Search For Family Heritage Painstaking Science

NELL NORVELL Consulting genealogical material

SINCE THE ALMOST simultaneous arrivals of the American Bicentennial and "Roots," it is occurring to a number of citizens that their ancestors might have stories just as interesting as that of the acclaimed Alex Haley.

But not very many of these prospective genealogists know how to trace the lives that may be vaguely recalled from fraying birth records or entries in the family Bible. One individual who does know how to painstakingly research a person's lineage is Nell Norvell, who is clearly obsessed with the meticulous science of genealogy.

She became interested in her own bloodline at the age of 10, when she was assigned to write a theme paper about her national origin. Since then, she has been scrabbling for every iota of information about her family's past.

When asked how far she has trailed her ancestry, the quickwitted historian replied "clear back to Adam."

MRS. NORVELL BELIEVES that the epic book and movie 'Roots' may have "reached some people who thought that their genealogy was not traceable." However, she felt that the Haley story would not have had as strong an impact if it had not come on the heels of the Bicentennial.

The nation's 200th observance of its founding spawned a great amount of interest in family histories. Mrs. Norvell stated that the National Headquarters of the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR) Society is still swamped from letters requesting verification of American Revolution

GENEALOGY IS NOT a project to be undertaken by persons who are easily discouraged. The roots of one's family tree are usually buried under a lot of ground and it takes dogged determination to unearth the smallest particles of

But, according to Mrs. Norvell, with concise, patient and diligent work, a genealogist can weave a detailed tapestry of their ancestors and the worlds in which they lived.

The first step in beginning genealogical research. according to Mrs. Norvell, is to "do your homework." She explained. "You must first determine what line of information you are pursuing. You must know what you are looking for before you can begin research.

There are bountiful routes one can follow in order to ferret out facts concerning one's family history. These sources include birth, marriage and death records, family Bibles, tax records, land deeds, funeral homes, newspapers, census files, personal interviews with relatives, old letters, church records, military archives, libraries and cemetery

FOR DATA ON more recent generations, Mrs. Norvell recommends consulting birth and death certificates, which were initiated by U.S. law in the 1920's. These two annals are essential in researching the last two generations

An older form of information is marriage records, which would be located in the county where they were purchased Marriage certificates are quite old, with some dating back to the early 1800's. Mrs. Norvell added that genealogists are sometimes lucky enough to stumble upon original marriage records that were never retrieved from a county courthouse.

Mrs. Norvell laments that uncountable official documents which would unlock the doors to one's past were destroyed during the Civil War and in natural disasters. She stated that a person trying to trace Southern lineage is often impeded due to the destruction of essential records during the 1860's.

"I panic everytime that I hear of a devastating flood or fire," Mrs. Norvell said, "Because I wonder how many irreplaceable documents have been lost." She related that many old records are stored in leaky basements and dusty attics, neither of which protect these transcripts from the RECORDS IN A FAMILY BIBLE are always a good discovery for a genealogist. In addition to births and deaths which are recorded therein, some Bibles contain family histories, newspaper clippings and letters.

When accumulating information from a Bible. Mrs. Norvell stresses that a genealogist should copy all information contained on the fly page, particularly the date of its publication. She also suggests that an individual obtain a history of the particular Bible, such as who owned it as it was passed down from each generation.

Funeral homes are a "tremendous" source of dependable knowledge because they often provide additional history and a list of survivors. Funeral directors file their records in chronological order, using the date of the individual's death

Public records of value to researchers include tax ledgers. newspapers (probably on microfilm), abstracts and census lists, which were surveyed once each decade

Military records, available upon written request, include pension forms, service transcripts and a unique document known as military bountyland. This latter record was used after the Revolutionary War when soldiers were paid with tracts of land, a strategy which helped to bring settlers West.

MRS. NORVELL IS MOST adament about the importance of obtaining a "personal touch" in a genealogy portrait. She is "tickled to death" if she can hunt down the actual signature of an ancestor or find a description of individual

She insists upon a good sense of history. "In order to recreate one's past," she opined, "You must know why your ancestors went in a certain direction.

"It took great fortitude for immigrants to leave a land that they would never see again. Only the strong survived; it required emotional strength as well as physical endurance." She added, "Many of our ancestors started all over again several times in one lifetime.

This interesting aspect of a family history is often obtained from personal interviews with older relatives. Mrs. Norvell admonishes a genealogist to do these family interviews "as soon as possible, because the elderly have a way of taking valuable information with them when they die.'

In order to dig up facts, one must ask leading questions of relatives, who "will always say that they know nothing about the family's past," says Mrs. Norvell. But, with careful queries. "Aunt Sally may know more than she realizes," laughed the local resident

Mrs. Norvell also related that some service records of the Confederate Army contained physical descriptions of soldiers in the South. This type of data may also be found in old letters and diaries.

Churches often are the best treasury of old documents dating back to the 1700's. Church files, particularly in the East, can offer clues to an ancestor's origin in the form of baptismal, marriage and death records.

In this same vein, cemetery tombstones can often supplement the cause and time of an ancestor's death.

ALL INFORMATION GLEANED in genealogical research should be carefully recorded on pedigree charts, which can be purchased for 212 cents each at most public libraries. Mrs. Norvell recommends that a credible family chart should ideally have each biographical fact verified by three sources,

The first step in completing a chart is to record the researcher's own life history before moving on to the preceding generation. The genealogist then progresses backwards with each generation.

Mrs. Norvell said that one must follow six-nine generations in order to reach the Revolutionary War era, however, a

Public Invited Nixon Said To Be

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP)- Two women given a brief , limpse into the private weorld of Richard Nixon say the former president is lonely in exile-"Like Napoleon at Elba" but was surprisingly "very up" during taping for a series of television interviews. "I think he wants to finally tell America his side of Watergate whether anyone believes him or not," said Arline Genis, a 43-year-old interior decorator, who with Sandy Blake designed the set for the interviews conducted by television host David Frost.

"I think people expect and hope that Nixon will be down." said Ms. Genis. "But he wasn't that way at all. He was very up. And very interested in all facets of the program. I think he's up because he has a project."

But Nixon "is a very lonely man," she added. "He can't go anywhere. He can't make for example." statements on government policies like other ex-presi-

In addition to medicines, Close's firm had a soda fountain, gifts and grooming supplies. In comparison to today, there were only three brands of hair tonic and an equal number of lipstick shades to choose from and the best selling cosmetic for women was face powders. During the Depression years, Close employed only high school students. Due to frequent turnover of employees the druggist could not mention all of his former workers, but he did remember the faces of Virginia Wallace (now employed by Bell Telephone), Leaton Clark (now an Amarillo resident), and Jack Cartwright (who grew up to become a longtime sheriff at neighboring Dimmitt).

HAROLD CLOSE SR. is now semi-retired, but helps out sometimes at his son's establishment, Harold Close Drug in Sugarland Mall. In addition to Harold Jr., Close and his wife Charlotte have another son, Fred of Durango, Colo. The couple has four grandchildren, including Laurie and Kathy Close of Hereford and Robert and Doug Close.

Born Aug. 18, 1903 in Sioux City, Iowa, Close spent his teen years at Rollins, Wyoming, where he met his wife. Following completion of his collegiate studies in Nebraska, he moved to Amarillo in 1926 and also lived in Dalhart before settling in Hereford.

In 1953, Close sold his pharmacy to Ansel McDowell and left this community to enter the investment field. He and his wife returned three years ago. A member of the Presbyterian faith, Close has been a member of Hereford Lions Club for 46 years and has been active in the Masonic Lodge since 1932 He commented wryly, "All I do now is work a little and play golf."

female lineage chart will involve one, two or three more generations than a male bloodline.

Genealogists agree that a family history can be traced to the period of Charlemagne, who was Roman Emperor in 800 A.D. Most charts preceding this date are not accepted as factual.

Mrs. Norvell recommends that a genealogist make note of the source of each fact included in a family history. These should be documented in a bibliography, so that one can refer to certain statistics and in order to certify that one's information is correct.

A common pitfall which confronts researchers is that the spelling of a family name may change several times in the course of time. Mrs. Norvell suggests that genealogists keep a sharp eye for similar spellings of a family name or phonetic spellings.

She also advises that when writing for information, always enclose a self- addressed, stamped envelope so that your reply will be processed more quickly and efficiently Sometimes, a fee is charged for copies of requested

FOR BEGINNING GENEALOGISTS, Mrs. Norvel recommends three informative publications, including "The Handy Book for Genealogists," "The How To Book for Genealogists" and "Tracing Your Family Tree for Fun and Profit." These books are usually available from Christian Book Store.

Another bonus for local researchers is the Genealogy Room, located in Deaf Smith County Library. This room gives access to a variety of reference and research material whigh would be helpful in preparing a pedigree chart. Much of this information is on microfilm and there is a microfilm reader located in the library, a gift from Los Ciboleros DAR Chapter.

Also, due to the increasing interest in American heritage, the Deaf Smith County Genealogy Society organized in Hereford about 11/2 years ago. Gary Cone is president and new members are welcome.

The Society stations a volunteer genealogist at the library at regular times for the express purpose of assisting individuals who are researching family history. These volunteers are available at the library from 6-9 p.m. on the first Monday of each month and on the morning of the fourth Saturday.

Use of call signs also aids enforcement of other rules. McKinney adds.

"We're seeing much greater use of call signs," he says.

'There was a time when we had only 5 per cent compliance. but we're now running 35 to 40 per cent. That's still too low, but it's a great improvement."

One reason for the increased use of numbers, perhaps, is the recent FCC action permitting CBers to go on the air almost immediately after getting a new

A CBer now can begin 'modulating' legally just by sending the FCC the license application usually packed with his new rig and using a temporary call sign until the permanent license arrives. The temporary number is composed of the letter "K," the CBer's first and last initial and his postal zip code.

Until this change, CBers were required to wait until their permanent license arrived. This often meant a wait of two months or more- a wait many new CBers ignored.

McKinney also says the recent boom in CBs has brought with it a different type of radio operator, one more likely to abide by regulations.

The FCC also found its new licensing procedure reduced the number of unlicensed CB operators. A survey last fall showed 10 per cent of the nation's estimated 20 million CBers without licenses- and legal call signs -compared to 34 per cent during fiscal 1974.

Stray Animals Becoming Top Problem In Cities

Cities are beginning to pay more attention to what, surprisingly, is their residents' No. I complaint - the stray dogs and cats that are increasingly in control of streets and alleyways.

There are about 25 million stray dogs and cats roaming the nation's cities, estimates Friends of Animals, Inc., a nationwide volunteer agency. Between four million and six million of them are destroyed

Americans have about 23 million pet dogs and 27 million pet cats, the agency said, but unwanted pets can become strays. Or the pet might have a litter of puppies or kittens for which owners can't be found, so the young animals are left to their own devices. Streetwise strays often collect million a year for animal control. in packs of five or six that are familiar sights in rundown urban areas, as well in some blamed for killing livestock and Friends of Animals has just finished a survey of how 41 cities handle stray animals. The group said that these cities spent a total of $13.9 million last year to round up and kill strays. Chicago, for instance, spends $1

The problem has become so severe in some places that Pittsburgh residents, for example, say that fear of being bitten by a pack of dogs is as much a reason for staying away from certain sections of town as fear of being robbed.

An earlier survey of 1,031 city mayors and councilmen, conducted by the National League of Cities, showed that city residents complain about the stray animal problem more than any other. Sixty one per cent of the mayors responding said it was the biggest gripe in their city, far ahead of the second biggest source of complaints, group told city officials a week traffic control, which 40.7 per cent cited as a major problem.

According to the American Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, the average per capita expenditure for animal control in cities with populations over one million is 78 cents.

Dade County Miami, Fla., with an estimated stray animal population of 130,000, spends $738,000 and destroys about 20:000 animals a year.

Most cities run their own animal control programs. Others allot tax money to local humane societies, or finance joint-city and private humane society programs.

New York city, usually among the biggest spenders for other programs, is the only large city that doesn't spend anything on animal control. The ASPCCA has been left on its own to deal with New York's estimated 400,000 stray population. The ago it needed $2.1 million to continue its work and threatened to give up unless city money was appropriated.

A few cities have begun programs to reduce the problem, rather than just keep up with it. The model is Los Angeles, which runs three city subsidized clinics for spaying and neutering pets. Jim McNamara, who administers the city's animal control program, says Los Angeles spends $2.7 million for the program, $340,000 of which goes to the clinics. For operations for which a private veterinarian might charge $100, the city clinics spay females for $17.50 and neuter males for $11.50.

While the Canyon junior high teams were busy taking two of three team titles at the South zone Girls Track Meet held at Hereford's Whiteface Field Friday, two local performers were stealing their part of the thunder.

Canyon won both the seventh and eighth grade team titles. completely running away with the eighth grade crown, while La Plata took top honors in the ninth grade division.

But, a lot of attention was focused on the personal exploits of a pair of La Plata athletes. Beverly Nixon in the ninth grade class, and Lindy Walterscheid in the eighth grade class.

Nixon gave high school coach Roy Shipp a lot to think about for next year as she posted a very fast 11.1 in the 80-yard hurdles in winning that event. Nixon also set a record in the high jump with a leap of 5-0,

Brand Sports Editor The Hereford High School Girls Track Team put forth its best effort of the year Friday at the District 4-4A Girls Track Meet in Plainview, finishing second behind a strong Monterey squad. Hereford totaled 110 points to finish second to Monterey's 143. Lubbock Coronado was third with 97 points, while Lubbock High was fourth with 59, and Plainview was fifth with 26.

Hereford got firsts in the 880 (Velma Arroyos, 2:28.8), long jump (Tawana Moton, 16-6), and high jump (Lori Taylor, 4-8) in addition to finishing second in both the 880 and mile relays.

Several records were broken at the meet with Arroyos' 2:28.8 in the 880 erasing the old mark of 2:39.5 set by Hereford's Grace Abalos in 1975. The shot put mark of 36-7 was surpassed by Monterey's Jana Field, who tossed the iron ball 39-7. Hereford's Suzanne Duvall also went above the old mark with a 39-4 despite a painful muscle pull.

In addition Moton tied the District mark in the 100 with an 11.6 in the prelims. She finished second in the finals with an

Buffs 197 Outlook Cheery

CANYON- You're not going to find any long faces around West Texas State University's spring football practice ses-

First of all, head coach Bill Yung and his staff don't believe in long faces, and second, they don't see any reason to be sad about the Buff football team.

"We do have some football players out there," Yung says with pride. "I've been very happy with the way they have responded to the new system."

Foremost on the positive side has been the play of big linemen William Fifer and Willie. Burelson. WTSU's new slot-I offense that adds the pass to the attack puts a new premium on pass-blocking, a technique that the two seniors have adjusted to

"William especially is moving his feet quickly into a pass-blocking stance, and Bureleson is strong at shocking his man on the pass rush and neutralizing him," Yung explains. "Willie doesn't move his feet as quickly as William, but he's getting there."

With All-MVC backs Bo Robinson and Robert Mayberry just now moving into their junior seasons, nobody had to tell Yung that WT was well- stocked with ball carriers. His concern was at the wingback- flanker position, and senior Anthony Dogan seems to be coming through there. "He's starting to catch on out there," Yung says. On defense, three-year starter Mike Lusane is out with a knee injury, but Yung liked what he saw of the big defensive tackle. "Lusane's attitude has been unreal," he says. "he's going to be a good one."

The problem areas- the secondary and linebacker-- are. starting to come around. "The defensive backfield is starting to work as a unit, and that is how it must be," he explains.

Linebacker Larry Spears and tackle George Henning have also received praise from the new Buff coach. The Buffs will got their only work under the lights in Kimbrough Stadium before the April 30 Alumni game on Saturday night with a full-scale scrimmage.

The Buffs will have only eight more practice sessions before they try for their third straight win over the Alumni.

Tickets for the game were on sale at the Saturday night scrimmage and daily at the WTSU athletic ticket office. In addition, the ticket office will be open on April 23 and 30 from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m.

Tickets are priced at $2 for adults, $1 for students with WTSU students admitted free with their student activity cards.

U.S. Sweeps South Africa

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) - The United States swept South Africa in their zone Davis Cup competition Saturday with the doubles team of Bob Lutz and Stan Smith victorious 7-5. 6-1, 3-6, 6-3 in a match that was interrupted when two protesters threw oil on the court.

The victory gave the United States a 3-0 sweep in the best-of-five competition.

The United States had won the first two singles matches of the international competition on Friday, and the victory in doubles left meaningless the two remaining singles matches scheduled for Sunday.

DUCKS UNLIMITED BANQUET

LUBBOCK -- A fund-raising dinner to help build "duck factories" in Canadian provinces will be held at Vann's KoKo Palace, 5201 Avenue Q. Lubbock, beginning at 6:30 p.m. on April 28.

The Lubbock chapter of Ducks Unlimited, a non-profit organization, is planning to raise $10,000 through the sale of banquet tickets which are selling for $25 and various items that will be auctioned at the dinner including art, firearms. and other outdoor merchandise. A special drawing for a boat and motor will also be held at the dinner and tickets for this event will be limited to 200 selling for $25 each.

All the funds raised by the dinner will go into constructing. rehabilitating, preserving and maintaining marshes and wetlands which are so vital to nesting waterfowl in the northern latitudes.

Over 12,000 projects covering an excess of two million acres have been turned into "duck factories" and in these areas, thousands of ducks nest each summer before heading south into the United States. Most of the projects are located in the Canadian prairie provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta. Over 39 years of construction by Ducks Unlimited has dedicated well over $39,000,000 to this work. The $25 contribution for the dinner includes membership in the Ducks Unlimited organization. More information about the banquet and tickets may be obtained by calling John Bass. at 762-8811 or, David Whiteside at 763-1415.

THE BLACK BASS IN TEXAS

The black basses as a group are perhaps the most popul sport fishes in Texas and with over 350 public reservoirs. 80,000 miles of streams and thousands of farm and ranch ponds, fishing opportunities for this fighter are readily availa-

Native black bass species include the northern largemouth, spotted and Guadalupe bass in order of their abundance. The Florida largemouth, a subspecies, and the smallmouth have been introduced in some state waters.

The black bass is a member of the sunfish family and is not a true bass. This member of the sunfish family is historically a slough or bayou fish species, but has adapted to the lakes and reservoirs of Texas, as has its. cousin the spotted bass. The smallmouth bass, however, is an upland stream or river fish inhabiting both deep pools and riffle systems but it. too, can adjust to certain types of reservoirs.

Largemouth adapt well in water temperatures of 60 to 80 degrees Fahrenheit. At temperatures below 41 degrees F., bass feeding and growth cease. while temperatures much above 95 degrees F. may become lethal if existing over extended time periods.

Bass may live and thrive in water with a dissolved oxygen content of 4 parts per million. Oxygen levels of less than 2 p.p.m. are considered lethal. Most non-polluted water will oxygen.

The black bass will grow at a rapid rate where food is plentiful and reservoirs with higher water temperatures and moderate urbidity (depth of visibility) also contribute to the rapid growth of these species.

Largemouth bass may live from 10 to 16 years in cuider an northern lakes, while 5 to 10 years is average in the warmer of and more southern reservoirs of Food requirements for young bass fry and fingerlings include. plankton and small insect larvae until they reach a length of 21/2-3 inches. At this time, they change to a diet composed primarily of fish. Adult buss feed on threadfin and gizzard shad and sunfishes. Crayfish and aquatic insects are favorite food items of the spotted and smallmouth bass.

Male largemouth bass of one year of age will begin nests in the spring when water temperatures in the surface layers of a lake rise above 60 degrees F. A female bass may lay from 2.000 to 100,000 eggs. depending upon her size and age. The fry are guarded by male bass for several days but suffer losses from predation by insects and other fishes both before and after leaving the nest. Fewer than one per cent of all fry survive longer than a year.

Fishing during the spawning season does not hurt the buss population as the production of young bass is not directly related to the number of spawning bass. If a bass is caught off the nest, the eggs or fry are usually lost but young fish from remaining nests survive to take their place.

Fishing for bass is best Texas from February through June during the spring spawning season. The bass are generally in shallow water and will readily hit a varity of lures. Weed beds, rocks, stumps, boat docks, and other cover that provide shade are ideal spots to try for bass. Various lures and baits from minnows to plastic worms are consistent producers of good stringers of fish. Texas anglers have excellent opportunities to catch these fish along with the New Florida/ Texas hybrids, Florida large-mouth and small-mouth bass. The only requirement is a Texas fishing license and a variety of bait or lures to sucker that old

Herd Cops Runner-Up Spot With Good Showing At Amarillo Relays

Herd thinclads came up with some pleasant surprises Saturday and finished with runner-up honors in the AAA and AAAA division of the Amarillo Relays.

James Mays and Paul Bell led the Herd stampede as Mays turned in a sizzling 1:59.5 in the 880, just one tenth of a second off the meet record, and Bell took the tape in the 220 with a 22.7 second clocking.

Bell was also second in the 100 yard dash, where he turned in a 10.1 second performance. One of the day's big surprises was the performance of Dennis Collins in the mile run.

His 4:30.8 performance was enough to earn second place in the event, and also established a new school record.

Frank Madrigal, running in his first mile event this season. finished a strong third with a time of 4:31.7:

Life In China Not What U.S. Students Expected

(EDITOR'S NOTE--Sixteen students from Colorado Academy near Denver, spent 18 days in China last month. Ranging in age from 11 to 15. they were the youngest group of Americans to visit the People's Republic of China. The following story, about the students' view of China, is excerpted from diaries kept by them and three teachers accompanying them.]

977

Written For The Associated

Life in China was not exactly what we might have expected in a Community country. Wages were not all equal, and medical care was not all free. But the people we met seemed satisfied.

An 18-day tour of six Chinese cities brought us into contact with farmers, workers, teachers, doctors, students and people we simply met in the streets and stores. They were curious about American life, as we were curious about theirs. But they did not envy us.

Our group of three teachers and 16 students, aged 11 to 15, from Colorado Academy, a private school near Denver, came home with a broad picture of daily Chinese life. Our impressions were recorded in diaries which we kept during the

We found much to admire in China, and much room for improvement," John Mulvihill, 15, wrote in his journal.

However, as the youngest group of Americans to visit the People's Republic of China, we did not go there to see how the Chinese lived.

We saw their homes, on farm communes and in cities. Two rooms for a family of four or five seemed normal. On a commune outside Peking we visited a home that was neat but - Andy Hornbrook, 13, noted - "didn't have a carpet on its concrete floor." In a worker's flat in a Shanghai housing development Paul Gutjahr, 15, spotted a radio and record players.

The home that impressed many of us belonged to the head of a fruit production brigade on a commune near Suchou. He said be spent 2,000 yuan - about $1,000 - to build and furnish his two-room stone house where he and his wife live with their 4-year-old child. The cost of the home equalled their combined wages for two years. Their furniture consisted of a table, a dresser and their proudest possession - a beautifully hand-carved wooden bed.

There's nothing like a good bowl of soup to make us realize what we're served as such at the local beanery.

On the whole we thought the homes simple and primitive by American standards. However, the Chinese had other standards. The commune house owner told Diana Nice, 14, that he grew up in "a low-ceilinged one-room hut." In the Shanghai housing development, the government had preserved a few 5 by 4-foot scrap metal and wood shacks as a "museum" to show how workers lived before communism. Now they had two rooms for a family of four or five, three rooms for a family of six, plus shared kitchens and prooms, at monthly rentals ranging between $3 and $8.

The difference in rentals and housing reflected something else we detected - wage differences. Our hosts played these down and said China no longer had rich or poor. A guide told Roger Kirkpatrick, one of our teachers, that wages were based on this forumla: "From each according to his ability. To each according to his work and

This mean some earned more than others. We visited a jade carving factory where the average monthly wage was the equivalent of about $20. Our guides earned about $25. We were told steel workers received up to $45.00. In most families both husband and wife worked. At a hospital we were told doctors earned "essentially" what a worker was paid. We guessed it was more, and we asked the Chinese what incentive there would be for a person to become a doctor.

'In our country, one does not become a doctor for fame and wealth," was the reply. "The incentive is the opportunity to serve the people.

Tribe Seeking Recognition

EAGLE PASS, Tex. (AP) Huddled in cardboard huts on the banks of the Rio Grande under the international bridge, a group of Kickapoo Indians, whose tribe also spans two countries is now seeking official recognition as Texas Indians. Recognition by the state would make these native Americans, who hold dual residency in the United States and Mexico, eligible for federal and state indian aid. The citizenship status of the Indians, who cross the border freely, has never been clearly established by congress.

Recognition as a Texas tribe would also put the Kickapoos on the track to a better life, they

'We have been asked to move elsewhere, but where? asks George Whitewater, Kickappo war chief.

A bill in the Texas Legislature by Sen. Ron Clower would expand the powers of the Texas Commission on Indian Affairs to include all Indians in the State. The agency is now restricted to dealing only with the Alabama-Coushatta and Tigua tribes.

The legislation is scheduled for a hearing Monday before the Senate Committee on Human Resources.

The Kickapoos here, whose home base is a ceremonial religious reservation near Nacimiento in Coahuila, Mex., are part of the Kickapoo tribe that and showers cost 50 cents to 75 was driven from its homelands North Central United States nearly 150 years ago.

They were issued a safeconduct pass at Ft. Dearborn, Ill., in 1832 as they began their southward trek. Most stopped in Oklahoma where they were put on a reservation.

But the "tradition" Kickcontinued south across the Rio

'We chose Mexico because they would let us have our religion without interference.' said Whitewater.

But the Kickapoos still have their safeconduct pass in the United States and are considered native Americans.

Each spring, about 100 Kickapoo families make the 150-mile trip from Nacimiento to the staging ground, or campsite, on the grassy banks of the Rio Grande here. Most of them join migrant labor crews and head north. In the fall they return to Eagle Pass and then back to Mexico for religious ceremonies.

Always, however, there are several kickapoo families in the huts beneath the bridge here on the U.S. side. They remain to protect the grounds, said Eagle Pass City Manager Jim Brown. Occasionally, tourists driving over the bridge will toss out a burning cigarette butt or match which falls on the huts and burns several to the ground. They are soon rebuilt.

By late April and early May, hundreds of the Indians will be camped along the Rio Grande. They have no sanitary facilities, no water, no utilities, Brown Water can be purchased from

What is a Realtor? He may live next door to you. His boys are Boys Scouts and his oldest girl is off to college. A Realtor may be a woman who enjoys making her way as a career person. A Realtor goes to church, to school meetings and often heads up civic projects. He, or she, may be all of these things and more.

The point is that Realtors are just other hard-working members of our community, interested in their own families and neighborhoods. That's the way Don Tardy, president of the Hereford Board of Realtors describes a typical Realtor.

Realtors are people who enjoy working closely with other people. Many Realtors work long hours, but they enjoy the challenge they face every day, and there's a great satisfaction in bringing concerned parties to the contract signing day.

State figures show that 82 per cent of the Realtors are men. However, in the Realtor-Associate category, the women account for 42 per cent of the total. It's also interesting to note that one-fourth of all Realtors have completed their college degrees. Many of those persuing a real estate career are actively seeking to better their level of education through seminars and

Time for a baby boom?

By Don Oakley

The United States is due for another baby boom, thinks one observer - the Pill, more women working and concern over population control notwithstanding

The very fact that the birth rate has fallen to 1.8 children per woman, less than replacement level, almost insures it will happen, says University of Michigan economist and demographer Prof. Donald D. Lee.

"Today's children will comprise a relatively small age group when they become young adults during the 1980s and 1990s," he says. "As a result, their job and income prospects will be improved. Feeling more prosperous, they will marry earlier and have more children. Families of three or more children will become common again

He notes that during the Depression of the 1930s, the birth rate dipped to about 2.1 children per woman, exactly replacement level. Because there were so few children in that age group, they fared better with jobs and income when they reached maturity.

These young adults gave birth to more children during the postwar years. When the baby-boom children in turn began coming of age during the 1960s and 1970s, this much larger population found itself faring worse economically and because of it elected to have fewer children

As further evidence of the powerful influence of economics on the birth rate, Lee points out that the Depression-era figure of 2.1 was achieved long before many contraceptives used today were invented. The birth rate peaked in 1957 at 3.7, and then began a steady fall to the current 1.8 more than a decade before the environmental and women's liberation movements.

It isn't absolute income that affects a generation's birth rate, however, but how income compares with expectations. Because they are both fewer in number and are growing up in an era of economic uncertainty, Lee believes today's children will find themselves in better economic circumstances than they expect and will thus repeat the reproductive performance of the children of the '30s.

A DOG NAMED REVERAND

I guess the guy meant well. He thought I needed a dog so he brought the thing in. It was supposed to have been a collie. I think it was half collie and half coyote. That was the dumbest dog I have ever seen. It never did even learn to come when you called it. I would stand whistling and begging. That dog would stand and look at me like I was crazy. I guess I was crazy. After all, I fed that dog. didn't 1? I will have to say he was housebroken. He always waited to do his thing in the house on the rug. No offense intended to anyone, but I named that dog Reverend. I thought the name fit for various reasons I won't go into here.

One Sunday morning, Boyd Miller, a big-time agricultural operator, asked me what I would take for that dog. He wanted a dog to guard his sheep and do other stuff dogs do for big-time agriculturalists. I told him he could have the thing at no charge. Boyd insisted that the dog should be purchased. "A dog is never any good if he is free" he said. We agreed on a price of 50 cents, grossly overpriced I thought but Boyd was a man of means so I let it go. He took the dog home right after church that Sunday morning.

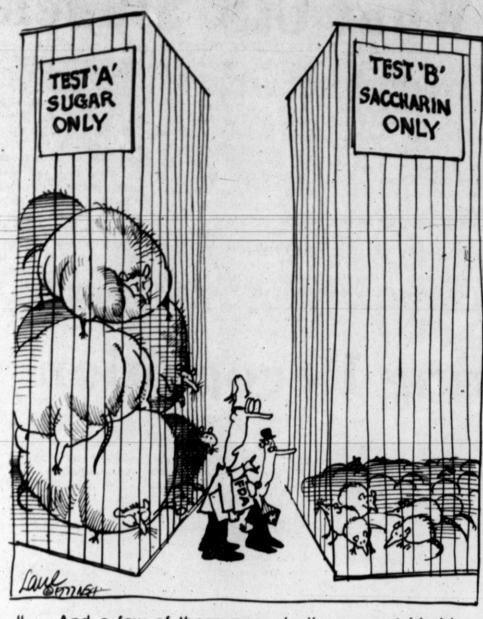

The first thing old Reverend did was eat up on Boyd's chickens. I went out to the farm one day and there was old Reverend with a dead chicken around his neck. I guess that was supposed to break him of the habit. It never did.

Then Reverend got smart enough to steal eggs. Funny, he was still too dumb to come when you called him.

One Sunday morning Boyd came to church lower than a snake and madder than a wet hen. "Do you know the coyotes came and killed off my sheep and that dumb dog helped them?" I said. "Boyd, that's what you get for buying a dog on

Talk of Texas

FOOTNOTE TO HISTORY -- Sam Houston was Texas' most prolific politician and the hero of its revolution against Mexico, but he was a poor military man.

The fact is that he could have lost the Battle of San Jacinto and Texas' independence from Mexico almost as easily as he won it.

After the Alamo fell on March 3, 1836, Houston began retreating, ostensibly to try and add reinforcements. He had 1,400 men when he began his retreat at Gonzales and new troops did arrive almost daily. However, desertions were even greater. Many soldiers, opposed to retreating and anxious for even a brief visit with their families, simply walked away.

By the time Houston reached San Jacinto-the farthest point he could go--Houston had only 800 men. Gen. Santa Anna and 600 Mexicans were camped nearby. On April 19, Houston had the superior force but he did not

On the morning of April 21, Gen. Cos and 500 men joined Santa Anna. The Mexican general, however, also made two strategic errors. He camped on the banks of Buffalo Bayou, cutting off his retreat route. And he posted no sentries.

When Houston decided to attack at 4:30 p.m., Santa Anna and his troops were taking their siesta. The Texans advanced in a long line two ranks deep---a formation which could have been easily shattered if the Mexican defense had been alert. Houston even announced the attack by having a four-piece band play the popular song, "Will You Come into My

In 18 minutes, the battle was over.

Only three Texans died and 18 were wounded while 630 Mexicans died and 208 were wounded. Houston had revenged the Alamo and won Texas its freedom as well.

A LA CARTE--San Antonio's Bull Moose Restaurant doesn't serve moose steaks (at least, not yet) but loin of lion is available.

POLITICAL NOTE -- In Barry, Navaroo County, municipal elections don't arouse the voters very much.

For 30 years now, nobody has bothered to run for the office of mayor. Candidates also have ignored both of the seats on the City Council. The lack of candidates hasn't slowed the election process in Barry, however. Citizens simply write in the names of their choices. Usually, the incumbents are releected unless they refuse to serve.

That hasn't happened yet. CATTLE EXPRESSWAY--Texas once boasted a 100-mile-long highway where traffic was restricted to cowboys and their herds. Early in the century, E.F. Tillman bought a right-of-way 250 feet wide through 100 miles of ranches. It began in Sonora, Sutton County, and stretched to Brady, McCulloch County. Brady was the terminus of the railroad and Tillman wanted a way to get the cattle to market quickly. He built holding pastures, wells and windmills along his "trailway."

Ranchers used it until about 1929 when a branch railroad finally was built from San Angelo to Sonora.

Today the state's only highway built exclusively for cattle is gone.

Dear editor:

Another thorny problem was how to classify the income of a Senator who owns a farm and spends his week-ends telling his hired hand wha to do. Should his farm income be limited to $8,600 a year? This buffaloed me. I've always thought it ought to be against the law for a farmer to make less than $8,600 a year, not more. If that Senator can do it just on week-ends, he ought to be Secretary of Agriculture.

The gist of the ethics bill as finally boiled down and passed is that a Senator cannot ethically get paid for more than $8,600 worth of speeches a year. It sets no limit on the amount of free speeches he can make.

Progress

Medical experts say that cancer is not just one, but a group of about a hundred diseases. It involved the most fundamental life processes including the life and death of cells.

Cancer research has probed the innermost secrets of nature. Enormous discoveries have been made but it seems clear that a long and persistent effort is required to bring this common foe of all mankind under control.

The public in entitled to get answers to the question -- are we making progress against cancer? With April proclaimed as Cancer Control Month, the American Cancer Society points out that its efforts -- and progress -- have been threefold.

First in research, during the past years about 50 drugs have been developed that have an anti-cancer effect. This includes treatment which combines anti-cancer drugs right after breast cancer surgery. It includes the use of combination drug treatment for childhood leukemia which has resulted in five-year survival for half the leukemia patients treated in various centers around the country. It also includes the development of immunotherapy, or treatment that enhances the body's own disease-fighting capacity.

Second in education there has been progress against the biggest cancer killer of all -- lung cancer. This is largely a preventable disease because more than 80 per cent of all lung cancers are caused by cigarette smoking. Over the years there has been a continuing decline in the percentage of adult smokers. This has resulted in the decline of, mortality from some cigarette-associated diseases and the prospect is for a similar trend with respect to lung cancer. Great progress has also been made in getting women to have the Pap test for early detection of cervical cancer. This education effort has been partly responsible for the 65 per cent decrease in this type of cancer in the last 30 years.

And finally in service and rehabilitation of cancer patients, there has been expansion of ACS programs.. These include Reach to Recovery. which brought psychological and prosthetic help to more than 50,000 women after breast surgery last year. ACS also helped thousands of laryngectomees learn a new method of speech after voice box surgery. And it helped thousands of colon and rectum patients find normal life and activity after their surgery. The research, education and service programs need ever greater support. When an ACS volunteer visits your home this April, give generously for this threefold attack on cancer.

Killian said OFCC officials at first "were sympathetic and took me to the office of Defense Supply to Mr. Ralph Caceres who was supposed to investigate, but had to have an order from Washington."

It was while waiting for the order, Killian went to EEOC.

In May of 1976, Rep. Milford wrote to Robert Ornelas. assistant regional administrator of OFCC in Dallas, demanding an answer to his previous letters on the Killian case.

Ornelas answered in June saying the normal procedure was to accept the complaint and transmit to the main office in Washington "for review and assignment" but that Killian's case was in the hands of EEOC.

But two months earlier George L. Dunbar, EEOC district director, had given Killian and his employes "right to sue" letters after explaining that the prime contractor had refused to submit to arbitration.

Melvin Dummar, a former service station operator now living in Ogden, Utah, has admitted delivering the will to the church, but claims that he had nothing to do with the preparation of the document which names him as a beneficiary of one-sixteenth of the Hughes estate. Dummar claims that a mysterious stranger delivered the will to the service station he used to operate in Willard. Utah, about three weeks after Hughes' death, and about two months ago, Levane Forsythe, a contractor from Anchorage. Alaska, popped into the picture claiming to be the messenger who delivered the will to Forsythe claims that Hughes gave him the will and instructions for its delivery during a secret meeting in a Vancouver, B.C., hotel in 1972, and that he carried out about 50 secret missions for Hughes over a 20-year span.

Many of Hughes' aides. including Miss Henley, who helped Hughes prepare a will during the mid-1940s, have said they never saw or knew anything about Forsythe.

Rhoden has been trying to prove that Forsythe could have had a relationship with Hughes without even the closest of aides knowing about it.

One point which Rhoden stressed is that Miss Henley did not see or converse with Hughes

However, Miss Henley said communicated with Hughes through letters and memos very frequently.

Not only did she say she never knew anything about Forsythe, but she said she never saw a legally executed Hughes will.

Mrs. Henley said she worked on a will with Hughes from 1944 through 1947, and that Hughes was prepared to sign it in early 1950, but decided against it at the last moment, according to Both Rhoden and Dilworth said Miss Henley is sure that Hughes did leave a will, leaving most of his estate to the Howard Hughes Medical Institute HHMI, but that she has absolutely no evidence to back her belief.

Attorneys for HHMI, which is located in Miami, Fla., have filed a document in Clark County District Court laying claim to the entire Hughes estate in the absence of a legal will, based on Hughes' well-known wishes to leave most of his estate to medical research

Forsythe claims to have been involved in the delivery of many cash campaign contributions to candidates in Southern California, and Rhoden believes Miss Henley's sworn testimony corroborates such activities.

However, Dilworth said Miss Henley told attorneys that Hughes stopped making cash campaign contributions in the

'Nadine was so close to the heartbeat of the thing that people wouldn't have told her about Forsythe," Dilworth said. 'I'm satisfied that had there been any Forsythe jobs she would have known about it."

In sworn testimony, Rebozo, a close friend of former President Richard Nixon, said the money was delivered in two installments by Richard G. Danner. Danner is a former FBI agent for several years.

Rebozo said he kept the money in his safe, and later returned it

Rhoden said Miss Henley admitted that there were many times when money went out that she knew nothing about.

"She of course had nothing to do with that the Rebozo money. The point was made that there were a lot of political contributions of substantial amounts, and again always in cash and always in these same $100 bills, about which she had now knowledge, no dealings and would not have known about," Rhoden declared.

Dilworth countered Rhoden's comments by saying campaign contributions such as the money given to Rebozo were often made by Hughes' associates.

Futuristic City Going Up In Arizona Desert

By DIANE ROWLAND Associate Press Writer

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)- He put shamrock plant on his head. shook hands with Mayor Margaret Hance, nibbled an organic salad of watercress and whatnot and watched the audience drink green beer.

Then visionary architect Paolo Soleri said a few words and led the opening day crowd to the unveiling of a model of his futuristie city.

The 18-foot-high model took five months to produce and would have cost $100,000 if made commercially, the wiry Italian said.

The reproduction matches the actual construction of Soleri's dream city being built on a desert mesa 70 miles north of here. The model, like the actual city, was put together on a shoestring budget by dedicated. hardworking students who belive in the man and his work are willing to pay for the privilege of laboring with him.

"We could have the city built in five years with some capital.' said Soleri. "But we are given time, not cash, so that will mean 10 to 15 years. But that's no matter. At least we have no mortgage.'

He seems in no hurry to bring his dream to reality, but to enjoy it as evolves and changes.

"The concept continues as designed," he said. "but we learn as we do and we adapt. improve."

The prototype city Soleri has been building on an 860-acre track since 1970 is named Arcosanti.

"The name has to do with ecology and a lot of other things," he said, declining to explain in detail, implying the word, like the concept, is too intricate for the public to

Soleri came here from Italy in 932 to study with Frank Lloyd Wright. He later returned to Italy to study-ceramic molding, an art practiced now at Arcosanti.

When he returned to Arizona, Soleri established the Cosanti Foundation in Scottsdale in 1956, a nonprofit educational umbrella through which his philosophical and construction work is done. Cosanti means 'before things" in Italian, aides

The often criticized, always controversial architect began building his city with a few shovels, a cement mixer and a group of idealistic students. About a dozen who started with him are still a part of the project, he said.

Soleri said he chose the site 'because I was here" .-- in Arizona.

The design of Arcosanti is 'arcology,' Soleri's team for a combination of architecture and

Instead of sprawling, Soleri's city will rise 25 stories above the desert. It will cover only 10 acres, with more than 98 per ent of the 860-acre tract preserved in its natural state.

It will face south for the sun -"I felt this need for solar energy 20 years ago" -- and slightly more than four acres sloping down the mesa below the building will be a greenhouse, used to grow food for the community, provide its heat,

But the finished product will place automated industries. power plants and warehouses on the lower levels where natural light is not essential. Living space will be on the exterior shell of the apse, with areas all linked by automated transport

The city of the future is smaller, said Soleri, but connects the life of man with nature. The 'sun's heat and air currents are utilized. Pollution i is reduced, open space preserved, men brought closer together spiritually. Privacy problems would not occur with proper architectural design, he

Antihijack Agreement Victim Of Uneasiness

WASHINGTON (AP). The 1973 U.S.- Cuban antihijacking agreement expired Friday, a highly successful diplomatic venture that fell victim to the lingering uneasiness between the two countries.

Cuban President Fidel Castro announced last October he was calling off the agreement in retaliation for what he said was a series of CIA-sponsored terrorist acts against Cuba. including the crash of a Cuban jetliner off Barbados.

The anithijack agreement permits either side to cancel with six months' notice. That period expired this morning.

Combined with stricter security measures at U.S. airports. the agreement had put an end to an epidemic of air piracy involving the United States and Between 1961 and 1973, 87 U.S. airplanes were diverted to Cuba. Since the agreement was signed- exactly 50 months ago today- Cuba-bound hijackings have been limited to one private plane and one vessel.

Hijackings from the other direction have been restricted largely to rowboats seized by Cuban political refugees.

"On the whole, we have regarded the agreement as very useful," a U.S. official said Thursday.

The accord committed both countries to extradite or prosecute persons engaged in the hijacking of airplanes or ships from one country to the other.

Castro has indicated that Cuba will continue to abide by the terms of the agreement despite the absence of a contractual obligation.

Sensing U.S. interest in a formal agreement, Castro has said he may be willing to extend it if the United States will end its trade embargo against Cuba.

Sen. George S. McGovern, D-S.D., who recently visited Cuba, says he will introduce legislation to repeal the embargo.

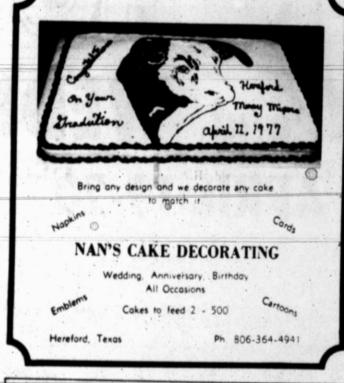

But President Carter has suggested that step should be part of an agreement committing Cuba to a peaceful foreign policy in Africa and elsewhere and to an easing of political repression on the island.

Quality Of American Education Questioned

By LOUISE COOK secciated Press Writer

Alarmed by reports of high school graduates who cannot read well enough to fill out a job application, educators and lawmakers are trying to make sure that youngsters learn basic skills before they leave the classroom.

State legislatures and boards education are setting up testing programs requiring students to meet what are known as minimum competency standards before they receive a high school diploma or are promoted from grade-to-grade.

They are testing students beginning in the eighth and ninth grade and setting up remedial programs for those youngsters who fail.

Dr. Chris Pipho, associate director of the Department of Research and Information of the Education Commission of the States in Denver said that by the end of 1976, 16 states had taken some action in the area of minimum competency standards and action is pending in more than half a dozen other

"The push for minimal competency testing may be a reflection of the general mood of the country," says Pipho. "For some time, separate groups have been concerned about the need for more basic education, declining test scores and more accountability for the education dollar."

Dr. Richard M. Bossone, professor of English at the graduate school of the City University of New York, said the public is showing a "growing dissatisfaction with high school graduates who are unable to read or write well."

Bossone spoke at a conference on minimum competencies, sponsored by the New York City Board of Education and the City University's Graduate Center. Like Pipho, he noted that there are several problems with the new testing programs.

First and foremost is the problem of determining what constitutes minimum competency. Does it mean being able to read at a certain grade level? Or does it mean being able to understand the instruction booklet that comes with a new appliance? Should writing tests stress grammar, spelling and puntuation or should they be more concerned with determining whether the student can express himself clearly? What areas should be tested?

Other problems include: Who should set the standards? When should the tests be given? How do you insure that the tests do not discriminate against minority groups? What sort of remedial programs should be set up and where will the money come from? How do you insure that the minimum doesn't also become the maximum?

These problems have led some educators to criticize the minimum competency concept. Arthur Wise, of the Educational Policy Research Group, said that passage of laws setting minimum standards on a statewide basis "is a rather simplistic solution to what is a serious problem...l'm certainly in favor of children learning how to read. The real question is whether you can legislate that...' Wise said that teachers and principals already know which students cannot read or perform simple arithmetical tasks. "The problem is that we don't have effective ways of reaching these young people...'

In recent years, he noted, educators have faced the problem of what to do with the child who has not learned to read. Do you attach a stigma of failure to the youngster or do you give him a "social promotion," advancing him to the next grade level even though he has not mastered the required work? What about the student who is given remedial training but is still unable to pass the minimum competency

"I don't have an answer." Wise said. "It's a question of values. The kind of stigma that would attach to some children as a result of these minimum competency laws may be...a heavier burden that getting out of high school without being able to read."

Supporters of the minimum competency idea conceded that they don't have solutions to all the problems. Educators are still working to develop acceptable tests.

'The issue of minimal competency ultimately becomes a testing and measurement oblem for which no one has all the answers," said H.A. Wilson, director of exercise development for the National Assessment of Educational

NAEP is funded by the federal government and is a project of the Education Commission of the States.

Wilson suggested to the educators and testing experts meeting in Denver last summer that state and local school districts start by using "an item-bank approach" with a large pool of test items. "The items could be used to establish a body of materials from which state and local districts could sample or select items that meet their particular needs at a given

Professional testing services already have developed proposed exams. One such test includes sections designed to find out whether the student can follow written directions, can understand such items as classified ads and can use road maps or grocery store tapes to get the information he or she

Most school districts are trying to learn as they go in the area of minimum competency. It is too early to measure the impact of existing programs, but a look at the diversity of some of the proposals under development provides clues about the directions the states are taking.

Two states, California and Florida, combined minimum competency testing with the 'early out' concept whereby a student who passes the test can leave school with a diploma before the usual legal age.

About 20,000 to 30,000 students in California have taken the minimum competency test, Pipho said, but no studies have been completed on the impact of the law and how it is working. Implementation of the law in Florida was delayed when legislators discovered there was no standard, readily available minimum competency test.

"The 'early out' approach appears to be in the minority." Pipho said, adding that there are questions about the impact of the program on college enrollment and about what leaves school at 15 or 16 and cannot find a job.

The City of Denver has been giving minimum competency tests since 1962. Two years ago, the Colorado Legislature passed a law requiring any school district which decides to give such a test to meet certain standards: the test must first be given in the ninth grade; tests. must be given twice a year; remedial classes must be provided during the regular school day for all students who do not pass the test.

New York State will begin a minimum competency testing program in 1979. Gordon Ambach, executive deputy commissioner of the State Education Department, said tests will be given in five areas; reading, writing or composition, mathematics, practical sciences and health and civics and citizenship.

The department decided that the exam would be compulsory and that no student would receive a high school diploma without passing the test. Ambach said. The test, which will be given starting at the ninth-grade level, must be completed in English.

Some educators argue that testing in the ninth grade is too late. The State of Washington, in legislation passed last year, requires that local school districts develop learning objectives starting with the kindergarten year and that students be tested at least annually.

The Virginia Legislature ordered school districts last year "to give highest instructional priority to developing the reading, communications and mathematics skills of all students with particular attention to the primary grades and the intermediate grades."

The law also directs the state beard of education to establish minimum educational standards on a statewide basis and to test students annually for reading

Pipho says the minimum competency tests could lead to a major overhaul of the educa-tional system within the decade. with changes in what is taught and how. Educators are still debating the form that the changes should take and what areas should be stressed. But Pipho notes: "The man on the street has no doubt as to the meaning of minimum competency. Minimum competency means reading, writing, and arithmetic."

Cancer is not just a disease for adults...It hits even the youngest of children too! Not even the infant barely out of the mother's womb is immune to the dread disease. Three year-old Clay Coker of Hereford, shown above with his father Jerry, was found to have cancer of the adrenal gland when he was only five weeks old.

But, thanks to research made possible through generous contributions collected during the American Cancer Society's Annual Crusade each year cancer can be combated allowing the young stricken child to live a normal, happy life. Clay is a happy youngster today in evidence that cancer can be beaten.

Wouldn't it be nice to know that your dollars given during this year's Crusade went to help some youngster such as Clay live a normal life? Clay is a symbol of the hopeful side of cancer, and there is much progress being made in treating childhood cancer, including Lukemia.

Since 1950 deaths from childhood cancer have been declining largely due to new drugs, new ways of administrating them, and aggressive ways of combining them with other forms of therapy including surgery and radiation.

We ALL as human beings, owe it to ourselves to see that every possible discovery or breakthrough gets the chance to become a reality... After all, we want to wipe out cancer in Clay's lifetime.

Kitchens-Marsh Wedding Vows Exchanged Saturday

Miss Karen Adell Kitchens became the bride of James Claude "Jim" Marsh during a twilight ceremony Saturday in First Baptist Church with the Rev. Doug Manning, pastor.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W.H. Kitchens, 319 Stadium Drive and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Marsh of

Bouquets of white stock and coral Killian daisies were placed at the altar for the candlelight

Miss Sharon Dearing was the honor attendant and Ted Eicke served as best man.

Other bridal attendants included Mrs. Jeff Deavenport and Miss Rence Russell. Groomsmen included Wayne Schumacher and the bride's brother Keith Kitchens

Guests were ushered by O.H. Seamonds, Franklin Higgins, Kelly Kitchens, brother of the bride, and Gary Yosten.

Donna Kendall, solo vocalist. rendered "Evergreen" and "The Lord's Prayer" prior to the processional.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a Juliet-style gown of candlelight chiffon and Brussels lace, designed with semi-natural waistline and full circular skirt. Her long lantern sleeves billowed from lace caps at the shoulder and were gathered at the wrist with button and loop clasps and lace which tapered over her hands. Matching Gothis lace points defined her waistline. The full, flowing skirt fell in layers, with petal edging. drifting to a Chapel train.

Her calla dily veil was attached to a Juliet cap which was adorned at the crown by a sunburst of lace tendrils. The veil edges were hand-rolled.

She carried a cascading bouquet of white roses.

The bridal attendants wore identical gowns of coral quiana jersey designed with sleeveless bodices and complemented by brief capes of chiffon. Each clasped a nosegay of terra cotta chrysanthemums and coral

The wedding party assembled after the ceremony in the church Fellowship Hall, where Miss Brenda Owen and Miss Beverly Cole served refreshments. Mrs. Bobby Fields of Groom registered guests during the reception and Miss Susan Wartes and Miss Joni Charest secured signatures of guests before the wedding:

Water Safety Program Announces Schedule

The American Red Cross wants to teach you to swim! The lessons are free and the teachers are volunteers. The only charge is a minimal fee for use of the city pool.

Outlined below is what the Red Cross Water Safety Program offers its students. *Beginner Swimming: to develop personal skills for self-preservation in water and for basic assistance to others. Must have completed the first grade. *Advanced Beginner: to increase enjoyment of this healthful recreational activity. *Intermediate Swimmer: to learn elements of good

*Advance Swimmer: to develop personal skills in all styles of swimming and to increase safe enjoyment of aquatic

*Basic water Safety and Rescue: to develop skilles and knowledge for prevention of aquatic accidents and to give assistance to victims. Must to 11-14 years of age or have completed fifth grade.

*Senior Lifesaving: the same as Basic Water Safety and Rescue. Must be 15 years old or older or have completed ninth grade.

*Water Safety Instructor: to learn to teach water safety and swimming classes. Must be 17 years old or older and have Senior Livesaving.

*Water Safety Aides: to help instructors with classes. Must be able to demonstrate skills. Must have Basic Resue or Senior Lifesaving.

It is important that the Water Safety Program 'waterproof' as many persons as possible. To do this the Red Cross needs to train instructors to fulfill the growing demand for swimming education. Anyone interested in instructing a class must register at the Red Cross office which will be open 10 a.m. - 5 p.m. April 20 or by calling 364-3761. There is an urgent need for instructors. Aides are asked to register at the Community Center April 25 at 3:45.

The swimming sessions are scheduled as follows: Basic Water Safety and Rescue - May 16 - 20. Senior Lifesaving - May 21 - 29. Basic Instructor Course - May 30 1st summer session - June 13-24 2nd summer session - July 4-15 3rd summer session - July 25 - Aug. 5.

Dr. Jordan Grooms brought a soul-searching message for Vesper Tuesday evening from Psa. 31:12. He emphasized the importance of how one esteems themselves. It is as he Psalmist said "like a broken dish" or is it ad God created more "to the glory and honor of God"? The Christian standard strives for excellence which reflects Godlikeness, generosity, being helpful. Whereas the "broken dish" standard is a sign of downgrading self, hugging misery with a feeling of rejection. He closed with a challenging though that God can and wants to mend "the broken

Good Friday was indeed good day for King's Manor residents. An afternoon Com-munion Service directed by Chaplain Seago was a time for reflection on God's goodness, mercy and love in providing a way of redemption for Mankind. Christian fellowship prevailed for the sixty-five interdenominational residents in attendance.

Then at the evening time Rev. Bob Trice with members of the Chamber Singers from the First Baptist Church, thrilled our hearts with gospel hymns, such as "The Bond of Love," "In the Garden" and "How Great Thou Art." A quartet composed of Mr. Trice, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Rogers and Jan Walser with Linda Sue Wells, accompanist, lifted our spirits with Old Fashioned Singing, "Leaning on the Everlasting Arms" and "I Need Thee Every Hour." Mr. Trice's solo in "Remembrance" and his prayer were an appropriate closing to the sacred music program which he and his group has so graciously rendered, and which brought joy and satisfaction to all in

At Wit's End By Erma Bombeck

It's funny what a difference a few years will make in your attitude toward children.

There was a time when I took a piece of cardboard from my husband's shirts, ran a string through it, and hung it around my son's neck. It read, "PLEASE DO NOT FEED."

He was like a disposer in Keds...going up and down the street with his mouth open. He made garbage trucks an engangered species in our neighborhood.

What I wouldn't give to have anyone feed him today...cookies, candies, ice cream...anything to take the edge off his appetite and ruin his meals. And remember, "Talk to me?"

I couldn't wait until the kid began to talk. I'd sit in front of him and be so anxious to have anything come out of his mouth, I was interpreting the bubbles.

Through adolesence and the teenage years I was always pleading, "Talk to me. I'm your mother." You know when he began to talk? When he moved to LA and the daytime rates were 48 cents for the first minute and 33 cents for each additional minute plus tax. We spent $4.53 last week just to hear him relate how his white sweater shrunk in the soak

I could bite my tongue when I think of it, but there actually was a period in my life when I told my daughter, "Get out of those good clothes before you ruin them and get into something grubby to play."

What I wouldn't give today to see if she still has legs. It's painful to remember, but there was a period of years when I lived by the slogan, "You can drive a child to water...but you can't make him wash." I wish I had a nickel for every time I personally turned on the shower, filled the tub, measured out the shampoos and physically threatened to do harm to their bodies if they did not avail themselves of soap and water.

That was before the Herbal Connection. Today, bathing among teenagers is a religion. The hot water tank is a shrine and fat hair is the ultimate.

Possibly the greatest discrepancy you note is the attitude of grandparents. When the children are babies they stand in line to sit with them. This tapers off at about 18 months when it is discovered they have openings in every part of their body that needs attention

I heard a grandmother say the other day, "I wouldn't supervice my teenage grandchildren for anything in the world. Who am I kidding? The National Guard wouldn't sit

I guess the moral of the story is, "Enjoy it...before you know what you're doing.'

energy with a conservationist electric water heater

Maximum efficiency in appliances is what we're all looking for ... to save energy, save money.

That's why the CONSERVATIONIST ELECTRIC water heater is worth looking at. It saves 15% of the energy used in a like-sized regular electric water heater and delivers all the dependability of electric water heating. The Conservationist is heavily insulated on all sides so. heat is retained inside the water heater . . . used for what you're paying for . . . to heat water.

And, you save on space above the heater because an electric water heater does not need a flue or vent.

Ask us about the Conservationist ... the electric water heater designed to use energy wisely and save.

DEAR LOU: Try to find it in yor heart to forgive your mother. If forgiveness isn't there, go to her anyway and make the gesture. Hopefully, forgiveness will come later. One thing is certain, dear, you will not have a chance to walk this.

DEAR ANN: In reference to the 25-year-old woman who wanted to have her tubes tied: The woman's husband was pestering her to have a second child and her nine-month-old baby was driving her crazy.

You said, "Twenty-five is awfully young to make this irreversible decision. Wait till the baby is three years of age. By then you'll probably be enjoying him immensely and want another child."

I'll bet that woman's husband never changed a diaper or gave the baby a bottle or a bath. Dollars to doughnuts the entire child-rearing job fell on his wife. When the youngster gets older,

Square Dancers

Graduate

Fifteen couples and eight individuals graduated from square dance instruction, sponsored by Merry Mixers Club, Monday evening at the ommunity Center.

Freddie Mckee of Amarillo was instructor for the 15-week course, which involved 50 basic moves and approximately 25 variations of the basic steps.

The class graduates surprised their instructor with a gag gift of headache and antacid tablets. They also presented Mckee with a money tree and an ornatelydecorated cake made by Nan Gauthreaux was served.

Ed and Angie McCreary conducted the formal graduation ceremony, followed by distrubition of diplomas by Mckee. Benny Womble, president of the Merry Mixers, encouraged the graduated to remain active in this form of recreation, which is rapidly growing in popularity.

The Merry Mixers group is now considered the largest square dance club in the Texas Panhandle, composed of 55 active couples, including the influx of new graduates.

Those recent graduates, who are now eligible to join Merry Mixers Club, include Jimmy and Linda Blair, Bill and Cindy Burnam, Gary and Sylvia Rudd, Bob and Mary Taylor, Bob and Mary Jo Hamman, Bud and Tommie Hansen, Rocky and Helen Lee.

Also, Wayne and Betty Lady, Steve and Jodi Hendon, Eugene and Norma Hendon, Henry and Judy Reid, Derrill and Natha Carroll, Milton and Marynell Rudder, Owen and Mary Seamonds, Dean and Brinda Fox and Larry and Corda

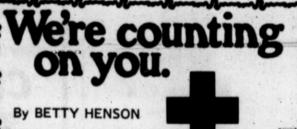

In addition, Glen and Luella Power, Michael Ruther, Bennie Moore, Almona Holt, Terri Seiver, Sammiee Mazurek and Staci Robinson.

After the graduation ceremony, fourteen squares danced to the calling of Mckee with experienced and newly- graduated dancers taking to the dance floor. Out-of-town guests in attendance were from Dimmitt, Amarillo, Odessa and Friona square dance clubs.

BUILDING FAMILY COMMUNICATION

Open, honest communication is one tool for improving family relationships.

"But learning to communicate effectively with loved ones isn't always easy, differences in values and feelings cause conflict and misunderstanding"

"First, remember that both words and actions communicate. Facial expressions, tone of voice, posture, breathing tempo and many other actions communicate a person's feelings and attitudes.

'Actions should speak the same as words--not louder--for best communication. It's hard to understand when a speaker says one thing but his actions don't back up his words. For example, it's especially confusing to a young child when his parents tell him 'we don't hit anyone in anger' as they spank him hard for hitting someone else."

She said that sharing feelings--even negative ones--is another way to build good communication within a family.

"Everyone feels angry, frustrated, jealous or sad at times, and its encouraging to live in a home where expressing these feelings is acceptable. Trusting and sharing problems or concerns with family is a signal that communication is working

But in order to share feelings, mutual trust and respect are necessary. Communication is nproved when family members discard methods that lead to resentment and self-doubt.

If you need a ride, please call us at 364-3573. Topics for the seminar include: "The Family's Finest Hour", "Do You Hear Me Honey" and "The Awesome Power of The Listening Ear". Sounds interesting, don't you the parents of Mike Finamore, it was a bleak year- their 13-year-old son was stricken with acute childhood leukemia, and was given just weeks to live.

Much Progress Seen In Treating Child Cancer

This year is 1977, and for Mike, his parents, and is wife, Ann, it is a good year because Mike is almost 26. He leads a normal, active life, free of disease, as he has for so many years, thanks to the progress of cancer research.

"Mike is a dynamic symbol of the hopeful side of cancer and there is much progress in treating childhood cancer, including leukemia." Jerry Coker of the local ACS unit said. "Mike was treated with highly experimental drugs, and his survival as the years went by was considered senstational by the medical world. Today, 95 per cent of children with Mike's form of Leukemia achieve remission for one year, which means there is no detectible sign of disease. And, at least half of these are living beyond five years, free of any symptoms.

While Leukemia, cancer of the blood and blood- forming childhood cancers, it is not the only form of cancer to strike the young. According to the ACS. cancer is responsible for more deaths in the 3-4 age group than any other disease. Nevertheless, childhood cancer is a rare disease.

A cancer of the kidney, called Wilms' tumor, cancer of the bone, brain and eye, are some forms of malignant disease that strike the young. Since 1950, deaths from childhood cancer have been declining largely because of cancer drugs, new ways of administering them, and aggressive ways of combining them with other forms of therapy including surgery and radiation. Children with cancer should only be treated where this kind of treatment is available.

For example, combination treatment such as radiation combined with drugs to treat advanced Wilms' tumor are extending young lives to the point of cure. The survival rate for children under 15 with thyroid cancer has been raised to 98 per cent.

"As with adult cancer, cancer is infrequent," he said. cancer for ourselves and our children," Coker said, "that is why we are asking everyone in Hereford to help by practicing cancer safeguards, including checkups, and by supporting cancer research."

The Good News Texas Revival, with the theme of "Living Proof" began today at the Summerfield Baptist Church. Evening services will begin at 6:00 p.m. each morning (beginning Monday) service will begin at 7:00 a.m., evening services (beginning Monday) will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Rev. Bebo Gibbs of Fort Worth, will be leading the services, with Eddie Owens of Plainview conducting the music. Rev. Gibbs was born and raised in Amarillo. He attended Wayland Baptist College in Plainview and will graduate in May from the Southwestern Baptist Seminary in Fort Worth.

Bebo has been very active in his work for the Lord during his college and seminary years as he served as a summer missionary in the states of Washington and Oregon. He has preached in over 200 revivals and is only 24 years of age. He has served as the associate pastor of Ms church in Fort Worth.

This summer, after graduation from the seminary, he plans to return to Amarillo where he will continue his education by participating in the clinical pastorial education training at High Plains Baptist Hospital.

Truly a man this active for the Lord is what we need as "Living Proof".

Eddie Owens, former Quitaque resident, comes from a long line of musical directors in Baptist churches, as his Hereford. grandfather and his dad have a combination of 50 years experience and Eddie has chosen to keep this an active part of his life. He is the sports reporter on the Plainview record.

Eddie is a graduate of Wayland Baptist College in Plainview. Do not forget the Good News Texas Revival this week at the Summerfield Rantist Church

Brown Says More Rainfall Needed

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - Fields and pastures throughout the High Plains need at least two inches of rain to really change the drought situation in West Texas, Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown said-Friday. Wheat is at a critical stage throughout the West Texas region and even the recent showers will be a help," Brown said. "There has not been enough to provide deep moisture, but another front is expected to move in soon."

Brown said that the heavy thunderstorms and tornadoes that moved through Central Texas and the Blacklands Thursday night did not cause any reported serious damage to farmers and ranchers.

He said that Gillespie County peach growers escaped hail damage that stunted last year's

Drs. A.C. Mathers and B.A. Stewart, Scientists at USDA Southwestern Great Plains Research Center

at Bushland, check irrigation in tests comparing manure with commerical fertilizer.

Manure Can Compete With Amonia When Prices Are Right

BUSHLAND-Ten tons of manure is a good substitute for 250 pounds per acre of anhydrous ammonia fertilizer on Pullman clay loam--if the price is right.

So say Drs. A.C. Mathers and B.A. Stewart, USDA Soil Scientiests at the Agricultural Research Center at Bushland. In a 3-year study, sorghum "If 10 tons of manure does not produced 7000 pounds per acre where feedlot manure was incorporated 8 inches into soil compared to 6500 pounds per acre where anhydrous ammonia was chiseled into the soil. The researchers attributed the extra vield to increased water infiltrtion during irrigation. Runoff water quality was not affected by either anhydrous ammonio or manure application.

cost more than 250 pounds of anhydrous ammonia, it is the best way to fertilize irrigated clay soils in the Southern High Plains," the scientists said.

The two Agricultural Research Service Researchers started continued through 1974. They applied anhydrous ammonia annually at 250 pounds per acre. This was compared to no fertilizer, annual manure application of 10 or 30 tons per acre. and a single application of manure at 30 tons per acre in 1972. Manure was applied each February and incorporated with an 8-inch moldboard plowing. In additon to preplant irrigation. three or four summer irrigations were applied to sorghum growing in the treatments. Manure obtained from a nearby feedlot each year contained from 1.1 to 2.2 per cent nitrogen, up to 0.56 per cent phosphorus, and about 50 per cent moisture. Irrigation water applied, time required for irrigation water to advance 500 feet, and runoff were measured. Water infiltration was calculated as the difference between application and runoff. Runoff water from either rain or irrigation was analyzed for nitrate-nitrogen, phosphorus. and chloride ions to check water

The researchers found that 30 tons of manure slowed water advance about 10 per cent. Their calculations showed that all three manure rates increased water intake about 0.5 inch at each irrigation. This extra soil moisture, increased sorghum yield where 10 tons of manure were applied annually or where 30 tons were applied the first · year. "Yield averaged 6500 pounds per acre where anhydrous ammonia was applied, and a little over 7000 pounds per acre with two manure treatments." Mathers said. He also pointed out that yield was poor the third year applied annually. The high rate of manure increased salt content of surface soil and reduced sorghum germiniation and runoff water we were very said. "Manure improves water pleased," the scientists said, In infiltration from irrigation in 10 of the 11 runoff events, water addition to supplying plant that ran from the field had nutrients. Farmers with clay nitrate, chloride, and phospholoam soil in the Southern High water applied. In one instance, 1.2 inches of rain fell a few hours after irrigation and caused runoff. Nitrate and chloride concentration were tripled on 30-ton-per-acre manure treatments.

The scientist speculate that the two ions moved to the surface on the beds during furrow irrigation. Rain dissolved them from the beds and the ions were flushed out of the field with runoff water. If rain had come a few days later, water and the two salts would have infiltrated into dry soil. 'Although chloride and nitrate concentration was increased, it was not of practical significance." the scientists pointed out. Nitrate content was less than 30 parts per million, well below the 45 parts per million safety standard for drinking water. Farmers will not be affected because total nitrogen washed from the field was only 9 pounds per acre. Where 10 tons per acre of manure were applied, nitrate concentration was only 2.5 parts per million. Phosphorus content of water was not affected. "In where 30 tons of manure were our experiment, runoff water quality was not reduced by fertilizer or manure application." Mathers said. "Our research showed a pratical safe way to utilize When we checked quality of feedlot manure", the scientists said. "Manure improves water Plains can afford to pay the same price for 10 tons of manure at 250 pounds of anhydrous ammonia," they concluded.

Plaster and Clover Like Man & Wife

Early farmers had unique catchy sayings to describe their better farming practices designed to improve crop

Take hay as an example. Many years ago, a farmer in Amherst County, Va., had this to say about one practice he followed in growing hay. "Clover and plaster, like man and wife, ought never to be divorced.

This picturesque discription actually referred to the long recognized practice of liming acidic soil to improve yields of grasses and other forages. Centuries later today, liming is still recognized as a basic need in any good forage production program. In fact, liming is listed as one of the top agricultural practices needed in farming today by Sperry New Holland, a leading manufacturer of having and other forage equipment.

As that early Virginia planter intimated in his reference to plaster, few, if any investments provide a greater per dollar return than sweetening acidic soil with lime-

The Scientists Tell Me...

Liquid Fuels Can Be Made From Agricultural Wastes

Producing gasoline or diesel substitutes from wood residues and other agricultural wastes is being researched by Texas scientists as a possible energy resource. It has the potential to convert wasted or poorly utilized resources into valuable fuels to help relieve our energy situation.

The seriousness of our energy shortages has in part been masked by our agricultural exports. Since 1970, total agricultural exports have grown from 6.7 billion dollars to an estimated 22.1 billion dollars in 1976. Meanwhile, oil imports have increased from 3.4 million barrels per day (23 percent of consumption) in 1970, to 6 million barrels per day (37 percent of consumption) in 1975.

Imported oil cost the U.S. 27 billion dollars in 1975 ($125 per person) as compared with about 3 billion dollars ($15 per person) in 1970. The December meeting of oil exporting countries is expected to result in another increase of at least 10 percent.

"About one billion tons of residues are available each year from farms, forests, agri-business, and municipal wastes. If ways can be developed to convert these to valuable fuels, it could substitute for about 15 percent of our total energy needs," says Dr. Ed Soltes, research scientist with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

"That 15 percent translates into the equivalent of several hundred million barrels of oil worth billions of dollars.

"And the beauty of it is that unlike oil and gas, agricultural residues are renewable; more grow each year.

"In the pulp and paper industry, for example, it's estimated that if forest residues can be utilized as energy, it will make the industry self-sufficient for energy and save the nation the equivalent of 100 million barrels of oil per year," says Soltes, a woods chemist in the Department of Forest Science at Texas A&M Uni-Soltes heads a research team working on developing valuable energy uses for "Pyrolysis promises to be a leveling device that takes, for example, a mixture of corn cobs, cotton wastes, tree limbs or bark, and converts them into a uniform mass of material for energy and chemical products,"

Currently, the research team is working on an assessment of residue availability in the State of Texas

Oklahoma Considers Water

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - An eastern Oklahoma senator told a statewide water conference Wednesday that friction between eastern and western sections of the state must end before an effective water policy can be implemented.

State Sen. Bob Wadley, one of a number of speakers at the meeting, said, "We might as well be realistic -- those of us who live in the east -- that we need to share our water with our brother, so to speak."

That sentiment was echoed by Joe Hall, regional director of the Bureau of Reclamation. "If you don't solve your own water problems here, it's your own fault," he told more than 250 Oklahomans attenting the conference.

Hall, from Denver, forecast "a water crisis in the country. I believe it's coming.

"I firmly believe Oklahoma has the opportunity to solve its long-range water problems," he said, adding, "I can't say that to every state I visit."

every state I visit."

Sen. Henry Bellmon, R-Okla., said Oklahoma can make an excellent case for federal funds to be spent on water development. "I can say we're in pretty good shape on federal money for these projects in the next fiscal year.

I'm not concerned that President Carter is gong to continually oppose water projects. I can't believe that would happen, nor can I believe Congress would allow that to happen," he said.

Col. Anthony Smith, Tulsa district engineer for the U.S. Corps of Engineers, said much of Oklahoma's water looks good but cannot be used because it carries too much salt.

"The Red River and Arkansas River are so degraded by natural pollutants they can't beused for most beneficial purposes," Col. Smith said.

He described several efforts under way to reduce the salt content of the waters of those rivers to the point where it would be drinkable, "at least from the standpoint of salt."

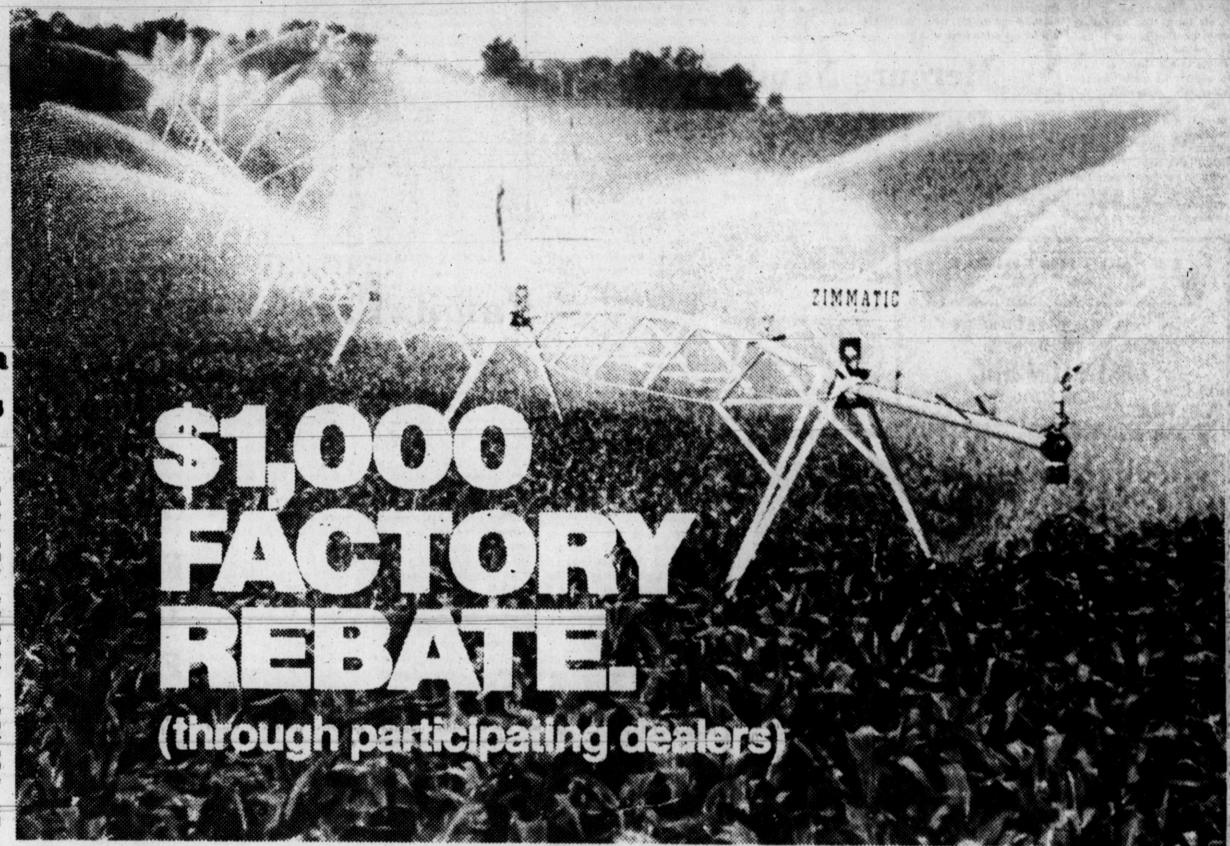

One of the projects already is under construction near Guthrie, Tex., he said. He said another promising solution might be to divert the natural flow of water around salt deposits.

Conference chairman Glenn Sullivan of the Oklahoma City architectural consulting firm of Benham-Blair said "the same week we were asking for federal aid for the drought in northwest Oklahoma we were having flooding problems in southeast Oklahoma."

He said "the Lord put plenty of ground water in western Oklahoma.

"More than 50 per cent of the ground water in Cimmarron County westernmost in the Oklahoma Panhandle will be used up in 15 years' time," he

"Eighty per cent of our irrigation comes from ground water," he said, "and the wells are running dry."

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Agriculture Department Friday formally proposed rules for a nationwide referendum among cattle producers. They will be asked to decide whether to raise an estimated $30 million to $40 million a year among themselves for research and promotion of beef. Officials said cattle producers who intend to vote must register at local offices of the Agricultural Service. Under the proposed timetable, registration could begin about June 13, with voting scheduled to start about a month after that.

The program was authorized by Congress in the Beef Research and Information Act, which provides that a board be set up to oversee operations. During the first three years, if approved by cattle producers, the board could collect assessments of up to three-tenths of one per cent of the value of all cattle sold.

Officials said that approximately 500,000 cattle producers are expected to vote in the referendum. The proposed rules specify that at least 50 per cent-of those who register must vote and that of those voting, two-thirds are required for approval of the program.

Comments on the proposed rules will be accepted through April 30 by the Hearing Clerk, Room 1077S, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250.

Supply Of Mirex Will Be Snapped Up Rapidly

landowners besieged by the pesky fire ant will quickly snap up a large supply of the soon-to-be banned insecticide mirex that the state plans to buy, an agriculture department official predicts.

David Ivie, director of the Texas Department of Agriculture's environmental science division, said that Texas plans to purchase 445,000 pounds of the controversial insecticide in another attempt to battle the sometimes deadly ants.

'It sounds like a lot, but it probably won't last a week." said Ivie. "There's about 70 counties infested and some counties would take all 445,000 pounds if we'd let them have lvie said the Environmental Protection Agency has already banned aerial application of the insecticide, except from singleengine planes.

The Mississippi company that is the sole manufacturer of the insecticide some scientists believe is cancerous has agreed to stop producing mirex by the end of 1977.

"We'll continue to try to buy mirex up to that time if landowners continue to want it," explained lvie, who said the insecticide would be available in three or four weeks.

All use of mirex must end by June 30, 1978, the EPA has products and terminology.

The National Bureau of Standards of the Department of Commerce advises that "it is always best to select insulation on the basis of cost per resistance unit - the so-called 'R' value - rather than on cost per inch."

The "R" value - printed on the wrapper of the insulation tells you how good a job the material will do in preventing heat loss. It does not depend on thickness per se.

Insulation commonly comes in loose fill and solid varieties such as batts or preformed sheets. The mineral fiber batts are available in R-11 about four inches, R-19 about six inches and R-22 about seven inches. You simply add different "R" values to achieve The desired insulation. Loose fill generally has a lower "R" value per inch of thickness; the manufacturer will specify how many bags of material you need to achieve a given "R" value over a particular area.

Here is a look at insulation basics:

ATTIC The first and easiest place to check insulation is in the ceiling or attic. Most experts agree that you should have attic insulation with a total "R" value of 19. although homeowners in cold climates or areas where fuel is particularly expensive might consider more.

Batts are generally easier to install than fill if there is no flooring or other obstruction in the attic. Simply lay them down flat, as close together as possible to prevent air from circulating between them. If there is flooring, you may find it simpler to remove one of two of the boards, then use a machine to blow loose fill into the empty space. The fill will settle after it has been installed, so take that into account when figuring out how much you need. Try to cover the joists as well as the area in-between. Based on 1975costs, the Bureau of Standards estimates that it should cost

The best time to install insulation of course, is when the house is being built, simply filling in the space with mineral

Once the wall is finished, loose fill insulation generally has to be blown or injected into the wall through small holes drilled between the wall studs. This can be done from the inside or the outside, but usually requires the services of a professional insulation experts.

In some older houses, there is access to the wall space from the attic. In this case you can simply drop loose fill into the space from above.

BASEMENT

Floors over an unheated area, such as an unfinished basement, should be insulated and the cellar left at the lowest practical temperature. Insulate water pipes to prevent freezing. Batts or rolls of insulation should be wedged into the spaces between floor joists; they can be supported by wire mesh tacked to the bottom of the joists.

The amount you need varies, but one layer of insulation batts with an R-11 rating should be sufficient. It will cost about 20 cents a square foot, including installation costs, the Bureau of Standards estimates.

Many utilities will provide free advice on insulation. Contractors also may offer suggestions and the government has several booklets containing suggestions.

'Making the Most of Your Energy Dollars in Home Heating and Cooling," provides a step-by-step guide to figuring out how much insulation you need. It is published by the Department of Commerce and is available from the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo. Colo., 81009, for 70 cents.

Ricketts Was First Realtor Board President in Hereford

The Texas Association of Realtors has not always been the large and influential organization that it is today. In 1920 when the association was founded in Dallas, the meeting only attracted a handful of real estate men.

However, those men were dedicated to the principle of creating an organization that would rise the level of service and ethics of all working in real estate. At that time the state's rapid expansion had attracted numerous "fly-by-night real estate operators" who were. in some instances, misrepresenting various real estate matters to their clients. The situation had gotten so out of hand that a small group of men joined as a force to guarantee the public with high professional conduct and a continuing interest in bettering the education levels of all working in real estate.

Working within this group was a fine real estate broker from Dallas, Lawrence Miller Sr., who became the first TAR president at an election at the first convention in San Antonio. The first convention attracted about 100 men and women. representing only a few boards. From this beginning the association has grown through the years to a membership of over 35,000 and more than a

Here in Hereford the Hereford Board of Realtors has grown from a beginning membership of only six offices in 1965 to 11 now. The first president of the board here was J.C. Ricketts, and this year's president is Don Tardy.

Reese Henry of San Antonio is the man at the helm for TAR this year. Henry is typical of many of the real estate executives today. He is a developer. He is a broker, and he is a builder. Henry is the past president of the San Antonio Board and was named Realtor of the Year there in 1973. He. too. is a strong advocate of increasing the educational levels of all conducting real estate transactions. He often teachés for the Texas Realtors Institutes and in two San Antonio colleges.

Joining Henry on the year's slate of officers are Wallace A. Moritz of San Angelo, first vice president; George Sandlin, Austin, treasurer; and Dave Stirton of Houston, secretary. The 1977 vice presidents are Ted Schuler Jr., Amarillo; Robert Sullins, Arlington; Benny McMahan, Dallas; Emmett Larkin, El Paso; Fred F. Buchholtz, Luling: Decker McKim, La Porte; and Jack Cawood, McAllen.

All of the officers work closely with local boards. They help solve real estate problems that come up from time to time. Boards hold orientation sessions for their members and also special seminars in residential sales and in listing techniques. Boards encourage their members to continue their education in many ways, in local colleges, or from membership in order to in Realtor Institutes and by attending TAR seminars, conventions and other meetings.

Terms Used In Real Estate Transactions Are Defined

industry is so closely linked to the lives of all members of the community. Realtors still find that many terms used in real estate transactions are somewhat confusing to the typical homeowner. "It is the goal of every Realtor to try to avoid confusion and to make sure to explain all real estate terms to his client in a simple and easy to follow manner, Don Tardy, president of the Hereford Board of Realtors says.

"Since we are observing Private Property Week, April 17-23, this is probably a very good time to try to dispell any mystery connected to real estate terms as commonly used by all of us."

These are some of the terms listed by Tardy:

Abstract of title. This is a summary history of the property, noting all documents turning over the property from one owner to the other. This is a document absolutely necessary in the sale of property so that the buyer is assured that the purchase was not faulty at any time in the history of the property.

Assessed value. A value set on real estate by local governmental assessors for the purpose of determing taxes. It is usually determined by taking a percentage of the property's market value.

Amorotization. The process of eliminating a mortgage loan, usually by equal payments at regular intervals over a specific period of time.

Appraisal. An estimate of quantity, quality, or value. The process through which a determination of property value or property facts are obtained.

Certificate of title. A document usually given to the home buyer with the deed stating that title to the property is clear. It is prepared by a title company or attorney.

Equity. The dollar value for the property owner. It is equal to the difference between the owner's original purchase price and the amount still outstanding

Escrow funds. Money given to a third party (frequently a Realtor or lawyer) to hold until all conditions in a contract are Home mortgage. A long-term foan, usualty 20 years or more, for buying a house. Financing of a mortgate generally is done one of three ways: conventional, Veterans Administration (VA), and Federal Housing Administration (FHA). If the buyer qualifies, the latter two types of mortgates are offered at slightly lower interest rates and lower down payments.

Mobile Home Is Alternative. But Check Factors Involved

Realtors are finding that more single men and women and some young families are looking closer at the mobile home industry for shelter as the cost of conventional homes are on the rise. The fact that a median price of a new house in 1976 is almost double that of one built in 1970 is causing this increased interest.

Realtors generally admit that ndividual situations and objectives vary and that they cannot positively recommend one form of housing as being best for recent report from the Texas Real Estate Research Center, 'mobile home living generally requires smaller monthly cash expenditures, but it is not form of shelter when the changes in property values are also included

"However, low income families may not be in a position to minimize their total implicit monthly housing cost since explicit payments must be mét first." The report also says that "the initial cost or down payments of acquiring conventonal housing can be an effective barrier for lower income families."

Realters do seem to feel that buyers should work with them to look closely and examine all everybody. But, according to a factors when considering the choice of various housing alternatives.

Some of the important facts to consider, Realtors point out are: mobile home on a purchased necessarily the least expensive lot? Also they should examine the possibilities involved in a 15 forms of shelter.

and a 25 year mortgage on a conventional home specifically. appreciation and depreciation. Reports indicate that a typical mobile home has had a life expectancy of 12 years and a salvage value of $2,500. At the end of five years, the unit is generally worth about 60 per cent of its initial price, but it is a fact that a 7 per cent appreciation rate is used 10-14. Houston will host the generally for both conventional houses and the owned lots.

Realtors do point out that mobile home construction has improved quite a bit in the last few years which will probably result in a lower depreciation rate for mobile homes and a reduction in the relative cost difference among the various

Seminars Keep Realtors Informed

Don Tardy, president of the Hereford Board of Realtors said this week that men and women in the local real estate profession "will be offered eight more sessions of the Texas Realtors Institute courses this year."

"Realtors consider that the ever-changing tax laws, marketing techniques and construction costs make it imperative that they continue enlarging their educational background constantly. All of us not only belong to the local board of Realtors and the Texas Association of Realtors, but also to the National Association of Realtors. All three entities offer us educational classes and seminars, some in highly specalized fields. TAR, which sponsors the Institutes in every part of the state, will hold sessions in Austin, Brownsville, El Paso, Dallas, San Antonio, Longview and Houston in the coming months," said Tardy.

The education chairman here for the board is Tommy Bowling. He said that "we expect a lot of interest in the remaining TAR sessions. You see, all of us are now working under much stiffer educational requirements as a result of the 1975 Texas-Real Estate License Act. It specifies a much-stepped up list of professional education levels.

"Here's the way the calendar looks for students for the rest of the year: April 25-29, Austin, Course 1,-2, 3; May 9-13, Brownville, 2 and 3; May 16-20, El Paso, Course 1, 2, 3. July 18-22, there will be a session in Dallas at the Registry Hotel. It will offer Courses 1, 2, 3 and 4-1, a graduate course. Then August 8-12, San Antonio, 1, 2, 3, 4-1; August 29-Sept. 1, Austin, Course 1, 2, 3, 4-R.

"Longview will offer Course 1, 2, and 3, Sept. 19-23; Oct. Institute, offering Course 1, 2, and 3. It's important for anyone interested in advancing his or her knowledge in every phase of real estate transactions to check out the possibility of attending one of these Institutes or even

What If Fire Broke Out In Your Home Tonight?

What would your children do if fire broke out in your home tonight? Don Tardy, president of the Hereford Board of Realtors, said that if the children are not "fire-aware," chances are he or she might do the wrong things.

In the interest of public safety, and in connection with national observance of Private Property Week, April 17-23, Tardy offered the following statistics and rules for children's fire safety:

Reports indicate that fires and burns in 1975 claimed the lives of 1,350 children making fires a the chief cause of home accident deaths for youngsters between the ages of 1 and 14.

One of every four home-fire fatalities is a child under age 15, and the hours from 11 p.m. to 6 a.m. are ones when fires occur most frequently.

To prevent your children from becoming one of these statistics. here are a few suggestions: . Teach your children never to hide if fire breaks out at night. Don't scare your chidren concerning fire. Your goal is to mold fire-aware children who act out of reason, not panic. Conducting fire drills every so often is a good step toward fire avoidance of accidents.

2. Make sure your equi ladders, vacuum cleaners, floor polishers, etc. -- are in good working order and that you understand how to use them

3. Use all household products according to directions on their labels. Always wear rubber to accomplish too much. Tackle gloves when handling strong

4. Since most cleaning products are poisonous, keep them out of the reach of children or pets. Empty containers should be disposed of in places where children cannot pick them up for playthings.

5. Don't toss aerosol cans into incinerators or fires; they can explode and cause serious injury or death

6. Put oily, dirty of paint-flecked rags in a covered metal container, such as a coffee can, to avoid the possibility of spontaneous combustion.

Price Tag On New Home High, So Are Other Ownership Costs

Economists, Realtors and homebuilders find no trouble on agreeing on one overwhelming fact: a growing portion of the Texas population is finding themselves on the outside of the housing window looking in. In Texas the cost of an average new home stands now at over $38,000

What are some of the factors that have caused this situation? The list is long and includes: material prices, labor costs. more local, state and federal regulation and raw land prices. And there are more factors: land development costs, general inflation, more amenities being demanded, added costs of heavier insulation and more sophisticated heating, ventilating and air conditioning systems.

But is that the complete picture? Realtors say it is not. In addition to the building costs. other ownership costs have also jumped: higher interest charges and bigger mortgages, rising hazard insurance premiums, and valorem property tax increases and maintenance and repair expenses on the rise. And, in Texas, who can forget the higher and higher utility rates being faced everywhere.

Those looking for a first home or a second, larger home will find the total life cycle costs of home ownership breaking down in specific ways, according to Eduardo E. Lozano, writing in the Journal of the American Institute of Planners. In the complete picture, the total purchase price of the unit amounts to 23 per cent of the total cost of ownership. Total interest paid during the mortgage period will amount to 40 per cent, and total taxes and insurance paid during the mortgage period will come to 24 per cent. The total cost of utilities and maintenance during the mortgage period will

Jim Miller, president of Inter-matic, makers of many kinds of home security devices and several kinds of smoke alarms that are "not different from others that also have the UL (Underwriters Laboratories) seal of approval," he says.

"If you are using one smoke alarm — and one would do for a house of about 1,000 square feet — it is best to put it in the stairwell near the bedrooms. You must be able to hear it."

A second alarm could be installed in a family room if ex-tra protection is needed, he advises. And some people like to put extra ones outside sleeping areas that are spread out. If there are several stories in the house, the alarms could be installed at the top of each stairway leading to a bedroom.

Although Miller makes both the photoelectric alarm that plugs into an outlet and the ionization alarm that can be put on the ceiling with two screws, he uses the ion model in his own home at Spring Grove, Ill., "because it works a bit faster and time is important in a fire." Smoke alarms give early warning at a time when the invisible products of combustion are being released and even before the smoke or smoldering stage.

The alarm is an irritating, beeping whine which should disturb even a heavy sleeper. And if there is a dog, there will be a double alert - most dogs howl when the alarm sounds.

"Until a few years ago there were only expensive thermal sensors that would cost in the thousands to install. When a fire starts it is not very hot, usually, except directly above the fire, so a number of these sensors would be needed to adequately protect a home.

"The ion dual chamber smoke alarm was a technological breakthrough because it senses the change in the air. You don't need little sensors. One smoke alarm can do a good job," he explains. Fire experts have estimated people, you could be in for a little excitement. deaths from fire are due to smoke inhalation, rather than to heat and flames, Miller points out. In Chicago where many big fires have occurred the city council is considering legislation that would require smoke detectors in apartment houses of more than six units. There are also alarms that can

Miller recently became involved in energy control devices because he believed. the house of the future will not have every room heated all the time.We will heat rooms when we want to use them,"n when we want to use them, "no different perhaps from our colonial ancestors who used fire-places. - The doors on our garage are mounted on hinges. When closed, they meet in the center. One of the doors has begun to sag and is difficult to open and close without lifting the door as it is moved. How can this be fixed?

- If you are lucky, you will be able to fix it without too much trouble. Take a screwdriver and test the hinges. If there is any movement of any of the screws, even the tiniest bit, tighten it - or them. Should the door now swing freely, you have uncovered the trouble. Remove the offending screws, fill the holes with wood putty or plastic wood and, when it is hard, reset the screws. In some cases, you might have to use longer screws or reposition the hinges slightly. If, during the original inspection, you find that all the screws are tightly in place, you will have to install a metal turnbuckle. Fasten one end at the sagging corner, the other diagonally opposite. Tighten the turnbuckle until the sagging corner is lifted. Sometimes this can be done easily as described; sometimes it will be necessary to place wooden wedges under the door to hold it in place while the turnbuckle is being installed and tightened. Occasionally, you will see a repair of this sort made with an ordinary wooden brace. While this is effective, it cannot be adjusted at a future time without removing the brace and placing it in a new position. When you use a turnbuckle, any later adjustment can be made simply by

The automakers have been selling and buying from each other for years, just as divisions of one company share parts while maintaining an appearance of being different.

A company will use a competitor as a supplier if it is cheaper to buy a part rather than make it. That way it can keep down costs, and therefore prices.

No one gave the practice much thought, though, until an Olds Delta 88 owner in Chicago complained last month about discovering that his car had a Chevrolet engine instead of the oft-advertised Olds "rocket."

Embarrassed GM officials said the Chevy engines were used because of a shortage of Olds powerplants. GM added that the engines are comparable and share the GM "Mark of Excellence." The firm's explanation contrasts with years of advertising by its divisions that Pontiac is a cut above Chevrolet, that Olds and Buick are a grade above Pontiac, and Cadillac is tops.

Even so, GM officials said they were surprised by the rash of suits accusing the company of consumer fraud because its dealers failed to notify Olds owners that the cars had Chevy

As the nation's largest car maker, GM is the most self-sufficient when it comes to making its own components. It also is a major supplier for the other auto companies.

AMC, the industry's smallest automaker, is the msot dependent on other automakers - mainly GM - for components. Industry analysts note AMC is primarily an assembler of cars rather than a manufacturer.

The companies, which are reticent about teir dealings with one another, disclosed the following major sales and purchases:

-- AMC buys GM bumpers. brakes, engine castings, diesel engines, steering systems. transmissions and cataytic converters; Ford carburetors and ignition systems and Chrysler automatic transmissions and seat vinyls.

Chrysler buys GM steering components, ignition systems, brakes, diesel engines and transmissions; Ford glass, and AMC plastic.

.. Ford buys GM starters, lighting, ignition, air conditioning and power steering components, diesel engines, transmissions and brakes. It is supplied with transmissions, instrument panel guages and frame paint from Chrysler. Ford also buys plastic from AMC.

.. GM buys steel from Ford. Chrysler supplies GM with truck transmissions and emission control components.

Power companies are testing many new ways to bring less costly energy to consumers. For example, storing electricity in bricks at night for use the next day. The night rate would be cheap, explained W. Donham Crawford, president of the Edison Electric Institute, an association of investor-owned electric utilities.

"It's an idea that has been used in European countries for decades. In the morning the electric load comes back and the reduced rate is cut off. The method has not been used in the United States before because electricity always has been cheap, but now it is justi-fied," he explained.

The project is being tested, he says, by the Green Mountain Power Corp. in Burlington, Vt., and the American Electric Power System which is field testing it in homes in areas from West Virginia to Mich-igan. It works like this:
