Acres helps homeless' hopes

By ANDREA HOOTEN
Staff Writer

The man's crusty hands have scuffed through many a trash dumpster, foraging for anything he may creatively use in his day-to-day existence.

His bedroom is a discarded refrigerator box, his bedding is yesterday's newspaper and his last meal was half a hamburger he found in a park's litter bin.

Bill Devers has seen the physical traits many times before, but the aimlessness in their eyes will trouble him. What the homeless need, thought Devers, is something to anchor them.

Enter the idea of Sunshine Acres, a 10-bed shelter for the homeless in a rural setting where its occupants must maintain a working farm to earn their keep. Devers hopes it gives them a

"This is not going to be a gimme situation," said Devers, who is renovating a World War II barracks southeast of Hereford to serve as the shelter. "This will be a caring and sharing ministry and the people who live there will have obligations, and if they don't fulfill those obligations, they're out."

Most of these obligations will include chopping weeds, painting fence posts, caring for the cattle, tending a garden as well as the more domestic duties of cleaning house and making beds.

"They will also help me to dig up trees (one of Devers' occupations) and this will not only teach them a skill but it will teach them how to be employed and how to get along with an employer."

If the occupants receive government supplemental income, they will be expected to contribute part of the check to the operation with the leftover money used as spending money.

The premise of Sunshine Acres is new to Devers, but helping the less fortunate is not.

Devers, the songleader at First Christian Church in Canyon, began his crusade to befriend the homeless after briefly losing his health and being turned down for employment numerous times.

"Christian friends and family came to my aid and I know what a powerful statement that is," said the throaty-voiced Devers. "I just realized a good portion of life was geared toward laying treasures on the earth and the Bible clearly says not to do that."

Based on this philosophy, Devers began Operation Good Shepherd several years ago which maintained a food and clothing pantry for the poor. And even though the homeless were receiving the essentials, Devers said his service never provided the constancy they needed.

So he left Operation Good Shepherd in mid-July to begin his new project.

"I just wanted to do something more," said Devers. "I'm not interested in perpetuating anyone's burnhood. I hope to break that chain of events that says 60 years from now you're gonna be a burn. If they want to stay just weeks (at the shelter), they can, or they can stay months or even years.

"We're a non-profit, non-denominational organization supported by individuals, but we're not a charity in the strictest sense of the word because the people (homeless) are expected to contribute to their own well-being."

Contributions of supplies, tools and labor have been the life blood for Sunshine Acres.

The front of the 1,100 square-foot building is littered with mattresses, bathroom sinks, lumber, and crates which Devers and his other volunteer labor has scavenged to renovate the building.

"The response from the community has been very good so far. Many people who know about it contribute money to it each month and we have enough of our physical needs such as beds, bedding, a fireplace, sheets and towels. We probably need the money more than anything else at this point," Devers said. "It looks like it will take about $5,000 to really get started and we've gotten about three-fourths of that."

Sunshine Acres already has two tenants which Devers cooks for—one named Bubba and the other, Rex — "a dog whose ribs you could count 30 feet away."

"I've been here about a week," said Bubba, a 25-year-old who was hitchhiking through Hereford a year ago. "This is really a caring, sharing and loving situation out here, just a lot of love. Where I lived before, I didn't get to eat all the time. I would like to stay out here until I get things together — until I get my life together."

Devers said the shelter's occupants will not be dangerous and the criminal element will not be present.

"These people will be referred to us by social agencies, churches, individuals, law enforcement agencies. We'll always check them out and see what kind of help they need," Devers said.

A Bible study will be offered to the tenants but devotionals will not be forced.

"We just want to make sure everyone knows it's God's love that we're showing them."

A large wooden sign reading Sunshine Acres leans against a tree in front of the partially renovated barracks with "James 1:22" underneath.

"It just says, 'But prove yourselves doers of the word and not merely hearers who delude themselves,'" Devers said. "I think that's what's wrong with society today. If everyone would just give $5 or $10 a month, we could help these people reclaim their lives and not be a burden to society. People can prove themselves doers by giving to me who will actually do the work. There is no limit to the amount or kind of ministry we can build on."

Veterans Day celebrated here

By SPEEDY NIEMAN

"No day in history should be more important than Veteran's Day," County Judge Tom Simons said Friday when he gave the keynote address for the annual Veteran's Day Luncheon at the Bull Barn.

"It's a time to pause and thank God for all veterans, many who gave their lives," said Simons. "We tend to forget what our forefathers, our veterans and many special people have done for us. We must remind ourselves of those who have gone before and we must, always, remember those who served and died for their country," Simons stated.

The Veteran's Day luncheon drew about 75 veterans, auxiliary members, Gold Star Mothers, and friends. David Clyde served as master of ceremonies for the event, and Rev. Lanny Wheeler and Msgr. Orville Blum gave the invocation and benediction. Hereford cadets of the Civil Air Patrol served as the color guard.

With the program beginning at 11 a.m., Clyde pointed out that the Armistice ending World War I began on the 11th minute of the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month. He said the sponsors hoped to keep this tradition in local observances by starting the program on the 11th hour on Nov. 11th.

Receiving special recognition at the luncheon were World War I veterans Ira Ott and Andy Powers and several Gold Star Mothers. Following the program, a chili lunch was served to guests.

Lead-foot beware: new trooper here

By ANDREA HOOTEN
Staff Writer

County residents have been spoiled the past six months with two less highway troopers, but the arrival of trooper Harvey Ward may bring speedometer needles down to 55, and his co-workers couldn't be happier.

"It's definitely affected us not having the regular three troopers," said Delfine Fox, justice of the peace clerk who handles all traffic tickets. "The license and weight guys (Louis Cardinal and Gary Whitfill) have helped quite a bit, and we've had some help from Dimmitt and Friona (Department of Public Safety), but I'd say the number of tickets we've received has dropped 50 percent since Dwayne and Dan left."

Dwayne Williams and Dan Hundley — two of Deaf Smith County's three troopers — left for greener pastures in April and June, leaving the county roads to one trooper, Darrel Matthews.

"I'm just glad he's here," said Matthews, who has borne the work load of three troopers the past six months.

Ward, who started work Nov. 1, has already issued six traffic tickets, "and only one of those was for a Hereford resident," Ward said.

The new trooper transferred to Deaf Smith County from Stratford and has been a commissioned trooper six years—experience which local DPS Sgt. Billy Scott didn't think he would get.

"I think we're extremely lucky to have him," said Scott. "I had expected a lot longer wait to get another"

OBSSESSED

Small things are huge problems

By NANCY SHULINS
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Every morning for 20 years, April rose before dawn. While her family slept, April scrubbed: sinks, toilets, floors, doorknobs, an ever-growing list. Sometimes she ran through it twice.

On bad days, she'd be halfway to work before realizing she'd forgotten something at home. "Once I went out, I was contaminated," she says. "Going back in meant I had to shower, change clothes and clean house all over again."

On Joe's worst days, he spent hours darting about his apartment in panic. Was the door locked? Stove off? Window closed? Some days, he'd check for hours and still not be sure.

Mike had to count: the steps he took, the coins in his pocket, the times he chewed every bite. Though not superstitious, "I was counting to make sure I didn't do anything 13 times," he says. "If I did, I felt my father would die of a heart attack."

April, Joe and Mike suffer from obsessive-compulsive disorder, for centuries one of the most baffling and intractable mental illnesses. Throughout history, OCD sufferers from Samuel Johnson to Howard Hughes have been slaves to the intrusive, irrational thoughts known as obsessions, and the senseless, repetitive rituals, or compulsions, that accompany them.

Now, breakthroughs in drug treatment and behavior therapy are bringing new hope to OCD victims. The discoveries coincide with mounting evidence of a link between OCD and other neurological illnesses and movement disorders, such as some forms of epilepsy, Parkinson's Disease, and Tourette's Syndrome.

Along with generating wide medical interest, the developments are helping ease the stigma long felt by OCD victims, who are seeking help in unprecedented numbers. As a result, researchers have concluded that the illness, once considered rare, is actually fairly common.

"Whether you know it or not," says one expert, "you do know someone with this disease."

Chances are, you don't know it. OCD usually strikes healthy, sane people who are adept at hiding their symptoms from spouses, employers and friends. That they're able to do it is remarkable, given the debilitating nature of the illness:

— A respected accountant cannot mail a letter without tearing it open to make sure his daughter isn't sealed inside.

— A skilled engineer can't drive to work without retracing his route over and over for fear he ran over a pedestrian on the way.

— A young housewife turns her basement into a repository for everything from used Kitty Litter to carpet lint, for reasons she's at a loss to explain.

Some conceal their behavior by distancing themselves emotionally and physically. Compared to the general public, people with OCD are nearly twice as likely not to marry and more likely to divorce if they do.

Revised estimates now hold that the so-called "doubting disease" affects roughly 2 percent of the population, between 4 million and 6 million people in the United States alone.

The majority of them are as aware — and as ashamed — of their aberrant behavior as they are powerless to stop it.

"Telling a person to stop washing or stop checking is like telling the average person to stop breathing," says Jenny, a wife and mother who says OCD stole 15 years of her life. Like others who agreed to discuss their illness, she asked that her last name not be used.

Jenny's illness began with a cancer obsession that sent her scurrying from doctor to doctor. "I began having hysterical reactions, like worrying so much about getting a bump on my tongue that I would actually get a bump on my tongue."

Abruptly, those fears vanished, replaced by something worse: relentless, incapacitating fears of losing control and stabbing her children. "I had my suicide all planned," Jenny says. "I was going to lock myself in the garage and turn on my car."

Instead, Jenny sought treatment at a Yale University clinic. Like an estimated two-thirds of the OCD patients who undergo the new behavior therapy or drug treatment, she got better.

Dr. Wayne K. Goodman is chief of the Obsessive-Compulsive Disorder Clinic at Yale. In three years of treating OCD, "I have seen it go away, although most people are not totally free of symptoms. After therapy the obsessions are still there. The difference is they no longer have to perform the compulsions."

Today, Jenny estimates her illness is with her 2 percent of the time. She keeps it at bay with a small maintenance dose of an anti-depressant. When they do surface, she says, "the thoughts are manageable and easily discarded."

Jenny now works full time, attends graduate school, and helps run the North Haven, Conn.-based OCD Foundation, an education, information and referral service she founded with a small group of patients.

Jenny's obsessions — fear of disease and fear of harming others — are among the most common, as are fear of death, dirt or germs; of harming oneself; of uttering obscenities or insults; of discarding something of great value.

Others include perverse sexual or violent images, blasphemous thoughts, exaggerated fears of chemical or environmental contamination.

Compulsions often include ritualistic washing or cleaning; counting to certain numbers or avoiding others; continually checking doors, windows, stoves; hoarding or collecting newspapers, mail, lint, string; arranging and rearranging drawers, closets, cupboards.

Most people with OCD pass through a washing phase at some point during their illness. While specific obsessions may change over time, the themes tend to stay the same, Goodman says.

For many patients, fear of cancer has been replaced by fear of AIDS, a disease "made to order for OCD victims," one expert says.

Dr. Judith Rapoport of the National Institute of Mental Health believes that compulsive behavior — handwashing, checking or counting — actually comes first, followed by the obsession, or rationale for the behavior.

"Man is a rational being. When he finds himself doing something that looks purposeful — for example, repeated washing — his logical mind has to find a reason," she says.

Obsessions and compulsions can turn up in families previously untouched by mental illness, but are more likely to cluster in families with histories of OCD or its frequent companion, depression.

Although it affects men and women in equal numbers, children with OCD are twice as apt to be boys. It often strikes young adults, but many can recall bouts of obsessive behavior from childhood, and doctors have spotted it in children as young as 3.

Obsessive thoughts or compulsive behaviors lurk beneath the surface in nearly everyone. Most people regard neatness and exactitude as desirable traits. And who hasn't raced home to double-check an appliance, worried excessively about cancer, or gotten a tune "stuck" in his head?

No one can pinpoint where meticulousness or rigidity leave off and illness begins. Still, the experts agree that the periodic preoccupations of everyday life bear little resemblance to the relentless, involuntary, all-consuming nature of OCD.

At their worst, according to Rapoport, the habits of OCD patients "become gross caricatures and distortions of useful everyday behavior."

"My patients fight exhausting battles with invisible germs daily, even hourly," Rapoport writes in "The Boy Who Couldn't Stop Washing," the first "popular" book on OCD, to be published by E.P. Dutton in January. Rapoport, who's been treating the illness since 1972, is hoping the book will lure more victims out of hiding.

At the core of the doubting disease is "the inability to be reassured by the senses," Rapoport writes. Somehow the message — that the house is clean or the doors are locked — doesn't get through. "In one way or another," she says, "every patient with OCD wants to know how to know."

Unlike gambling, overeating or other activities commonly labeled "compulsive," OCD's senseless rituals bring no pleasure. "I hated to count," says Mike, a young shoe salesman. "All I ever wanted was to stop."

Like others with the illness, he had no choice but to keep counting: steps, stairs, shoes, everything.

OCD tough for therapists

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Gathering dog hair, directing home movies and stimulating storms aren't part of a typical therapist's repertoire. But for Samuel Turner and Deborah Beidel, such things are often all in a day's work.

Turner and Beidel of the University of Pittsburgh's Western Psychiatric Institute and Clinic are among a growing number of specialists who are using behavior therapy to treat victims of obsessive-compulsive disorder, a mysterious illness of senseless, repetitive rituals driven by runaway doubts.

People with OCD often engage in excessive cleaning, counting or checking, to ease intense fears of contamination, disease or other catastrophe. Much of their energy typically goes into hiding their illness from others.

Until recently, OCD, which affects about 2 percent of the population, was considered among the most treatment-resistant diseases. But today, many patients are responding favorably to new drug treatments and new therapeutic techniques pioneered in Europe.

At the Anxiety Disorders Clinic run by the university's medical school, Turner and Beidel treat OCD patients by "flooding" them with exposure to the very objects, images or events they fear most. The patients are then prevented from carrying out their compulsions.

"The theory behind flooding is that the stimuli that has the ability to produce anxiety loses that ability through repeated exposure," says Turner, an associate professor of psychiatry.

For a woman obsessed with contamination caused by animals, treatment meant enduring a lapful of dog hair, followed by exposure to a dog. After touching the hair and petting the dog, the patient was not allowed to carry out her washing compulsions.

Later, a therapist visited the patient at home, where she had routinely spent up to 18 hours a day cleaning. Together, patient and therapist made their way through the house, touching doors, walls, clothes, towels and sheets.

Although the sessions made her anxious and upset, the woman agreed not to clean or wash afterward. The anxiety gradually diminished, and the need to perform the rituals faded. Finally, the woman completed her treatment by bringing a friend's cat into her home and playing with it.

Just as obsessions and compulsions vary from one patient to another, so do the treatments Turner and Beidel concoct. One former patient was obsessed with thunderstorms, to the extent that darkness or even clouds made him frantic. Because of the unpredictable nature of real thunderstorms, his therapists recreated one, using taped sound effects and narration.

For a woman who served meals in the basement for fear of contaminating the kitchen, Turner and Beidel made a videotape of family members "eating in the kitchen, smashing crackers with their feet, really messing things up."

Turner, who's been treating OCD patients since 1980, says behavior therapy might reduce a patient's primary symptoms in as little as three to five months. But often, considerable follow-up may be needed.

Turner describes the therapy as unorthodox and time-consuming. "But the response can be very dramatic," he says. "As a rule, they do get better."

Like others, Turner often combines the therapy with drug treatment. Many patients have shown dramatic improvement in controlled studies of drugs such as Anafranil and more recently, Fluoxetine and Fluvoxamine. All are powerful anti-depressants that affect serotonin, a chemical transmitter within the brain. Laboratory rats with altered serotonin display ritualistic "checking" behavior that resembles compulsions.

Fluvoxamine and Anafranil, or clomipramine as it's known generically, are available in the United States on an investigational basis only. Fluoxetine, (trade name Prozac), is available for use in depression. Experts point out that it's worth trying all three, since not all of them work for all patients.

That the illness responds both to drugs and to therapy is a puzzle to researchers. But the pieces are beginning to fall into place.

AMERICAN MEN WEIGH MORE
NEW YORK (AP) — American men are more likely to be overweight than their British or Canadian counterparts, especially at younger ages, says the Nutri-System Health & Information Bureau.
A study carried out by the National Center for Health Statistics and a Canadian government health agency revealed that 40 percent of American men are overweight while 12 percent are obese. In Britain the corresponding numbers are 35 percent and 8 percent and in Canada, 38 percent and 9 percent, respectively. Women also are heavier in the U.S., except among those aged 20 to 24.

Justice of the Peace, Johnnie Turrentine, said she was happy to have Ward because of the excessive speeding.

"People have been driving so fast now that we've had a lot of traffic accidents where people have nearly died," said Turrentine. "We've almost had two fatalities since Dwayne and Dan left. When people don't see any (black and white) cars out there, they're naturally going to drive faster."

Deaf Smith County has actually reported no fatalities this year. One accident was ruled as a fatality, but it was discovered that the driver had a heart attack before colliding with a tractor-trailer rig at U.S. Highway 60 and Farm to Market Road 2943.

Becoming acquainted with the farm to market roads is a priority for Ward, and Matthews has taken on the job of instructor.

"Darrel's been showing me around the county which is a lot bigger than Sherman County (where I came from)," said Ward. "I had always heard of Umberger, but I had no idea Dawn even existed."

German fury showcases sensitivity

By TERRENCE PETTY
Associated Press Writer

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The furor over a Kristallnacht speech made by the parliament president, who resigned under intense criticism, reveals West Germans' lingering sensitivity to the Nazi past.

The address by Bundestag President Philipp Jenninger prompted charges that some Germans have not honestly faced up to what occurred under Adolf Hitler's Nazi regime, including the extermination of 6 million Jews.

"The background of what happened is the inability of many Germans to stand up to their own past," the leftist Greens party said before Jenninger, a conservative Christian Democrat, resigned Friday.

In his speech Thursday marking the 50th anniversary of Kristallnacht when Nazi thugs attacked Jews, Jenninger attempted to set the scene of Germany in the 1930s when Hitler came to power, saying Germans initially found the Nazi era "glorious." Jenninger says the speech was misunderstood and that he is an "uncompromising foe of every type of totalitarian rule."

Both West Germany and communist East Germany devoted themselves this week to decrying Kristallnacht, or Crystal Night, of Nov. 9-10, 1938, the prelude to the Holocaust. The night was named for the shards of glass that littered streets after Nazis smashed and burned Jewish business, homes and synagogues.

West German President Richard von Weizsaecker has insisted Germans bore full responsibility for the Nazi era and warned against any attempts to play down its horrors.

"Nothing that historical science brings to light today can diminish the crimes of the Nazi era," Weizsaecker said last month.

The East German government also has denounced the Nazi years but rejects responsibility for Nazi crimes, it says, because the crimes occurred before the 1949 founding of the communist country. West Germany was founded the same year.

For all their well-intentioned effort, the remembrances of Kristallnacht this week went awry with Jenninger's speech.

Politicians across the political spectrum called for Jenninger to resign.

Angry responses came from Israel and from Jewish leaders in the United States.

East Germany's official news agency ADN called the Jenninger speech "a scandal."

Newspapers reported Chancellor Helmut Kohl, a close friend of Jenninger, called him to the office to criticize him for the emotionless tone of the speech.

The leftist Greens said Jenninger's speech showed that despite the passage of 43 years, many West Germans still have not sufficiently come to grips with what happened under Hitler's rule.

Hans-Jochen Vogel, head of the opposition Social Democrats, said, "This event shows us how the darkest chapter of German history is still a present-day thing."

In New York, Morris Abram, chairman of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, said: "Speaker Jenninger, regardless of his intentions, was guilty of insensitivity to that which can never be forgotten or forgiven."

But many observers rushed to his side, pointing to Jenninger's record as a steadfast supporter of Israel. Also, no one questioned his assertions that he is anti-Nazi.

The conservative daily newspaper Die Welt in today's editions said Jenninger's main error was the tone of his speech could have given the impression he had "found a way to understand the developments of 50 years ago" without balancing that against harsher criticism of the Nazi era.

The controversy is likely to keep West Germans thinking about how best to deal with recollections of the Nazi years, the newspaper said.

"The reasons for the fast plummet of the second-ranking official in our country will be occupying us for a long time," Die Welt said.

CHIROPRACTIC FOR BETTER HEALTH

Dr. Gerald Glasscock

IS YOUR CHILD ATHLETIC?

If your child is athletic, his enthusiasm for sports can sometimes lead to problems. Minor injuries are common enough when two bodies collide at full velocity. But body contact is not the only problem. Starts and stops at high speed, twisting and turning into awkward positions may cause strains to muscles, limbs, and back. Untempered enthusiasm may cause a youngster to try harder and play longer than is good for him. If his body is fatigued, there is greater potential for accidents and injury. And if he's too proud to complain of minor injuries, how do you find out if there's a problem that should be treated before it becomes worse?

The best answer is periodic chiropractic examinations. These are recommended before the season begins, so he can start in top form. They're also recommended whenever an injury occurs as well as at the end of the season. Any structural defects should get the correction and treatment needed to keep your child in good health.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says the best way to grow old is to not be in a hurry about it.

To err is human; to blame it on the other party is politics.—Thomas La Mance

000

One guy defines hard word as "nothing more than an accumulation of easy things you didn't do when you should have."

000

Good grief! You'd think a guy could turn 60 without everyone making a big deal out of it—especially without his own employees slipping in a big announcement in the newspaper, without getting a birthday cake decorated with a buzzard, and without being presented some crutches with black ribbons attached!

I have good reason to believe that ole' what's-her-name—the lady I've been sleeping with for 37 years—had something to do with this hullabaloo. A word of warning to her and some of these younger friends: What goes around comes around?

On the serious side, a person reaches an age when he realizes that age is not the important thing—it's health. Even though the body gets older, you can still be young at heart if you have good health. Attitude plays an important role, too. We've all seen people who are "old" and cranky at about age 50, while others are still cherry and full of life at age 70.

By the way, I forgot to mention all the "cute" birthday cards I received. (Maybe that's a sign I'm getting old?)

And, speaking of old age, we'd like to present a poem which we think our readers would enjoy on the subject. We don't know the author, and I think we've published it previously, but it bears repeating. The title is "How Do I Know My Youth Is Spent?"

How do I know that my youth is spent?
Because my "Get up and go" got up and went.
But in spite of all I am able to grin
When I think where my "get up and go" had been.
Old age is "Golden" I have heard it said
But sometimes I wonder as I go to bed -
My ears in a drawer-my teeth in a cup-
My eyes on the table until I get up.
Ere sleep dims my eyes, I say to myself
Is there anything else I should lay on the shelf?
And I am happy as I close the door
My friends are the same as in days of yore.
When I was young my slippers were red,
I could kick my heels right over my head.
When I grew older my slippers were blue,
But I could still dance the whole night through.
Now I am old, my slippers are black,
I walk to the corner and puff my way back.
The reason I know my youth is spent,
My "get up and go" has got up and went.
But I really don't mind when I think with a grin,
Of all the places my "get up and go" has been.
Since I retired from life's competition,
I busy myself with complete repetition.
I get up each morning, dust off my wits.
Pick up the paper and read the "Obits"
If my name is missing I know I'm not dead.
So I eat a good breakfast-and go back to bed.

Hawkins' horror

Another execution date has been set for convicted killer Samuel Christopher Hawkins. The date of Dec. 13 was set by Judge J.E. Blackburn, 84th District judge, at a hearing in Lubbock last week.

But appeals of a federal judge could still delay proceedings.

Samuel Hawkins is the man known as "The Traveling Rapist," who has twice been convicted of murder. He murdered Abbie Rodgers Hamilton at her Borger home in 1977 and murdered Rhonda Keys of Amarillo in 1976. He raped a Hereford woman, stabbing and beating her and leaving her for dead, but she recovered and was able to give testimony which led to his conviction.

But such is the state of our court system these days that Hawkins was able to get a new trial after the first conviction. He was convicted again.

His attorneys filed appeal after appeal. The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals upheld the conviction and death penalty in a hearing on Oct. 19, 1983.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans upheld the conviction and death penalty in 1984.

Hawkins has been behind bars since his conviction, but has continued to slip out of the death penalty.

There is little way of estimating how much money the taxpayers have been out while this murderer has used the appeals system to stay out of the death cell.

In all these appeals, very little is said about the murders which Hawkins committed. In the Borger case, Hawkins broke into a house where a housewife was alone, eight months pregnant. Hawkins raped her, got a butcher knife, ripped open her stomach and dashed the unborn fetus against the wall. Investigating officers said it was the most horrible crime they had ever seen.

Yet Samuel Hawkins remains alive today and his victims are dead.

U.S. Chamber Voice of Business

Political nonsense

By Dr. Richard L. Lesher
President

U.S. Chamber of Commerce

There is a widespread misconception, propagated by politicians who should know better, that American business extends benefits to workers only when forced to do so.

For example, one prominent congressman who favors mandatory medical leave for all employees openly attacked the U.S. Chamber of Commerce for our opposition to The Family and Medical Leave Act. "Every minimum benefit achieved by American workers has been opposed by employers," he said.

If there were a law against political nonsense, that congressman would be in deep trouble. In truth, there are only three standard employee benefits in this country mandated by government: Social Security, unemployment compensation and workers' compensation.

Yet the great majority of American workers enjoy a host of benefits that go far beyond that short list: annual paid vacations, paid holidays, health insurance, dental coverage, life insurance, death benefits, accident and disability benefits, employee discounts, dependent care assistance, education assistance, group legal services plan, profit sharing - the list goes on and on.

The value of such non-salary benefits to employees in 1986 ranged from 18 percent to more than 65 percent of pay, from less than $3,500 per year/employee in some industries, to more than $13,000 in others. The average added value of benefits over pay for American workers in 1986 was 39.9 percent. The modest benefits required by government accounted for only a fraction of that total.

There is no great mystery why employers provide so many benefits not required by law. They want to attract and keep quality employees who make their profits possible. In addition, work benefits offer a convenient way to bolster an employee's real income without increasing income exposure to taxes.

Still, the key element of this equation is neither the legitimate needs of employees nor the generosity of employers. Rather, it is the level of prosperity that makes such benefits possible. By and large, the most generous benefits are paid by larger corporations which have sufficient cash flow to fund them. But had such benefits been mandated by law when those large firms were small entities struggling to meet weekly payrolls, few of them would be around today paying anyone anything.

Which is the whole point concerning the Family and Medical Leave Act and all the other current legislative proposals intended to improve the economic condition of working people. If we attempt to force small firms to provide benefits they simply cannot afford, they will have no choice but to pare back their payrolls, destroying jobs. You cannot create wealth by waving a political wand. If you could, the Soviet Union would be the wealthiest nation in the world.

American employers are uncommonly generous with their employees in proportion to their ability to be generous. Anyone who suggests otherwise is trading in nonsense.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

U.S. Vigilance Needed in Afghanistan

The arrival of at least two new Soviet missiles in Kabul has raised U.S. concern about Pakistan's security and whether there will be a delay in the second stage of the Red Army's withdrawal from Afghanistan.

And well that concern should be raised. ...

There is no question that the Soviet Union wants out. They are a battered, beaten bunch. But it is just like the Soviet Union to drag its feet refusing to withdraw the troops in a timely fashion.

It underscores the need for the U.S. to continue providing aid to the rebels fighting to repel the Soviets from their country. The word from within our government is, the United States will see to it that the rebels have an "adequate" arsenal.

Geraldo's Broken-nose Show the Kind That Draws Violence

Physical violence directed by one person against another is in most settings, including television studios, lamentable. But Geraldo Rivera seems to have been asking for a punch in the nose for a long time. Something similar finally happened during the filming of his program, modestly called "Geraldo."

The on-camera ruckus involved a black civil rights leader and white supremacists. It was an example of how sensational, confrontational television journalism brings out the worst in people, especially people like white supremacists who aren't too stable anyway. It drives away sponsors, too, but, alas, not viewers. Rivera's recent program on satanic religions was a ratings success.

We're sorry Rivera's nose was broken, almost as sorry as we are that he still appears all too frequently on television.

TV coverage was big loser

By JOHN HORN Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sometimes network news simply informs. Sometimes it actually enlightens. Sometimes, as in the case of the 1988 presidential election, it does neither.

When whales bobbing amid Alaska ice floes become as big a television story as the contest for the next leader of the United States, something is wrong.

From the Iowa caucus media spree to the manufactured "What does Jesse want?" stories of the Democratic convention to November's addiction to opinion polls, television's flashy political coverage has had the weight of melba toast.

The collapse of thoughtful reporting comes at a crucial time — more than half of all Americans now say they depend on television news as their single source of information. It's no shock, then, that this year's presidential turnout may be the lowest since Calvin Coolidge's election in the 1920s. Does anyone want to elect a soundbite?

The candidates have been reduced on television to mumbler of mostly meaningless charges and counter-charges. We may want policy statements, but we get photo opportunities. Where do the nominees really stand on Middle East policy? The deficit? Welfare reform? With occasional exceptions, the networks don't seem to know or care.

Television, of course, has no legal obligation to present thorough work. Dan Rather, if he wanted, could read aloud from the National Enquirer for 22 minutes every weeknight. It's understood, though, that in exchange for free broadcast licenses, television will aim every so often for public service.

Not this time around. Television tends to do best when it watches and doesn't create — that's why a space shuttle launch is usually more riveting than the latest "ALF" episode. At its most useful, television takes our eyes and ears where they otherwise could not go.

But in looking at this year's campaign, television's cameras have blinked rather than stared, thereby helping define the simplistic terms under which the campaign was to be conducted.

The resulting flood of video mishmash — long on symbols and personalities and short on substance — has to a degree even influenced coverage by print journalists. "Perhaps because there was not much else to talk about, analysis of this campaign is already beginning to hone in on television's role," Michael Oreskes of The New York Times wrote recently.

Not much else to talk about? George Bush and Michael Dukakis sit at opposite ends of the political spectrum. Surely, there's more than one story in that. Television, though, doesn't seem to notice. Its horse-race fascination, to be sure, is nothing new. But in 1988, it has taken on new dimensions.

A week and a half before the election, NBC's Tom Brokaw was still asking Dukakis why he didn't perform better in the second presidential debate.

ABC's Sunday newscast — two days before the election — led with an assessment that 430 electoral votes are firmly in or leaning toward Bush's column, while Dukakis can count 30. Is this a public service?

ABC News President Roone Arledge blames the political parties for fixing the process to such an extent that it's become a bore to the public and therefore to the news media.

"It's very hard to cover substance when there's no substance there," he told reporters recently. "And I think more and more things are packaged for television. And it is not us who are doing the packaging, and it's not us who wanted to be packaged that way."

But why are the campaigns "packaging" their message? Because they know it's the packaged soundbite that will get on the air.

It's much easier — and probably more fun — to produce an elaborate graphic on the latest poll than analyze arcane issues. That decision, however, has an impact beyond the basic information presented. Not only does it discourage intellectual engagement in the political process, but it also appears to have favored Bush over Dukakis, since Dukakis' message is arguably more difficult to grasp.

According to the non-partisan Center for Media and Public Affairs, television's campaign coverage down the homestretch was more partial to the Republican ticket. The center's study of 474 ABC, NBC and CBS election stories found that Bush surpassed Dukakis in "good press" by a 56 percent to 22 percent margin. Furthermore, nearly one story in four featured poll results, usually favorable toward Bush, the organization reported.

"Despite all the attention to his negative ads, Bush's domination of the network newscasts was the real catalyst to his comeback," said the organization's Robert Lichter.

David Burke, president of CBS News, said not long ago that "the unwanted-to-know" public is responsible for "reducing the state of political art in the country." That's an easy out. Chances are if television had really delved into the issues, viewers would stay tuned. The game-show fans already have "Wheel of Fortune."

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

We have two more best sellers for you this week. One by Richard Bach is what some call his most startling novel yet. "As the world may not be what it seems, suggest the Bachs, so might we be more than we appear to be.

Here is Richard's and Leslie's journey to a realm where survival depends on discovering what other aspects of themselves they have learned, traveling on roads in another dimension. Imagination and fear are tools for saving worlds and destroying them; and where dying is one step to overcoming death. How would we change if we knew what waits beyond space and time? What if space shifted and time bent and we could meet ourselves as we will be 20 years from now?

Peachtree Road by Anne Rivers Siddons the author of Homeplace is the other title appearing on the best seller list. This love story about two star-crossed cousins whose tumultuous love-hate relationship is played out against the dramatically changing landscape of Atlanta over the last four decades.

Lucy Bondurant is notably headstrong, exuberant and independent even at the age of five. Even though she is a devastating beauty, she will never become the demure Southern lady her mother and society demand her to be. Sheppard Bondurant III, two years her senior, is too shy and bookish to become the suave and gregarious Southern gentleman that is expected of him.

Lucy and Shep grow up in Atlanta during the decades of the '40s, '50s, and '60s, rebels against the narrow and privileged aristocracy of which they are a part. Critic Paul Hemphill has this to say about the book Peachtree Road: "This is what a novel is supposed to be—researched like journalism, written like poetry and, most importantly, teeming with matters of substance—and I defy anybody to show me a novel that comes closer to showing the heart and soul of a city. It is truly a work of art."

The Barbara Mandree Story by Charles Paul Conn is a biography you may find very interesting. On the morning of Sept. 14, 1984, Barbara had it all: several hit records, hundreds of sold-out concerts, a smash television show, a 10,000 member fan club, and her first movie scheduled for release that month.

The next day she regained consciousness in a hospital bed - crippled, and her memory gone. Many thought her career was over, but drawing on a boundless determination, abiding faith in God and the American public, Barbara has once again climbed to the top.

Press On! Further Adventures in the Good Life by General Chuck Yeager, gives the reader a chance to see the outdoorsman, always in

Names in the News

NEW YORK (AP) — The presidential campaign is over, but the spat over the "L" word continues between composer-conductor Leonard Bernstein and conservative columnist William F. Buckley Jr.

The tiff began when Bernstein, in an Oct. 30 opinion essay in The New York Times, decried efforts to besmirch the word "liberalism."

Buckley retaliated in a Nov. 2 column that recalled a meeting Bernstein held at his New York apartment in 1970, at which leaders of the Black Panthers chatted with the cultural elite. That get-together was lampooned in Tom Wolfe's book "Radical Chic, or Mau-Mauing the Flak Catchers."

"Lenny does not realize that one of the reasons the 'L' word is discredited is that it was handled by such as Leonard Bernstein," Buckley wrote.

In the latest exchange between the two, Bernstein wrote an open letter to the columnist that ran in Wednesday's Daily News, which syndicates Buckley. "Your column," Bernstein told Buckley, "is beneath your dignity."

"Liberal is a word soiled by the greedy, reactionary, back-looking impulse toward tyranny," Bernstein said.

Herd devils Demons, gets playoff spot

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

It was a tense, exciting football game Friday night at Whiteface Stadium.

"Everyone was quiet," said defensive tackle Darren Nikkel. "You really could have heard a pin drop."

It wasn't the Hereford-Dumas football game. That one had been over for several minutes, a 56-0 win for the Whitefaces.

They were in the dressing room listening to the Levelland-Frenship game, which Hereford radio station KPAN had picked up to carry the last six minutes.

Levelland was marching down the field, and finally scored to make it 14-13 Frenship.

"Everyone screamed when they scored, then we were worried about their two-point conversion, but they had to go for it," Nikkel said. "After they made it, we weren't so worried, because somebody had to win."

The worry came because the Levelland-Frenship game was just as important as a Hereford win on Friday. Had the other game ended in a tie, and it was 7-7 much of the game, it would have created a four-way tie for District 1-4A between Levelland, Frenship, Estacado and Hereford. A coin flip Friday night in Littlefield would have determined two teams that stayed home and two teams that advanced to the playoffs.

With Levelland's 15-14 win, Hereford finished second and will face top-ranked Sweetwater, the District 4-4A champion, at 8 p.m. Saturday at Jones Stadium in Lubbock.

Tickets for that game go on sale Monday at Troy's Sweet Shop. Advance tickets will be $5 for adults and $2 for students. All tickets at the gate Saturday will be $6 per person.

Hereford will be the home team and will sit on the west side.

The listening wouldn't have been fruitful if Hereford hadn't won Friday, but the Whitefaces took care of their job by halftime on Friday against the Demons, racking up 472 yards of offense.

And don't let Hereford coach Don Cumpton see this ("Don't put this in the paper," he said), but Friday's win was the first Cumpton-coached team in his 15 years as a head coach to score 50 or more points in a game.

Keith Brown picked up over half of Hereford's yards, gaining 244 yards on just 16 carries. Brown also scored three touchdowns.

"Our offensive line did a great job," Brown said. "They blocked their defensive line way back and, on the option, our wide receivers did a great job of stalk blocking."

Hereford took just four plays to go 67 yards and score its first touchdown. Brown got 62 of the yards including a 47-yard scoring run on a power sweep to the left side. Aaron Savage kicked the first of his eight-straight extra points ("Yeaaaahhhhh!," Savage said after the game, "I'm happy.") to give Hereford a 7-0 lead 1:37 into the game.

After forcing a Dumas punt, Hereford took over at its own 29, but faced a fourth-and-two at its own 37 and lined up to punt.

Punter Brian Fowler took the snap and kicked his leg high into the air, but while he was kicking he handed off the ball behind his back to right end Kirby Kaul, who circled behind Fowler and raced 25 yards up the right side for a first down at the Dumas 38.

"I really wanted to score," Kaul said. "I had to decide down there whether I wanted to zig or zag. I zigged and they got me."

On the next play Brown zagged, scoring from the 38 to put Hereford up 14-0 after the Savage PAT.

Hereford again stopped Dumas on its next possession when Pat Mercer almost intercepted a pass by Brad Summersell. Hereford was also stymied on its next possession, and Dumas mounted its first threat from the Demons' 18.

Tailback Cliff Williams, who had picked up 1,079 yards in the first nine Dumas games, picked up 22 yards on the drive, and Summersell threw two passes for 27 yards to split end Sammy Escarciga to move to the Hereford 29. Williams was stopped two yards short on fourth-and-five at the Hereford 26 to end the drive on the first play of the second quarter.

The Herd moved 74 yards on six plays to up its lead to 21-0.

Brown picked up 49 yards on three carries and fullback Kyle Andrews gained another 12 yards on two carries to move the ball to the Dumas 13, there, Scott carried the ball down the right side.

When he reached the corner, he almost pitched the ball to his trailer, Brown, but changed his mind at the last minute, did a 360-degree turn in the air and raced into the end zone.

"That's a quarterback play," Scott said. "I thought the cornerback would take me and I would pitch to Keith, but the cornerback went for Keith and I ran by him, spun out of his way and ran to the end zone." The Savage PAT gave Hereford a 21-0 lead with 9:39 left in the half.

On Dumas' next drive, Mercer picked off a Summersell pass at the Hereford 25, and the Herd went on a 15-play drive that ate up six minutes.

Hereford moved to the Dumas 16 before Scot mis-fired on a third-down pass into the end zone. On fourth-and-three, Brown gained nine yards on a sweep to the Dumas seven. On the next play, running back Glenn Parker cut back across the grain to score with 2:33 to play.

Dear General Custer . . .

Hereford suited up 88 players for Friday's final home game of the season Friday night. Hereford suited up most of its junior varsity players along with the 53 persons on the varsity, and the entire team went to mid-field for the coin flip.

(Photo by Mauri Montgomery)

"I started to the left, but all of their (Dumas) guys were over there, so I cut back and went to daylight. It was wide open on the other side," Parker said. The Savage kick gave Hereford a 28-0 lead.

Dumas was halted at its own 45 on a fourth-and-two play, giving Hereford the ball with 1:07 left. On the first play, backup quarterback Carl Delozier threw a pass to split end Mercer over the middle.

"I was going to Pat all the way because it was supposed to be a flea-flicker," Delozier said. "Pat was supposed to pitch the ball back, but the safety was too close to him. He was all over him. So I just lofted it enough to get it over the safety and Pat made a great play." The PAT, suddenly an automatic, gave Hereford a 35-0 halftime lead.

Dumas was forced to punt on the first possession of the second half, and Hereford unleashed Brown one last time on the second play of the possession.

On second-and-seven at the Hereford 39, Brown took the pitch from Delozier and raced down the right sideline. Downfield, flanker Jared Victor shadowed a Dumas defender for 25 yards before the defender turned toward Brown. Victor blocked him down, and Brown scored. The Savage PAT gave Hereford a 42-0 lead with 8:44 left in the third quarter.

Later in the quarter, Hereford linebacker Jason Lueb snared an interception at the Dumas 46 with 4:26 left in the third period. On fourth-and-one at the 37, Delozier kept the ball on the option, turned it upfield and scored. Savage's kick increased the lead to 49-0.

Dumas picked up just two yards on its next possession and kicked to Victor, who was standing at the Demons' 48. Victor followed a five-man wedge for 15 yards, then cut to his right and raced down the sideline to give Cumpton his first 50-plus game. Savage made the score final at 56-0.

In the fourth quarter, Fowler kicked a 61-yard punt that Chuck Lemons killed at the Dumas one, and the Demons kept the ball for 22 plays before the drive ended at the Hereford 13 when Shawn McCormick batted down a fourth-down pass.

"I'm happy for our player, because they deserve a chance to get into the playoffs," said Cumpton. "This is just a great bunch of kids."

"We needed to play well tonight, and we came out ready and executed well. This will help us for next week because we came out and played a good ballgame."

And Hereford's players are ready for Saturday night.

"I'm tired of all this playing for half a game and having to sit on the bench," said defensive end Brad Smith. "I hate playing for half a game. I am looking forward to playing Sweetwater. I think we're all looking forward to playing Sweetwater."

COOLING OFF

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dave Butz, the defensive tackle of the Washington Redskins who weighs 296 pounds, has always been friendly with the people who work in the team cafeteria in summer training camp. He always makes it a point to send a bouquet of flowers at the end of the camp to the workers.

It paid off during last summer's torturous heat spell. During the worst of the afternoon heat, Butz was allowed to sit in the cafeteria meat freezer for about five minutes to cool off.

"Longer than five minutes and your hair gets frosty," David said.

In their 1988 training camp the New England Patriots consumed 3,000 pounds of beef, 1,900 pounds of poultry, 1,500 pounds of fish, 1,500 dozen eggs and 800 gallons of ice cream.

Dumas JV stops Herd sophomores

The Dumas junior varsity scored a late field goal to defeat the Hereford sophomore football team 17-14 on Thursday at Dumas.

The loss was the only official loss of the year for the sophomores. An earlier game against the Littlefield JV was stopped in the third quarter after the lights at Whiteface Stadium failed while Littlefield was leading 7-0.

Max Mungia threw a five-yard touchdown pass to Shea Brannon for a second-quarter touchdown, but a missed PAT left Hereford trailing 7-6 at halftime.

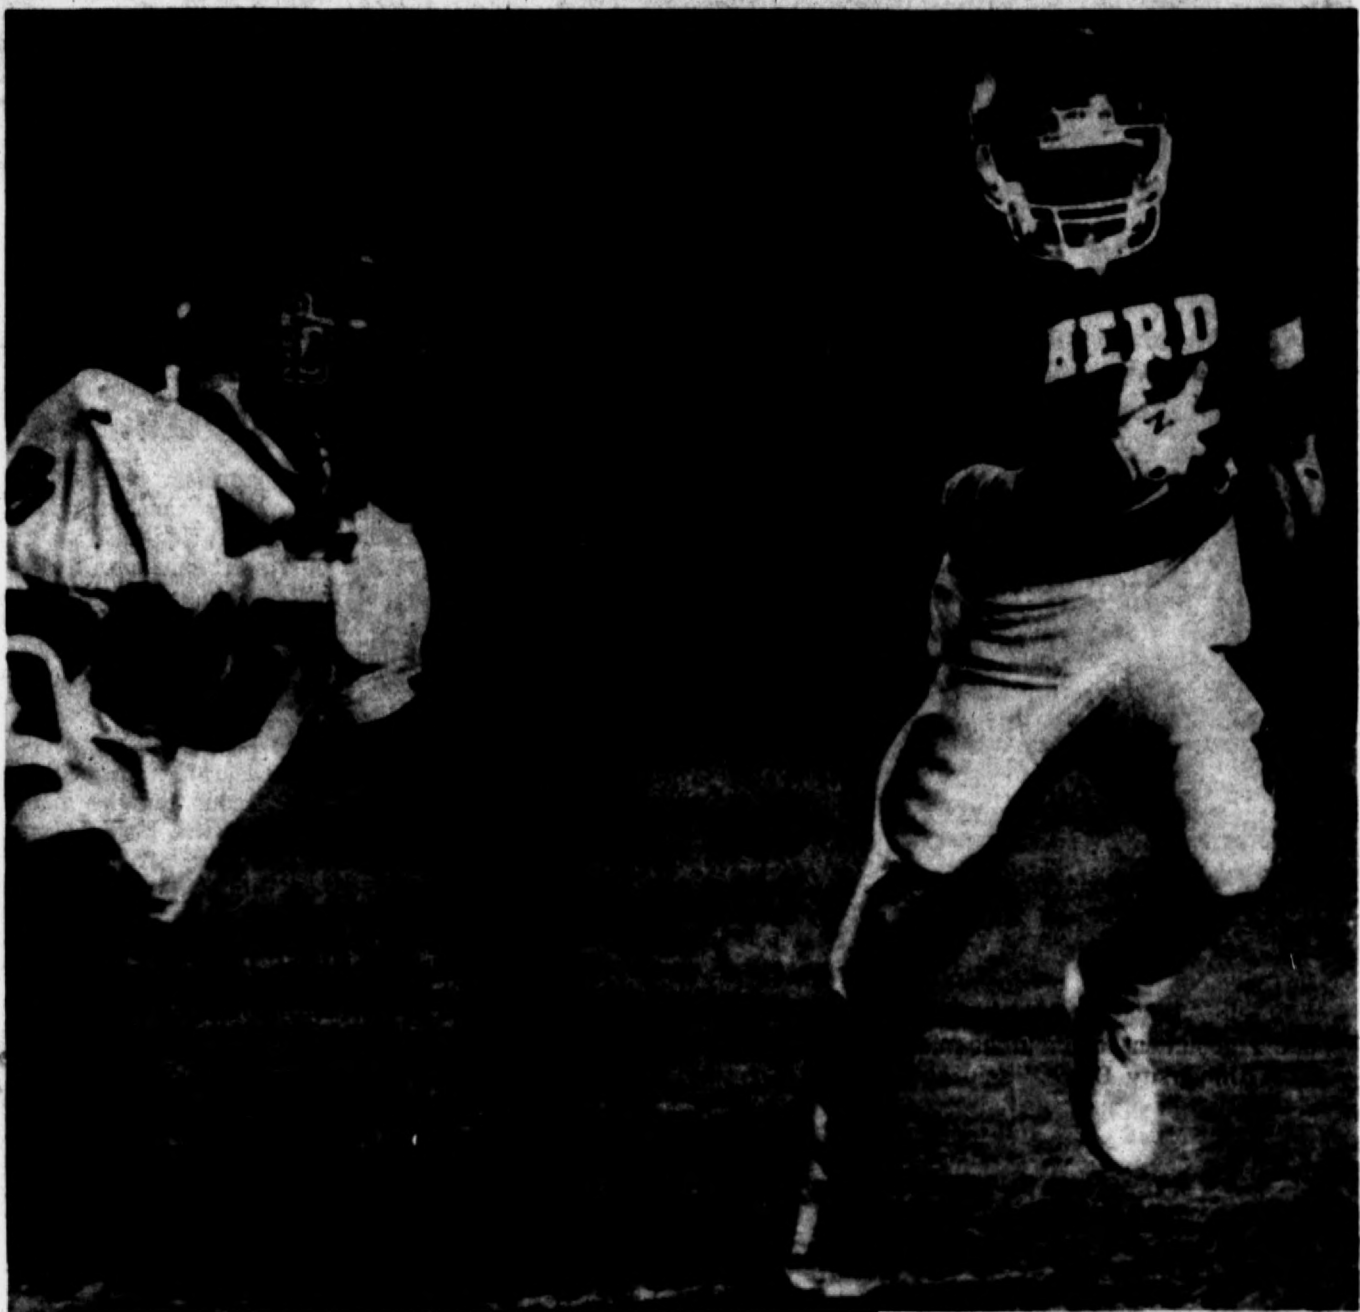

In the fourth quarter, Mungia threw a 30-yard TD pass to Amado Lopez, then completed a two-point PAT pass to Lopez.

"Max Mungia and Chris Blair both had great games to finish off a great season," said Hereford coach Oscar Rendon. "Amado had seven catches for well over 100 yards, while Oscar Pesqueda had four key receptions for about 80 yards. Shea Brannon had numerous catches for a great night."

Brady Wilson, Ralph Martinez and Andres Tijerina played well on the line according to coach Ed Coplen.

"The defense played well during the game," Coplen said. "Outstanding players were Matt Bromlow, Oscar Garcia and Bryan Bentley."

"The boys played a great game and came up short, but it was not for lack of effort," Rendon said. "They played their hearts out. They had a great season and we expect nothing but great things from these young men."

A simple lesson

Hereford's Keith Brown outraces Dumas's Cliff Williams (35) on his way to the end-zone on a 47-yard run in the first quarter in Friday's game at Whiteface Stadium. Williams was the district's top rusher coming into the game, and had 85 yards on 25 carries, but Brown had 244 steps on 16 carries and three touchdowns as the Herd dumped the Demons, 56-0.

Scott scores

Hereford quarterback Jason Scott (1) has just outfoxed a defender on an option pitch and completed a 360-degree pirouette and heads for the open field on a 13-yard touchdown run in the second quarter to give Hereford a 21-0 lead in its game Friday against Dumas at Whiteface Stadium. Trying in vain to catch Scott is Dumas defender Patricio Sanchez. Hereford won the game, 56-0.

Waterfowlers lease lake

HEREFORD — Texas Waterfowlers Association, Inc., has announced the lease of a plays lake in northern Deaf Smith County as its first habitat project for the 1989-90 waterfowl wintering season in the High Plains.

J.D. Gould of Vega, TWA president, announced the lease of a 60 acre plays in shortgrass prairie surroundings on the Donald Hicks farm during TWA's annual fundraising banquet here recently.

"This year will mark an important turning point in the future of our nation's waterfowl resources. As a non-profit waterfowl conservation organization dedicated to preserving and providing wintering habitat for waterfowl in the High Plains, we feel our efforts this year will prove especially appropriate," said Gould.

Continental populations of many duck species are near all-time lows this year, particularly among mallards, pintails and bluewinged teal. Gould says the pasture plays leased on the Hicks farm by TWA will provide wintering habitat for mallards and pintails, and was a stopover point for teal migrating earlier this fall. The lake, situated in the middle of a large pasture, also has a history of attracting Canada and snow geese and sandhill cranes.

The Hicks lake is approximately 60 acres in size, and is located west of the Ford community. Under terms of the lease, the lake and a buffer zone surrounding it will be closed to hunting, to provide a wintering sanctuary. The Hicks family retains con-rol of all other hunting rights on their property.

Officers of TWA and members of the banquet committee agreed on pursuing the lease in northern Deaf Smith County prior to opening negotiations.

"We're glad to be able to secure such a well-suited plays as a sanctuary area, and are happy to encounter the cooperative attitude of the Hicks family toward preserving the waterfowl resource of the High Plains. The isolated nature of this plays, and its location in an area heavily used by waterfowl should make this an especially attractive sanctuary," says Gould.

While the Hicks lake marks the first habitat lease with TWA funds this wintering season, negotiations are currently underway to secure a large sanctuary lake in western Castro County. TWA is also pursuing the possibility of another pasture plays sanctuary in Deaf Smith County at this time, according to Gould.

Gould presented a check for the initial Deaf Smith County lease to Mark Hicks during the TWA banquet in October. Over the past few years, TWA has made several wintering leases in Deaf Smith County, primarily in the western portion of the county. Other lake leases have been made in Castro County.

Funds for TWA habitat leases are derived from membership dues and income from an annual dinner and auction.

Lease Check Presented

J.D. Gould left, of Vega, president of the Hereford-headquartered Texas Waterfowlers Association, Inc. presents a $2,000 check to Mark Hicks for lease of a 60-acre plays lake on the Hicks farm, near Ford, as a waterfowl wintering sanctuary for the 1989-90 season.

Home-boy Dykes loving it

LUBBOCK (AP)—The golfing gang at Lubbock Country Club was discussing "home boy," William Taylor Dykes between sips of boller-makers.

"Ole Spike can coach and we all know that," said one player, leaning on his driver. "He's a good 'un, a hard worker and we all know that. Now tell me why we aren't whipping up on folks? Will we ever get this train turned around and get to the Cotton Bowl in my lifetime?"

There was never a more popular hire of a head football coach at Texas Tech.

When Lubbock-born Dykes took over last year from David McWilliams, who left to return to his alma mater at the University of Texas, there were backslaps and toasts.

Dykes is as native to the area as a tumbleweed. He talks high plains, dresses high plains, and thinks high plains.

He's down to earth, wearing his shirt open at the collar and driving a 7-year-old car with 80,000 miles on it.

He calls himself "the luckiest person in the world" to be coaching Texas Tech football.

"If Spike ever took Texas Tech to the Cotton Bowl they'd probably build a monument to him in the middle of University Drive," said one old-timer. "They might do it anyway if he could beat the (Texas) Aggies and the (Texas) Longhorns every year."

That's always been the rub at Texas Tech.

The school has never gone to the Cotton Bowl as a member of the Southwest Conference, and went only once in the school's pre-conference days.

The Pete Cawthon-coached Red Raiders lost to St. Mary's (California) 20-13 in the 1938 Cotton Bowl, decades before Tech got into the SWC.

EVERY SWC school has won a Cotton Bowl game except Baylor, which has been to two of them, and Tech.

"Can you imagine what it would do for this school to win the Cotton Bowl?" said another member of the fivesome. "It wouldn't be Christmas. It would be heaven."

Dykes upset the eventual SWC champion Texas Aggies last year, but losses to Arkansas and Texas plus a damaging tie to Houston kept the Red Raiders out of the bowl picture.

He wants more than an upset a season.

"Our program is out to win more than just one big game every year," he said after a recent 36-6 upset of Baylor. "We want to be more consistent. Winning the Baylor game doesn't mean anything unless we can respond like that over the full season."

Dykes knows full well what a Cotton Bowl team would mean to the cotton patch areas around Lubbock.

"Wouldn't it be something?" he said. "But we're a long way from there right now."

After three decades of being head coach at eight high schools and three times an assistant in college, Dykes is home. It took 28 years.

"I never cared about coaching the Dallas Cowboys or being the head coach at Notre Dame," he said. "I just wanted to coach and I liked coaching kids."

"I'm thrilled to be at Texas Tech. I feel comfortable. I'm not going to say I'm going to do a great job. We'll all find out."

Whether he gets to stay at Tech will eventually depend on wins and losses.

His weekly Red Raider Club noon luncheons are heavily attended and the jokes and tales he spins entertain the boot-wearing audience.

Landry's legend lives on

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Tom Landry picked up a copy of the Dallas Cowboys' Football Weekly, looked at the cheerleader on the cover and smiled.

"Does that tell you how far we've fallen?" he quipped. "They won't even put one of our players on the cover of the weekly — and it's our own paper."

These are hard times for Landry. Five Super Bowl appearances, two championship rings and the third winningest record of any NFL coach — behind George Halas and Don Shula — are all but forgotten in a crossfire of criticism in Dallas' worst season in 29 years.

Dwight Eisenhower was president the last time the Cowboys lost six straight, the expansion season of 1960. Dallas went 0-11-1 that season.

But losing was expected in 1980. In 1988, a 2-8 season has opened the door for critics who suggest the game has passed the 64-year-old Landry by.

One newspaper columnist went so far as to suggest Landry was "senile."

There were the inevitable newspaper polls on whether Landry should retire. One said he should; another said he shouldn't.

David Letterman called to see if Landry could be on one of his late-night television shows after the season.

Landry handles the shots at the coaching ability the way he ignored flak in his B17 bomber while flying for the Eighth Air Force during World War II: He takes some hits but keeps flying.

"My morale is fine. I could have retired three years ago and started playing golf," he said. "I could have a pretty good golf game right now, but I would still feel like I had abandoned the franchise. I wanted to get this club back on track to the respect it once had in the National Football League. That's why I signed a three-year contract. I figured it would take three years. Nothing has changed. We're not that far from being over the hump. I knew we would have to go through some hard times."

Landry's players have backed him. No former player has suggested — the way Terry Bradshaw did to Pittsburgh's Chuck Noll — that Landry is too old to coach.

"The coach isn't the problem with the Dallas Cowboys," said former running back Preston Pearson. "You have to have the players to win. There's nothing wrong with Landry's system."

Phoenix coach Gene Stallings and Chicago coach Mike Ditka said their former boss is as sharp as ever.

"It's ridiculous for anyone to suggest the game has gone by him," Stallings said.

"He's still a damn fine coach," Ditka said before his heart attack.

Alicia Landry spoke up boldly for her man.

"Anyone who knows anything about professional football knows what a fine job Tommy is doing," she said. "He is working as hard as he ever did. He feels the team will be turning the corner pretty soon."

Several seasons of poor drafts, injuries and unfulfilled potential helped send Dallas on a downward slide. Still, it hit suddenly. The Cowboys won the NFC East in 1965 but fell apart and finished out of the playoffs in 1986 and 1987.

After Roger Staubach retired in 1979, the Cowboys had trouble developing a quarterback who could produce in the clutch.

Danny White, Gary Hogeboom and Steve Pelluer all tried and failed.

Kevin Sweeney, short and slow as he is, produced some hope for the future with his three-touchdown performance last week against the New York Giants, and Landry named him to start Sunday night against the Minnesota Vikings.

Actually, the criticism of Landry started last year when majority owner Bum Bright questioned the coaching tactics.

Bright hasn't been heard from in 1988 as he tries to sell the team after losing $38 million in the stock market crash. He failed to return repeated telephone calls from The Associated Press.

Club president Tex Schramm is crestfallen by the Cowboys' shocking turn of fortune, but he hasn't publicly blamed Landry. Of course, he hasn't given him a vote of confidence, either, but Schramm warns against misinterpreting that.

"I haven't defended him in 29 years. He doesn't need defending. There's nothing worse than a vote of confidence. Our relationship is beyond that," Schramm said. "Votes of confidence are somewhat degrading."

Did Schramm pressure him to start Sweeney?

"No, Tex lets me dig my own grave," Landry said.

Schramm said before the year that Landry's ability to "change with the times" made him special.

"He has been an innovator and that's hard to maintain over a 29-year period."

Landry apparently will have at least one more season, which would break Curly Lambeau's record of coaching the same team for 29 consecutive years. Lambeau coached Green Bay from 1921-49.

The Cowboys should be vastly improved next year with a high draft choice, an easier schedule and a more experienced team.

"I'm very comfortable with this team and our future," Landry said. "We just have to keep our morale up. I knew we would have to come out of a valley and we're getting there."

THE PRODUCT — A line of three surface-mount accessories for low voltage outdoor lights.

Manufacturer's claim — That a swivel-mount bracket can be used with any fixture that has a 1½-inch riser, such as tier lights, mushroom lights and satellite lights ... that a surface bracket is for use on deck surfaces, steps and railings ... that it eliminates the hassle of having to cut the ground stake and drill holes in the mounting bracket before installing the fixture to a flat surface ... and that the third bracket is for installation where floodlights are used, allowing fixtures to be installed virtually anywhere—under overhanging eaves, on decks, near walk, stairs, wall and even in the most confined area.

YOUR EYES

ANOTHER REASON TO STOP SMOKING

Have you ever thought about how smoking affects your vision? Not only is tobacco smoke irritating to the eyelids, but excessive inhaling of the harmful gases in cigarettes can impair night vision and may lower the normal, efficient operation of your eyes.

In some individuals who are heavy smokers, nicotine may restrict blood vessels in the eyes and thus reduce the supply of oxygen. Carbon monoxide, another harmful ingredient in cigarette smoke, reduces the blood's ability to combine with and carry oxygen. If the oxygen to the eyes is reduced enough, their ability to adapt from dark to light may decrease.

Some smokers tend to have a narrower field of vision. A lowering of the oxygen supply lower sensitivity to side movement. A driver may not see an auto approaching from another lane as sharply as he should.

When smoking is discontinued, these visual problems generally disappear. Night vision and peripheral vision improve. And, of course, you will be a healthier person.

Smoking a Turkey
If you want something unusual for Thanksgiving, try smoking a turkey. Smoked turkey tastes wonderful and cuts down on the mess in the kitchen.

Check the instructions that came with your smoker for advice on how to cook a large bird. Some cookbooks will also contain this information.

Buy high quality charcoal and wood chips to help insure that the fire will be maintained during the long cooking time. Start with dry chips to produce a fast smoke, then add wet chips for slow cooking toward the end of the process.

Also remember that a full pan of water must be in the smoker at all times to maintain proper humidity.

For safety's sake, use two thermometers. Use a meat thermometer to tell you when the meat is cooked. Poultry meat is done when the meat thermometer registers at least 180 degrees F at the thickest part of the dark meat, such as the thigh or leg. It should register 170 degrees in the white or breast meat.

Use the other thermometer to test the temperature of the smoker. Place an oven thermometer through a cork and put it on the rack. This will help you maintain smoker temperature at 225 to 300 degrees F.

The weather will affect cooking time too. If it turns cold and windy, it could add several hours to the cooking time. Even if you have to microwave it to get dinner on time, you'll still have that good smoked flavor.

Finally, don't make the mistake of starting the cooker and simply walking away from it. Check it frequently. Otherwise you may come back to get your smoked turkey only to discover that the fire went out hours ago!

Dr. Spock to speak in Amarillo

Benjamin Spock, MD, will speak to area residents in a presentation at Amarillo High School Friday, Nov. 18, at 7 p.m.

Dr. Spock will address, "Stresses Affecting Families and Children." Tickets are $5 per person, available at the Harrington Cancer Center or at the door the evening of the presentation.

Spock first gained national recognition in 1946 when Baby and Child Care was originally published. The book represented the first effort at addressing the emotional as well as physical aspects of child care in a supportive approach for parents.

He has written or collaborated on five other books on child care. Spock also has written four books on political, social and personal issues, and he has written columns for "Redbook" Magazine for 25 years.

Spock attended Yale Medical School and received his medical doctorate from the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Columbia University in 1929. He received postgraduate training in medicine, pediatrics and psychiatry, and conducted part-time training at New York Psychoanalytic Institute for five years while establishing a private practice. He later served on the pediatric and psychiatric staffs of Cornell Medical College and New York Hospital.

In 1942, Spock joined the staffs of the Mayo Clinic and Rochester Child Health Institute in Minnesota to develop a program for children's physical and psychological health. Four years later he developed a teaching program in child psychiatry and child development at the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine.

From 1956 until he was retired in 1967, Spock was involved in teaching and child rearing research at Western Reserve University in Cleveland.

At age 85, Spock maintains an active lifestyle, sailing many months of the year, lecturing, and working on his next book.

Copies of Spock on Parenting, released in August, will be available for purchase at the program. The latest edition of Baby and Child Care also will be available for purchase. Baby and Child Care has sold more than 32 million copies and has been translated into 31 languages. All proceeds will benefit children's cancer treatment programs at the Harrington Cancer Treatment Center.

Dr. Spock will be available for interviews 6:45 to 7 p.m. during a news conference at Amarillo High School. He also is available on a limited basis to conduct telephone interviews prior to his arrival in Amarillo.

The full and flowing skirt was attached to a basque waistline and showed a runner of pearl buttons at the gown's back. The fingertip-length bridal illusion veil with pencil edging and blusher was attached to a picture hat decorated on one side with fabric flowers and delicate pearls.

The bride carried a cascading bouquet of white pixie carnations, peach roses, baby's breath and English ivy. She also carried a handkerchief that her mother carried when she married. The bride wore the traditional blue garter belonging to her sister and her jewelry consisted of pearl earrings.

Each bridal attendant wore a navy blue moire taffeta tea-length mock back wrap close-fitting dress designed with a full skirt. The fitted bodice was fashioned with princess seams and the sleeves were elbow-length. Each carried an arm bouquet of peach roses and pixie carnations accented with baby's breath and tied with peach satin ribbon.

The flower girl wore a calf-length navy blue moire taffeta dress with a close-fitting bodice, short elastic sleeves forming caps, flared skirt and a bow tied at the back. She carried a white wicker basket containing peach roses, peach pixie carnations, baby's breath, and English ivy.

The groom's sister-in-law, LaDonna Reining of Panhandle, invited guests to the reception at the Hereford Country Club.

The bride's cake as served by Jacque Olson of Canyon and Julie Olson of Amarillo, both sisters-in-law of the bride, and the groom's cake was served by Janise Reining of Panhandle and Jo Reining of Amarillo, both sisters of the groom. Punch and coffee were poured by Michelle Bodford, and the groom's sisters, Betty Reining and Margaret Reining, both of Amarillo.

The bride's three-tiered cake was topped with a delicate crystal heart with doves placed above the heart.

The bride's and groom's tables were covered with blue cloths and white skirts. The bride's table was decorated with a champagne glass with peach candies placed on mirrors. The groom's table was accented by a chocolate cake and a coffee service. A flowing punch fountain was also a focal point of the decorations.

Leaving for a wedding trip to San Antonio, the bride was attired in a navy blue double breasted dress with navy accessories. The couple will make their home at 501 E. Third St. in Panhandle.

The bride, a 1981 graduate of Hereford High School, attended West Texas State University and Southern Nazarene University. She is employed by Taylor Petroleum, Inc. in Amarillo as a receptionist.

The groom, a 1979 graduate of Panhandle High School, is employed by K&K Inc. in White Deer.

Out-of-town wedding guests included the bride's grandfather, Otto Olson. Other towns represented were Phoenix, Ariz.; Plainview, Pampa, Childress, Sherman, Panhandle, Higgins, Amarillo, Canyon, and Tulsa.

The groom's parents hosted the rehearsal dinner Friday evening and a brunch was held Saturday morning hosted by Karol Cox and Rose Mary Shook.

Betty Crocker Tips

Q. Isn't baking pumpkin an acceptable preparation method? A.M., Harrison, AR

A. Yes, baking in the oven is a great way to cook pumpkin. Cut pumpkin in half, removing seeds and fiber. Bake in 400 degree oven until tender, about one hour. Scoop pumpkin from shell and mash until no lumps remain.

INDUSTRIAL INVESTMENT

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Investment in new industrial facilities in the Richmond area during the first six months of 1988 was more than 10 times greater than the level of similar investment in the same year-earlier period, according to the Metropolitan Economic Development Council.

"The major increase in new plant investment underscores the upswing we have seen in this kind of activity," the council says. "It also indicates we have a competitive location here that is attractive to industry and recognized for its diversity, stability and potential."

Red Cross Update

Toys are being collected now for the Christmas Toys program at the Red Cross office. The toys are cleaned and repaired before they are given to children in families that may not receive gifts from Santa.

We have several dolls that need clothes made for them. Call the Red Cross office if you would like to make clothes for a doll. Please bring toys early enough to insure that they can be repaired or cleaned. We are taking applications for the toys program now as well as the applications for the Christmas Stocking Committee.

The Board of Directors will meet for their regular board meeting Friday, Nov. 18, noon, at the Red Cross office.

The Uniformed Volunteers met for their regular luncheon meeting Thursday at the Red Cross office. Ruth King, Chairman, presided over the business meeting. Projects for the next several months were discussed. The toys program, Thanksgiving dinner for those persons not having a special meal, cholesterol testing and the clothing room were among the items discussed.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My name isn't the same as yours but, like the woman who wrote to you recently, our voices are identical. Wherever I go people turn around and ask, "Are you Ann Landers?" When I tell them "No," they say, "Well, you must be related."

I didn't believe the similarity until I took a course in communications, made several tapes and listened to myself.

I was born in Sedalia, Mo., went to grammar school in Sturgeon and attended high school in Columbia, Mo. When I married and moved to California in 1955 I thought I sounded like a Yankee.

I was wrong. People tell me I will never lose my Midwestern accent and that I ought to get a job pinch-hitting for you. That got me to thinking. I'm sure you can't possibly do all the things that you are asked to do, and I would love to be your alter ego. How about it, Ann, will you interview me for the job? — Your Echo in the West

DEAR WEST: I do all my own writing and all my own talking and I don't need an "echo."

I confess there were times when I wished I had a more cultivated voice, but I realize it's a lost cause, so I'm going to make do with these Iowa pipes. Who knows, one day I might win a hog-calling contest.

You may find the next letter amusing. I did.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I do not have the same name as yours, but I do look like you, which is just as good. Maybe better. People think I'm Ann Landers, going incognito.

Whenever I eat out they give me a wonderful table. I get VIP treatment while shopping, and everyone is awfully nice to me. When I took a load into the Laundromat the other day, the woman ahead of me said, "I know who you are and I love your column. You must be a lot busier than I am, so please go ahead."

Just thought I'd let you know how much fun I am having. Hope you don't mind.—Your Look-Alike on Long Island

DEAR LOOK-ALIKE: I don't mind a bit. Just behave yourself, please.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm happy you don't think much of kiddie beauty contests. The letter from the mother of two tots (both had failed to place after Mom spent a lot of money getting them ready) said the little girls were crushed.

Now I see ads for "Kiddie Cosmetics"—rouge, lipstick, eye shadow and mascara—for "little ladies as young as 5"! What in the Sam Hill is going on?

One of the central problems with young people today is that they are rushed into adult roles before they are ready. The results are disastrous. They lose interest in school, become involved with alcohol and drugs, get sexually active long before they are emotionally ready and the suicide rate for teens is alarming.

I am not suggesting that if youngsters are encouraged to use makeup at an early age they are going to kill themselves, but what bothers me is that we are not letting our children enjoy being children.

My wife says I am square. What do you say?—David D. In Illinois

DEAR DAVID: I say you are right on. If you and your wife are battling about this in relation to your own youngsters, I hope you win.

Feeling pressured to go "all the way" because everyone else is doing it? You're not alone. For answers to your questions about sex, and to learn how your peers really feel about it, write for Ann Landers' newly revised booklet, "Sex and the Teenager." Send $3 plus a self-addressed, stamped business-size envelope (45 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Displaying grand prize

Abundant Life

SELF APPRECIATION

By Bob Wear

This is not to recommend vanity, and self-conceit, because they are hurtful attitudes and become barriers between us and others. On the other hand, self-abasement and related attitudes are just as undesirable, or more so.

It is a mistake for us to have an exaggerated opinion of our own qualities and abilities, but it is also a mistake, perhaps a bigger mistake, to sell ourselves short. We must learn to appreciate self, and this includes establishing and maintaining a just basis to support wholesome self-appreciation.

Our whole life structure will be off-balance, unless we honestly 'appreciate self.' We will live far below our potential, and cannot relate ourselves to other folk in the most satisfactory way. With a justified appreciation of self, we will be able to maintain a greater appreciation of our fellowmen. This will be better for us and for them.

"To like, respect and enjoy ourselves is as much a part of the healthy personality as is the ability to like others."—Carnegie. From most of the studies I have seen, it is my conclusion that if we do not like ourselves we are not likely to like others.

Self appreciation is not based upon how well we compare with other people, whether we are more capable, or have more, or look a little better, etc., but upon our own life qualities and our wise appreciation of them. We will be honestly doing our best with what we have and in our present situation, and doing so as cheerfully as we know how. We will be honestly doing our best.

Self respect is perhaps the most helpful support in the formation and maintenance of the helpful concept of self-appreciation. This self respect is not assumed, but is earned; and it means that we learn how to manage our living with the greatest possible wisdom and understanding. We are certainly capable of doing this.

One essential to living on the most satisfactory level of life is self-appreciation.

WATCH THE OILS AND FATS

ORADELL, N.J. (AP) — All oils and fats are equally high in calories, so see how little you can use, says Healthy Heart.

But, when you do use oils and fats, remember the higher the percentage of saturated fat, the worse the oil. Choose those high in polyunsaturated and monosaturated fats and low in saturated fat.

The best oils, it says, are canola, safflower, sunflower and olive. Butter is loaded with saturated fat so switch to a soft margarine.

Toastmasters plan recess

Hereford Toastmasters Club met at 6 a.m. Thursday in the Ranch House restaurant for their regular weekly meeting.

Larry Leon presented a visual program, an advanced manual speech entitled "To Kill or Not to Kill." He presented arguments for and against capital punishment in reply to Massachusetts Gov. Dukakis' statement that he is against the death penalty even if it affected his immediate family. The club, with evaluator Joe Cummings, then watched Leon's performance on a video-cassette recorder.

Joe Weaver won the blue ribbon with his Number 7 Manual Speech, "A Tour of the Olfactory, or Father 'Nose' Best."

Lynn Cook carried off the honors as "Best Table Topics Speaker."

Bruce Hernandez performed timing duties; Clark Andrews served as general evaluator, and Dr. Milton Adams was the Toastmaster of the day.

Bill Bailey, lieutenant governor of District 44, made favorable remarks on the Hereford Club and its endeavors to "Make the Best of It." All members except one was in attendance.

There will be a meeting of the club at 6 a.m. Nov. 17 in the Ranch House Restaurant. The club will recess until December 8 when new officers are to be elected.

Woman's Health

GOING HOME FOR THE HOLIDAYS
by Robert C. Park, M.D.
President, The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists

The holidays are a great time to travel to see family and special friends. If you are pregnant, holiday visits may be even more special. Traveling while you are pregnant should present no problem as long as you have discussed your plans with your doctor and you don't have any medical condition that might make traveling risky.

The best time to travel really depends on how well you feel. Your second trimester, the fourth through sixth months, might be the most comfortable for traveling since your body will have adjusted to pregnancy by now. You will probably have more energy than during your first three months and any signs of "morning sickness" should be gone.

Later on in your pregnancy your bulky weight could make travel uncomfortable. It may be more difficult to move about and to sit comfortably for long periods of time. There is also a small possibility that you could go into labor unexpectedly late in pregnancy. That is why most airlines and cruise lines require specific approval from your doctor to travel after your eighth month.

If you are traveling by car, a few tips could make your trip easier; always use your seatbelt - the shoulder belt should fit snugly (but comfortably) between your breasts, and the lap belt should go under (never on or over) your abdomen; if you are the passenger, do foot and ankle exercises to keep your circulation going; and limit your trip to about five hours each day. Stop often to go for short walks. That will help your circulation and will help if your legs swell.

If you are taking the train or plane, ask for an aisle seat so that you can get up easily to use the lavatory and to walk a bit. You should always eat lightly before a trip and bring along some bland crackers to help if you get motion sickness. Remember to take it easy too. You may be more susceptible to jet lag and changes in cabin pressure during your pregnancy.

Loose, layered clothing that doesn't bind your legs or abdomen is best when traveling for two. You can remove or add layers as the temperature changes. If your legs tend to swell, support stockings will help, and of course, comfortable shoes are always a good idea.

It is always smart to talk your travel plans over with your doctor. If he or she gives you the green light and you follow good common sense, you will arrive home for the holidays rested and ready to make someone's spirit bright.

Scientists at Moulis, in the Pyrenees, have determined that an average-size man walking in a cave for an hour produces 20 to 25 liters of carbon dioxide, 30 grams of water, and a heat flow equivalent to a 175-watt light bulb.

The richest and most spectacular unexcavated tomb yet found in the Americas casts new light on the Moche people, who evolved into a talented and sophisticated culture in Peru some 1,500 years ago.

In the world's first transcontinental solar-car race, held in Australia, 14 sun-powered cars traveled the 1,900 miles from Darwin to Adelaide without fuel, says National Geographic World.

Happy Anniversary!

Thanksgiving theme of Calliopian program

Calliopian Club met Thursday, November 10 at 7:30 p.m. in the home of Jan Furr. Mary Sue Hull was the co-hostess.

Claudia McBrayer, president, conducted the business meeting.

Hull presented the program. Using a Thanksgiving theme, she spoke of extra blessings, hope and homecoming. She shared incidents and stories from the recent survivorship day of celebration that is held annually at Harrington Cancer Center in Amarillo. She stressed that many good things can happen-even at times that seem to be full of conflicting and confusing feelings of patients and families of those working their way through periods of illness and adjustments.

"Hope, caring and love seem to take on new meanings as we approach the holiday season and in our families, memories and traditions are an important part of the holiday time," she said. Hull concluded her program with the telling of a special holiday family story then each member told of some memorable holiday or special tradition of her family.

At the end of the program, refreshments were served to 14 members. Those present were Hull, Furr, Dorothy Ott, Kathlee Palmer, MaryFraser, Linda Gilbert, Amy Gilliland, Kay McWhorter, Wilma Nobles, Claudia McBrayer, Marjorie Mims, Irene Coneway, Jan Waiser and Kathryn Ruga.

'The Nutcracker' set in Amarillo Dec. 9-11

One of the great stage celebrations of childhood, "The Nutcracker" has become a cherished holiday tradition in the Texas Panhandle. The Lone Star Ballet's production of "The Nutcracker" with the Amarillo Symphony will get your holiday off to the proper start on Friday, Dec. 9, at the Amarillo Civic Center Auditorium. Curtain time is 8 p.m. Additional performances are Saturday, Dec. 10, at 3 p.m., and again at 8 p.m. and a 3 p.m. matinee on Sunday, Dec. 11.

This year's production marks the 18th consecutive year that the magical world of the Sugar Plum Fairy, the comical Herr Drosselmeyer, the lovely Snow Queen, the malevolent Mouse King, little Clara, and her handsome Nutcracker Prince has been brought to life before appreciative Amarillo audiences. First premiered in 1892, Tchaikovsky's last major ballet has been growing in popularity throughout the years and is probably the most widely and consistently performed ballet in America today. What has caused this phenomenon? According to Suzy O'Kelly, Lone Star Ballet business manager, "It is the children who have kept 'The Nutcracker' alive and well nourished. And, as it turns out, many of them just happen to live in adult bodies."

cracker Prince has been brought to life before appreciative Amarillo audiences.

Even the most intense depression gives way when one is seated in the middle of a herd of children, watching "The Nutcracker". They squirm with excitement, turning handstands in their seats, giggling and chattering to their companions. They applaud the demise of the wicked Mouse King, they wave their arms along with the waltzing flowers, and they gasp at the delicacy of the Sugar Plum Fairy and the derring-do of her Cavalier.

Director and choreographer of

"The Nutcracker" is Neil Hess, Artistic Director of the Lone Star Ballet. A gift of Mrs. Donald D. Harrington and The Don and Sybil Harrington Foundation, our "Nutcracker" rivals productions in many major metropolitan areas. For tickets and information stop by the Lone Star Ballet office in the Chamber of Commerce Building, 1900 South Polk Street, or call 868/373-3463, Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on performance evenings at the Amarillo Civic Center Auditorium until 8:30 p.m. Special, 50% discounts are available for groups of 25 or more. Visa and MasterCard welcomed.

Time For Flu Shots

The influenza season is just about upon us, and right now is a good time for certain high-risk individuals to be immunized against this disease usually associated with the winter months.

"Influenza kills about 20,000 individuals in the U.S. each year, most of them in the high-risk categories," said Steve McInelly, a public health advisor with the Immunization Division of the Texas Department of Health (TDH).

"By high-risk categories, we mean persons age 65 or older, persons with chronic respiratory and cardiovascular conditions, and children weakened by health problems," he explained.

Flu season is most intense from December through April, although cases can occur in any month. And since the virus mutates frequently, immunizations should be updated yearly. The strains of flu predicted to be most threatening this year are A-Taiwan, A-Sichuan and B-Victoria. A single vaccine guards against all three of these strains, and persons immunized last year need to be immunized again this year to be fully protected. Because the vaccine is improved, it cause very few reactions, and takes full effect within about two weeks of the "shot."

"Contact your personal physician or local health department if you have questions about immunization," McInelly advised.

Typical influenza illness is characterized by an abrupt onset of fever, accompanied by a sore throat,

"dry" cough and extreme malaise. Severe cases may lead to pneumonia or may be fatal to persons with other weakening conditions.

"Parents should always use caution in giving aspirin to children under age 16, because the ingredients in aspirin have been linked to the development of Reye syndrome," McInelly added. Reye syndrome is a neurologic disorder which can develop in young persons during recovery from flu or chickenpox.

In general, flu lasts for five to seven days, and physicians usually recommend bed rest, fluids, and sometimes prescription drugs.

Molecular biologists comparing genetic material from the placentas of 147 women of different racial backgrounds have deduced an African "Eve," the ancestor of every living person. The descendants of this ancestor, they theorize, carried her DNA to the rest of the world, says National Geographic.

Corn harvest much lower

WASHINGTON (AP) — This year's drought-reduced corn harvest is expected to total 4.67 billion bushels, 3 percent above last month's forecast but down 34 percent from the actual 1987 harvest, according to the Agriculture Department.

It represented the smallest harvest since 1983, when similar searing heat and lack of rain shriveled output to 4.17 billion bushels. The record was 8.06 billion bushels in 1985.

The assessment Wednesday by USDA's Agricultural Statistics Board, based on Nov. 1 estimates, came as farmers were trying to get the last of this year's corn harvest out of the fields.

The report forecast soybean production at 1.51 billion bushels, up 1 percent from last month's forecast but 21 percent below last year's harvest of 1.92 billion bushels. The record was 2.26 billion bushels in 1979.

The cotton harvest was estimated at 14.8 million bales, 1 percent above both the 1987 crop and the Oct. 1 forecast. The record was 18.95 million bales in 1937.

With the harvest of 1988 crops winding down, no new production figures were included for many earlier commodities, such as wheat, oats and barley.

Other crops in the November production report included:

—Sorghum, 546.3 million bushels and 60.6 bushels per acre compared to 740.8 million and 60.9 bushels per acre last year.

—Rice, 158.4 million hundredweight and 5,547 pounds per acre compared to 127.7 million and 5,482 pounds last year.

—Peanuts, 4.12 billion pounds and 2,507 pounds per acre compared to 3.62 billion pounds and 2,341 pounds per acre last year.

TAEX gets Kellogg grant for rural help

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service in partnership with the Texas Bankers Association is launching a three-year economic "self-help" project to help revitalize rural communities.

The project is supported by a $300,000 grant from the W.K. Kellogg Foundation of Battle Creek, Mich. It is aimed at helping rural communities with policy options and strategies for adjusting to poor economic conditions brought on by the depressed energy and agricultural industries.

"Many of our Texas communities have undergone severe economic stress in recent years, and there is major concern about their long-term growth and, in some cases, survival," said Dr. Ron Knutson, an economist in marketing and policy with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Farm-City Week starts on Friday

Farmers and urban residents depend on each other for products and services that are essential to modern businesses and lifestyles.

They work together as partners in processing, marketing and consuming food and fiber products. That partnership is the basis for the annual observance of Farm-City Week, this year slated for Nov. 18-24. The observance is supported by Kiwanis International and numerous other groups that focus on the impact of agriculture to an area.

Movement of food and fiber from the farm or ranch in Texas to the supermarket and family table provides jobs and income for almost a fifth of the working force, said Dr. Carl G. Anderson, economist-marketing with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"One out of every 40 Texans is a farmer or rancher, and about 20 percent of the state's retail trade business is directly associated with agricultural production and selling of food and fiber products," Anderson said.

The economist said that many businesses, financial institutions and individuals are involved in providing supplies, credit and services to farmers and ranchers, and in processing and marketing agricultural commodities.

"That's why we want to look at various government policies and programs that can play a key role in helping rural communities adjust to their future role and realize their potential," said Knutson, who is coordinating the project along with Dr. Dennis Fisher, an Extension Service economist in business development.

"Various levels of government have a role in helping rural communities adjust to change, and we will be examining those roles and the consequences of various policy options. We will also be identifying policy and program needs as well as specific community problems that should be addressed," Knutson said.

He said that while past development programs have focused mainly on urban areas, there has been relatively little study on rural development policy options.

"We will be preparing a handbook of policy 'tools' to explain and evaluate policy initiatives that might be pursued by rural communities," Knutson said. "In addition, we will be developing a planning and analysis framework to help rural community leaders with their decision-making."

The W.K. Kellogg Foundation, established in 1930 to "help people help themselves," has distributed more than $1 billion in support of programs in agriculture, education and health. Areas of emphasis within those broad fields include adult continuing education; community-based, problem-focused health services; a wholesome food supply; and broadening leadership capacity of individuals.

The Foundation is among the largest private philanthropic organizations in the world, supporting programs in the United States, Latin America, the Caribbean, and southern African countries.

Happy, Contented cattle make happy producers. Homer Sewell, University of Missouri-Columbia extension livestock specialist says to get the best performance from feeder cattle, give them a highly nutritious, tasty ration soon after arrival. "Sewell says, 'The main point is receiving rations is to have one... highly fortified with nutrients and is tasty and appealing to the cattle.' Since feed intake is a problem among new cattle for the first 10 days or so, this TLC program is recommended for several days. Also, tests have shown it is alright to vaccinate and treat animals off the truck if they do not seem highly stressed at arrival. Some experts believe it may be better to get all of the arrival chores over with as soon as possible, then make the cattle feed better with extra special rations for the first week to ten days."
