenda after it started.

The Senate on Friday morning approved the college funding levy that finally went to Clements Friday night. Friday afternoon the bill went to the House where a $20 million lower bill had been passed. More than half that difference was in the appropriation for the University of Houston.

The House agreed to adopt the Senate figures, and after other minor changes, the Senate passed the final bill 30-0 and the House approved it 122-19.

The $151.5 million appropriation includes $17 million in leftover state property tax proceeds, so the net appropriation from general revenues amounts to $134.5 million.

The House version started out at $131 million, but Rep. Dan Kubiak, D-Rockdale, won 91-54 approval of a motion to put the Senate numbers into the House bill.

That was after Rep. Bob Davis, R-Irving, failed to convince House members to forget college funding altogether and concentrate on funding prison construction to ease overcrowding. The prison system has been bumping up against U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice's order limiting the prison population.

Davis argued there was no need to spend money on college construction until the 1983 regular session of the Legislature.

Legislative approval earlier this week for repeal of the state property tax puts the issue on the November ballot, so the money appropriated Friday cannot be spent until then, Davis argued, with the regular session of the Legislature only two months away.

Prison Fund Approved As Session Ends

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says the $55.5 million approved by lawmakers will buy relief at the state's overcrowded prisons, but critics remain unconvinced.

After the five-day special session ended Friday, Clements said the prison money would "assure that our prisons remain open in compliance with federal court mandates."

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice's order against overcrowding forced the state prisons to close the 34,000-unmate system to new inmates on May 10. Since then, prison officials have reopened the gates, but under a limited acceptance policy.

Texas Department of Corrections Director W.J. Estelle said $85 million was needed from the special session. That would have been the first step in a $1 billion plan to add 26,000 cells by the end of 1985.

Rep. Bill Hollowell, D-Grand Saline, said lawmakers should have given Estelle $85 million. Hollowell, knowing a lost cause when he sees one, voted for the $55.5 million plan. But he said he left Austin with a clear conscience, knowing he wanted to give more to TDC and predicting possible trouble.

"If they have problems down there this summer then it's going to be their responsibility," he said, referring to Clements, Speaker Bill Clayton and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who opposed the $85 million sought by Estelle.

The prison bill was the final action of the special session. House members voted 140-2 to approve minor changes made by senators, who voted 29-1 for the appropriation. Ed Howard, D-Texasarkana, was the lone Senate dissenter.

Betty Denton, D-Waco, and Leroy Wieting, D-Portland, were the House dissenters. An amendment tacked on by Rep. Bill Presnal, D-Bryan, tells prison officials not to start building anything that would require an emergency appropriation to complete next year.

Deaf Smith County Crimestoppers, Inc. Crime-Of-The-Week

Since the first of the year there has been a rash of burglaries in the Labor Camp South and West of U.S. Highway 60 and 385. Three of these were reported last week when the owners returned home.

- Taken were:
- (2) sets of John Haviland China
 - (1) Miida Model 4800DX Cassette Radio
 - (1) CB base radio
 - (1) Picture of "The Last Supper"
 - (1) Pool Table
 - (1) TG&Y Stereo
 - (2) Rocking Chairs
 - (1) set of china (white with small flowers)

In addition several hundred dollars of vandalism was done. Officers believe these three burglaries are possibly related.

Anyone giving information leading to the arrest and indictment of the person(s) responsible for the Crime of the Week will receive a $500.00 reward. Anyone having information may contact the Crime Stoppers Clue Line at 384-CLUE or 384-2583.

Abuse

to police for a follow-up.

Hope told of a case in which a girl was molested at age nine or 10 and it was never turned over to police or child welfare agency. At 17, she was still in therapy.

"The kid has got to get it off his chest," Hope said. "Normally, these kids who report it and are handled by law enforcement do not have any recurrences."

Hope is usually the officer to question the children.

"I'll talk to the kid first, not about the case, but about anything to break the ice," Hope said. If he finds the child is uncomfortable, he asks a female employee to come in the room also.

"You have to pretty well let your mind wander with the kids' minds," he said.

"The kids don't know the high dollar words," Hope explained, and neither do they know street language to describe an incident. "What word will work with one kid may not work with another."

"But last month we filed a case and those two kids knew more language than I did."

As in any crime, the more the victim can tell about an assault the better the prosecution. Hope encourages parents to warn children about strangers and to be aware of what is going on.

"We had one little girl about two years ago who got the license number of the car, and a description of a bumper sticker," Hope recalled. "She was fantastic."

"I feel like we can educate kids on this," he noted. Hope said he has access to several films and the department is available for speaking on the topic.

Hope said he has attended several police training schools on child sexual abuse.

"It is much like an obscene telephone caller," Hope said. "They can't face an adult so they take on a child."

"Most of them (the molesters) just grew up that way, it's the way they were raised," he added.

Hope told of a case in which a man had never had any relationship with a woman besides his sister. He told police that rejection from his wife and friends sparked the incident. Hope said the man had been in the state hospital before for the same problem.

"He made no bones about it," Hope said. "He wanted help. He asked for help because he knew he had this problem."

Generally, cases involve men over 30 and elementary school aged girls, but it does happen to younger boys, too. Hope said he has seen one case of an older woman and an adolescent boy.

Again, Hope stresses reporting it.

"You've got a life here, when you damage a kid's mind that lasts a long time."

He is expected to clean his bedroom and help with other chores around the house. Ms. Lindell says, "He cleans his room much better than his brother Kevin, who is a year older."

Another skill this little boy has succeeded in mastering is the basic breathing technique used in swimming. "He loves to be in the water and really enjoyed taking swimming lessons," states his mother. "He will spend hours in the

Although Keith has had to face overwhelming odds during his brief life, he has tremendous determination and is eager to learn and overcome his handicap. He is the type of kid who hasn't let his handicap overcome his personality.

When asked if he liked ice cream, even though he couldn't respond verbally, the wide grin on his face was answer enough.

Keith Lindell uses "handivoice" as speech therapist Marge Bell offers encouragement.

At Wits End

BY ERMA BOMBECK

When I travel, I always pack three dresses short of everything I have in my closet.

I don't have to like the clothes. They don't have to belong to me. They don't have to fit. They don't even have to be "in season". But in case I need them, they'll be right there—somewhere in those 18 pieces of luggage.

I was on a talk show once with a travel expert, Polly Esther, who stuffed her hose in her shoes, had underwear that doubled for a swimsuit, packed only earth tones, and roller her skirts over a cardboard cylinder that held Christmas wrapping paper.

Polly packed everything she needed for three weeks into a small overnighter and said she saved a fortune on porters who charged her a dollar a bag every time she had to reclaim her luggage.

I got to thinking about Polly recently when a cabbie lifted one of my larger suitcases and asked, "How long have you been selling transmissions, lady?"

Last week, I spent my first vacation living for eight days out of a small overnighter. There's a couple of things Polly left out.

Any item you bring that is "see-through", make sure you have something to cover what is looking back from the other side.

Do not conserve space by threading your estrogen into a necklace and wearing it.

An Ace bandage worn as a strapless blouse for evening wear doesn't do it.

Do not pack an earth-tone wardrobe unless you pack earth-tone nail polish that blends when spilled.

A traveler who travels light needs constant reassurance that "I will never see any of these people again."

An umbrella in the hand is worth two-necks of travel agents who told you it never rains in L.A. during the summer.

Slacks that sit down when you stand up are trying to communicate.

When you are traveling with one piece of luggage, five different porters will carry it to your room, each one demanding a tip for its return.

Polly was right about a lot of things, but she should have mentioned the 30 pound tank of deodorant you have to wear strapped to your back. Getting refills for it is real important.

Mental Health Is For Everybody

"Mental Health is for Everybody" is the slogan of the Mental Health Association this year. As President Reagan recently said when proclaiming May as Mental Health Month across the nation, "a mentally healthy citizenry ranks high as a national goal."

It takes work for everybody to maintain good mental health in today's world of stress and tension. One of the ways to manage stress is to learn to relax more effectively. Here are a few tips from the Mental Health Association on learning to unwind and master the art of relaxation:

-Relax by trying something new and different. If you think you'll enjoy an activity, whether it's needlepoint or racquetball, don't be afraid to try just because it's new. Take a night course at a community college. Learn to dance. Swim, job, play softball. Become a gourmet cook.

Shoot some hoops. Go for walks. Try ceramics. Take a bubble bath.

-Do something every day. Once you've hit on your favorite relaxation activities, give at least a half hour of your day to enjoying them. Set goals and live by them. Your mind and body can use a break-regularly.

-Make a personal commitment to relaxation. Whatever you choose to do for relaxation, give it everything you've got: don't hold back mentally or physically. Your own enthusiasm makes the activity even more satisfying.

The secret to the art of relaxing is finding those activities which give you pleasure, and when pursuing them, committing all your energies to total mental and physical well being.

EH Council Met, Delegates Elected

Deaf Smith County Extension Homemakers Council met Monday in the Deaf Smith County Library Heritage Room with seven clubs having 100 percent attendance and nine clubs represented.

Cindy Norvell, council chairman, presided. Billie Jo Gee, of the Ford Extension Club, gave the opening exercise and Jewel Hargrave gave the treasurer's report and stated that sales for cookbook advertising would be completed this week.

Louise Walker, county extension agent, announced that the Maggie E. Berry Scholarship, a top 4-H scholarship, had been awarded to Glena West. Only two other Deaf Smith County girls have received this award in the past. They were Cynthia Hanna and Sue Shirley.

Beginning at 9 a.m. on June 30, an Ornamental and Garden Clinic will be held with a tour of the gardens following the event.

Ms. Walker reminded the group that this week is the deadline for submitting recipes for the cookbook and personal project reports to be turned in to her office.

Penny Reinart, assistant county extension agent, outlined 4-H activities for the summer. One of the highlights of the programs will be a Fashion Revue scheduled for June 15. At that time, 4-H members will make padded hangers for the Canyon Museum and will also be given a tour of the building and hear a program on styles.

Martha Lueb announced that the North Hereford Extension Club will sponsor a Rape Crisis program to be given by Trooper Paul Hoff, Safety Director for the Highway Patrol. It is slated Sept. 16, and will be open to the public.

Kate Bradley, Mary Carter and Bertha Dettman were elected delegates to the State TEHA meeting planned in September in El Paso. Alternates named were Carol Odom, first alternate; Cindy Norvell; second; and Grace Covington, third. Anna Messer was elected TEHA chairman.

Hostesses for the Ford Extension Club served refreshments following the business meeting. They included Maudette Smith, Mary Carter; Neoma Stokesberry, Mrs. Harry Brorman and Mona and Billie Jo Gee.

Illiterates

From the beginning, our founding fathers determined that free public education should be a cornerstone of this nation. For a democratic society, citizens should be able to read and write and become informed in important issues so they could better govern themselves.

According to many reports and surveys, we are slipping backwards.

U.S. news and World Report magazine had a recent article about the problem, stating that a staggering 23 million Americans—1 in 5 adults—lack the reading and writing abilities needed to handle the minimal demands of daily living.

An additional 30 million are only marginally capable of being productive workers. It is reported that 13 percent of high school students graduate with the reading and writing skills of sixth graders. More than one third of adults have not completed high school.

It is reported that the number of illiterates is steadily mounting, swelled by almost one million school dropouts a year and also by immigrants who are unable to read and write and understand English.

More and more people are refusing to read for information, much less for pleasure. The article cited several reasons for the growth of illiteracy: Increased dependence of television, chronic and substandard reading and writing habits of young people in poor neighborhoods, and the failure of many families and schools to cope with the problem.

The most recent major study of illiteracy, a University of Texas national survey, found that 20 percent of the adults surveyed could not interpret a bus schedule, understand a printed explanation of finance charges, or address a letter so that it would reach its destination.

This is a shocking commentary on the way education is going. We in the newspaper business are especially sensitive toward the effects of this trend, because when enough Americans cease to be readers and depend upon verbal communication, we'll be out of business.

That would be a sad day and the end of the American way of life as our founding fathers envisioned it—an era when men and women could read and write and make intelligent decisions.

Thumbing Back

25 YEARS AGO

Last Monday morning made the hearts of the school boys and girls happy, for this day brought forth their commencement picnic. About nine o'clock the hay wagon was crowded to its fullest capacity, and after having one break-down the happy crowd took their departure for Sulphur Park, and after another break-down and a run-away the crowd arrived safely at their destination.

The Public School Trustees met Monday to consider the applications for teachers in the Herford Schools for the coming year.

Prof. A.C. Elliott, government reporter for Herford, stated to a Board representative Thursday that the amount of rain that had fallen during the past few days measured one-half inch.

50 YEARS AGO

A Comb of Clovis, when visiting his farm north of Herford last Saturday, found one of his hens had laid a freak egg with the number 1922 in raised letters on one side of its shell.

He brought the egg to Herford with him, showed it to a number of people here, and took it to Clovis with him to save.

It seems that Herford business people and citizens are getting interested in the fulfillment of the drilling contract on the deep test for oil being made in the west part of Deaf Smith County in the region known as Garcia Lake. The Western Union Oil Company has a vast acreage under lease there, have erected a standard rig spudded in a 20 inch hole and has thousands of dollars worth of casing on the grounds to proceed with the drilling, which is under contract to go down 4,500 feet in a through test for oil.

25 YEARS AGO

A total of 133 boys and girls went through the Shrine Club Clinic for handicapped children here Saturday according to Dr. L. B. Barnett club president. The number is slightly larger than the 96 total reported last year in a similar three county clinic sponsored by the group.

Members of the Herford school board and Deaf Smith Commissioners, meeting Tuesday night in a joint session, agreed to adoption of plans to equalize tax valuations between city and rural properties.

Results of the county bond elections, in which a proposal to issue $175,000 in bonds for the construction of a new jail was defeated 219 to 167, were canvassed by the commissioners court on Monday.

10 YEARS AGO

Emotions were at a high Thursday night, some faces were filled with joy, some with sadness, some with bewilderment that the days for the class of '72 were coming to an end. Some 279 white clad youths marched into the La Plata Junior High Gymnasium at 8 p.m. Thursday to receive their diplomas.

Claude Ricketts, an 83-year-old man who came to Herford just shortly after the city was organized was named Saturday as the "Pioneer of the Year" during the annual Mid-Plains Pioneer Day celebration.

1 YEAR AGO

The Social Security payroll tax will have to be increased to 10 percent or more during the next century even if all of President Reagan's proposed benefit cuts are approved, says a former chief for the system.

Amid anger, tears and a threat of a court challenge by Mexican-Americans, the Texas House today passed a bill drawing new state representative districts to reflect population shifts shown by the 1980 census.

The bill passed, 118-22 at 4:25 a.m. some 7½ hours after the legislators began work on it.

U.S. Chamber Voice of Business

By Richard L. Leshner
WASHINGTON — The conventional wisdom in Washington suggests that any budget blueprint for the next several years must include substantial tax increases in order to get projected deficits down to acceptable levels. Better to reach an agreement even if it means some unpleasant tax increases, so this line of reasoning goes, than for Congress to fail to reach agreement at all. "Do something! Do anything!" is the rallying cry.

Let's test that conventional wisdom of mapping out two different scenarios, each based on a particular outcome of the current congressional budget battle. First, a word of warning: Economic forecasting is a high risk business. For example, even such consistent attention-getters as Henry Kaufman have been consistently wrong about interest rates. The outlook of any forecaster is based on certain assumptions about how millions of people making millions of economic decisions daily will respond to certain policies and conditions.

With that said, here are two possible outcomes in Congress, each leading to a distinct future for our economy, as simulated by the Economic Forecast Center of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Scenario No. 1: Suppose Congress agrees to a budget plan along the lines of the one proposed by the House Democratic leadership.

Under this plan, taxes would be raised substantially, by about $150 billion over the next three years. The third year of President Reagan's phased-in 25 percent tax cut would be eliminated. Spending growth reductions in both defense and non-defense programs would total $139 billion over the next two years.

Scenario No. 2: Now suppose Congress fails to reach agreement on tax increases, thus leaving the President's tax cut package intact. Assume that Congress does eventually agree to reduce the growth of spending by $107 billion over the next two years.

Which scenario will produce lower deficits, higher growth and less unemployment? The answer may surprise you.

Under the tax increase scenario, our gross national product would grow by just 2.1 percent in fiscal 1983 and by 1.8 percent in 1984. Growth under the no-tax increase scenario would be 6.2 percent and 6.3 percent during those same years.

As for unemployment, the first scenario would result in a nine percent joblessness rate in 1983 and 9.1 percent in 1984. The second outlook would see unemployment drop significantly from its current 9.4 percent to 7.3 percent in 1983 and 6.0 percent in 1984.

Finally, the deficit. Increase taxes and you reduce the deficit. Right? Wrong! The tax hike scenario would leave us with a $126 billion deficit in the following year. Hold fast to President Reagan's tax cut program and the deficits for those same years would be $112 billion and $74 billion respectively.

Granted these two simulations are highly speculative, they nonetheless teach a basic lesson that should have been learned long ago: leave more money in the hands of savers, investors and consumers and you will generate more growth, more jobs and more revenues for government. Some of us are not surprised.

MEMORIAL DAY

We Americans are funny folks. We set aside a day for memorials and celebrate it with a car race designed to add some people to the list of those to be memorialized. There is no holiday we can't turn into a commercial enterprise. There will be memorial day sales, extravaganzas, golf tournaments and car wrecks, all in the name of memorializing the dead.

The day began as a time to remember the war dead, the people who died so we could live in peace and enjoy our car races and golf tournaments. I don't suppose they mind giving us their day, since they have already given us their lives.

Memorial Day is important to me. Not the day necessarily, but the remembering matters to me. I may play golf on the day set aside, but some time during the period, I stop and remember some folks who have meant much to me. I do not want them forgotten. I have the feeling no one is dead until they are forgotten. There are some folks who will never die as long as I live.

Mama Hoyle, my grandmother. Poor as Job's turkey (I have heard that all my life...how poor was Job's turkey?) and yet the most significant person in my life.

The Maddox's, the folks who raised the woman who was lucky enough to marry me.

Art Wright, a crazy man who traveled the country as a preacher, the one who first let me know preachers could be human if they were tough enough.

All the characters from my town who I know now by memory and memory keeps them alive in my life. Delbert Kinsey, whose eyes twinkled; Gladys Manjeot, the human tornado; Dub Hair, a friend; Aunt Minnie Robinson, who made garters for brides; R.L. Ethridge, who was curious about everything.

This year has been a banner one for moving significant people into a new real of living. They are now alive in a new way. Alive in the life beyond and alive in me...Stacy Rickman, who taught me what courage looked like; Archie Dwyer, who showed me what fight was; Gerald Wilson, a merry heart that did us good like a medicine; Frank Ball, who painted me a picture of sweet; Bill Phillips, who was the quiet type; G.C. (Preach) Merritt, a character; Howard Gault, who sought the meaning of life; Samuel Waiser, who smiled for 95 years, and Jay Swayze, who dreamed ahead of his time. These are some of the folks on my list. Who is on yours?

Bootleg Philosopher

Wipe Out Deficit By Bookkeeping

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Deaf Smith County grass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek discusses the national deficit this week, generally speaking.

Dear editor:

As I understand it, the housing industry, car manufacturers, airlines and other segments of the economy are in trouble because of high interest rates. For example who wants to build a $50,000 house that'll cost $100,000 by the time you get it paid for if you live that long and don't get laid off because the company you work for went under because it couldn't pay those high interest rates either?

And high interest rates, Wall Street says, won't come down so long as we've got a huge Federal deficit.

What we need of course is low interest rates for borrowers and high interest rates for lenders, although Congress hasn't attacked the problem from that angle yet.

But Congress is trying to do something about the deficit, which is either $100 billion or $125 billion, depending on whether you hear the morning or the evening news.

The most original idea so far is now under consideration. Some members have come up with the idea of taking the $200 billion cost of Social Security out of the budget. Keep paying it, certainly, but put it on some other page in the government's account book and presto, the deficit is wiped out. Wall Street perks up and regains confidence, stocks go up, interest rates come down, people start buying cars and building houses and riding in airplanes, and the country is rolling again.

This looks like a sound idea except for one thing. At first Wall Street, on hearing that the deficit finally is wiped out and the budget balanced, will throw confetti out the windows in celebration and order interest rates to come down.

But then some busy-body TV reporter, instead of covering wars and murder trials like he's supposed to, will take it on himself to explain to Wall Street that the deficit really hasn't come down, it's just been reported on a different page and the government is still head over heels in debt.

We're right back here we started and Congress will have to try some other plan. And it will, so long as none of the cuts affect the district each one is elected from.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Louise's Latest Knowing How To Store Cheese Important

By LOUISE WALKER
County Extension Agent
Many times cheese that has not been stored properly becomes dry and tasteless—but don't throw it away! Cheese that has become dried out and hard may be grated and stored in a tightly covered jar. This grated cheese can be used in cooked foods or sauces.

How long cheese will keep depends on the kind of cheese and wrapping. Also remember that cheese will keep best in the refrigerator or in some cases it may be frozen. Leave cheese in its original wrapper, if possible. Cover cut surfaces tightly with foil or plastic wrap to protect the surfaces from drying out or store it in a tightly covered container.

Freezing is not recommended for most cheeses because they become crumbly and mealy when frozen. Pasteurized process cheeses can be frozen for up to four months. Wrap cheese tightly in a moisture, vapor proof material and freeze quickly at 0 degrees F. or below. The cheese will freeze more quickly if wrapped in small packages. After removing cheese from freezer, let it thaw in the refrigerator for 24 hours and use soon after thawing.

If you plan to use cheese as a snack, remove it from the refrigerator 30-60 minutes before use to allow it to warm, since cheese tastes best at room temperature. However, for shredding, cheese should be very cold.

Hope you enjoy this recipe using cheese.

TMA Gives Tips For Dealing With Stress

Everyone experiences stress. No one can avoid it totally. Even while asleep, the body must continue to function and react to the stress imposed by dreaming. Canadian physician Hans Selye, author of several books on the topic, says the only complete freedom from stress is death.

What is important, then, is to learn to deal with stress, according to the Texas Medical Association.

Stress is the mental or physical tension resulting from the body's reaction to emotional, physical or chemical changes. These stress-producing changes can be pleasant or unpleasant because although the mind can distinguish between the two, the body often cannot. It may react similarly under either circumstance.

Men and women seem equally susceptible. But people who are competitive, impatient, fast-paced, successful and look at achievement and possessions for a sense of worth are more likely to develop stress-related illnesses than individuals who are easy-going and tolerant.

Headaches, upset stomachs, asthma, allergies and ulcers are commonly associated with stress. Studies now are being conducted to determine possible links between stress and heart disease, high blood pressure and cancer. Still, it is often difficult to establish a direct connection between stress and disease.

Doctors offer several tips to deal with stress:

-Learn to relax. This may involve napping, setting quietly or reading a book at the end of the day.

-Exercise adequately. Running, walking and playing tennis are ways to ease mental stress.

-Share your worries with someone you trust and respect. Another person sometimes can offer a new view of a stressful situation and help find a solution.

-Get enough sleep. Lack of sleep can lessen your ability to deal with stress by making you more irritable.

-Learn to accept what you cannot change. If a problem is beyond your control at this time, try to accept it until you can change it.

Oklahoma Jobs Greatly Lacking

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Although he's unemployed, Tim Orbison still tries to look on the bright side of things. "My income last month was zero," he said recently, "so I figure there's no way to go but up."

Orbison, 24, is one of the thousands of people who came to Oklahoma to take advantage of the state's energy boom. And now, with a slowdown in the state's petroleum industry, he's one of those left unemployed.

Shortly after being graduated from Freed Hardeman College in Henderson, Tenn., Orbison came to this state and landed a job as a landman, or oil and gas lease broker, sometimes called a leasehound or leaser.

It was pretty fascinating work for a young person, involving the search of property records to find owners of mineral rights so that arrangements could be made for oil companies to lease or option them.

But lots of landmen now find themselves out of jobs, and records show that many previously purchased leases still haven't been worked. Oil prices have dropped, and drilling isn't as profitable as it was. Since December, industry figures show, the number of rotary rigs that are drilling in the United States has fallen by more than 1,000 to about 3,400.

Orbison said that of seven employees in the firm where he worked, only two are still employed. But at the height of the boom, he said, "none of us were getting less than $100 a day."

It contrasts with the fortunes of young college graduates in other parts of the country, many of whom found jobs scarce and employers less willing than in other years to take on inexperienced beginners.

"The slowdown really caught us later than other companies," Orbison said. "I know of bigger companies with huge employee ranks that have let 80-90 percent of their landmen loose."

Six months ago, when oil prices were higher and interest in new sources of oil was booming, "anybody who could do anything could get a good job," said Orbison.

Since his job was eliminated, Orbison said his wife has been working for a temporary employment service, and he worked for one for a short time. "Mostly, I've just been sitting around the house and taking care of the yard," said Orbison, father of a 9-month-old child.

COULD YOU SING FOR JOY...IN PRISON?

One day as we were going down to the place of prayer beside the river, we met a demon-possessed slave girl who was a fortune-teller, and earned much money for her masters. She followed along behind us shouting, "These men are servants of God and they have come to tell you how to have your sins forgiven." This went on day after day until Paul, in great distress, turned and spoke to the demon within her. "I command you in the name of Jesus Christ to come out of her," he said. And instantly it left her.

Her masters' hopes of wealth were now shattered; they grabbed Paul and Silas and dragged them before the judges in the marketplace. "These Jews are corrupting our city," they shouted. "They are teaching the people to do things that are against the Roman laws."

A mob was quickly formed against Paul and Silas, and the judges ordered them stripped and beaten with wooden whips. Again and again the rods slashed down across their bared backs; and afterwards they were thrown into prison. The jailer was threatened with death if they escaped, so he took no chances, but put them into the inner dungeon and clamped their feet into the stocks.

Around midnight, as Paul and Silas were praying and singing hymns to the Lord -- and the other prisoners were listening -- suddenly there was a great earthquake; the prison was shaken to its foundations, all the doors flew open -- and the chains of every prisoner fell off!

The jailer awakened to see the prison doors wide open, and assuming the prisoners had escaped he drew his sword to kill himself. But Paul yelled to him, "Don't do it! We are all here!"

PTA Examines Ways To Strengthen The Family

"We hear many reports that the family as an institution is dying, but we do not believe it," writes National PTA President Mary Ann Leveridge in her introduction to the May issue of "PTA Today," National PTA's magazine. The issue is devoted entirely to the theme "strengthening the family."

Leveridge supports her position by pointing to the recent Middleton studies, a re-examination of the survey of Middle American life, begun in 1924 by sociologists Robert and Helen Lynd. These studies found commitment to the family stronger than ever.

"How can we strengthen these bonds within our own families even more?" Leveridge asks. Included in this issue are some possible answers, such as those suggested by the Rev. Roger Rice (Presbyterian Church, Orland Park, Ill.) and his wife, Judith, a journalist.

ing them as a family: -Scheduling time for adults of the family to have fun together and setting up another time to complain so the fun time doesn't become the time to complain:

-Providing each individual with space and time for himself or herself and allowing a place where individuals can "get away from it all;" and

-Holding weekly gatherings for the family to talk together about what each is doing, what tensions and gripes need to be aired, which family rules are working, and which need to be changed.

Traditional families are not the only families that need strengthening today. Some 12 million American children live in one-parent families, which face some unique problems.

Kentucky State PTA President Patti Acquisto writes that during separation and divorce, it is so easy "to be consumed with your own needs and problems...your children's needs seem to be so much less important than yours."

Acquisto advises, "Make sure your child understands that your home isn't 'broken.' Don't allow others to use that term in reference to your home. Don't let it be broken. Insist that the same love and continuity of that home continue."

Others articles featured in the May "PTA Today" include:

+ "The Chronically Ill Child: How Families Can

Cope," which gives advice by social worker Audrey McCollum:

- "Family Bonds and Binds," in which Dr. Miriam Reitz writes about which family conflicts are normal and when a family should seek outside help;

- A discussion of the so-called Family Protection Act pending in Congress.

Copies of the May issue of "PTA Today" are available for $1 each by sending a check or money order (made payable to National PTA) to National PTA, 700 North Rush Street, Chicago, Ill. 60611. Subscriptions to "PTA Today" (seven issues per year) are $4.

Nutrition Program Presented By Draper

Argen Draper presented a program to members of TOPS No. 576 when the group met for their regularly scheduled meeting Tuesday morning at the Community Center.

Ms. Draper, who is an inspiration to all TOPS members and who was recognized as the outstanding TOPS; spoke on nutrition and diet. She stressed the TOPS motto of eating a balanced diet and counting calories.

Best loser for May was Vicki Jones with a loss of 15 pounds and runner up was Susana Gonzalez. Ms. Jones has been the best loser for two months and she also voted "Miss Inspiration" by club members.

She was presented three weight loss charms and won a contest. TOPS No. 576 meets at the Community Center each Tuesday morning at 9 a.m. Visitors and new members are welcome. For further information, call Sue Rogers at 364-3317.

The first receivers of telephone calls cried out "Aho-ahoy" rather than the later greeting of "hello."

TTU Presents Robin Williams

Texas Tech University Center Activities will present Robin Williams and special guest John Sebastian, live in concert, on Wednesday, June 16 at 8 p.m. in the Lubbock Municipal Auditorium.

Tickets go on sale June 1 and will be available at the University Center Ticket Booth and Hemphill-Wells at the Mall. Prices are $7 and $9 for Tech students with a spring or summer I.D., and $9 and $10 for the public. Parental discretion is advised. For ticket information call 742-3610.

Robin Williams will next star in "The World According to Garp," for Warner Bros. which opens on July 23. Based on the hugely successful novel, the screenplay was written by Steve Tesich and directed by George Roy Hill.

Robin Williams in "Mork & Mindy" was a smash from its first airing when it reached an over 50 percent share of the television audience. And what is probably unprecedented, within two weeks of its premiere, Robin was hailed a star. His face graced magazine covers ranging from the covers of Time and Newsweek to Rolling Stone.

The series success was followed by an album for Casablanca, "Realty, What a Concept." Recorded live at the Copacabana in New York, it earned Robin a Grammy Award for the Comedy Album of the Year.

Williams has been described by critics as a "brilliant stand-up comic, an astonishing lunar wild man out of Jonathan Winters by way of Lenny Bruce with a touch of Richard Burton thrown in" and "a major comedic talent."

Upon viewing the Home Box Office special of Robin performing his nightclub act, the Hollywood Reporter called it "unadulterated brilliance." Williams was further received in recognition of his talents a Golden Globe, a Golden Apple and the People's Choice awards.

Williams was born on July 21, 1952 and was raised in Detroit and Chicago, moving with his family to the San Francisco area his last year of high school. He also attended college there before he won a full scholarship to New York's famed Juilliard (where he studied drama under John Houseman for three years). Robin then returned to San Francisco and performed at the many San Francisco clubs.

His first television exposure was on the latest, short-lived version of "Laugh-in" and "The Richard Pryor Show." He then guest starred on ABC-TV's series "Happy Days" as Mork, a visitor from another planet. That episode was so well received that it prompted the "Mork & Mindy" series.

He received outstanding reviews for his film debut as well, in the title role of "Popeye," playing the quint-eyed sailor in a flawless incarnation of the cartoon character who comes alive on screen.

Robin is married to dancer Valerie Velardi. They share their home with a malamute dog named Sam, a parrot named Cora, several rabbits, three goats and a flock of Polish chickens.

Mechanized Mud May Be Homes Of The Future

ALAMOGORDO, N.M. (AP) — Throughout history, man has used mud and his bare hands to build his homes. But an Alamogordo man has developed a way to bring technology to the oldest of building materials.

Howard Scoggins says his technique may raise adobe to what he believes is its rightful place in modern society — a cheap way to produce energy-efficient homes.

"I believe we're about a decade away from the time when eight out of 10 homes in the Southwest will be made out of adobe," Scoggins, 49, said, adding that high energy prices will lead more and more homeowners to return to the material used to build Babylon and Rome.

Adobe has been made since the dawning of civilization by mixing dirt, water and straw in a wooden mold, packing it by hand or foot and then letting the sun dry the mixture into a hard brick.

But Scoggins has changed that process with a machine some call "the Monster Molder."

tion built of scrap metal and it can produce dozens, rather than a couple, of adobe blocks at a time.

The machine is a metal grid with holes the size of adobe blocks topped by a hopper that feeds the mud mixture into the molds. The unit is hooked to the back of a cement-mixing truck filled with adobe mud.

The mud is pumped into the hopper, which moves hydraulically along the top of the mold, feeding mud into the holes and packing it in one motion. Then the mold is lifted off the ground, leaving the wet bricks lying behind. The truck is rolled forward and the process is repeated.

"Before we had the machinery, we had 15 people out here working like hell to move 1,500 adobe blocks a day," Scoggins said. "Now, we have two men making 3,000 a day."

Similar processes had been tried by many before, but none worked, he said.

"The secret is the material itself," he said. "It's been engineered before it's ever mixed. Most people who make adobe just get any old dirt and mix it with water until it looks right and then they figure they've got good adobe."

Scoggins and his partner, Bob Godby, screen the dirt and crush it into a fine powder before mixing it with water and an asphalt compound that makes the bricks waterproof. The result is a denser adobe block that Scoggins boasts is stronger than cement.

He throws an adobe block to the ground to show it won't crack. He has a visitor lift regular adobe blocks and his version to show his is heavier and denser.

"There's a bar in Las Palomas (Mexico) where they've had one of our blocks in a fish bowl for three years waiting for it to melt," he said with a chuckle. "By God, it hasn't yet."

Scoggins became interested in adobe after interviewing a brickmaker when he was running a small newspaper in Marble Falls, Texas. He left the newspaper business for the building trades and ended up in village rebuilding projects for World Church Services in Africa and the Middle East, where adobe is still made the old way.

He developed a hand-operated version of his adobe machine for use in the Third World countries and then showed it to Godby, 54, a friend who had run The Adobe Patch in Alamogordo for more than a decade.

The two men perfected the machine and began producing adobe blocks in six different sizes. They also build homes from their own materials.

"We've taken the mystique of the little old fellow in the sombrero out of the process," he said. "We're looking at the middle class, the people who want to cut energy costs and have a nice place to live."

Energy shortages may cause a resurgence of adobe use because the density of the bricks acts as its own insulation, he added.

"With adobe, you've got all of the advantages of an underground house sitting there in a conventional style home," he said. "You can save 35 to 50 percent on your energy budget if you live in an adobe house rather than a wood frame house. The energy savings over 20 years just about equals the interest on the note for the house." Costs for adobe can be lower, he said. "A woodframe constructed house when it's finished will cost you about $7 a square foot of wall. A wood-frame wall with brick veneer will cost you about $8.90 a square foot. A square foot of adobe wall costs about $4.60."

It's cheaper when you lay the adobe bricks yourself, and Scoggins teaches classes in adobe masonry and sells about 95 percent of his blocks to people building their own homes.

Scoggins believes that once people in the Southwest realize the economic benefits, adobe will again be the main building material in the area.

He and Godby have designed an adobe-making plant that would be totally mechanized and could produce 15,000 blocks a day. Plans to build the plant have been postponed because of the slump in the housing industry. In the meantime, he experiments with making building materials out of substances ranging from caliche clay to sulfur wastes to peanut hulls in a tiny laboratory at The Adobe Patch.

The tables in the lab are littered with cylindrical brick samples that are the results of hours of experimentation. Although none of them are ready for production, Scoggins has patented some of the ideas and thinks they may have a future.

His most recent project involves grinding peanut hulls and mixing them with chemicals to make a substance similar to wood. Another project uses lignin sulfate, a byproduct of paper production, to glue gravel together into what he calls "sandless concrete."

Preceptors Aid To Med Students

"As a medical student you are sort of in an ivory tower, learning medicine in an intensely academic setting. Working with a preceptor helps give you an understanding and appreciation of how the practicing physician really works and of how hard he/she works," said Barbara Caruthers, M.D.

A preceptorship allows a medical student to work with a practicing physician for a month, and Caruthers is in a unique position to discuss the program. She served as a preceptee in Family Practice in 1979 and, since entering private practice two years ago, has volunteered her services as a preceptor.

Caruthers is one of about 400 preceptors across the state who volunteer their time to help the School of Medicine at Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center (TTUHSC) educate future practitioners. The preceptorship program in the Family Medicine Department is divided into required and elective programs, said Clark Johnson, M.D., associate chairman of family medicine.

"Curriculum requirements include a family practice preceptorship during the third or fourth years, depending on when necessary prerequisite courses are completed," said Johnson. He pointed out that an elective preceptorship program is available during the summer for first and second year medical students.

Johnson said if a student elects to serve a preceptorship in a town of 25,000 people or less, a Health and Human Services Grant allows the student to be reimbursed for expenses incurred during the preceptorship. Another source of expense reimbursement is a service of the Texas Academy of Family Physicians.

"The programs allow a student an educational experience by observing how a physician's office operates. The thrust of the family medicine department is complete, comprehensive, continuous care, and private family physicians are in a unique position to actually demonstrate this care to our students," said Johnson.

One of the most important aspects of the program is allowing students to see the problems that arise in everyday practice and how the private practitioner deals with each situation.

"The program also affords the student a chance to see what is the physician's place in the community. The student can observe what the physician's privileges and responsibilities to the community are," said Johnson.

Johnson said the program is beneficial to the preceptor as well. "Students, by nature and their level of training, are always asking questions.

This can make the physician undergo a continuous process of self-audit. In this way the program can help the physician evaluate his/her own procedures," he said.

Caruthers agreed that the program benefits the physician. "It's a lot harder to be a preceptor than a student. It was so much easier to ask a good question when I was a student than to give a good answer now that I'm the preceptor," she said.

Preceptors are certified by the American Board of Family Practice according to Marcia Cutter, coordinator of the preceptorship program for the family medicine department.

Cutter said, "Several medical schools in the state use the preceptor program. This allows our students to take preceptorships in other parts of the state while allowing students from other medical schools come to West Texas."

The preceptorship program provides the student with the opportunity to leave the ivory tower and taste the life of a practicing physician.

Metrodome Makes Hitters Better

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The new Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome in Minneapolis is a nice place to play baseball — well, for just about everyone but pitchers. "The ball jumps out better here than any park I've ever been in," says Graig Nettles of the New York Yankees. "You know if you get the ball up here it's got a chance. I'd like to have seen Harmon Killebrew and those guys here. He would have hit a thousand."

Major league baseball's newest stadium featured eight home runs in Friday night's game between the Minnesota Twins and New York Yankees. The Yankees led the last shot, a grand slam by Nettles in the ninth inning, and the last laugh in a 10-5 victory over the Twins.

"It makes our hitters think they're better than they are," said Yankee Manager Gene Michael of the homer-happy park.

Nettles' homer capped a five-run rally for the Yankees, but it was Oscar Gamble's RBI single that put them ahead for good. Gamble also hit one of four Yankee homers.

Gamble said he wouldn't want to play in the outfield at the Metrodome. "But at the plate, yeah. It's a good ballpark to DH in."

Twins reliever Ron Davis, who gave up the Yankee runs in the ninth, said, "Look what the Dome did to everybody. I'm a high fastball pitcher and people that throw like that are going to get into a lot of trouble here."

Willie Randolph and Dave Collins singled with one out off Davis, 1-5. Randolph stole third and scored when Gamble singled. Bobby Murcer then walked to load the bases for Nettles, who hit his second homer of the year, and his third career grand slam.

Also hitting homers for the Yankees were Roy Smalley and Lou Piniella. For the Twins, Tom Brunansky had two, including an inside-the-park job, and Gary Gaetti and Gary Ward had one each.

Elsewhere in the American League, it was California 6, Milwaukee 5; Boston 3, Seattle 2; Cleveland 5, Chicago 2; Texas 8, Kansas City 2 and Detroit 6, Oakland 4. The Toronto-Baltimore game was rained out.

Angels 6, Brewers 5
Don Baylor hit a tie-breaking home run in the eighth inning as California overcame three Milwaukee homers to defeat the Brewers.

Baylor blasted his seventh homer, off reliever Dwight Bernard, 2-1, with one out in the eighth. Doug Corbett, 1-2, picked up the victory with spotless relief over the final two innings.

The Brewers had built a 5-2 lead in the sixth when Cecil Cooper, Don Money and Gorman Thomas belted consecutive homers — a Milwaukee team record. But the Angels tied it in the bottom of the seventh on a three-run rally capped by Bob Boone's sacrifice fly.

"The last thing in my mind was a home run," said Baylor. "When you're 1-for-20, you can't afford to think of that. I just wanted an extra-base hit to give the next guy a chance to drive me in."

Indians 5, White Sox 2
John Denny pitched a five-hitter, and Mike Hargrove and Andre Thornton keyed a five-run third inning to lead Cleveland over Chicago for the Indians' fifth straight victory.

Denny, 3-5, struck out three and walked three as he recorded his fourth complete game of the season. The Cleveland right-hander retired the last 19 Chicago hitters after yielding both White Sox runs in the third inning.

Steve Trout, 4-4, was victimized in the Cleveland third which featured a two-run single by Hargrove and Thornton's RBI double.

"He just had super stuff and threw the ball where he wanted to the whole ballgame," said Cleveland catcher Bill Nahorodny of Denny. "He deserved this one."

Rangers 8, Royals 2
John Grubb and Lamar Johnson each hit a homer and drove in three runs as Texas beat Kansas City.

Ranger right-hander Charlie Hough, 4-3, pitched his fifth complete game of the season. He struck out five, walked one and gave up nine hits, only three of which made it out of the infield.

Dave Frost, 4-4, was the loser.

"I took a little extra batting practice today," said Grubb. "The last few days I haven't really felt good at the plate. Even when I hit the home run against Baltimore (Wednesday) I didn't feel that good. I was lunging a little too much, maybe being too aggressive. So I worked on that."

Red Sox 3, Mariners 2
Reid Nichols and Carney Lansford blasted home runs and Dennis Eckersley and Mark Clear combined on a nine-hitter as Boston beat Seattle.

Eckersley, 6-3, pitched 71-3 innings, walked none and struck out six, giving him 58 strikeouts for the season, nine behind loser Floyd Bannister, 5-3. The Seattle starter fanned six and gave up six hits in his route-going performance.

Nichols broke up a scoreless duel with his first major league homer with one out in the seventh inning. In the Boston eighth, Jim Rice opened with a double, and one out later, Lansford hit his second homer of the season for the Red Sox's winning runs.

Tigers 6, A's 4
Lou Whitaker hit his second home run of the game, a two-run shot in the ninth inning, to lead Detroit over Oakland.

Lance Parrish opened the inning with a single off Rick Langford, 3-7. Whitaker, who slammed a solo shot in the third, then drilled his second homer of the season, into the right field seats at the Oakland Coliseum.

Dave Tobik, the third Tiger reliever, pitched the last 21-3 innings and gained his second triumph in two decisions.

pinch hitter Scott Loucks popped up a bunt to pitcher Woodie Fryman, who turned and doubled a surprised Joe Pittman off second base. Even the normally stoic Vir-don muttered, "You don't get picked off second base in a situation like that."

The Astros have survived the past two seasons on a superb pitching staff that has led the National League in earned run average both seasons. This year, Don Sutton is the only survivor — and he wants to be traded.

Nolan Ryan, who pitched a record fifth career no-hitter last September, is off to the worst start of his career.

Strong defense, so necessary for a team that relies on its pitchers, has been spotty.

Viridon Comfortable With Comment

'Best Astros In Houston'

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Astros Manager Bill Viridon is still comfortable with the following comment around others try to hang it around his neck like an albatross.

"This is the best Astros team we've had in Houston," Viridon said repeatedly in spring training.

Viridon was echoing the enthusiasm of Astros Chairman John McMullen and General Manager Al Rosen, and even now, with the Astros struggling from one disaster to another and with criticism mounting, Viridon has not changed his posture.

"I knew coming out of spring training that we had to have some things come together, but potentially it is the best club we've had here," Viridon said recently. "I felt early in the season that we would do something like this (start slowly) but I thought we'd be closer to .500."

"I still feel we are a better team but coming out of spring training I knew things weren't totally ready," he said.

Apparently, they still aren't.

Houston's hitting, never called explosive, at least was opportunistic when the Astros battled Philadelphia to a near stand-off in the thrilling 1980 National League championship series. Their style was to lean on good pitching and then scratch and claw for the key hits.

No more. In a game last week against Montreal, Houston was shut out despite leading the bases in the third inning, and putting runners in scoring position in the eighth and ninth.

The Astros' ninth inning demise was typical of what's been happening to them much of the season.

With the tying runs on first and second base and no outs,

Garner was booed when he committed two errors in one inning last week and then was greeted with derisive cheers when he finally completed an errorless chance.

"They had a right to boo. We stunk," Garner said. "We're playing under Murphy's Law: Anything that can go wrong, we'll see that it happens."

"If we haven't gotten it done by the end of the season then you can say I made a mistake," Viridon said.

Otherwise, Viridon may be the one who doesn't return.

REESE AIR FORCE BASE
Major Dave Meier, project officer for the eighth annual Reese Air Force Base Christmas Classic High School Basketball Tournament, has announced the field for the 1982 Classic.

The tournament will be played in the base gymnasium at Reese AFB on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, December 16-18.

The tournament will be contested in two divisions, the President's Trophy Division for large schools and the Commander's Trophy Division for smaller schools. In both divisions, the field will be the most balanced and competitive ever. In the Commander's Trophy Division, the field will be the strongest ever.

State 1982 AAA champion Dimmitt, Big Spring, Canyon, and Roswell, N.M. will round out the President's Trophy Division field. The consolation of districts 3 and 4-AAAA into a nine-team district 3-AAAA and the start of district play on December 17 eliminated West Texas' AAAAA schools, including champion Amarillo, from participation in the 1982 Classic.

In the Commander's Trophy Division, seven of the eight schools are defending district champions and all eight expect to be stronger during the 1982-83 season.

Morton was a state semifinalist, Denver City was a regional finalist (losing to state champ Dimmitt on a last second shot), Clyde and Lorenzo were regional semifinalists.

Kermit and Slaton were bi-district champions. Lubbock Christian won the state Christian Schools Championship and Frenship finished a strong third in their district. Denver City is the defending champion in the small school division.

Swedish Runner May Retire

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Lamar University distance specialist Midde Hamrin says now may be the time to retire.

The 25-year-old native of Sweden finally won the 10,000 meter run in the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women championships Friday after three years of playing the bride's maid.

I finally got it, I think it is time to retire, said Hamrin, who finished fourth in 1980 and third a year ago. I probably could have run better if I had somebody with me.

Hamrin, who holds the Frank Anderson Track records in the 3,000, 5,000 and 10,000 meter runs, was the clear leader from start to finish, lapping all but three runners in the field.

Beth Farmer of the University of Florida was second in 34:46.49.

Long jumper Pat Johnson of Wisconsin also improved over last year's finish with an AIAW record 21-4 3/4 leap.

It was the lone record established in Friday night's finals. The meet ends tonight.

Johnson's jump broke the AIAW record of 20-9 3/4 held by North Texas State's Donna Thomas, who finished second at 21-0. Thomas set the old record in last year's meet.

The University of Texas, the pre-meet favorite, won the 800 meter medley relay in 1:39.92.

North Texas State with second place finishes in the 800 meter relay and the long jump, took the early team lead with 16 points followed by Illinois with 14, Texas and Florida with 12 each and Michigan, Lamar and Wisconsin with 10 each.

Michigan's Penny Neer won the discus title with a toss of 183-0, easily beating runnerup Julie Ann Jones of Brigham Young, with a 168-0 toss.

Burke of Northeastern led qualifiers into the finals of the shot put with a toss of 50-9 3/4.

Susan Shurr of the University of Texas led qualifiers into the finals of the 100 meter dash with a 11.64 clocking and Colleen Hanna of Iowa State was second with a 11.66.

About A Four-Game Playoff

Lakers Won't Say

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers, who dispatched both the Phoenix Suns and the San Antonio Spurs in four-game playoff sweeps, aren't ready to say they'll do the same to the Philadelphia 76ers.

But the awesome display of offense by the Lakers in Game 1 of the National Basketball Association championship series has led to speculation that it may happen.

The Lakers already have set a single-season NBA record of nine straight playoff victories, equaling the overall mark set by the Minneapolis Lakers over two seasons, 1949 and 1950.

They would have the record all to themselves with another victory in Game 2 here Sunday.

A devastating 40-9 spurt by

Los Angeles turned a 15-point deficit into a 108-92 lead and an eventual 124-117 victory in the first game of the best-of-seven series Thursday night.

"We aren't thinking about 12-0 yet," said Norm Nixon, who scored 24 points Thursday while often triggering the fast break. "It's in the back of our minds because we keep getting asked about it. Each time we win, it gets closer to reality. It would really be great to be assured of a special place in history."

"I don't want to talk about a sweep yet," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "I want to talk about winning. A sweep would be a residual of winning."

"Our fast break is hard to stop," Earvin "Magic" Johnson said. "For anyone to run it better, they would have to be awfully good."

But 76ers Coach Billy Cunningham said his team "hasn't lost confidence. At least we started better than we did in the last series."

Cunningham was referring to a 121-81 loss in the first game of their semifinal series with the Boston Celtics, the 1981 NBA champions who ultimately fell to Philadelphia in seven games.

"No team that gets this far in the playoffs did it because they are frontrunners," Cunningham said. "We have to play 48 minutes Sunday instead of just 30."

"Running is our game, too. It could have been us with a 41-point third quarter if we had gone to the boards."

Another triumph Sunday would also give the Lakers eight straight road playoff victories, dating back to the 1980 championship series won by Los Angeles over Philadelphia in six games. The previous record was five, held by three other teams.

The Lakers did it Thursday night when Riley used only seven players, all of whom scored in double figures.

"We can get away with using only seven because we have four guys who can play seven positions," Riley said. "They rotate in and out of the game. I don't want them to sit down too long, not more than two or three minutes."

Giants Stomp Pirates, Expos Beat Reds

By JOHN NELSON AP Sports Writer

Jack Clark has finished berating the San Francisco Giants for the time being, and has started taking it out on the rest of the National League with his bat.

Clark was one of the leaders in a pregame meeting Friday evening that he and Giants teammates said helped clear the air of some potentially demoralizing talk.

Then, the Giants right fielder belted a pair of homers and drove in five runs to lead the Giants to a 10-5 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates in a confrontation of the NL's two division doormats.

Around the rest of the league, Montreal got by Cincinnati 4-2, St. Louis downed San Diego 5-2, Houston clobbered New York 8-3 and Chicago edged Los Angeles 4-3. Atlanta at Philadelphia was rained out.

Expos 4, Reds 2
Scott Sanderson tossed a six-hitter, and Andre Dawson and Tim Wallach drove in runs in Montreal's three-run first inning, giving the Expos their seventh straight victory. Sanderson, 5-3, struck out eight and walked none.

Astros 8, Mets 3
Nolan Ryan struck out 11 batters before he was forced to leave with a pulled groin muscle, and Phil Garner drove in three runs with a double and a single to pace Houston over New York.

Pitching in a persistent rain that began in the second inning, Ryan, 4-6, walked the first two men in the sixth inning, then fanned George Foster and Dave Kingman before he had to leave.

Mike LaCoss and Dave Smith finished up for Ryan, striking out three apiece for 17 total in the game. The Mets had the bases loaded with two out in the ninth, but Kingman struck out for the fifth time to end the game.

Cubs 4, Dodgers 3
Keith Moreland slugged a two-run homer, and Ryne Sandberg added a two-run double that gave the Cubs their second straight victory after a string of four losses.

Moreland's homer, his ninth, came in the fourth inning, and Sandberg belted his double in the fifth, both hits coming off Los Angeles starter Bob Welch, 5-3.

Cubs starter Randy Martz, 4-3, worked 7 1/3 innings, yielding two runs on seven hits.

Cards 5, Padres 2
Willie McGee had two hits, stole a base and scored three runs to help Bob Forsch win his sixth game for St. Louis. Forsch, who has lost once, spaced seven hits in 72-3 innings before needing relief help from Bruce Sutter, who earned his 14th save. Sutter came on after Ruppert Jones homered for the Padres.

David Green drove in a seventh-inning run with a single that provided the eventual winning margin against loser Juan Eichelberger, 4-6, who allowed just five hits in going the distance for San Diego.

Nicklaus Hints Maltbie

Loss In Tourney Not Likely

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Host Jack Nicklaus hints its possible but not probable that anyone will overtake leader Roger Maltbie in the $380,000 Memorial Golf Tournament.

Maltbie, perhaps mindful of his horrible six-year slump, wasn't so sure of his 6-shot lead, built on a record-tying 6-under-par 66 Friday. His 36-hole total of 134, 10-under, also wiped out another Memorial mark.

"I'm sure I'll go to the first tee tomorrow with some butterflies. My swing, rhythm, timing felt good today. Who knows what it will feel like tomorrow?" said Maltbie, who hasn't won since his third PGA Tour title here six years ago.

But Nicklaus, creator of the 7,116-yard Muirfield Village tournament site said: "If Roger plays two pretty good rounds (today and Sunday), it will be hard to catch him."

"This is the type of course that a 6-shot lead is hard to hold on, but he's played beautiful golf," Nicklaus said of the 30-year-old leader.

Nicklaus himself was still in contention to become the first man to win this 7-year-old tournament twice. But the game's all-time money champion must hurdle seven others to reach Maltbie.

With a half-moon putter he bought for $30 three weeks ago, Maltbie solved the slick greens for 27 putts.

One, a 4-footer, gave him an eagle three on the 15th hole, the highlight of a back nine of 5-under 31. He also had three birdies on the incoming side.

An air conditioner can improve the performance of your furnace.

An air conditioner?

A very special air conditioner called the add-on heat pump. It cools in summer and heats in winter. And it works with whatever kind of furnace you have. The add-on heat pump will improve the performance of your furnace by keeping it off completely during a good portion of the winter. The add-on heat pump can satisfy your home's heating requirements more economically when temperatures are above 30° or so. That's about 80% of our area's normal heating season. Then, when summer comes, the heat pump becomes a cool pump, efficiently air conditioning the home. So, when you're in the market for air conditioning, look into the add-on heat pump.

Truckloads Recovered

and trailer were cluttered with boxes and piles of household items and vehicle parts. One room of the house had been used for slaughtering small livestock, apparently stolen. (Brand Photo)

Loads of Loot Friday Found

Two and a half bobtail truckloads of stolen goods were recovered Friday when county deputies followed leads from an arrest in an air compressor theft, according to Deaf Smith County Sheriff Travis McPherson.

"A lot of it we don't even know where it was stolen from," McPherson said.

A vacant labor house owned by a family in south Texas and a small mobile home was cluttered with clothes, what- nots, books, truck tires, toys, encyclopedias, paintings, and boxes of paraphernalia apparently stolen from area homes for sale to used goods dealers. The property was assumed to be several thousand dollars worth.

Deputies worked from 1:30 p.m. Friday until about 2 a.m. Saturday on the investigation, filming the scene, loading the truck and tagging the evidence.

A bucket of animal entrails was found in one room of the house which was apparently used as a kill floor. Officers said the animals were likely goats and pigs recently stolen from a residence on Progressive Road.

Neighbors reportedly told officers they had seen a man running after a pig trying to stab it one day.

McPherson said one man has been jailed and others will probably be charged. The sheriff said the department is not sure how many are involved, however.

One migrant family who recently returned to Hereford and found their home burglarized was at the scene identifying property. McPherson said that persons who have been burglarized may call his office to identify the goods.

The family who owned the home were contacted. They were not aware that their property was missing also and that the house was used as a stash.

McPherson said that possibly some of the stolen items had recently been hauled away by one of the suspects.

Castro County Deputy Ray Rodriguez came to Hereford Saturday to check for property stolen from his county.

McPherson said he will be checking area junk dealers to find out if they have any leads.

Activist Group Swayed Judge

10 Years Given for DWI Charge

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Sentiment to crack down on drunk drivers helped influence a judge to sentence a man convicted of involuntary manslaughter in an alcohol-related traffic death a maximum 10 years in prison, a prosecutor says.

State District Judge David Berchelman gave the stiff sentence to Lorenzo Suniga Rodriguez, 39, who pleaded no contest to involuntary manslaughter for the Nov. 24, 1981, death of Janine Ann Britt, 20.

Assistant District Attorney Mike Granados said the campaign begun by the new Mothers Against Drunk Drivers organization here was causing judges to hand down stiffer penalties.

"The parents of the girl were charter members of the local chapter. There was a large turnout at all the hearings in this case. I think that had an influence, along with the President's Commission on Drunk Drivers and state organizations. I think the general feeling in the community was a prime factor in the judge's decision," Granados said.

He said it was "the first time in recent memory" a judge in San Antonio assessed the maximum penalty in such a case. But the prosecutor said it may have happened in smaller communities where judges and juries often are more severe in DWI cases.

Rodriguez pleaded no contest on April 26 to the charge that alleged he was drunk and driving the wrong way on an expressway when he crashed his automobile head-on into one driven by Mrs. Britt.

Berchelman sentenced Rodriguez Thursday after a delay for Rodriguez to apply for deferred adjudication.

The local MADD chapter has severely criticized deferred adjudication and plea bargaining in repeat DWI cases.

Rodriguez, a civil service worker at Kelly Air Force Base, previously was convicted of driving while intoxicated on July 2, 1974, and sentenced to three days in jail and a $100 fine.

Gunman Takes Hostages at TV Station

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A man who invaded a television studio and held hostages for seven hours surrendered after holding a gun to the stomach of an anchorman and forcing him to broadcast a statement about God and future wars.

KOOL-TV anchorman Bill Close, one of four hostages seized when the gunman burst into the station about 5 p.m. Friday, made no reference to the hostage situation as he read the statement.

The gunman, who claimed that 10 country singers were "prophets" and that the public was being mentally programmed through telepathy, originally had demanded that the statement be televised nationally, but it was carried only locally.

Police said Joe Billy Gwin, 28, of Phoenix, would be booked for investigation of seven felony charges: three counts of armed kidnapping, three of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon and at least one count of armed burglary.

The gunman kept another hostage, cameraman Louie

Villa, in a "choke hold" — one arm locked around Villa's neck — while pointing a .38-caliber revolver at Villa's head through much of the ordeal.

Police said during the statement, Gwin held a gun on Close under a table.

The back of Villa's shirt was soaked with blood from a blow to the head the gunman delivered with the butt of his pistol as he burst into the studio.

Two other hostages — floor manager Jack Webb and cameraman Bob Cimino — reached safety earlier when they individually were sent to bring back drinks of water.

In the statement, the man said the public was being mentally programmed through telepathy, and he decried Islam, tunnelvision, sociology and hypnosis.

The statement predicted that a third world war would break out in the 1990s, that Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts will be elected president and that five major cities with 15 million "Anglo men" will be formed in Arkansas, New Mexico, Nebraska and Idaho.

The gunman interrupted Close to add that "these men will be homosexuals."

"I am a homosexual. They will be my brothers," he said, then had Close continue reading the statement. In it he called himself "the man from Islam" but also spoke of Islam as a source of evil.

As Close concluded the rambling statement, which the CBS affiliate broadcast during an interruption of network programming, he told viewers the statement was a "KOOL special presentation."

The man then handed his gun to Close, who placed it on a desk out of reach. The two men then shook hands as police moved in.

Afterward, Close said he felt he remained in control most of the time but "there were a couple of times that I started sucking air a little deeply."

Police Sgt. Mike Murphy said Villa was treated at a local hospital for the head wound and sent home.

Limited Shelters Boost AG's Taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General William French Smith will probably pay an additional $58,800 in federal income taxes as a result of his decision to limit his tax deductions from two oil and gas tax shelters.

Saying he wanted to remove "any shadow of doubt" about his propriety, Smith also mailed back on Friday the $50,000 severance payment he received from a California steel firm nine days before he took office in 1981.

Smith's unprecedented moves followed two years of controversy over the three financial transactions and an attack on them Thursday by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

"It was becoming a political issue," Tom DeCair, Smith's spokesman, said.

Smith's decision on the two controversial tax shelters means that he will give up a total of $117,600 in federal income tax deductions for the years 1980, 1981 and 1982. As a millionaire, Smith is almost certainly in the 50 percent tax bracket, meaning that the decision will force him to pay an additional $58,800 in taxes over the three years.

"Although I earnestly believe that none of these actions are required by propriety or law, public service often invites the use of an even stricter standard. I intend to apply the strictest of standards," Smith said in a statement handed out by his office.

DeCair added that in reaching the decision, Smith had weighed whether he wanted "to fold his tent and go back to California or to stay and become the first attorney general in three decades to serve four years."

Smith said the Office of Government Ethics, which polices conduct throughout the federal government, had questioned only one of the three transactions — the $50,000 severance payment he received when he resigned from the board of directors of Earle M. Jorgensen Co. on Jan. 12, 1981.

Smith said the ethics office had inquired Thursday "whether I was considering any action concerning the severance payment." DeCair said ethics chief J. Jackson Walter had only raised a question and had neither suggested nor demanded any action by Smith.

Plant Saved Itself

44 Seconds To Vermont Yankee Meltdown

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — The first alarm sounded at 12:56 a.m. In the next four minutes the reactor core of the Vermont Yankee nuclear power plant came within 44 seconds — and three safety systems — of starting a meltdown.

Any one of the automatic safety systems was sufficient to end the danger, and they all worked. The plant shut down safely.

Still, the April 24 incident provided a stark reminder, in the words of Public Service Department Commissioner Richard Saudek, that "ultimately it is humans who control this plant."

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission said operators in the control room were off the mark in guessing what was wrong and also failed to realize how the plant had saved itself.

Probably the most serious operational problem at the Vernon plant in its decade of producing power, the incident also was one of the most closely documented at the plant due to investigations by the NRC and the state of Vermont.

The following reconstruction is based on NRC documents.

At 12:50 a.m., two reactor operators and the nuclear safety engineer were in the control room of the 540-megawatt reactor. The shifts had just changed and the plant operators were preparing to lower reactor power from 100 percent to perform routine checks.

Sometime before 12:56, with the power in the process of being reduced to 75 percent of capacity, a valve stuck open on one of the pumps that feed water to the vessel containing the reactor's fuel.

The pumps are turned on manually, but turn off automatically when the water level reaches 170 inches above the top of the fuel, 14 inches above normal.

At 12:56 the rising water level led to a shutdown of the pumps. The first alarm went off. Within six seconds, a control room operator had turned the pumps back on.

But 2½ minutes later when the pumps automatically turned off again — the water level had reached 171 inches — no one in the control room noticed the shutdown. By now their eyes were on the main reactor control panel.

Without any water feeding into the vessel, the water inside the container began boiling off at a rate of about two inches a second. A loss of water, if unchecked, would lead to a meltdown of the reactor core, releasing radiation into the environment.

Twenty-two seconds after the second pump shut down, the water level was down to 136 inches, and the reactor itself turned off automatically.

Fourteen seconds later, the water level hit 87 inches. The emergency core cooling system switched on, pouring water into the vessel at 4,250 gallons a minute. It was the first time the plant's emergency cooling system was used.

It took slightly more than a minute for the emergency cooling system to do its work, bringing the water level up to 173 inches. The plant was safe.

When the pumps first turned off, the two operators quickly went to the main reactor control panel, located at the center of a V-shaped wall of lights, alarms and dials.

The shift supervisor heard the pumps slow down and entered the control room, joining the two others at the main panel. The nuclear safety engineer took a position at the computer console, a few feet behind the others. His post was created after the nation's worst commercial nuclear accident in March 1979 at Three Mile Island.

The safety engineer is supposed to keep an overall eye on events and provide advice to the operators.

Investigation shows that the operators thought they had saved the plant by using the feedwater pumps, unaware that they had turned off again.

The three men in direct control of the plant also were unaware that the emergency core cooling system had switched on — and had provided the critical water.

The nuclear safety engineer, meanwhile, had noticed the emergency system's activation, and assumed the others had too. The NRC has criticized the engineer's lack of communication.

The main question raised was: How close did the Vermont reactor come to a meltdown?

When the emergency core cooling system clicked on, the reactor core was within 87 inches of losing its coolant. But officials said that uncovering of the reactor fuel in those next 44 seconds could never have happened.

First, there were two emergency cooling systems — one high-pressure and the other low-pressure. Both of them switched on, but either would have been sufficient to raise the water level.

At the same time another emergency system switched on, one that isolated the reactor from the rest of the plant and slowed the boiling rate by increasing the pressure inside the vessel. That too would have kept the water from boiling off and exposing the reactor core, officials said.

While the hardware gets good marks, investigators were critical of the workers, complaining that the shift supervisor became too involved in the actual operations and failed to step back to see what was going on.

Officials also are baffled that no one noticed the pumps shutting down, because the feedwater indicators were just to the left of where the men were standing.

A fifth person will be added to the control room this summer.

Oil Industry Says Summer Gas Adequate

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the peak driving season beginning this Memorial Day weekend, the oil industry says there's no call for concern about gasoline shortages this summer. But prices are rising again.

The industry's upbeat outlook for summer gasoline supplies comes despite declines in refiners' stockpiles, reimposition of allocations by several oil companies and speculation that motorists may travel more between now and Labor Day than they did last summer.

Meanwhile, analysts say retail prices for gasoline at the pump have been increasing but they still are not as high as last year.

The American Petroleum Institute, the industry's chief lobbyist here, said there will be no shortages because there are still surpluses of unrefined crude oil and plenty of refinery capacity to convert it into gasoline if needed.

"We know of no motorist in any part of the country who will have trouble buying gasoline during normal business hours this summer," Charles J. DiBona, the institute's president, said Thursday.

DiBona said U.S. oil companies now have a 50 million barrel excess of crude oil that could be processed into an additional 40 million to 80 million gallons of gasoline a day by refineries now running at only 65 percent capacity. Those refineries are now producing about 250 million gallons of gasoline a day.

He also cited the 255 million barrels of crude that the government has in its Strategic Petroleum Reserve — something that didn't even exist in the last summer shortages of 1979.

Only a major political disruption such as the 1973 Arab oil boycott or massive breakdowns at the nation's refineries could cause serious problems, he said. But he also noted that the nation is now importing only half the oil it was in 1978.

The institute reported earlier this month that refineries in April increased their shipments of gasoline to wholesalers by 1 percent, the first time in three years that demand has been greater than year-before levels.

But DiBona said that doesn't mean that consumer demand is up. Because of price increases the past month, the nation's 10,000 wholesalers and 190,000 gasoline stations may be stockpiling gasoline in anticipation of further price increases, he said.

"There's a lot of speculation that people are going to go out and do a lot more driving this summer, but we don't know that," DiBona said. "It's very competitive out there and that suggests there's plenty of gasoline available."

SOS Program Given To Hereford Lions Club

Special Organization Services (SOS), a courtesy program offered by Hereford State Bank, was explained to the Hereford Lions Club when Irene McKinster appeared as guest speaker Wednesday.

Mrs. McKinster, introduced by program chairman Larry Alley, provided the program for the club's weekly luncheon meeting.

President Charlie Bell introduced Tina Watson, who has been selected as the club's sweetheart for 1982-83. A senior at HHS next school year and a drum major in the band, Tina is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Watson.

Mrs. McKinster told Lions that SOS is a program designed to provide systematic organization and direction of personal affairs following the death or disability of a family member, and when there is a change in lifestyle.

The service makes it easier to locate documents and refer them to the appropriate sources, to establish an inventory of personal property and other information, and to assist survivors in contacting professionals, such as attorneys, accountants and insurance people.

She emphasized that SOS is offered free. It is a courtesy program which is sponsored in 40 states.

Bess Werner Dedication Slated This Afternoon

Tape Wyche Collection

Ruth McBride, a member of Deaf Smith County Historical Society, has been helping to rework the Tape Wyche collection (above) as well as other museum exhibits in preparation for the reception, at which Historical Society members will serve refreshments. Wyche was a chuckwagon cook and left his collection of copper cooking utensils and other items to the museum. His father started the Wyche Community and School.

Dolls of Yesteryear

Jarred and Beth Haile, children of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Haile, and great-grandchildren of Bess Werner, look over the Dolls and Toys of Yesteryear exhibit, which, like many of the museum collections, is made up of contributions by many present and former residents of Deaf Smith County.

The northwest room of the Deaf Smith County Historical Museum will be dedicated as a tribute to Bess Turrentine Werner this afternoon. The public is invited to help celebrate the dedication at a reception between 3 and 4:30 p.m. Refreshments will be served by members of the Historical Society.

Mrs. Werner was born Nov. 4, 1899 at Mexico, Mo. She came to Deaf Smith County as Bess Ridgeway in 1909 with her parents and they settled on what was to become the El Torro Ranch, located 10 miles north of Hereford.

She taught in the Askren School, which later became the Dawn School. She was a charter member of the Pioneer Study Club and the Hereford Art Guild, and was instrumental in encouraging the Guild to give a sizeable contribution to the fine arts room of the museum, which is being dedicated to her memory.

Mrs. Werner was also a member of the Westway Home Demonstration Club and was cited as "HD Woman of the Year" in 1962.

At the age of 60, she was director of the Hereford Creamery Association. She served as trustee of the Westway School for a number of years and was a candidate for County Judge twice.

She also assumed duties on the farm, plowing the land and hauling grain to town, raising pigs, owning a herd of Jersey cows which she milked and made butter and cheese for her family. In the early 1960's she began collecting memorabilia from the early days of Deaf Smith County in the barn on her farm four and a half miles west of Hereford where her son, George Turrentine, and his family now live.

Visitors from every state and five countries came to see the artifacts which Mrs. Werner had collected at the "Barn Museum" and 4-H members later took the museum on as a project.

In 1966, the museum was moved to its present location beside the library, and Mrs. Werner continued to support its growth. She felt that the museum should always be growing, according to her daughter-in-law, Johnnie Turrentine, who has also been influential in building up the museum.

Mrs. Werner died March 8, 1979, when she was 89 years old. She raised three children, George; Daniel, a resident of Pacific Grove, Calif.; and Mary Roach, who lives in Dallas and will be in Hereford for the dedication.

Also featured this afternoon will be the other displays at the museum. Many have been revamped, rearranged, or added to in preparation for the special event.

Some of these exhibits include fashions from the 1920's, toys and dolls of yesteryear, western exhibits, a new quilt display, and the Vogele Millinery Parlor replica, which has just been completed.

Lois Gilliland is executive director of the Deaf Smith County Historical Museum and treasurer of the Historical Society. Her staff assistant at the museum is Sylvia Castillo. Other officers include Donald Hicks, president; Ruth McBride, vice-president, display; Mary Elizabeth Barnard, vice-president, textiles; Helen Rose, secretary; and A.J. Schroeter, Ex-officio chairman of the Deaf Smith County Historical Commission.

Other members of the Society are Andrew Kershen, Mr. and Mrs. George Turrentine, Ruby Kendrick Sears, Marjorie Mehlberg, Meredith Wilcox, Mrs. Frank Prowell, Nancy Hayes, Mrs. Jack Wilcox, Wilhelmina Wimberly, Bea Barrett, Lavon Nieman, Linda Reinauer, and Sue James.

The annual membership meeting of the Historical Society will be held at 2 p.m. at the museum, with the dedication immediately following.

Graduation Memories

Beth Haile, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Haile, admires the graduation dress which was worn by her great-grandmother, Bess Turrentine Werner, in 1907. The public is invited to a special ceremony this afternoon from 3 to 4:30 p.m. at the Deaf Smith County Historical Museum, at which time the northwest room of the museum will be dedicated to Bess Werner, who is acknowledged as the founder of the museum.

Early Day Hats

Mrs. Jim (Carol) Haile, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Turrentine, tries on one of the old hats which make up the fine collection of the Vogele Millinery Parlor. The original shop was located on Main Street, Hereford, between 1910 and 1949. Carol is the granddaughter of Bess Werner.

Vogele Millinery Parlor

Ruth McBride and Mrs. George (Johnnie) Turrentine, daughter-in-law of Bess Turrentine Werner, make a last minute check of Vogele Millinery Parlor, a replica of an early day Main Street shop owned by Mrs. N.C. Vogele. The main body of the exhibit was from the Una Norton Hutcheon collection, whose hat concession was in the White and Kirk Department Store in Amarillo for many years. The hat shop museum collection was always the dream of Johnnie, and has finally been readied for display.

'Attitudes' Tough Part of Teaching, Says Devers

HHS Choral Director Opts for Life on Farm

By LINDA CAUDLE
Family News Editor

Having lived "out in the country" a little over a mile outside the Hereford city limits for almost three years, Bill Devers, choral director at Hereford High School, has become accustomed to the open air and has resigned from the public school system to try "just being a pig farmer."

Bill will be associated with Hereford Livestock Co., along with Louis Woodford. He started working with the company earlier this year and will go into it full-time now that school is out.

Hereford Livestock is mainly involved with buying and selling hogs and cattle, serving as a broker. Bill will also be raising some hogs himself on his two acres of land.

He had never lived on a farm before, but had always wanted to and had worked on farms on and off all his life. He finds working with animals interesting and is looking forward to this new direction in his life, feeling that he will have more freedom with his new job.

Bill and his wife, Elva, and their three children—Diana and Monica, who attend La Plata, and Scott, who goes to school at Bluebonnet—have been in Hereford for a number of years.

Bill's wife, Elva, teaches preschool exceptional children at Shirley Elementary School. She loves to teach, says Bill, and is presently working on her counselor's certificate. She accompanies the Chamber Singers at rehearsals and concerts.

After Bill earned his B.M.E. degree from West Texas State University in 1966, he moved to Hereford, where he began teaching choral music in the Hereford Independent School District. At one time he was assistant

Although he has resigned from his position as Director of Choral Music, Bill still plans to be involved in music through the Hereford Chamber Singers, which he has directed since the group's inception in 1974.

"There is a good possibility that I'll teach again," he says, "but it's not for me just now."

"I'm not afraid to try new things," adds Bill. For example, he has done such varied things as carpentry, truck driving, working at a funeral home, farming, and oil field work. "I am constantly open to change," he comments.

When asked about some of the most rewarding things he found about his 15 years of teaching, Bill stated that it would be "seeing kids mature and being instrumental in helping them to grasp concepts about life. I like trying to help people be what they're capable of being."

"I will miss the association with kids that are really eager to learn," says Bill, "but although not many people realize or acknowledge it, that is a fairly small percentage."

Bill says that one of his main concerns about teaching, especially in high school, is involvement after graduation. Many quit trying to learn, particularly in the area of music, after they get out of school, unless they are highly motivated and music is an intrinsic thing.

"That's why I'm so big on Chamber Singers," says Bill. "I wish society was structured to have more community choirs and musical organizations."

Bill also plays the tuba and says that he might even participate in a city band if one ever got started in Hereford. "I'd rather participate than watch someone else do something," he comments.

Bill says he has no plans of leaving Hereford. "I can't imagine a place being any better than Hereford," he says. "There is definitely a spirit here—the way the Chamber of Commerce pushes for the community and the progressive attitude of the citizens and their willingness to do and to become involved."

About two and a half years ago, Bill joined Toastmasters, a group that meets once a week at 6:30 a.m. to exchange ideas through prepared speeches, extemporaneous talks, and discussions. Members are encouraged to learn to speak up with confidence in a group situation and in front of people.

To prepare for the meetings and his speeches, Bill has begun reading a variety of books, many of them dealing with positive mental attitudes, such as one he is currently reading entitled "The Sky is the Limit." It was given to him by a graduating senior in one of his classes.

"I have loved to read all of my life, and I consider the types of things I'm reading now as 'feeding my mind.'"

Bill believes that there is no limit to what one can do with a positive mental attitude, adding that people have a tendency to blame other people and things for what they are rather than saying, "I am what I am because that's what I want to be."

"I think a lot of people get locked into a certain 'comfort zone' and would love to try something different but never do," he says. "We must not barter our potential for security. I've had to stop and contemplate and ask myself, 'what is security?' and for me, now, it is in my mind rather than in holding on to a certain job just to be secure and stable."

Bill feels that many of the changes which have taken place in his 15 years of teaching have been natural and good, but that some things have been rather disturbing. One of these is attitudes.

"The worst part is a selfish concept—always 'me, me, me' and wanting everything done 'my way,'" says Bill. "I think it needs to be taught in school that 'what you think is what you are.'"

"A Harvard research study has said that success is 85 percent attitude and 15 percent aptitude, but we spend most of our time in school working on aptitude. I feel that we need to teach good attitudes. Kids can say a lot of things, but as far as using it in their lives, it doesn't get very far unless they are sincere."

Duggan, Meiwes Exchange Vows

A pair of spiral candelabra strewn with greenery and assorted rainbow colored carnations and small mums to match the bridesmaids' dresses adorned St. Anthony's Catholic Church Saturday afternoon as Donna Lena Duggan and Bernard Joseph Meiwes exchanged wedding vows.

The Rev. Pete De Benedillo, of Immaculate Conception in Vega, performed the ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Willis R. Duggan and Mr. and Mrs. Steve Meiwes, Sr., all of Hereford.

Serving as groomsmen were Mike Meiwes, brother of the groom, Gene Meiwes of Moran, Kan., Kevin Downing of Canyon, and Willis Dean Duggan, brother of the bride.

Ushers included Danny Allen, Randy Alexander, Terry Huffaker, Ronnie Dixon and Roy Giddens. Cindy Meiwes, sister of the groom, and Faye Lynn Blevins of Amarillo lit the candles.

Donna Kendall and Ray Owens provided wedding music, accompanied by Mrs. Allen Evers. Principal selections included "Wedding Song," "Our Father," "On This Day," and "Twelfth of Never."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a silk and polyester organza gown trimmed in beruffled chantilly lace and featuring a Queen Anne neckline and multi-ruffled hemline with chapel length train. Her matching veil was draped from a headpiece decorated in pearls and lettuce leaf trim with chantilly lace.

She wore her mother's single strand pearl necklace and pearl earrings which were a gift from the groom. Her bouquet was a silk flower cascade of yellow roses surrounded by carnations in colors of the bridesmaid's dresses and accented with baby's breath. All silk flower arrangements were made by the groom's mother.

The bride's attendants were each attired in an empire waist gown with thin straps of Primrose and covered with a lace cape in different colors of the rainbow including yellow, pink, blue, lavender, and mint green. Each carried a silk flower bouquet to match her dress which consisted of daisies and roses with baby's breath.

A dinner and dance were held at the Knights of Columbus Hall following the ceremony. Sherri Blevins registered guests, while Sheila Herr and Alice Vargas served cake and Stacie Rhodes served beverages.

Others assisting with the reception were Mmes. Kay Morrison, Elaine Borman, Ed Rohrback, Larry Harris, and Elmo Hall.

Five heart shaped cakes surrounded the three-tiered wedding cake, which was topped with a gold cross and double wedding rings. The cake was highlighted with a fountain and was decorated with hand molded roses and daisies in colors of the attendants' dresses and flowers.

The couple will be at home in Hereford after June 6. The bride is a 1981 Hereford High School graduate and is presently employed at McMorries, Inc. The bridegroom, a 1979 HHS graduate, is currently a pre-med student at West Texas State University and is employed at World of Health.

The groom's parents hosted a rehearsal dinner Friday night before the wedding ceremony at K-Bob's Steak House.

COURAGE NOW
By Bob Wear
Being afraid, now and then, is part of being human; and there is much in our world to cause fear. We cannot ignore the daily happenings, or the possibilities of what may happen in the future; however, we cannot afford to let fear dominate us.

"Fear is implanted in us as a preservative from evil; but its duty, like that of other passions, is not to overbear reason, but to assist it.—It should not be permitted to tyrannize in the imagination, to raise phantoms of horror, or to beset life with super-numerary distresses."—Johnson.

We cannot live scared, but there will be some fear. A satisfactory life requires that we be courageous; not foolhardy or unrealistic, but courageous. This will not mean that we are blind to dangers, but that we equip ourselves so that we can live in the strength of good courage. "Tisn't life that matters; it's the courage you bring to it."—H. Walpole.

If fear be the total motivation for action, the action will often be unsatisfactory. Such domination of a life will de-vitalize, and dissipate the essential life elements. This condition creates a climate in which evil and wrong grow bolder, and expand beyond all rightful limits. There is a better way.

Courage can be acquired, if we are willing to put forth the effort, and accept the life discipline which produces it. It is closely related to faith, a clear conscience and a proper sense of values.

"True courage is the result of reasoning. Resolution lies more in the head than in the veins; and a just sense of honor and of infamy, of duty and of religion, will carry us farther than all the force of mechanism."—Collier.

The times demand courageous living, but this has been the demand of each generation. It has been well said, "The courageous die only once, but the cowardly die a thousand times."

The abundant life is essentially and fundamentally the life of courage. We cannot be courageous just because we think that it is desirable to be so; but with sufficient effort, we can learn to be people of good courage. This desired life condition is not the absence of fear, but is, rather the triumph over fear.

We can encourage ourselves, and we can encourage each other. Our great need is "courage now."

Retirees Can Be Valuable

COLLEGE STATION — May is both "Older American's Month" and the month for honoring volunteers. Taken together, honors go to a special combination—the older volunteer.

Older adults can be a valuable community resource when it comes to filling leadership positions, reminds Judith L. Warren, family life education specialist-aging, with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

"Being a contributing community leader provides a valuable role for the retired person seeking a new dimension to his or her life," Warren says.

Some retired people, the specialist says, welcome a "second career" in volunteering. "These retirees are willing to assume leadership positions that require day-to-day efforts on a year round basis," she adds.

Many retired people, however, desire a more flexible volunteer schedule. These individuals are quite willing to be volunteer leaders but desire short term projects.

Several steps should be considered in order to successfully involve retired adults in volunteer leadership, Warren suggests.

"First, determine the scope of the project. Second, identify those potential 'career' volunteers to head up lengthy projects," she says.

Then focus on other retired people for short term projects or those requiring intermittent involvement. Examples of such projects would be a public television fund-raising drive held annually or a series of educational programs on personal safety, she adds.

"Be sure to communicate clearly the scope of the project—both in terms of length and responsibilities—to the individual being enlisted as a volunteer leader. Time is usually the critical concern of the older volunteer; responsibilities can be managed," the specialist says.

By following these steps when enlisting assistance, one is more likely to come up with a winning combination—the retired volunteer leader, Warren says.

Rush Luncheon Slated

Members of the Hereford Panhellenic Association will serve as hostesses during a Rush information luncheon scheduled from 11 a.m. until noon Thursday at the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame, 515 Ave. B.

New high school graduates interested in going through college Rush in the fall and their mothers are invited to attend.

Local girls who are in sororities will be presenting an informal style show to demonstrate how to dress appropriately for Rush week. Rush rules, scheduling of parties and other specifics of Rush week will also be discussed by sorority girls.

Recent graduates interested in going through Rush this fall should register through their respective colleges by sending for a Rush information sheet and or a Rush packet by writing to the Dean of Women or Panhellenic office.

Registration should also be made through the local Panhellenic Association. Information sheets may be obtained from Marsha Winget at 364-0639.

At the luncheon, new graduates are asked to have their local Rush information sheets completed with transcripts and pictures ready. This registration does not obligate one to go through Rush or to pledge but will prove invaluable in the event that the decision is made to do so.

If unable to attend the party, please make arrangements to have the information to Ms. Winget by June 3.

The local association was organized in 1977 to help educate Hereford's college bound girls about sororities and to assist them in joining the sorority of their choice through the recommendation of local women.

Anyone holding membership in a national Greek letter sorority is invited to join and may do so by contacting Susan Perrin at 289-5965 or Carolyn Canon at 364-7177.

Some Vitamins Poisonous If Taken In Large Doses

COLLEGE STATION — Some vitamins can be poisonous if consumed in large amounts, says Dr. Cass Ryan-Crowe, a food and nutrition specialist.

Ryan-Crowe is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Fat-soluble vitamins are of particular concern because these nutrients are stored in the body when excess amounts are ingested, the specialist explains.

Therefore, if a megadose, or an amount several times the recommended daily allowance, is taken over a long period of time, toxic side effects may show up, she warns.

For example, vitamin A can cause hair loss, increased cranial pressure and pain in the extremities if overtaken, Ryan-Crowe points out. In addition, vitamin D can cause anorexia, weakness, constipation and elevated serum calcium levels if doses exceed RDA, the specialist says.

Vitamin E in megadoses can cause weakness and fatigue as well as skin rashes and giddiness, she reports.

Modeling New Fashions

Local college girls who are sorority members will be presented in an informal style show during the Hereford Panhellenic Association's Rush Information Luncheon. It is scheduled from 11 a.m. until noon Thursday at the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame, 515 Ave. B. Girls modeling will include, from left, Colleen Keating from West Texas and Crystal Zinser and Karen Compton, both from the University of Texas. (Brand Photo by Sandy Pankey)

Beware Of Insect Dangers

—Slight reactions, including itching, inflammation of the skin or anxiety.

—Moderate reactions, including swelling, abdominal pain or nausea.

—Severe reactions, including difficulty in breathing or swelling, hoarseness or confusion.

Most severe would probably be a shock reaction that causes a drop in blood pressure, collapse or unconsciousness, says Hamman. Moderate and severe reactions from an insect bite or sting are enough cause to see a doctor.

To reduce contacts with venomous insects, Hamman advises people not to walk around in the yard barefooted, to keep ripened fruits and watermelons covered when outdoors, and to avoid mowing lawns or working in flower beds when bees or wasps are active. Remain still if a stinging insect is near, says the entomologist. Brush it off if it attacks but don't slap it to prevent a sting. If attacked by a swarm of wasps, yellow jackets, hornets or bees, leave the area immediately while protecting the face with your hands and arms.

Among the variety of venoms produced by insects are these:

—Those producing blisters, caused by certain stinging caterpillars, centipedes and blister beetles.

—Those attacking the central nervous system, produced by scorpions, black widow spiders, mites, scorpions, chiggers, bees, wasps, yellow jackets and hornets.

—Those destroying skin tissue, produced by fire ants, wheel bugs, brown recluse spiders, mites, scorpions, chiggers, bees, wasps, yellow jackets and hornets.

—Those preventing blood from clotting, caused by fleas, lice, mites, ticks, biting flies and tree bugs.

Ann Landers

Disgusted With 'Uninhibited' Family

DEAR ANN LANDERS: It's past my bedtime, but I am so furious and disgusted with "Uninhibited in Charlotte, N.C." that I must write this letter.

It's fine and dandy if she and her husband get their kicks running around the house in the nude-and even coming to the table au naturel. But God forbid (and he did) bringing up children in such an environment. Even Adam and Eve sewed fig leaves together to cover their nakedness.

"N.C." pointed out that her teenage son and daughter have no curiosity whatsoever about sex. Small wonder the curiosity is gone. Nothing has been left to the imagination.

What a pity those children will never experience the beauty of nature from the viewpoint of discovery instead of stark nudity with the breakfast cereal.-We Love You In Atlanta

DEAR LOVE: Thanks for voting nay with me, but not all the writers were on our side. Florida and California nudists called me an evil-minded old hag and a peanut-brained imbecile.

I also received several several invitations from nudist camps who assured me I would become "one of them" once I experienced the joy of romping in the altogether among the true believers. I remain unconvinced.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Several years ago you printed a column about depression and quoted a doctor from Long Island who described the symptoms. Until that time I had no idea what was wrong with me. It opened up a whole new world. I realize I was depressed and needed professional help. I was lucky and got a wonderful doctor on the first try. We did a great deal of talking, and he put me on medication. Today I am a new person.

Please, Ann, print that column again. There must be many readers who didn't see it the first time.-Happy And Productive In Fort Wayne DEAR HAPPY: I'm so pleased you were helped. Here is the column you requested.

Between six and eight million Americans suffer from severe depression. Dr. John Kane, who heads the depression clinic at the Long Island Jewish-Hillside Medical Center, listed the common warning signals of severe depression in an interview with Olive Evans of the New York Times.

- Here they are:
1. Feelings of sadness and hopelessness ("I will never be better").
 2. Loss of the "pleasure capacity," the ability to enjoy anything.
 3. Loss of interest in sex.

4. Loss of appetite (or overeating).
5. Insomnia (or sleeping too much).
6. Overreacting or not reacting at all.
7. Difficulty in concentration, remembering and making decisions.
8. Becoming upset by trivial things.
9. Feelings of worthlessness ("I'm no good").
10. Withdrawal from friends and relatives. Making excuses to avoid them.

If you see yourself in six or more of the above, you are severely depressed. I urge you to take this column to your physician and talk to him about your depression. Ask him to direct you to the help you need.

Accent The Positive

To develop self-awareness, look at yourself positively first, then improve those things that seem to be negative, says Cindy B. Wilson, a family life education specialist.

Wilson is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

By starting out with all the positive things you can think of about yourself, you will then think of some of your negative characteristics, the specialist points out.

It helps to write these things down for a clearer picture of yourself, Wilson notes. For example, some positive traits might be things you like to do and have the ability to do well or traits or characteristics of which you are proud, she suggests.

On the negative side, write down things you don't like to do, activities you would like to do but don't have the ability or training to do or traits or characteristics which do not please you, the specialist continues.

After you have listed all these thoughts, go back and pat yourself on the back for all the positive things you have written, she advises.

Then look at the negative list and decide which one bothers you the most and think of ways you can overcome the problem, Wilson says.

Americans Consuming Record Amounts Of Corn Sweetener

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans are consuming record amounts of sweeteners made from corn while reducing their intake of regular sugar, says the Agriculture Department. Last year, according to the latest figures, per capita consumption of corn sweeteners averaged 44.9 pounds per person, up from 40.6 pounds in 1980. At the same time, per capita consumption of refined cane and beet sugar averaged 79.4 pounds, down from 83.7 pounds in 1980. That was the lowest per capita U.S. sugar consumption since 1946 when it was 75.1 pounds. The figures were included Wednesday in a new outlook situation report by the department's Economic Research Service. Corn sweeteners are comprised of two major corn syrup products — high fructose corn syrup (HFCS) and glucose, followed by dextrose. Through advances in the milling process, HFCS has taken over the lead in the corn sweetener field, making up 23.1 pounds or more than half of the 1981 per capita total of 44.9 pounds consumed by each American.

Only a decade ago, HFCS comprised a small fraction of the corn sweetener market which was then dominated by glucose and, to a much lesser extent, dextrose. "Corn sweeteners now account for nearly 36 percent of total caloric sweetener consumption, compared with only 10 percent in 1960," the report said. "Refined sugar's share has dropped to 63 percent from about 88 percent in 1960."

The reference to caloric sweeteners was to distinguish those from saccharin, the only non-caloric sweetener listed in current statistics. Per capita consumption of saccharin last year was 7.1 pounds, about the same as the level of recent years.

Per capita use refers to total consumption by Americans, including sweeteners in soft drinks, cake mixes, candies and hundreds of other products, in addition to sugar and syrup bought for use in the home.

The rise in popularity of HFCS has had an impact on corn supplies and demand, officials say.

"The U.S. corn refiner grind will likely total a record again this year — around 535 million bushels," the report said. "Trade sources indicate that the grind totaled around 500 million bushels in calendar 1981, up from 465 million in 1980. The majority of the increased grind reflected larger HFCS shipments."

Although corn sweeteners have made big inroads into the U.S. market, the availability of refined sugar from cane and sugarbeets still is a major factor in the market.

With huge world sugar crops and rising inventories, sugar prices plummeted last year, causing sharp declines in corn sweeteners.

For example, by December prices of HFCS were 17 to 23 percent below what they were in January of last year, the report said. Further declines occurred in early 1982.

What happens the rest of the year will depend in part on the size of the 1982 corn crop, sugar prices under a new U.S. import quota system, and on the general economy.

Schroeter, Nelson On Committee

A.J. Schroeter, chairman of the Deaf Smith County Historical Commission and Judge Glen Nelson will be working with the Texas Department of Agriculture in the Family Land Heritage Program.

Ag Commissioner Reagan Brown said this year the department hopes to surpass the 1,500 mark of Texas properties registered by bringing in as many qualified applicants as possible.

Since 1974, the program has honored 1,443 Texas properties.

The Texas Department of Agriculture (TDA) is entering its eighth year in sponsoring the program which honors "those families that have persevered for a century or more in the cultivation and production of food and fiber," Brown said. "Undoubtedly, these families, with their unflinching determination have been the backbone of Texas agriculture."

The registration period will extend from May 15 to August 15.

Those who qualify are honored in state ceremonies and receive a certificate and a copy of the Family Land Heritage Registry. The publication has a brief history of each farm or ranch and includes old photographs of the families and homes.

Basic requirements include the following: Continuous agricultural production on the farm-ranch for 100 years, land ownership within the family, complete operation or supervision of the farm-ranch production by family members who are Texas residents and a size of 10 acres or more with agricultural sales of $50 or more a year, or if less than 10 acres, sales of at least $250 a year. County judges must approve all applications.

Persons who meet the basic qualifications and wish to enter can obtain an application from the county judge, county Historical Commission chairperson, the nearest TDA district office, or by writing to Commissioner Reagan V. Brown, Texas Department of Agriculture, P.O. Box 12847, Austin, Texas 78711.

Fresh Food Helps Make Ends Meet

COLLEGE STATION — The thought of obtaining fresh fruits and vegetables at a reasonable price appeals to most of our palates as well as our pocketbooks—especially now when making ends meet is somewhat more difficult than it used to be.

On the other hand, weekend gardeners who wind up with more produce than their families can use generally would rather see it go to a good cause than watch it spoil.

Both of these elements have brought a rejuvenation of the local community market concept, points out Gordon Powell, an economist and consumers interested in buying fresh farm produce.

Backyard gardeners should grow a wide enough variety of product to provide a good selection for consumers, suggests the economist. Growers generally rent their own stalls at the market and choose their own price and quality control committees.

"In the summer, many people buy vegetables in hamper lots to use in home canning and freezing. Therefore, growers should have various quantities of fresh produce available," advises Powell.

"In addition, homemade cakes, bread, cider and any other items may be sold."

To boost sales, growers need to use advertising effectively. More people can be made aware of the market with advertising spots on local television and radio stations and in newspapers.

One difficulty for a community in establishing a market is that it's sometimes hard to identify growers. Those who would be willing to participate are the small, weekend gardeners rather than the established, bigtime producers, notes the economist.

Time is another problem. Someone has to sit with the

First Irrigations Of Corn Can Vary

First irrigation of corn is one of the few opportunities to limit total seasonal irrigation without also significantly limiting yield. Dates to achieve best response to the initial summer irrigation are not the same each year.

Corn water use is usually low during early vegetative growth in comparison to requirements later. Also, plant roots are rapidly developing and are encouraged to extend deeper into the soil root zone by the lack of continuous abundant moisture in the top twelve inches. However, moisture levels should be excellent in especially the second and third foot at this time.

Field tests conducted during the past five growing seasons by Charles Schlabs near Hereford, Texas indicate that in three of five years, the initial summer irrigation can be delayed one week from normal practice without significantly limiting corn yields. The tests also show that the initial application can be two weeks later in one of five years. Schlabs conducted the tests in cooperation with Deaf Smith County Extension Agent Justin McBride.

A one-week delay in irrigation cut yields 715 and 740 pounds per acre in 1981 and 1980, respectively, but yields were 0 to 75 pounds less from irrigation seven days later in the other three years. In 1979, yields were only 230 pounds per acre less where initial irrigation was delayed two weeks, but yields ranged from 955 to 1850 pounds less the other four years. See TABLE 1. Corn was planted the last week in April or first week in May each year. First normal irrigation averaged 50 days after planting. Irrigations to test plots were not until seven or fourteen days later.

Good soil moisture levels should be available for corn by the eight to ten-leaf growth stage. Corn begins rapid vegetative growth at this stage. Plants normally grow four to five feet during the next three to four weeks. Adequate soil moisture is important during this stage.

Excessively high soil moisture levels prior to the eight-leaf growth stage can cause shallow rooting. Plants grown in high soil moisture levels before eight leaves develop are likely to be more lush and less tolerant to moisture stress that may occur later in the season.

The irrigation rate is also a major factor on when to apply the first irrigation each year. Tensiometers or other soil moisture sensors can aid growers in identifying the fine line on when to apply the first summer irrigation.

Soil moisture can be depleted in the first foot to a reading of two by gypsum block sensors before applying the first irrigation, if the reading at the second and third foot are eight or above.

An estimated 75,000 volunteers serving at the 172 Veterans Administration medical centers provide more than 10 million hours of work annually. About 350 national and local organizations take an active part in this effort.

Brucellosis Rules Tighter On Texas

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Oklahoma, Missouri and Iowa are three of several states that are tightening brucellosis regulations on Texas cattle, says executive director John Holcombe of the Texas Animal Health Commission. Holcombe said Missouri already has imposed stiffer entry requirements on Texas livestock, and Oklahoma's tougher regulations go into effect July 1.

Iowa also has begun more testing of Texas livestock for the disease.

"It appears that Texas livestock producers can expect more states to increase their requirements for Texas' cattle relating to brucellosis," Holcombe said in a statement.

He said states are doing this to comply with proposed federal rules, and because states free — or virtually free — of brucellosis want to remain that way.

According to commission records, Oklahoma received 194,000 head of cattle and calves from Texas in 1980. Iowa received 63,000 head and Missouri 3,000.

Nationwide, Texas shipped more than 2.25 million head of cattle to other states in 1980.

"The Texas livestock industry does indeed depend on other states for markets, so it is imperative that we in this state get on with the job of controlling brucellosis," Holcombe said.

"THE VOTING RIGHTS ACT is not broken, so there is no need to fix it," says Attorney General William French Smith. The Reagan administration opposes efforts to strengthen the 1965 law by making "effect" rather than "intent" the test used to determine whether an electoral practice is discriminatory.

ICA Holding 8th Annual Convention June 17-19

AUSTIN—The Independent Cattlemen's Association is having its eighth annual convention and trade show in Corpus Christi, June 17-19.

South Texas cattle feeder Leon Miller will be the keynote speaker of the event hosting commercial cattlemen from throughout the state. Ben Baisdon, Director of Marketing for the Texas Department of Agriculture and Hilmar Moore, National Chairman of the Beef Industry Council will also address the assembly.

All meetings and activities will be at the Bayfront Plaza Convention Center. The headquarters hotel is the Sheraton Marina Inn.

"Our theme for the meeting of 'Serving and Saving Rural Texas' will be carried throughout presentations by our speakers and business proposals, all in the scenic surroundings of the gulf coast," said ICA President Roy Wheeler of Pleasanton.

At Annual Wheat Field Day

Improvements In Production Shown

About 250 people attending the Annual Wheat Field Day Thursday at the USDA Research Laboratory at Bushland saw research aimed at improving efficiency of Wheat Production.

One example is a new line of wheat developed at Bushland that has consistently beat TAM 105 in yield tests. Every bushel per acre average increase in yield from a new variety or cultural practice increases total production in the Panhandle of Texas on 4 million bushels, according to Dr. Kenneth Porter, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station Wheat Breeder.

People were able to look through irrigated and dryland small grain nurseries. At one location, several hybrid wheats from Cargill, Rohm & Haas, and Monsanto companies were being compared to standard varieties. Rohm and Haas has developed a chemical that gives male sterility when sprayed on wheat. This enables them to make and test many crosses with a minimum of effort. In the future hybrid wheat may yield more than pure line varieties. Presently this is not the case.

Dr. David Worrall, outstanding young small grain researcher from the Texas A&M Center at Vernon, pointed out that Newton, Vona, and TAM 106 were the highest yielding varieties in the 1981 tests at Bushland. "TAM 105 has the highest average in both irrigated and dryland evaluations made over several years," he said.

Methods of irrigating and fertilizing new high yielding wheats were shown by Jack Musick and Dr. Harold Eck, USDA Scientists at Bushland. Musick is irrigating six varieties with eight irrigation treatments. He says his study Registration for the convention is slated for 2-5 p.m. at the Sheraton Thursday, June 17. It will continue in the Bayfront Plaza Convention Center from 6-8 p.m.

Friday, June 18 at 9:30 a.m. Miller will address the first general session with suggestions on expanding the cattle economy of the U.S. and Mexico. He will be followed by Baisdon, Moore and Becky Terry, president of the Texas CowBelles. Becky Dobson, editor of the "Independent Cattlemen," will be the final speaker of the morning. A luncheon is scheduled at 12 noon with nationwide farm realtor Greg Bamford speaking.

Afternoon sessions Friday will be highlighted by a concentration on ICA service to youth. Tyler Thomas, regional field coordinator for Texans' War on Crime and Drugs, will detail possible ways for ICA to assist in deterring crime since it is increasing in rural areas faster than in urban areas. Erlene Goertz, Bastrop county ICA chapter secretary, will describe her involvement in Thomas' program.

Four leaders of youth organizations will follow at 3 p.m. with suggestions on how ICA can better serve their groups. These organizations include the FFA, 4-H, FHA and Texas Young Farmers.

Friday will be capped by a dance with music by top rated singer George Strait from 8-12 p.m.

Saturday, June 19, the morning general assembly will begin with an update on national issues by Congressman Wes Watkins, ICA political consultant Larry Meyers and Agriculture Coordinator for the Office of State-Federal Relations, Ken Jordan.

The ICA House of Delegates will vote on resolutions and the election of new officers the remainder of the morning.

will determine drought tolerance of genetically different varieties and mechanisms plants use to void or tolerate drought. The researcher also is measuring reflected light in different wavelengths and infrared light bands with remote sensing. This is a cooperative study with NASA in Houston and eventually the condition of wheat fields over the world will be determined from satellites.

Ten or twenty years ago, irrigated wheat yielded 40 to 50 bushels per acre. Fertilizer use recommendations in use today were developed at that time. "New wheat varieties like TAM 105 have the potential of yielding over 100 bushels per acre and we are taking another look at fertilizer needs," Dr. Eck said. According to the scientist, maximum yield from the study in 1981 was over 100 bushels per acre. In that treatment TAM 105 was planted September 15, received preplant irrigation and three spring waterings along with 190 pounds of nitrogen and 80 pounds per acre of P205. Wheat planted one month later and treated the same yielded 93 bushels per acre.

Reggie Jones, USDA Scientist, discussed a new experiment in which runoff and erosion will be determined from a dryland wheat-sorghum-fallow cropping sequence with sweep tillage and no-tillage. He said atrazine, Glean, 2,4-D, Paraquat and Roundup will be used to control weeds in the no-tillage system.

Glean is a new herbicide that will fit well in any limited tillage system with wheat. Dr. A.F. Wiese, Texas A&M Weed Scientist said that one ounce active ingredient of the herbicide has controlled volunteer sorghum and weeds from April after sorghum harvest to wheat planting in the fall. Applying the herbicide in March to growing wheat has controlled weeds in the crop and eliminated several tillage operations during the summer. "In these cultural systems, volunteer wheat has to be controlled by plowing or with Paraquat and Roundup," he said.

At the dryland wheat nursery, Gary Peterson, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station Researcher, showed the visitors experimental wheat lines and breeding materials in 15,000 individual plots. He said, "Objectives of our wheat improvement research includes developing resistance to drought, greenbugs, wheat streak mosaic, and other diseases." Improving protein, quality and straw strength are also being attempted.

Other research shown on the tour included sunflower

Coughlin Named Acting Director

WASHINGTON (AP) — Edward T. Coughlin, a career employee of the Agriculture

Department, has been named acting director of the dairy division in the Agricultural Marketing Service.

William T. Manley, acting administrator of the agency, said Wednesday that Coughlin's appointment will be effective on June 14.

A search has been under way for some time to find a successor to Herbert L. Forest, who retired after serving as head of the dairy division since 1954. Forest worked 48 years for USDA.

Manley said that Coughlin will become permanent director of the division "if a survey of available senior executive service personnel shows none are more qualified for the job." He said Coughlin was selected for the position following an open competition for the career appointment.

The dairy division administers 49 federal milk marketing orders throughout the United States, provides market reports and statistical information on milk and dairy products, and carries out grading and inspection for dairy plants and products.

extension Service, was first held in 1973 to train scouts in the pest management programs conducted by Extension. In subsequent years, it has expanded to include scouts employed by consultants, aerial applicators, and others, as well as producers who want to learn how to scout their own fields for insects. The workshop focuses on perfecting skills in identifying crop pests and making timely pest management decisions which can protect investments and yield and hold down production costs, McBride said.

Tuesday's session opens at 8:30 a.m. with Dr. Pat Morrison outlining the scope of workshop and explaining pest management concepts. Also on the morning program are Dr. Dale Pennington, Extension soil chemist; Dr. James Supak, Extension cotton agronomist; Dr. Robert Berry, Extension plant pathologist; and Dr. Jim Leser, cotton Extension Entomologist.

The afternoon program will include Dr. Kirby W. Huffman, Extension agronomist; Dr. Pat Morrison, Extension entomologist; and Allen E. Knutson, Castro County Extension agent-entomology, who will discuss corn and sorghum pests.

Wednesday's session, beginning at 9 a.m., will focus on scouting procedures and reports. Instructors will be county Extension agents-entomology Greg Cronholm of Hale County and Allen Knutson.

During the afternoon, participants will receive practical training on insect identification and scouting procedures during a field session.

Couey has written two books on fitness and how it applies to Christians. He is the former assistant baseball coach at Baylor and pitched in a major league club.

Friday night Dr. Couey will speak to senior adults in the gym. An ice cream social will follow.

At 9 a.m. Saturday he will meet with the ladies' exercise class to speak on cardiovascular fitness for women. Saturday at 8 p.m. he will

In the Sunday evening worship service at 6 p.m. Couey's topic will be "The Importance of Keeping God's Temple Fit."

The seminar is open to the public. All sessions will be in the church gym, Ironwood and La Plata.

TEXAS BEEF PRODUCERS sent 16,600 calves to slaughter in February, an 18 percent increase from the number slaughtered during the same period a year ago. Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown explains this increase by pointing to high interest rates which make it economically unfeasible to realize a profit by placing calves on feedlots for long periods of time.

Blister Beetles Bite Severe To Horses

COLLEGE STATION — Blister beetles can be a serious problem to different classes of livestock, but their toxicity is more severe in horses.

The beetles cause severe blistering of the esophagus, stomach and intestinal tract of animals.

"Blister beetle poisoning in horses is manifested as a severe colic," points out Dr. Clifford Hoelscher, entomologist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

"Cantharidin (toxic chemical produced in the beetle) causes severe blistering of the mucus lining in the animal's digestive tract and other internal tissues," explains the entomologist. "The chemical is not broken down in the digestive process and must be excreted in the urine."

Positive diagnosis of animal poisoning is possible by tissue or urine analysis at the Texas A&M Veterinary Medical Diagnostic Laboratory in College Station.

A local veterinarian can suggest treatments for poisoned horses, says Hoelscher. Drenching animals with mineral oil to help protect the digestive tract lining is a first step in treatment.

"Clinical symptoms in other livestock types include a general depression, loss of appetite and constant urination," Hoelscher says. "Expressed symptoms depend on the amount of cantharidin in the feed (mainly hay), general vigor of the animal and its species."

About 35 species of blister beetles occur in Texas, notes the entomologist, and all produce varying amounts of the toxic chemical. This area is presently under study.

If a horse eats just two to five blister beetles of a certain species, the animal can die within 12 to 24 hours, emphasizes Hoelscher.

"It's important for hay and feed producers to determine if beetles are present in a field before hay is cut," explains Hoelscher. "Infested hay fields can be treated with insecticide, but the effectiveness of this has not yet been determined."

So, Hoelscher recommends these producer management strategies to reduce losses: inspect individual hay fields for adult blister beetles before harvesting, don't harvest beetle-infested areas of hay fields, and be sure a field scout can readily distinguish blister beetles from other insect species.

"Knowledge about the problem is the key to reducing animal losses from blister beetles," he says. "Know what blister beetles look like, what to do with an infested field, and how to get help in treating poisoned animals."

Energas Increasing Rates

AMARILLO, Texas — Irrigation customers served by the West Texas System of Energas Company are being notified that a 10 percent rate increase will be put into effect July 1, company officials announced.

Letters explaining the rate change have been mailed to all 10,500 affected customers. The area involved extends from the central Panhandle to south of Odessa.

"It has been three years since we last raised the irrigation rate," Charles K. Vaughan, Energas president, said. "In December 1981, the general service rate for customers on the West Texas System was increased by 10.6 percent replacing a rate that had been in effect for nearly three years."

The new irrigation rate is identical to the West Texas System general service rate through the first 50,000 cubic feet of monthly gas usage. Additional volumes will be at rates that are lower in price than the general service rate.

Vaughan said Energas historically has provided service for irrigation purposes at or below the general service rate in effect in communities it serves in the surrounding area.

"We are confident that the new rate is quite favorable as compared to the prices charged by other gas companies and by alternate energy suppliers for irrigation purposes," Vaughan wrote in his letter notifying customers of the increase.

Energas is the major supplier in the Texas Panhandle-South Plains region of natural gas to fuel engines used to pump water wells for farm irrigation. About 10,500 irrigation customers served by the company will be subject to the new rate.

Summer Classes Offered At WBU

The first course in a new program aimed especially at the agriculture-based economy of West Texas is among the list of summer class offerings this year at Wayland Baptist University here.

vice Center when the first summer Microterm begins Monday.

Offering four hours college credit, the course is scheduled to meet from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. each Monday through August 20. It is one of 17 classes which begin during the first of four three-week sessions slated for the Wayland summer term.

Home Ventilation Saves Energy

Using outside air wisely can reduce energy use for residential air conditioning.

During spring and fall periods when average outside air temperatures are comfortable (82 degrees F. or below), whole house or attic fans can be used to pull outside air into the home and remove heat, points out Dr. Bill R. Stewart, agricultural engineer with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. However, this practice may not be desirable for those with allergy problems.

A whole house fan is usually installed in a hallway ceiling or other convenient location so that it can pull air through any or all the rooms, notes Stewart. Air flow will depend on having windows or doors that will open in each room to admit air. Then openings must be adjusted to equalize the air flow or to control the velocity of air through the room.

Whole house fans should be rated to provide an air flow of 10 cubic feet per minute (cfm) for each square foot of house area. Thus, a 1000 square foot home would need a whole house fan rated at 10,000 cfm, explains Stewart.

Where fans are installed in the ceiling to exhaust air out through the attic, be sure there is enough attic ventilator outlet. Attic screened vents should have 1.75 square feet of area per 1000 cfm or fan capacity, says the engineer. These may be gable vents, under eave vents or roof vents.

When whole house fans are installed in ceilings they should be covered when central air conditioners are used to prevent excess attic heat from entering the home through the fan openings.

Another method of reducing air conditioning bills during the summer, particularly for those homes with low levels of ceiling insulation, is to provide attic ventilation, says Stewart, since air will try to rise as it is heated.

Attics can be ventilated by providing adequate outlet vents near the peak of the roof along with the same amount of inlet vents at the eave. Both inlets and outlets should be uniformly distributed to provide uniform replacement of attic air.

Research with attic ventilation has shown that attic temperatures can be reduced substantially by providing about one square inch each of vent outlet and inlet per square foot of ceiling area, notes the engineer.

The greater the difference in height between inlets and outlets, the greater will be the ventilation rate. High peaked roofs are easier to ventilate than low sloped roofs.

Some roofs are not easy to ventilate by gravity systems, so power vents can be used. However, research in the Houston area has indicated no significant saving in energy use when a home had a ceiling insulation level of R-19 (6.5 to 8 inches of insulation).

Attic ventilation is most effective when the ceiling insulation level is below R-11 (less than four inches).

House Members Get $703,271 In Donations

WASHINGTON (AP) — House members who blocked a rule forcing dealers to disclose defects in used cars received $703,271 in campaign donations over the past three years from the dealers' group that led lobbying against the rule.

According to federal campaign records, contributions from the National Automobile Dealers Association went to 239 of the 286 congressmen who voted to veto the rule. Of those who received donations, 150 were Republicans and 89 were Democrats.

The House killed the Federal Trade Commission rule Wednesday by a 286-133 margin. The Senate rejected it last week, 69-27, and President Reagan's signature was not needed.

Fifty-six of the 69 senators who voted to veto the regulation also received campaign contributions from the dealers' group. Those Senate donations totaled $323,350 over the past five years, Federal Election Commission records show.

The dealers' expensive lobbying drive prompted charges from some FTC supporters that Congress was being bought.

"This should not be called the used-car rule," declared Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn. "It ought to be called the used-Congress rule."

But spokesmen for the dealers said Congress responded to the merits of the arguments, not money.

After the vote Wednesday, FTC Chairman James C. Miller said he would propose a new rule requiring dealers to say what warranties are being offered on a used car, but would drop the required disclosure of known defects. The congressional action was the first time that Congress had overturned an FTC rule in the agency's 68-year history.

Frank McCarthy, the dealer association's executive vice president, said the rule would have driven up used-car prices by $100 to $250 by forcing dealers to inspect vehicles if they had any inkling of a defect.

Otherwise, McCarthy said the dealers might be left open to costly lawsuits brought by disappointed buyers who would suspect that any problems in their cars had been concealed.

"Inspections are the whole controversy," McCarthy said.

Supporters of the rule, however, contended that inspections would not have been necessary.

The rule, which would have taken effect today if Congress had not intervened, would have required dealers to post a window sticker disclosing "known" major defects in a used car. The stickers would also have listed any warranties or stated if the car was being sold "as is."

"I don't consider it a radical provision that if the dealer knows the engine block is cracked, he be required to tell consumers," said Rep. James J. Florio, D-N.J. "The choice is whether to continue to let consumers get ripped off by unscrupulous used car dealers."

Consumers Union announced immediately after the vote that it would appeal in court the 1980 law that allows Congress to veto FTC regulations.

Bathroom Project Not A Success

CRYSTAL CITY, Texas (AP) — When Francisca G. Perez heard a federal grant would make it possible for her to have indoor plumbing installed at her two-room frame house, she rushed to sign up.

That was in June 1981. Today, close to a year later, her new bathroom includes a tub, shower, toilet and lavatory with hot-and-cold running water.

It does not include, however, a connection to the city sewer line. So, the door to the new bathroom remains closed, and the operative facility remains the escusado — outhouse — out back.

Problems have arisen in the $600,000 federally funded program to eliminate two-thirds of the estimated 300 pit privies in "Mexico Chico," the most impoverished barrio of this South Texas town.

With 12 months of the '8-month program gone, only a handful of the projected 200 bathrooms have been built.

"I started hearing complaints about three months ago. Mostly, 'When are they getting here?'" said Ninfa Moncada of the Crystal City Housing Authority.

"When we finally began being concerned about it, we started to check around and ask questions. But they (residents) felt like they shouldn't complain, that it was a blessing from the sky."

"Those people really have a need," she continued. "I don't think they should suffer because somebody isn't doing his job."

Construction under the program began last July. But by the first part of April, only 11 bathrooms were complete, though others were far enough along to be usable, city officials say.

Amid charges of mismanagement, City Manager Juan M. Perez fired Program Director Esequiel De la Fuente in April. In May, the City Council fired Perez, and last week officials of the Department of Housing and Urban Development arrived here to review and audit the program.

Neither Acting City Manager Robert Maldonado, nor De La Fuente's successor, Pablo Aguillon nor HUD inspector Antonio Cabral knows just how many bathrooms have been completed or what the average unit cost has been.

"They had about 40 completed — with minor discrepancies," Cabral said. The discrepancies include unconnected sewer or gas lines in some bathrooms, for example, he said.

The reason for the inexact figures, said Maldonado and Aguillon, was the method of construction used.

"Units were done on a construction process basis," said Maldonado, 24. "They were laying walls, then putting up the studs, and so on. Right now to date, we don't have an exact number of completed units."

Aguillon said use of city crews instead of subcontractors made cost accounting difficult.

"Somebody should have kept an accurate figure of time involved in each unit. That was never done. I have no idea of the average costs," he said.

Construction is continuing, Aguillon said, and should continue through the Dec. 31 program cutoff. But the goal no longer is 200 units.

"I doubt they'll be able to do all 200 with the limited funds available to them," Cabral said. At last count, more than $214,000 had been spent, and Aguillon estimated the unit cost at from $4,500 to $5,000 for each additional bathroom to be completed before December.

Cabral said an estimate of 120 to 135 bathrooms would be close to accurate.

Still, Cabral said, "Based on what they've used and the number done, the cost is comparable to other cities using (city-hired) work crews." Cabral added that more than a dozen towns in the Rio Grande Valley are participating in similar programs.

Cabral said his audit revealed no evidence of fraud.

"There were a lot of allegations, but not enough evidence to confirm fraud or any conspiracy to defraud," he said.

Maldonado said, "The fact they're being built indicates no misappropriations. They (HUD) felt we need more attention focused on management. We're very optimistic; we hope we have reason to be."

Two Ordinary Men Caught In 'The Troubles'

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Sean and Sam are "the best of mates." For two years they have worked together on the factory floor, two ordinary men who joke over yesterday's problems, worry about tomorrow's and try to make a decent living for themselves. But Sean O'Neill, a Roman Catholic, and Sam Ledlie, a Protestant, do not truly know each other. Over Northern

At the end of the day, each heads home to his own ghetto, into his own community's prejudices and fears. Sam can only guess about Sean's youthful "involvement" in the anti-British movement here. Sean can only surmise what apprehensions lie at the back of his Protestant friend's mind.

They both yearn for peace in their troubled land, but with little hope.

"It's the flag wavers that've got us," says O'Neill. "Politicians on both sides have a lot to answer for," says Ledlie.

The everyday story of this fragile friendship helps illustrate the sad story of Northern Ireland, torn by an underground war involving the Catholic guerrillas of the Irish Republican Army, the British army and Protestant paramilitary groups. The IRA wants to unite Northern Ireland with the predominantly Catholic Irish Republic, but the Protestants are determined to keep it British.

The roots of conflict run deeper — in centuries of enmity between the dominant Protestant majority and Catholic minority here.

The violence has left thousands dead or injured. But there are lesser casualties as well — lives altered, an economy shattered, friendships broken.

The O'Neill-Ledlie friendship may be next. Their factory, the financially troubled De Lorean automaking firm, is shutting down next week, and the two workers will head home for good.

Sean O'Neill, 30, is a maintenance worker at De Lorean, in the rolling green hills of suburban Dunmurry. Dark-eyed, mustached and self-assured, he lives with his wife and three children in a modest home at Twinbrook, an all-Catholic housing project splattered with "BRITS OUT" graffiti.

Sam Ledlie, 52, is an assembly-line repairman, married, with a grown daughter. Bald and ruddy-faced, Ledlie speaks in an earnest, halting voice. He and O'Neill became friends as union representatives at De Lorean.

"We're the best of mates. Like that," Ledlie told a visitor, holding out two fingers pressed together.

Interviewed in his tidy brick rowhouse, within sight of the De Lorean plant, Ledlie said he has worked with Catholics most of life.

In fact, until 1969, when "the troubles" began, his best friend was a fellow worker from the Catholic slum Falls Road. "I was up to his house every other Friday night. I drank in the Falls Road bars with him," Ledlie recalled with a laugh.

"But we lost all contact because of the troubles," Ledlie no longer ventures into Catholic areas.

The bloodshed of Belfast has not closely touched his life. But his friend O'Neill, who grew up in Falls Road, knows it well. A cousin was shot dead by Protestant gunmen and a close friend was killed in a bomb explosion, O'Neill said, talking above the barroom din at a Catholic social club near Falls Road.

In their separate interviews both men insisted the bitterness of the streets had not reached the floor at De Lorean, where the work force is evenly divided between Catholics and Protestants, a rarity in Northern Ireland.

"But people never come out and tell you everything that's in the back of their minds,"

O'Neill said. "What's at the back of all Protestants' minds," said Ledlie, "is that Catholics want to unite with Ireland, and Protestants think that if we had an all-Ireland we wouldn't have religious freedom... that the Church of Rome runs Ireland."

Does Ledlie himself think that? "Well, yes," he replied. "The priests have a big say.... Religious freedom would be curtailed."

He acknowledged that bigotry, a deep-seated feeling that the "native" Irish Catholics are inferior, is powerful among Northern Ireland's Protestants, descendants of Scottish and English settlers.

"If you heard people talking, the Catholics were bogeymen," Ledlie said.

O'Neill said he encountered anti-Catholic job discrimination in the past and noticed it among some Protestant supervisors at De Lorean. Ledlie said he was unaware of any discrimination at De Lorean.

The Catholic sees other things the Protestant does not, such as the two De Lorean workers who sport the arm tattoo "UVF," for Ulster Volunteer Force, a Protestant extremist group.

O'Neill is uncertain about his future now that De Lorean is closing. Ledlie, who has worked since age 14, is not. "I'll go on the dole," he said. "Thirty-eight pound a week ($68)." Do they think often about the troubles?

"I worry about the kids more than anything else," said O'Neill, leaning back with his pint of Harp lager. "I think about having a life where you go where you want to go, and you don't worry." "You really do think about it," said Ledlie. "They've destroyed a good, free country. Before the troubles, the Protestants and Roman Catholics were mixing together everywhere. And then the troubles just destroyed all the friendship."

"...I don't see any end to it in my lifetime," he said. "I'm 52. Say I live another 20 years. I don't see an end to it."

Moon Testifies He Met Buddha, Moses

NEW YORK (AP) — The Rev. Sun Myung Moon, leader of the Unification Church, testified in federal court that he had met Moses and Buddha and that Jesus Christ had asked him to help save the universe.

Testifying under oath about his religious beliefs for the first time, the Korean evangelist said Thursday that although he doesn't call himself the Messiah, his followers "believe" in him. "I have the possibility of becoming the real Messiah," he said.

He was compelled to testify in a case involving a $9 million lawsuit filed by Anthony Colombrito, a Moon follower. He claims he was abducted in 1979 by Galen Kelly, a "deprogrammer" from Kingston, N.Y., in an effort to wrest him from the church. Colombrito claims his civil rights were violated.

The 62-year-old church leader and businessman had fought a subpoena to testify, but U.S. District Judge Richard Owen ordered him to.

Moon's testimony was halted midstream Thursday when the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals intervened and scheduled a hearing for today to decide if the trial should continue. Moon contends he is being subjected to a "Federal judicial inquisition."

Moon appeared Thursday, his second day on the stand, as a reluctant witness for the defense, which is trying to show that Moon's church is a "sham" operated to enrich him and his top aides.

Before the appeals court intervened, Kelly's lawyer, John DeGraff, asked Moon about what the church leader said was his first conversation with Jesus on Easter in 1936 when he was 16 years old.

Moon's lawyer, Charles Stillman, leaped to his feet, protesting the line of questioning, but Moon said through an interpreter: "I am willing to answer that question. I met Jesus Christ."

Under further questioning by DeGraff, Moon acknowledged meeting and communicating on numerous occasions with Moses and Buddha.

Asked how he knew it was Jesus, Moon replied, "I remembered him from his holy picture and he said he was Jesus Christ."

"You not only talked to him? You saw him?" asked DeGraff. "And what did Jesus Christ say to you?"

"He requested me to help him in the salvation of the universe," Moon said.

Farmers Union Insurance

Isn't term insurance much less expensive than permanent insurance?

Not necessarily. Premiums for term insurance are considerably less, but there are other factors you probably should consider. Term insurance is protection for a certain (limited) period of time which usually may be renewed for another period of time or converted to permanent insurance... provided you and your agent arranged for this privilege when you bought the policy. Permanent insurance will last as long as you want it and will accumulate cash or collateral. Although term insurance costs less in premiums the policy will expire after its term... unless renewed.

Johns-Manville JM

You Need To Consider Johns-Manville Fiberglass Shingles

1. Conventional shingles have a paper felt base. Fiberglass shingles have a tough inorganic base that won't rot.
2. Because fiberglass shingles are lighter than conventional shingles, they are easier to work with on the roof and put less strain on the structure.
3. Besides being rotproof, fire resistant and easy to apply, fiberglass shingles are constructed to still look good many, many years after installation.

Hancock Chooses Horses

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — It was horses over music in a photo finish of sorts for Arthur Hancock, owner of Kentucky Derby winner Gato del Sol.

But Hancock is at the gate again for another fling at a country music career — a career he gave up for the horse breeding business in 1967.

The 39-year-old Hancock has an album out on Monument Records, appropriately titled "A Horse of a Different Color." His horse, Tap Shoe, which finished 14th in the Kentucky Derby a year ago, is pictured on the cover. A single has already been released from the album — "If It's All the Same to You (I'll Be Leaving in the Morning)."

He describes the music as "country-folk." "I gave it (a music career) a real good try, but not as good as I should have," Hancock said. "I loved horses and the farm, too."

He has maintained his interest in music and still writes songs. He also plays the guitar and a little harmonica and piano, and says that it's an enjoyable sideline to the horse business.

"I'd like to make a contribution (to the music business)," he said. "I'd like for some of these artists to hear my songs and maybe record them."

He wrote, arranged and sang all 10 songs on the album, which include, "Nashville on My Mind," "Divorcee After Dawn" and "There Ain't No Life Without

You."

Earlier, Hancock wrote songs that were recorded by Ray Price and Grandpa Jones.

After graduating from Vanderbilt University in Nashville in 1966, Hancock recorded three singles for Monument, including a song written by Kris Kristofferson, "When I Loved Her."

The three songs were stragglers on the charts, so Hancock returned to the family farm in Kentucky to concentrate on horses instead of hits.

It was Pete Rowan, guitarist for Bill Monroe's famous Bluegrass Boys, who first got Hancock interested in bluegrass music.

"He'd take me to the Grand Ole Opry," Hancock said. "I saw what the road life was like from Pete and I didn't want that."

So the horse business prevailed. But Hancock still had fond ties to the music world, naming one of his horses after Kristofferson.

"I thought the name fit him pretty well," he said.

Hancock says if any horse today would like country music, it would be Gato del Sol. "He's very receptive and intelligent. He has such a nice temperament."

Belafonte's Girl On Her Own

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — With her piercing brown eyes, smooth beige face and hair sculpted closely to her head, there can be no doubt who her father is.

But Shari Belafonte Harper has learned the lesson of all show business children: You've got to make it on your own.

She's doing OK. No big breakthrough as yet, but she makes her feature movie debut in "If You Could See What I Hear," which is playing the nation's theaters this spring. It's the story of Tom Sullivan, the remarkable young musician who became a sky diver, golfer, wrestler and swimmer despite his blindness.

Miss Belafonte plays a fellow student at Providence College with whom Sullivan (played by Marc Singer) falls in love without knowing she is black.

"I'm the serious side of his life," she says. "I'm the heavy, I walk out on him because I can't cope with the situation. I felt very stiff in the role because I had to play it so laid back...to offset the slapstick of the rest of the picture."

But despite her own reservations, she has been getting good reviews — including an important one from her father, entertainer Harry Belafonte.

"My father called me from Canada, where he had just seen the picture," she said. "He said, 'I liked your performance. I was greatly surprised.' That was high praise from him. When I announced I wanted to be an actress, his reaction was shock. He had always wanted his children to know that show business was not all fun and games, that it could take weeks even to get an agent."

The 29-year-old Miss Belafonte was one of four children of Belafonte's first marriage. Her parents divorced when she was two, and she lived with her mother until she went away to school at 12. She started acting in high school and studied dramatics at Carnegie-Mellon Institute in Pittsburgh, Pa. Three days after graduation, she married a fellow student, Robert Harper, now a film advertising executive in Hollywood.

"At first," she said, "I used my married name, Shari Harper, in trying to find jobs. I had to find out if people wanted me for myself, not just because I was Harry Belafonte's daughter."

"Having made my point, I added the Belafonte name, realizing that it would help open doors."

She found work as a model, in commercials and in a television series, but often encountered the same discrimination many other black actors face: She is black, but not black enough.

"Unless the script specifies a black actress, casting people don't consider blacks," she said. "And when they're casting blacks, they want to make a statement. I'm often turned down for parts because I'm too light."

Bernstein Influenced Stahl

NEW YORK (AP) — He sits in a midtown restaurant, wearing blue jeans and sipping a soft drink, hardly the image of a symphony orchestra conductor.

But the baton is David Stahl's life. He has been conducting professionally since 1974, when he made his Carnegie Hall debut at age 24.

He's now 32, and he's just realized another goal by conducting an opera in Palermo, Italy. The work was Bellini's operatic variation of the Romeo and Juliet story, "Capuletti e Montecchi."

"Romeo and Juliet" in its various forms has played a major role in Stahl's life. Conductor-composer Leonard Bernstein, whom Stahl considers to have been one of his mentors, chose the young Stahl to take over the musical directorship of the Broadway revival of Bernstein's "West Side Story."

It led to an international tour with Bernstein's version of the Romeo-Juliet theme, high critical praise for Stahl and invitations for concert and opera appearances throughout Europe. Stahl also impressed critics with his conducting of the Tchaikovsky "Romeo and Juliet" and the Prokofiev "Romeo and Juliet."

He first met Bernstein in 1975 at Tanglewood, Mass., the informal summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

"The important key in my life was Bernstein after that summer of 1975," he said. "I became his assistant and, in 1976, the assistant conductor of the New York Philharmonic."

That same year, Stahl was appointed associate conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra on invitation from that group's music director Thomas Schippers, whom Stahl considers another of his mentors. Schippers died in 1977.

While with the Cincinnati, Stahl also became conductor of the St. Louis Philharmonic and found himself commuting between the two cities.

"I made up my mind at 15 to conduct," says the New York-born Stahl. "Music was always in my home. My father played piano for pleasure. I took lessons. Then I went to Queens College and was able to form my own orchestra among the students."

Stahl went to the Mannes College of Music in New York, where he studied for his Master's degree, built up his repertoire and met conductor Pierre Boulez, who invited him to attend rehearsal at Lincoln Center's Avery Fisher Hall.

It wasn't long before Stahl made his Carnegie Hall debut, conducting the Youth Symphony Orchestra of New York in Wagner's Overture to "Tannhauser." It was his first piece on the podium as a professional.

Keeping The 'Father' In 'Father Murphy'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When Katherine Cannon's character got married on NBC's "Father Murphy," there was more behind it than just love.

Schoolteacher Mae Woodward was married on the last episode of the first season to John Michael Murphy, the Father Murphy of the title, played by Merlin Olsen.

Murphy had pretended to be a priest in the family western so that he could get state approval to allow Mae to run a school for orphans. Murphy and Mae were to have been just friends, but it soon became apparent to creator and executive producer Michael Landon that a change was needed in the storyline.

"I think the original idea of Father Murphy being a phony priest led us into some difficult situations," Miss Cannon said. "It didn't lend itself to enough stories. So to keep Father Murphy a father, we got married. That way we can adopt the kids if necessary to keep the school going."

"Also, we needed to put Father Murphy and Mae into a situation where they could communicate about real life problems," she said. "In the 1860s, men and women didn't talk about those kinds of things unless they were married. The first year was hell.

We couldn't touch each other and we couldn't talk to each other about these problems."

Now, Miss Cannon said, the characters can participate in some family situations.

"I think the audience out there is starved for this," she said. "You don't see many successful marriages on TV...You don't see romance on television, either, and I want the audience to see this romance. They love and care for each other. They have a deep passion for each other."

The series has suffered badly in the ratings, since NBC moved it to Sunday against CBS' "60 Minutes." It had had a respectable rating on Tuesday before the move.

Miss Cannon has spent most of her career working as a guest star on episodic television and doing TV and theatrical movies. She was in "Fool's Parade" with James Stewart, and in such TV movies as "High Ice," with the late David Janssen, and "Will," in which she starred with Robert Conrad as the wife of convicted Watergate conspirator G. Gordon Liddy.

On her left hand, she wears a little gold ring with a little face with a diamond tear and a turned down mouth.

"My dad gave that to me," she said. "He said it was to remind me of my Sarah Bernhardt youth. I was a very emotional girl."

REVIEWS

John Cougar — "American Fool" (Riva/PolyGram) — John Cougar (real name: John Mellencamp) sounds like a quieter version of Bruce Springsteen or Bob Seger. Cougar's material, however, sounds better when someone else is singing it, like when Pat Benatar does "I Need a Lover." Recommended for Willie Nile fans and lovers of dark, sexy Hoosiers.

John Cougar

The Dregs — "Industry Standard" (Arista) — The Dregs scratched "Dixie" from its name and sound. They're a bunch of excellent musicians who spend 45 minutes showing you what excellent musicians they are...and not much else. The fust about the latest album is that they sing for the first time. They shouldn't have bothered.

Greg Kihn — "Kihntinued" (Berserker/Elektra) — Greg Kihn, who's been around forever, broke out of San Francisco last year with "The Break-Up Song." "Kihntinued" does, in fact, continue his straightforward, high-energy rock style. Shouters like "Tastily" or "Everyday/Saturday" offer uncomplicated sing-along for the radio or a live performance.

The Motels — "All Four One" (Capitol) — The Motels, featuring sultry Martha Davis, were expected to be the "next big thing" two years ago. High hopes are pinned on this torchy LP, which features a new producer (Kim Carnes' Val Garay) and some new band members. It could rock a lot more, but it vamps beautifully.

"Eivira's" chorus, "papa oom mow mow," is the title of the Rivingtons' 1962 hit, and they say using it was plagiarism... Olivia Newton-John may be chosen to play Lady Diana in a film version of the royal romance... Fleetwood Mac's new album, "Mirage," hits the stores next week. The band tours in the fall... The Rolling Stones are making a movie of last year's U.S. tour... Teen heartthrob Rex Smith will play Laertes opposite Robin Williams' Hamlet in Joe Papp's summer Shakespeare production. Has pop casting finally gone too far?... Ron Wood is 35 this week. Charlie Watts turns 41, Ian Hunter, 36 and Suzi Quatro, 32. John Bonham would have been 35.

Band Carries Rock Torch

BOSTON (AP) — British progressive rock was supposed to be dead and gone by now, joining acid rock, glitter and disco as a musical footnote of the 1960s and '70s.

Yes and ELP disbanded, Eric Clapton returned to the blues and King Crimson updated its sound for the '80s.

But the quick acceptance of the new band Asia, shows that there's still a strong market for the soaring instrumentation, abstract lyrics and abrupt changes of pace used by the British progressive rockers — especially if the songs are tailored to the needs of FM rock radio.

"We made a conscious effort that we shouldn't sound like an afterthought of the '70s," says John Wetton, bassist and chief songwriter for the band, whose debut album zoomed to No. 1 on the charts after only seven weeks. "The way to do that was to come out of the box very strong with songs people could play and listen to and enjoy."

"Instead of nailing together three songs that didn't fit, like most progressive rockers, we made a conscious effort to make each song separate and have it stand on its own," Wetton said.

Those lengthy "nailed-together" songs were fine 10 years ago for underground FM radio stations that wanted to distinguish themselves from AM pop music stations. But today's album-oriented FM rock stations want tight five-minute tunes. Asia's approach quickly paid off.

Songs such as "Heat Of The Moment," "Sole Survivor" and "Only Time Will Tell," were added to playlists throughout the country. Asia was soon able to headline at 3,000-seat theaters.

Much of Asia's early appeal stemmed from the credentials of the four musicians, each of whom had played in British progressive rock bands known for their sweeping musical epics.

Steve Howe supplied the long guitar solos that drove Yes at its peak, while Geoff Downes added his keyboards to that group's last album. Carl Palmer powered ELP with his bombastic drums, while Wetton played with King Crimson, Family, Roxy Music and UK.

"We made a conscious effort not to sing older songs, because it would be a real drag if one of the pieces we played from the old days went down better than the new Asia songs," Wetton said.

There are a few throwbacks to the old days, mostly during the solo spots given to each musician. Howe dusts off "The Clap," an old acoustic guitar tune he used to play with Yes, while Palmer uses the same revolving drum kit, strobe lights and Oriental gongs he used on the last several ELP tours.

Dunne Keeps Reporter's View

NEW YORK (AP) — He is one of those nondescript gray men who always seem to be hanging around county courthouses, blending into the dingy walls.

With apparently nothing else to do, they drift in and out of courtrooms, indiscriminately eavesdropping and peeping in on the legal trials and tribulations of total strangers.

"I have, for years, hung out in courthouses," John Gregory Dunne says. "I like them."

But he, unlike the other faceless courtroom regulars, has parlayed his fascination with trials into financial success and artistic acclaim.

He was the author of the best-selling novel, "True Confessions" in 1977, and the recently released "Dutch Shea Jr." (Simon and Schuster, $15.95) — a Book-of-the-Month Club selection, which already has received high marks from critics.

Dunne said that it took him six months just to type up the stacks of notes accumulated from years of prowling through county courthouses all over the country.

Even when Dunne and his wife, writer Joan Didion, took one of their regular vacations from writing in Hawaii, they spent much of their time traveling to county courthouses.

"Good writers are all essentially terribly good reporters," Dunne said. "You learn to observe and listen. When I hang out in a courtroom I am essentially a reporter."

Too many American writers look inward for their material, rather than going out and observing, he says. Many end up writing primarily about their own struggles in the craft.

"They end up devouring all their material, which is themselves," Dunne said. "Dutch Shea Jr." is the story of Jack Shea, an Irish-Catholic lawyer known by his peers as "The City Dump" because he will take any case.

His last two books both probed the Irish-Catholic psyche. They have been successful, Dunne said, because he waited until middle age to write about the things he saw and heard and felt in his own upbringing.

"When you're 40, you look back like that with a sense of longing and loss," Dunne said. "When you're younger, you write in rage and heat."

Dunne and Miss Didion — author of "The White Album," "Play It As It Lays" and "Slouching Toward Bethlehem" — read and talk about each other's work, often making suggestions.

"I can't imagine living with someone who is not a writer, too," he said.

Denier

When a housewife buys a spool of "50 denier" thread she is paying Julius Caesar an indirect compliment. Caesar introduced the coin "denarius" or "Denier" into France. Fifteen-hundred years later, King Francis I established the weight of this tiny coin as the standard measurement of his budding silk industry. Today, denier is a numbered system to describe the fineness of yarn. The higher the number, the thicker the yarn.

Welch Plays Indian Woman

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Raquel Welch stars as an Indian woman in the waning days of the American Indian's prairie empire in the long-delayed NBC movie, "The Legend of Walks Far Woman."

She plays Walks Far Woman, a Pikuni Blackfoot who marries a handsome and arrogant Sioux warrior named Horses Ghost. She then sees her world crushed by the advance of the white man in the late 19th century.

"This role appealed to me as an actress because it was unexpected of me," Miss Welch said.

The 2½-hour movie, which NBC will telecast Sunday, also stars Nick Mancuso as Horses Ghost, Bradford Dillman as a mixed blood trader and George Glutesi as Old Grandfather.

The first half of the movie is disappointing. It drags along for about 30 or 40 minutes. Then Walks Far Woman meets Horses Ghost and it takes off like an Indian pony on a buffalo hunt. During their rough-and-tumble courtship, the sparks fly between this independent Indian woman and this cocky brave.

The second half of the movie is well worth waiting for. Miss Welch completely submerges her sex symbol persona in this well-performed role.

"This woman, in a sense, is liberated before her time," Miss Welch says. "The Indian women didn't have a voice in running the tribe, but they did have a profound influence. Walks Far Woman was an independent woman."

The role was a very strenuous and physical one that required her to run a foot race and ride a bucking horse.

"I had a few accidents,"

Miss Welch said. "During the footrace, I fell down and twisted my ankle so badly I had to be taken to a hospital. And, of course, riding thatucking horse was no fun. I had whiplash for weeks afterward."

"It was important for the camera to be right on me, so that the audience knew the central character was doing these things," she said. "And it was important, too, as an actress to experience these things so that you can better understand how the character feels."

Miss Welch returns to New York at the end of June to replace Lauren Bacall in the hit musical "Woman of the Year." Last November she took over the role for two weeks and received rave reviews from the critics.

Archie

YOU WANT TO BORROW MY CAR?

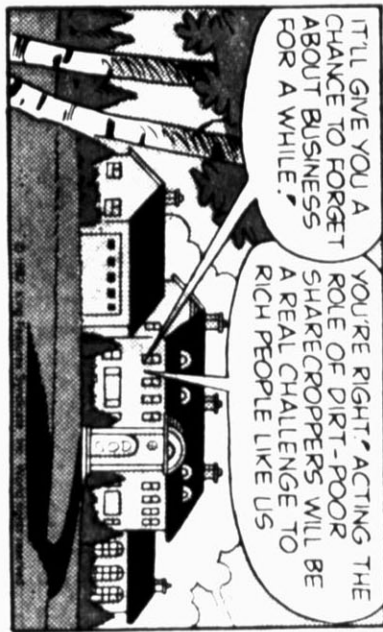

YES... IT'S JUST PERFECT FOR A PLAY WE'RE DOING AT THE OLD BARN THEATRE!

IT'S A STORY ABOUT A FAMILY WHO ARE REALLY ROCK-BOTTOM POOR!

YOU KNOW, VERONICA, ACTING IN THIS LITTLE THEATRE GROUP PRODUCTION IS GOING TO BE FUN!

IT'LL GIVE YOU A CHANCE TO FORGET ABOUT BUSINESS FOR A WHILE.

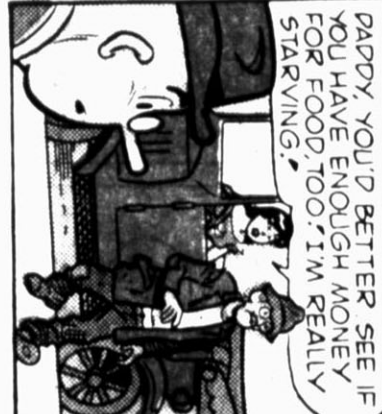

LOOK, ARCHIE, EVEN LOANED US HIS CAR FOR THE PLAY!

DARN IT! I LEFT MY CREDIT CARDS IN MY SUIT!

ARE THESE BONDS A SAFE INVESTMENT?

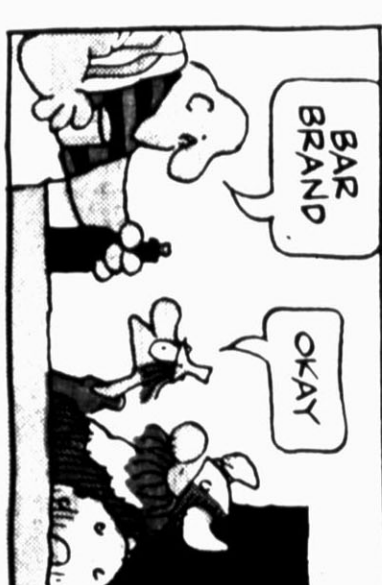

PADDY, YOU'D BETTER SEE IF YOU HAVE ENOUGH MONEY FOR FOOD TOO. I'M REALLY STARVING.

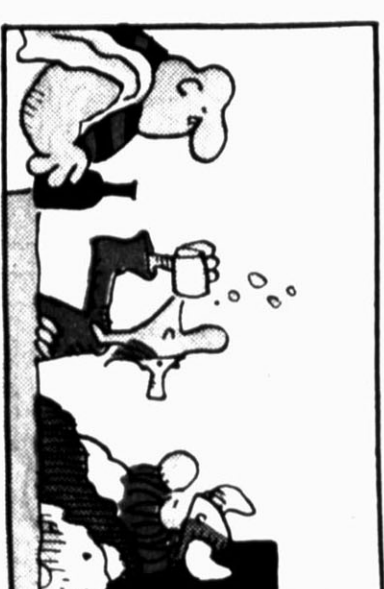

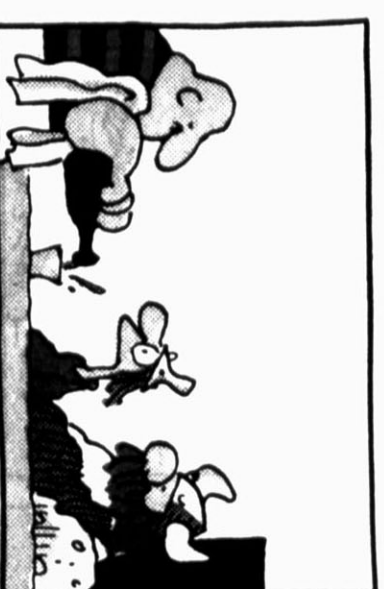

I'VE CHANGED MY MIND ABOUT THESE BONDS. GIVE ME MY MONEY BACK NOW!

WHAT'LL YOU HAVE?

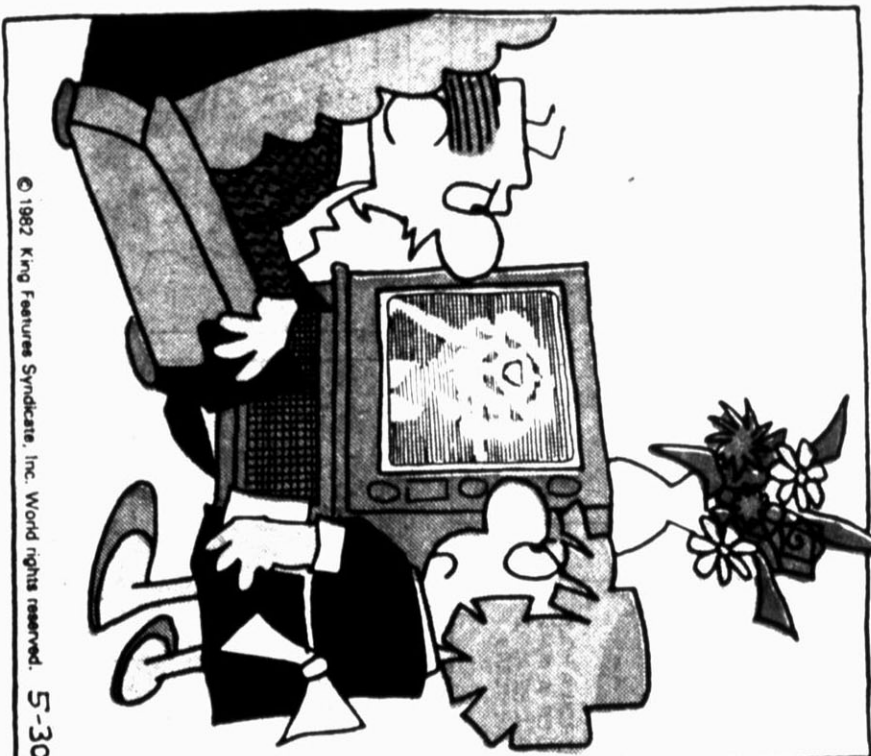

WHAT HAVE YOU GOT?

THE LOCKHORNS

by BILL HOEST

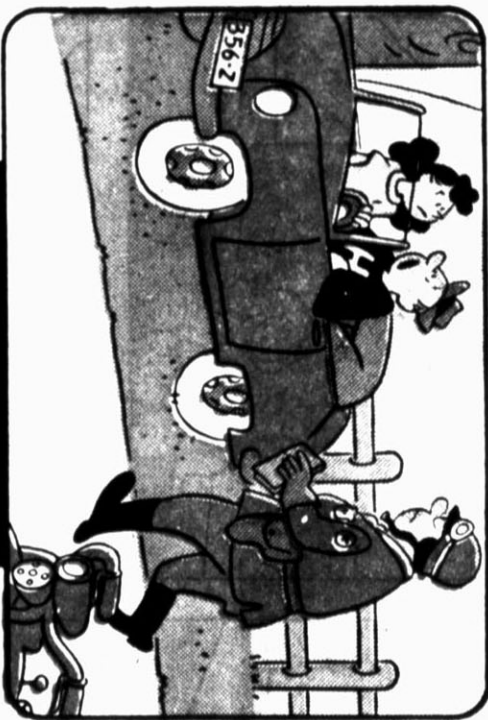

"WOULD YOU RATHER HAVE ME WATCH CRIME AND VIOLENCE?"

"YOU CAN DO WHAT YOU LIKE, BUT EVERYONE I KNOW USES WINE ON CORN FLAKES."

HOCUS-FOCUS

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

ANAGRAM RIDDLES

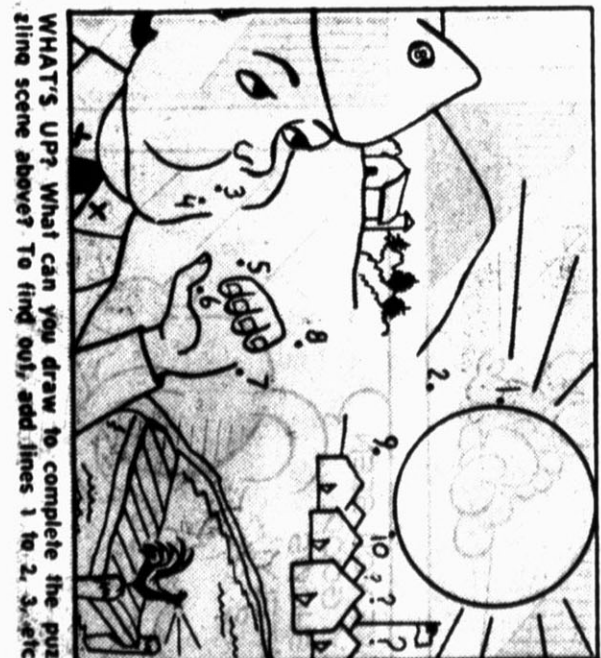

Four anagrammatic transposals are used to solve the riddles below. That is, letters are rearranged to form other words. Ex.: What did Susie say after ONE HUG? Answer: by switching letters: ENOUGH.

1. If an ELEPHANT refuses to walk through a puddle, what should its trainer say? What troubles a POSTMAN?
2. What can you say when using a FIRE ESCAPE?
3. What helps to make BAKERS FATT?
4. What helps to make BAKERS FATT?

Junior Whirl

by Hal Kaufman

- HAL'S PALSI: Dear Hal: Man, did I catch a fish! It was that-f! long. I never saw such a fish! Dear Pal: I believe you. Dear Hal: I'm always ill the night before a vacation. What can I do about it? Dear Pal: How about leaving a day early?
- MURKY MATH: Twelve's as much greater than four as twice this number exceeds five score. What number? Answer: In 30 seconds.
- HUE'S WHO! Complete these expressions by adding missing colors: 1. Caught _____-handed. 2. In the _____ of condition. 3. _____ around the girls. 4. Born to the _____.
- Riddle-Me: This! Why did the dress-shop clerk resign? She had clothes-trophobia. Why did the chicken hire a helicopter? To fly the coop.

WHAT'S UP? What can you draw to complete the picture? Draw a line through the picture to find out. 1 to 2, 3, 4, 5.
