Tax overhaul faces sensitive deductions

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senators considering landmark tax-overhaul legislation are looking for ways to save popular tax breaks, such as the deduction for Individual Retirement Accounts, without sinking the entire

The 2,847-page plan approved by the Senate Finance Committee was scheduled for floor debate today, but with the chamber likely to turn to other matters for the remainder of the week, any substantive action on the tax bill will wait until at least next week.

Even before the Senate was to take up the measure formally, about 10 senators were set to make speeches just on the issue of Individual Retirement Accounts, reflecting the Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., the Finance Committee chairman, has pressed a campaign to resist any amendments to the package, saying changes can wait until congressional negotiators meet to draft a compromise version of the legislation passed by each chamber.

Nonetheless, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said, "We've already been notified of 30-some amendments on the tax bill." It was unclear how many of those amendments will be offered.

In addition, Democrats have grumbled about the no-amendment strategy, which Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia on election-year sensitivity of that Tuesday likened to "a big steamroller drive."

Despite the desire of some legislators to offer amendments, it is difficult to draft amendments. The rules under which the package is being considered require that any amendment to restore a tax break must also include a way to raise enough money to pay for the change to keep the overall bill from adding to the budget deficit.

Republicans and Democrats alike have been concerned about the provision of the pending bill that would eliminate the deductibility of IRAs.

The bill would retain fully deductible IRAs only for workers who are not eligible for a company pension (See TAX, Page 2)

Another thunderstorm swept across the area Tuesday evening, leaving .79 of an inch of moisture in Hereford, according to the official weather station, KPAN Radio.

The heavier rainfall reports were to the west and south of Hereford. Summerfield recorded .75 of an inch, while Wayne Walser and Bruegel Gin, to the south, had 1.25 and 1.5 inches, respectively.

One report a couple of miles east of town showed one-half inch, while there was 1.3 inches recorded nine miles east. Milo Center reported only .30 of an inch of moisture. Easter reported .71 of an inch, while 1.3 inches was recorded just west of that community. The Easter area reports 5 to 6 inches in the past two weeks.

KPAN Radio has recorded 4.65 inches of moisture since May 24. Total for the year is about 7.5 inches.

There was a brief power outage in some parts of Hereford during the thunderstorm last night. Yesterday's high was 81 degrees and the overnight low was 59. The forecast calls for a 40 percent chance of more rain today before a clearing pattern ar-

WASHINGTON (AP) - The substantially in the coming year, Agriculture Department has come out with what normally would be cheery news for beleaguered U.S. grain farmers, word that wheat and corn exports are expected to be up

The forecast is clouded, however, by huge grain surpluses in the United States and around the world that dwarf the projected rise in U.S. ex-

Although three local races will be on the Democratic ballot in Saturday's runoff election, voters actually have just two choices to make. Tom Simons and Dempsey Alexander are vying for the county judge's seat, while James Voyles, the incumbent, and Johnny Latham are the candidates for county commissioner, Precinct 4. O.K. the justice of the peace race, leaving Johnnie Turrentine as a shoo-in for the position. However, Neal did not withdraw in time for his name to be omitted from the ballot.

While must of the local interest lies in the two races, both Democrats and Republicans have some important choices to make on statewide offices in Saturday's election.

On the Democratic ballot, five runoffs are slated to determine the Demo nominee in the general election. John Sharp and P.S. Ervin are candidates for Railroad Commissioner. We favor Sharp in this race. Ervin is the one who tried to have "Sam" put on the ballot even though that is not his name, just to draw votes with a famous moniker.

There are three runoffs for the Texas Supreme Court and these are offices voters often overlook. In Place 1, we pick Shirley Butts, a San Antonio appeals court judge and a respected legal scholar. Oscar

The department's export forecast anticipates a 22 percent increase in wheat shipments for the year beginning this month. That would put exports at 29.9 million tons, well below the 38.8 million tons that is the average over the past five years. For corn, the year beginning in October should see a 16 percent growth in export sales to 49 million tons, the forecast said.

"Lower prices and increased world demand are behind the expected rise," stated a report from the department's Foreign Agricultural Service.

But at the same time, world grain trade is becoming far more competitive because of the surpluses. levels, and producing countries are looking for new ways of gaining advantage.

Farm exports, the largest single positive influence on the U.S. trade balance, have slumped seriously in the past five years, and restoring them to levels of the late 1970s is the primary goal of a new farm law now being put into effect.

The law will slash price-support levels during the next several years, while propping up farmers' incomes with direct government subsidies. The hope is that lower prices will woo back traditional U.S. customers lost to competitors who have been undercutting U.S. rates.

But the law also gives the United States another export tool - direct export subsidies, something that U.S. officials have long condemned when used by others, particularly the European Economic Community.

So far, the subsidies have led to sales of about 3.6 million metric tons of wheat and wheat flour to countries like Algeria, Egypt, Morocco and

Local radio operators help in disasters

By CINDY SMITH Staff Writer

When the weather is bad, clouds are forming funnels, and it's hailing outside at 3 p.m. in the afternoon never fear, the ham radio operators

In Hereford there are at least 20 people who are real "HAM-sters." And in times of severe weather -floods, tornadoes, or earthquakes-these operators could come in very handy when communications or transportation is blocked.

Sometimes in disasters, even the ocal police cannot contact one's relative that lives in the town that is struck.

"Mobilcomm has donated a bunch of old Motorola and General Electric radios, and we convert those into ham use," said Wayne White, who teaches power, metals, photography, and electronics teacher at Hereford High School.

What does the 18-year veteran of lereford schools do when school lets out for summer vacation?

"I do a little bit of hammin" " says We're trying to build up a couple of radios to leave with the safety organizations-the Red Cross, the fire Ssation," said White.

"The radios are all stuff most peo-ple don't want," said White.
"They're big and bulky and hard to move around, but the ham radio serves its purpose."

When White first started hamming in Hereford, there were only two ham operators in 1978. Now thereare about 17 operators.

White said their club is very loosely organized. "We come together to upgrade or get licenses," he said.
"We always try to push up the public service end of radio ham operators, but really, we just like to have a lot of Speaking different languages does help White admitted. "I can order food in a restaurant and carry on ham conversations," he said. "I'm certainly not the conversationalist in it-I can do business, I can get fed and get slapped," he joked.

White explained that there are always foreign amateurs that will help you with their language. "They love it even that you try to and speak their language," he said.

On the ham radio, English is the most common language over the air. 'That's one reason the Soviet allows ham radio over there- to help the people learn English. But, they are only allowed to talk about personal or technical (radio) matters," he ad-

"You mention anything in politics and the conversation is dead, over,'

White makes his hobby part of a class project and believes there is a lot to learn from talking to people all over the world. "It sure beats TV,"

"In electricity class we use the ham radio as a demonstration for one of our essential elements," said White. "One of the things we're required to teach in class is the electricity magnetic radiation. Instead of explaining it we do it."

White said the troops get to talk on it and he has to monitor the conversations and get them started (out on a ham station using the radio jargon

"Once they're on there, the kids talk all over the world. It's a great way to get kids turned on to technology," he grinned. The operator explained that the students also have the opportunity to obtain a beginning novice license. "At this time we do have a station that is being donated by Chris Whtie to the school for students and faculty to use," said White. The antennaes are already in place.

Conversations held on the ham radio vary from technical items to Three Mile Island blowing up. "I've talked to three different astronauts on the Experimental Pilots Associa-tion," White said. "One minute you may be talking to a guy in Louisiana sitting in his underwear, drinking beer, or King Hussein of Jordan."
White said that any subject on the radio is fair game as long you control the language. "It goes into people's living rooms so we control the air pretty tight," he added.

The operator explained that residents can keep up with friends and relatives or can pass messages to one another in another state, country or even on the opposite side of the world. "It's also a lot cheaper than phone calls," he laughed. White mentioned military traffic and said "some guys call home from Korea, Japan, Europe, and they need a phone patch (tieing into a phone system) to call Momma.

"We call for missonaries, people who are trying to get a hold of their family like in the Mexico earthquake, or just anybody we have a treaty with," he said.

According to White, the traffic system is where all kinds of messages throughout this part of the country, bases overseas, or this part on the clobe, so through different on the globe, go through di channels such as MARS, Military Affiliate Radio Service, and the national traffic system.

"They call back and forth between each other," said White. "And when something bad happens, such as hurricanes, tornadoes, floods, earthquakes, we're sometimes the only ones who can provide communica-

White said operators handle the emergency traffic first. "For example, the sheriff's tower is blown down. We handle the emergency traffic and then set up a second net to handle health and welfare.

handle health and welfare.
"First thing that happens when there's a disaster is that the phone systems jam up. They're always the first thing to go," continued White.

"What we do is go in and find a net, a specific frequency received by one person to direct messages, and park. "We run our messages through and wait for our answers to come back," he explained.

"We're prepared. We have a back-(See HAM, Page 2)

Probe of funeral industry asked

AUSTIN (AP) — An in-depth inquiry into operations of the Texas funeral services industry and their dealings with bereaved kinsmen of the dead has been asked by the Cosumers Union.

"We will cooperate in any way we can," said James Broussard, chairman of the State Board of Morticians. "We think we earnestly try to do our job. We don't feel we have anything to hide."

The legislative probe of the state agency was demanded Tuesday by Carol Barger, Southwest regional director of the consumers "It is obvious the board won't clean up its own act," said Ms.

Barger. "It is time for the Legislature to act to reform the board. Reforming the funeral law has not been enough." The probe request went to state Rep. Brad Wright, R-Houston, chairmaan of the House Public Health Committee. Wright said he felt there was "some sentiment for serious reform" in the regulatory board for funeral directors. "My personal preference would be for a board dominated by public members." Ms. Barger's request was backed up by Grady Baskin Jr., a Tyler insurance executive who was a public member of the board for six years. In 1984, Baskin made a personal survey of 24 Texas funeral homes and said he found only one in full compliance with the law.

Voters approve liquor by the drink

BIG SPRING, Texas (AP) — Voters in this West Texas city approved the sale of mixed drinks in restaurants and non-private clubs almost two to one, election officials said.

In a special election Tuesday, the vote was 3,457 for and 1,818 against the sale of liquor by the drink in Justice of the Peace Precinct 1, which includes all of the city limits and four surrounding areas - the communities of Elbow, Jonesboro and Tubbs and the area west of Interstate 20.

About 35 percent of the precinct's registered voters turned out for the election, significantly less than officials predicted.

The election was expected to draw a turnout second only to the last presidential election.

County Judge Milton Kirby said Howard County commissioners will canvass the votes Monday. "We have three days to notify state agencies of the vote;

restaurant and club owners can then apply for a license to sell mixed

Also on Tuesday, voters in Seminole in Gaines County rejected a proposal to sell liquor by the drink, by a vote of 1,266 to 936, elections chief Patsy Williford said.

The Seminole proposal had called for liquor sales in an area defined as west of the city to the New Mexico state line, to the Dawson county line on the east, plus the west side of U.S. 385 except

220 Illegal aliens arrested

WACO, Texas (AP) - Adrian Lara, a Border Patrol agent, politely asked the question - first in English, then in Spanish - to the Mexican woman sitting behind a sewing machine at the Apparel 'Are you a U.S. citizen?" he said.

When she said, "No," Lara pointed to a line waiting for a bus backing into the parking lot, like a freight truck ready to be loaded.

Lara was the point man for the raid Tuesday that netted the arrest of at least 220 suspected illegal aliens in raids at garment manufacturers and construction sites in Central Texas.

In fact, the raids throughout the Waco area on several clothing and construction companies were largely a case of Hispanic law enforcement officials apprehending illegal Hispanic aliens.

Lara volunteered for his assignment. It was a chance to travel and a break from his duties in Laredo. He wasn't disappointed.

"I think we really accomplished our job today," he said, standing inside a steamy National Guard armory in Temple. Behind him, illegal aliens - followed by Border Patrol agents - criss-crossed the floor of the cavernous building. Those finished with processing, stood against the wall or sat on the floor and waited. Across the way, a man bought his son, only one of many children there, a Coke from a machine.

The suspected aliens, who were taken into custody at plants in Marlin and Waco, were bused to Temple, said Gary Renick, an agent for the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Unloading

The High Plains Food Bank of Amarillo made its first delivery Tuesday at the Hereford Senior Citizens Center. The truck will make a stop at the center on the first Tuesday of every month to unload food for different agencies. Area towns are encouraged to participate in the Food Bank as the truck has more room to deliver a larger amount of food.

Food Bank makes first delivery

In March, the High Plains Food Bank started a new program of delivering food outside of Amarillo. Pampa was the first location, and the food bank began Hereford delivery

Hereford Senior Citizens is the site of the food bank's second delivery. Deliveries will be made to Hereford on a monthly basis. Representatives from five non-profit organizations were saved a trip to Amarillo to pick up food products.

"We felt that we could provide a higher level of service to our agencies outside of Amarillo if we took the food directly to them," said food bank executive director, Melody Wattenbarger. "Many groups are not able to order as much food as they need because of the distances in coming to Amarillo to get the food."

The High Plains Food Bank is a private non-profit organization which receives donated food from the food industry. Food donated is that which cannot be sold for a variety or reasons-out of date, overproduced, mislabelled, damaged.

The food bank distributes approximately 60,000 pounds of food per month to 160 other private non-profit organizations. Organizations which receive the food pay the food bank a 12 cents per pound handling charge.

The food bank has recently moved to a larger warehouse at 815 S. Ross in Amarillo. "Because the new facility is three times as large as our old one, we will be able to receive and distribute more food," said Wattenbarger. "We feel that the delivery program will help us to send out more food and help our agencies as Agencies participating in the Hereford delivery include Hereford Senior Citizens, Hereford Day Care, San Jose Church, Praise Fellowship, and Operation Good Shepherd. The food bank hopes that Hereford delivery will generate interest from Dimmitt, Friona, and other surrounding towns.

Mauzy has no experience as a judge and is reported to be a hand-picked candidate of the plaintiffs' lawyers.

For Place 2, incumbent Justice Robert Campbell is a moderate-toconservative judge and we support his reelection. Opponent Jim Brady is another favorite of the plaintiff lawyers. In Place 4, incumbent Justice Raul Gonzales faces a tough runoff against challenger Jay Gibson. Gonzales has the support of most top elected Democratic officials in the state and has good record of independence and impartiality. Gibson has received support from plaintiff attorneys. Vote for Gonzales.

For Judge of the Court of Criminal Appeals, we favor Rusty Duncan of Denton. He is a good choice for fair and equitable criminal justice.

Chris White stayed awake for 27 hours during a disastrous tornado in Wichita Falls.

Shuttle riders Owen Garriott and Tony England also participate in ham radio. White said they took it up en they went aboard the shuttle. He has taped several conversations with these shuttle riders.

"The first person in space, Uri Gagain from the Soviet Union, was a ham," he noted. He explained that the space programs from every country are full of hams.

The food bank plans to deliver to other towns outside of Amarillo in the future. Additional towns for mon-thly delivery will be added as soon as the Pampa and Hereford delivery sites are functioning smoothly. Eventually the food bank plans to do one delivery each week to a different location.

On the Republican ballot, there is a runoff for lieutenant governor that has drawn some interest, primarily because one candidate has stayed in the background. Aaron L. Bullock has refused interviews with reporters and did not return a questionnaire for the League of Women

Probably the hottest race on the GOP ticket, however, is for attorney general. Either would probably be better than the Demos' Jim Mattox. Roy Barrera is an outstanding, conservative attorney in San Antonio. Ed Walsh is a former Williamson County DA with a top-notch record.

About 40 million workers have IRAs, and 80 percent of them would lose the deduction under the Senate

Sen. William Roth, R-Del., said he urged fellow Republicans on Tuesday during a private luncheon to back a GOP amendment on IRAs. But party leaders turned him down. Roth said he still hoped to offer an amendment.

Meanwhile, Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., said a majority of Democrats want to preserve IRA deductions.

Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., a member of the Finance Committee, said he will try to amend the bill to allow all workers a 15 percent tax credit for IRA contributions. He would pay for the change by allowing taxpayers to itemize only their deductions - for state and local taxes, contributions, interest and the like - that exceed $600.

No pass, no play rule is overkill

AUSTIN (AP) - A national survey ays that Texas' controversial no pass, no play rule amounts to "overkill," but that's a finding the state's education commissioner disputes. The Texas Association of Secondary School Principals asked executives of counterpart associations in other states for details of their laws on eligibility for participation in extracurricular activities, and 43 responded. "Texas has shown overkill in legislation dealing with no pass, no play," the association concluded

Monday. "Practically all states require a student to pass only three, four or five courses to be eligible to participate in extracurricular activities," it said. "These states take into account extreme conditions not under the control of students that sometimes affect student achieve-

Only Hawaii and the District of Columbia require youngsters to pass all their courses, the survey indicated. Four states leave eligibility decision to local districts, and some California cities have rules as strict as those in Texas. But state Education Commissioner Bill Kirby downplayed the survey and said the no pass, no play rule which bars students from extracurricular activities for six weeks after getting a failing grade - is a model other states are adopting.

"I don't know that I would use the word 'overkill.' But I think Texas is way out front in that. Other states are talking about following Texas' lead," he told the Fort Worth Star-

Today is the 155th SMITWIFS day of 1986 and the 78th day of spring.

TODAY'S HISTORY: On this day in 1942, the Battle of Midway began. It ended on June 6 in the first major defeat of Japanese naval forces in World dissatisfied with the career ladder and the most common reason forleaving is now working conditions rather than salary as found in the three previous studies.

In previous surveys, "money" was listed as the main reason for leaving by 50 percent in 1962. That number dropped to 17 percent in 1986. At the same time, stress, burnout, paperwork and administrative hassles has risen steadily, from 24 percent in 1982 to 68 percent in 1986.

Two-thirds of the teachers support mandated negotiations with the local school board.

The profile of the Texas Teacher in this survey is 41 years old, earns $24,601 after teaching 14 years and is married to a spouse who also works.

A little over half of the teachers surveyed support "no pass, no play." The 1986 Survey is the first to reflect teaching conditions since House Bills 72 and 246 were implemented.

TSTA President Charles Beard said the survey was "on target" with the comments he has received from teachers throughout the state.

"The message is clear that the Texas Legislature has to act in this next session to reduce paperwork and give teachers a meaningful voice in local school district policies, as they relate to the teachers' classrooms," Beard said.

The Texas Education Agency is predicting a shortage of 15,000 teachers when school opens next fall.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A painting, "Erminia and Vafrino Tending the Wounded Tancred," by the Italian artist Pier Francesco Mola (1612-1666), donated by the Kress Foundation to the Fine Arts Museums of San Francisco in 1961, is to be returned to France as the result of newly discovered facts about its history.

Curators in Paris and San Francisco are now convinced that the painting, acquired by the foundation from a Pari-sian dealer in 1953, is the one purchased by Louis XIV in 1685, later passed to the French national collection, and unaccounted for since 1875.

Breaking cycle of addiction means helping children

Pale Duro Hospital CareUnit

Two teenagers recently discharged from a midwestern treatment center had successfully completed their programs. But their prognosis is only fair because each boy's parents are alcoholic.

Bill, 15, is consumed by anger toward his father whom he hasn't seen in several years.

"He turned me on to drinking before he left home," Billy says. "Turned me on and then split."

Billy has been in and out of trouble ever since and eventually was remanded by the court for treatment. His mother agreed to go through treatment and she and Billy are trying to make it together.

Cindy, 16, was also remanded by the court but won't be going home. Her parents refused to come to the treatment center for the family portion of therapy and have steadfastly denied their own alcoholism or responsibility for Cindy's problem.

Young people like Billy and Cindy fight a constant uphill battle to beat statistics that indicate four-fifths of children of alcoholic parents will also be alcoholic. Beating those odds takes courage, determination and Frequently the help isn't available or visible to young children and so, they take on roles within the family to make it possible for them to survive by denying the problem.

The "family hero" tries to compensate through achievements and usually sets impossibly high expectations for himself.

The "family mascot" becomes a clown to divert attention to himself and away from the problems of

Is there anything young victims can do to help themselves while they are trapped within an alcoholic

Dr. Moore suggests four steps that can relieve at least some of the stress these children are under.

-Deal with the anger by recognizing that alcoholism is a physical disease rather than a moral weakness your parents should be able to control.

-Get involved with a program that provides aid and comfort to victims of alcoholism such as Al-Anon (for members of alcoholic families) and Alateen (for teen-agers in the same situation). There's probably a local chapter in your community.

-If only one parent is alcoholic, urge the sober parent to acknowledge the disease and seek

Addison buys police robot to help public relations

ADDISON, Texas (AP) -This town's newest police officer was sworn in by Mayor Jerry Redding during a special ceremony at Bent Tree Country Club. His first official duty was to go to Trinity Christian Academy to be photographed for next year's city calendar.

It was an extraordinary beginning for an out-of-theordinary officer. He's 5-foot-5 and weighs 200 pounds. It takes two Sam Browne belts to circumscribe his 56-inch wasit. He wears a badge, carries a .45 caliber automatic.

By 1987, most refineries

Gulf Coast Oil urged to

But his weapon is unloaded. This rookie is a robot.

They're called him APD2. APD is acronym for Addison Police Department. There is no APD1. Crime prevention Officer Gary Taylor says the "2" is a shameless ripoff from R2D2 of "Star Wars" fame.

"We'd like to have a contest in the schools to pick an official name for him," says Taylor. "But school's almost out, so he may be APD2 for a while."

APD2 was born and raised in Atlanta by 21st Century

Robotics. Rather than leasing as most departments do, Addison bought him for $17,750. "They were amazed we were making an outright purchase," says Taylor, adding that the funds came from the hotel-motel tax revenues. In the end, it's possible that APD2 will bite the hand that bought him. One of his assignments will be to roam Addison's bars, asking patrons just how sober they really are. He doesn't expect them to get the answer all by themselves. He has a TV camera in his head and a screen on his chest, so they can look themselves over before they answer. That, of course, could be provocative, says Taylor, adding: "Someone might put a foot through his screen."

When he's not beeping through the bars, APD2 will be assigned to rounds in local schools and hospitals, spreading cheer and tips about crime-prevention.

"He's a public relations good with him," says Taylor.

But that is changing as the market opens and more large oil companies trade gasoline on the exchange, she said.

The oilmen could help control the price of their products by trading on the Exchange, she added.

That's because producers of unleaded gasoline trading on the exchange could negotiate prices months before they refined their oil, said Steve Errera, president of Energy Futures Inc.

He and other speakers said unleaded gas producers could use a variety of options on the exchange to profit - even in a sluggish market.

Overall, the exchange continues to grow in trading oil commodities - from crude oil to heating oil to unleaded gasoline, McFadden said.

In 1979, the equivalent of about 250 million barrels of refined and unrefined oil products were traded on the exchange; by 1985, the equivalent of some seven billion barrels were traded, according to exchange statistics.

Ah, well.

APD2 came from the factory with a repertoire of oneliners and knock-knock jokes designed to put people at ease. (Knock knock. Who's there? Dishes. Dishes who? Dishes the FBI; open up.) Taylor is looking for some local jokes as well.

And what entertainer can't do a little dance routine? APD2 cuts the rug to the "Miami Vice" soundtrack, although Taylor admits "He loses his hat quite often when he's breakdancing." Taylor wants to get the soundtracks from "Hill Street Blues" and "Beverly Hills Cop."

Dentures hurt

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Can you imagine what it's like, making love to a man who refuses to wear his upper plates? Well, I can tell you. It's like kissing an overripe tomato.

As you probably have guessed, I am no spring chicken, but I'm not dead either. Mike is a sweet guy and rather sensitive, but this toothless routine really turns me off. I don't want to offend the man but I can't go on pretending everything is lovely when it isn't. The problem is that he thinks it's OK to keep his choppers in the dresser drawer or in his pants pocket unless he is eating. Mike does put his teeth in his mouth when we are with people he wants to impress, for example, the minister and his

I think I am entitled to see him look decent too, not all shriveled and sucked in around the cheeks. Also he can't talk plain without them. When I ask him to repeat what he says he tells me I need a hearing aid. It's damned annoying.

Other senior citizens must have the same problem. Please, Ann, help us all.-JUST CALL ME LILLY

DEAR LILLY: The reason people remove their dentures is because they hurt. Mike needs to go back to the dentist who made his dentures and ask that they be adjusted. Or, maybe he needs to get a new set. For heaven's sake quit suffering in silence. Tell him!!

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am writing in response to "Puzzled in Mill Valley." Her answer was insightful but there are many reasons more divorced women are happier than divorced men. For example:

The woman usually gets the house, the furniture, the dishes and the better car. She has the security of her familiar enviornment. She almost always keeps the children. In many cases she gets enough child support to cover the mortgage, the utilities and then some. Actually, the divorced woman enjoys the benefits of marriage without any of the respon-

He must become accustomed to a lowered standard of living with what money has has left after paying child support. He sees the children every other weekend. By the time everyone is relaxed and settled in, it is time to take them back to their mother.

As for your comment, "Divorced men discover that being on the loose isn't all that terrific," it is unfair to assume, Ann, that all divorced men wanted to be "on the loose. Many are victims of so-called liberated women who demanded their freedom and got it along with all the comforts of a kept woman.

Speaking from my own experience (and taht of several divorced men with whom I am acquainted) the woman usually come out way ATLANTA

DEAR EXPERIENCED: Each situation is different, but I have had many more letters from wives who were dumped after 25 or 30 years of marriage who said they had to go to work while their ex-husbands were living it up with cuties younger than their daughters. They were resentful and bitter-and with good reason.
