On two amendments state okayed

County votes differently

By KIM THOGMARTIN
Staff Writer

While voters statewide apparently approved all but one of the proposed state constitutional amendments Tuesday, Deaf Smith County residents defeated three of the propositions by sizeable margins.

County voters agreed with Randall and Potter Counties in favor of the creation of a Buffalo Lake Water District, but narrowly favored the tax issue which was voted down by the other two counties.

Enoch Henderson, elected to the Potter County Board, was quoted as saying the tax issue would take care of itself later. Jim Steiert, a member of the temporary board from Deaf Smith County, had earlier told the Brand that a one-half cent levy might be more than adequate. He favored waiting for the results of a federal study looking at the feasibility of repair and restoration, which will not be completed until September 1984.

With about 10 percent of registered voters going to the polls, the following tallies were reported by County Clerk Dave Ruland.

Proposition 1: 825 in favor, 275 against;
Proposition 2: 483 in favor, 592 against;
Proposition 3: 604 in favor, 481 against;
Proposition 4: 567 in favor, 504 against;
Proposition 5: 668 in favor, 396 against;

Proposition 6: 893 in favor, 231 against;
Proposition 7: 696 in favor, 394 against;
Proposition 8: 376 in favor, 712 against;
Proposition 9: 533 in favor, 507 against;
Proposition 10: 387 in favor, 678 against;
Proposition 11: 626 in favor, 450 against.

authorizing tax-exempt status to certain veterans, (8) and fraternal organizations and authorizing cities to relocate or replace sewers on private property.

Total vote for the creation of a water district by early Wednesday was 5,333 for 4,380 against. Randall County reported 2,417 for and 2,021 against, with Potter county voters casting 2,280 in favor and 1,903 against. Locally, the county clerk's office reported the tally was 636-476.

Voters in the three-county area defeated the one-half-cent-per-$109-valuation tax levy, though Deaf Smith County favored the tax by a vote of 535-512.

In Potter County it was 1,783 for, 1,995 against, while Randall County reported 1,862 for 2,375 against.

Buffalo Lake Water District Board Members from Deaf Smith County, who ran unopposed, are Bill Devers, Carolyn Waters and Garth Thomas. Devers had 652 votes, Waters 584 and Thomas received 628 votes.

"There were also 26 write-in votes," said Ruland, "including one person who

Blacks elected in Kentucky, Philly

By MIKE SILVERMAN
Associated Press Writer

Voters gave Kentucky its first woman governor and Philadelphia its first black mayor, and kept a U.S. Senate seat in Republican hands for five more years in a Washington election seen as an endorsement of President Reagan's policies.

In other off-year voting Tuesday, the widow of John Birch Society chairman Larry McDonald lost to a less-conservative Georgia Democrat in her bid to replace her slain husband in the House. Mississippi voters stuck to tradition and elected Democratic Atty. Gen. Bill Allain as governor, despite a bitter campaign in which he was accused of having had sex with male prostitutes.

Several states had referendums on the ballot. Ohioans refused to repeal a 90 percent income tax increase, Maine voters turned back an attempt to ban moose hunting, and New Yorkers approved a $1 billion bond issue to repair the transportation system.

Washington's GOP Sen. Dan Evans, appointed two months ago after the death of Democratic Sen. Henry M. "Scoop" Jackson, easily defeated liberal Democratic Rep. Mike Lowry to maintain the Republicans' 55-45 margin in the Senate.

"It's been a long 60 days," Evans told supporters as he claimed victory. "These have been fantastic returns for me."

The 58-year-old former governor said Reagan telephoned congratulations as he flew over the Pacific bound for Asia. "It was gratifying to hear from him. I'm just as pleased as I could be," Evans said.

Lowry refused to concede immediately, but with 55 percent of the vote counted, Evans had 342,550 votes, or 54 percent, compared to 283,329 for Lowry, or 46 percent.

Martha Layne Collins, Kentucky's 46-year-old Democratic lieutenant governor, defeated former major league baseball pitcher and Republican legislator Jim Bunning in the race to succeed Gov. John Y. Brown Jr., a Democrat barred by law from seeking a second term.

She will become the nation's only woman governor when she takes office and is only the third woman ever elected governor without succeeding her husband.

"We made history and I thank you very much," she told supporters. "...I thank you for making a dream come true."

Veterans get break

Most amendments pass

By JAMES R. KING
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — New constitutional amendments approved by Texas voters will give veterans a break in buying their first home and make it harder for wayward parents to keep from making child support payments.

Ten of 11 proposed amendments to the state's constitution won approval in Tuesday's statewide election.

The only one to fail was proposal No. 8, which would have authorized tax-exempt status to certain veterans' and fraternal organizations. With all of the votes counted, it received 52.8 percent "no" votes.

Secretary of State John Fainter had closed the state's vote-tabulating machinery at midnight, saying he did not expect the uncounted votes to change any trends. Tabulation was resumed this morning.

Proposition No. 10, authorizing cities to relocate or replace sewers on private property, collecting the money from the property owner over a period of years, received 52.4 percent approval.

The other nine proposed amendments received xx percent approval or more.

Voter turnout statewide, as predicted, was low. It was not expected to go above 13 percent when the final votes were counted today. But in Houston, voter interest was aroused by a mayor's race and a controversy over building a downtown convention center, and turnout there ran more than 36 percent of the registered voters.

State elections officials said the vote in Harris County accounted for nearly 40 percent of all the votes cast in the state Tuesday.

Texas voters gave the most lopsided amendment support to proposition No. 6, which would allow for the first time in Texas garnishment of wages to make overdue child support payments. The new amendment received the approval of 79.3 percent of those voting Tuesday.

Attorney General Jim Mattox said ironically "it will probably have the greatest impact on people who are not voters — individuals who do not accept their responsibilities." He hailed it as an "extremely useful tool to enforce wayward parents into supporting their offspring."

The landslide victory of an amendment doubling the size of the Board of Pardons and Paroles and taking the governor out of the paroles process "surprised" prison reform activist Charlie Sullivan.

"In many ways this is a referendum on the prison reform question. We are entering a new era of criminal justice in this state. I'm surprised at the overwhelming support it got," said Sullivan, director of the Citizens United for the Rehabilitation of Errants, a prison reform group.

Rep. Bill Hollowell, D-Grand Saline, said Texas made an "enlightened decision" in approving his amendment to keep the Legislature intact in case of enemy attack. It also gives the governor the power to move the Legislature's meeting place away from Austin if war makes it necessary. Hollowell said the site was unspecified, by design.

"If we were subject to a missile attack, you wouldn't want to broadcast where you're moving your seat of government," he said.

Veterans who have been able to borrow up to $20,000 to buy rural land can now apply the money instead toward

About special education

Lasiter talks to school board

Marjorie Lasiter gave a 20-minute talk on area-wide special education at Tuesday evening's meeting of the Hereford Independent School District Board of Education.

"We are a coop," the program's director said. "We not only serve Hereford, we serve Boys Ranch, Adrian and Vega." Last year, according to Lasiter, the "coop" had about 5,240 in its domain.

Mel Holubeck, president of the Classroom Teachers Association, announced Larry Wartes and Margaret Bell would soon receive awards from CTA. Wartes, assistant superintendent for HISD, will be honored as administrator of the year while Bell, who last May retired as Hereford High School's English department head, is to be named retired teacher of the year.

Sally Strain, school board president, expressed congratulations to the high school's band, football team and girls cross country runners for their recent fine performances. Board member R.C. Hoelscher mentioned the Whitface grid players in his invocation, wishing them good luck Saturday in Lubbock.

Use of the La Plata Junior

High School gymnasium was granted to Youth Quake '84, scheduled April 1-5. Featured speakers are supposed to be Lisa Whelchel - star of NBC's "Facts of Life" - and John Byron, minister in Garden Grove, Calif.

Also, board members agreed the textbook committee would consist of Monet Adams, Marcia Boyer, Doris Cagle, Adelle Clements, Ophelia Echevarra, Becky Flores, Tommy Haney, Dr. Harrell Holder, Bill Igal, Virginia Jackson, Terry Kosub, Marilyn Leasure, Rex Manley, Pat Montgomery, Joe Rogers and Dale Smalls.

It will be shown here publicly Thursday night at 7 p.m. in the Hereford Community Center. Following the PBS show, to be aired on KVII-Channel 7 of Amarillo, will be a panel discussion along with input from the audience.

According to Jeffrey Hill, local coordinator of "Chemical People," the program will focus on ways American cities and counties may organize permanent chapters of the group. The following discussion will address how "Chemical People" might gain more ongoing footing in Deaf Smith County.

Panel members include County Judge Glen Nelson, Police Sergeant David Wagner and Phyllis Bradshaw, a trustee of the county jail.

Special meeting set Thursday

Another special meeting of the Hereford Independent School District Board of Education has been set for 4 p.m. Thursday in the administration building, 700 Union.

Board members are supposed to meet with Kelly Freis, a Houston attorney, concerning the possible introduction of single-member election districts to HISD. The school board also had a special meeting about the matter Monday, when they talked via telephone with Freis.

Founded in 1964 by Francisco Coll, the IPM now has more than two million members worldwide, primarily in the United States and Canada.

Two arrested for theft

Two Hereford residents were arrested Tuesday for theft over $200 and under $750, Hereford police reported this morning.

Debra Cuellar of 406 Ave. K and Juan Diaz, 115 Bradley, are suspects in the Oct. 2 crime of a tarp being taken from a truck owned by Dale Ellison, who lives in Riverton, Wyo. The theft occurred in the 700 block of W. Second Avenue.

Both Cuellar and Diaz were released from Deaf Smith County Jail Tuesday after each came up with $500 for bond, the sheriff department said.

Police also reported two juveniles were arrested for fighting. There were two incidents of runaways and four non-injury accidents.

Mondale-Bentsen ticket favored

AUSTIN (AP) — A Democratic ticket of former Vice President Walter Mondale and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen is favored by four of Texas' top officials, the Bryan-College Station Eagle said Tuesday.

The newspaper said a survey showed Attorney General Jim Mattox, Comptroller Bob Bullock and Land Commissioner Garry Mauro support Mondale.

Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower refused to make a public statement on the campaign but indicated privately he is a strong backer of former Vice President Mondale, the Eagle said.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby actively supports Sen. John Glenn as his state chairman.

Gov. Mark White and State Treasurer Ann Richards are uncommitted.

Pilots claim passengers in danger

HOUSTON (AP) — The Air Line Pilots Association, whose members are on strike against Continental Airlines, contends passengers on the carrier were endangered on a flight last month because the non-striking pilot forgot his navigation charts.

But while ALPA, in a Houston newspaper advertisement Tuesday, called the failure to have the charts "a blatant safety violation," a Federal Aviation Administration official said it was "no big deal."

"We get those all the time," Robert Rightmer, FAA team supervisor at the Houston Air Control Center, said. "I wouldn't think that would be a serious matter."

The airline, meanwhile, reported Tuesday a $77.2 million loss for the third quarter of 1983 before it asked a federal bankruptcy court for protection from creditors on Sept. 24. The figure included an operating loss of $47.2 million, which does not count deficits caused by the reorganization under federal bankruptcy laws.

Lucas testimony should end today

DENTON, Texas (AP) — Attorneys said a jury might be able to begin its deliberations today in the murder trial of self-proclaimed mass killer Henry Lee Lucas, whose detailed account of how and why he killed a Florida teenager was played in court.

Lucas, 47, who has talked freely with law enforcement officers about many of about 165 slayings he claims to have committed across the nation, said he stabbed the 15-year-old girl in a pasture during a quarrel over whether to hitchhike to Florida.

Denton County District Attorney Jerry Cobb indicated Tuesday that he would rest the state's case after testimony from a pathologist who examined the skeletal remains of the victim and after additional testimony from Larry Brearley, a former Denton policeman who made the videotape.

Brearley was on the stand when the trial was recessed Tuesday.

New security measures adopted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Capitol will remain open to visitors despite a bomb blast that ripped through a Senate corridor, but a top security official says tourists face strict new security measures because "times are different now."

Senate Sergeant-at-Arms Larry E. Smith said Tuesday the public immediately will discover fewer open entrances, more metal detectors and once-public areas declared off-limits. Eventually, tourists will be issued identification badges.

While Smith and congressional leaders worked on the new measures, senators debated a military spending bill over the whine of electric saws and the scraping of shovels sweeping up broken glass.

Teen charged in slaying

BELLEVUE, Ky. (AP) — A teen-ager who wanted "to know what it felt like to kill" after a romance went sour slashed a 68-year-old man's throat, poured acid on the body and left the blood-smeared words "helter skelter" on the victim's bedroom mirror, police say.

William Thompson, 19, of Dayton, Ky., faced arraignment today on a murder charge.

Thompson told police that he killed Cecil Browning, a retired shoe repairman, because Thompson was angry with his girlfriend for leaving him, Police Chief Elmer Corbin said.

"He vented his anger and frustration on the old man, is what it amounted to," Corbin said.

Snow headed for Great Lakes

A slushy snowstorm born in the Rockies lumbered over the Plains toward the Great Lakes today after routing big-game hunters in the mountains, burying Casper, Wyo., under a record 14 inches and sending snowblower vendors scurrying to meet the sudden demand.

Winter wheat farmers, worried about ground left dry by a warm fall, welcomed the precipitation as the storm dropped an average 4 to 6 inches in parts of Idaho, Wyoming and Utah, across Colorado and the Nebraska Panhandle to South Dakota.

A scattering of travelers advisories remained in effect for the Plains today while winter storm warnings went up for Minnesota and Wisconsin. Up to 6 inches were predicted today for western and central Minnesota.

President meeting with Japanese

TOKYO (AP) — President Reagan arrived in Tokyo this afternoon, met with the 82-year-old emperor of Japan, Hirohito, and then began a conference with Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone that a senior administration official said would be "a straightforward...private" talk about U.S.-Japanese trade problems.

"He's preaching peace and prosperity," said a Reagan spokesman, referring to two of the president's key themes on the trip: defense and trade.

Reagan, in a morning coat — the formal clothing of a diplomat — greeted Hirohito, saying "Your majesty," as the slightly stooped, gray-haired emperor approached in the marble-walled entrance hall of the Akasaka Palace, the official guest quarters.

"I'm delighted to see you again," said the emperor in Japanese to Reagan, whom he met in 1975 in California. The president replied, "It's a pleasure to see you again."

With scholarships

CTA might help teachers

Local classroom teachers who desire further education may soon have the assistance of the Deaf Smith County Classroom Teachers Association.

Teddie Poindexter, a member of the scholarship committee of the CTA, said a fund has been established at the Hereford State Bank for continuing education scholarships for teachers.

Poindexter said the association feels that better-qualified teachers produce better students, and since local instructors contribute to association funds through membership dues, they are the perfect candidates for scholarships.

Several members of CTA have already announced their intentions to apply for the scholarships, which will go as high as $200. "We already have at least one $200 scholarship in the budget," Poindexter said, "but we hope to be able to give several through community donations to the fund."

The money will be sent directly to the selected recipient. Poindexter said continuing education workshops could also be financed by scholarship funds. "Local instructors,"

Poindexter said, "who have investigated summer session costs at West Texas State University say a $200 scholarship would go a long way toward tuition and books for both six-week sessions."

Mel Holubec, HHS biology teacher, is president of CTA. The association also has two district officers: Nancy Priest is a district director and Aurora Dominguez serves as an office in charge of curriculum and instruction. Priest is a resource teacher at Aikman Elementary School while Dominguez is a migrant reading instructor at Stanton Junior High School.

Ohio tax cuts defeated; New York bond passes

By LEE MITGANG
Associated Press Writer

The annual moose hunt will go on in Maine. Taxes won't be drastically slashed in Ohio. New Yorkers will spend more than $1 billion to repair their crumbling transportation network. And a historic Washington tavern has been saved from the wrecking ball.

Those are among the results of voting Tuesday on ballot measures in 11 states and the District of Columbia.

The results spelled major political victories for Ohio Gov. Richard Celeste, who had opposed the two anti-tax measures which that state's voters defeated, and for New York Gov. Mario Cuomo who had whistle-stopped throughout his state on behalf of the $1.25 billion "Rebuild New York" bond which voters narrowly approved.

With 99 percent of the New York vote tallied, the bond carried with 1,641,344, or 53 percent, in favor, and 1,474,474, or 47 percent, opposed.

With 98.1 percent of the Ohio precincts reporting, Issue 3, which would have repealed all state taxes enacted this year, including a 90 percent income tax hike, was defeated with 1,843,514 voters, or 56.5 percent, against it, and 1,419,537, or 43.5 percent, in favor.

"Ohioans have made a tough choice at the polls today. And in doing so they have turned back the tide which would have cost our state dearly," said Celeste after the vote was in.

A second Ohio measure, Issue 2, which would have required a three-fifths legislative majority to enact future tax increases, was rejected by an even wider, 59 percent to 41 percent margin. A bid to raise the beer drinking age from 19 to 21 was also rejected by a 59-41 margin.

Despite a television campaign that featured the cartoon moose Bullwinkle, Maine voters rejected a proposed ban on the annual moose hunt by a 3-2 margin.

With 632 of 651 precincts reporting, 178,490, about 60 percent, voted to keep the hunt, while 117,583, or 40 percent, favored the proposed ban.

In other ballot contests around the country:

— Washington, D.C. voters approved a measure making it city policy to save Rhodes Tavern, a 183-year-old structure, that was threatened by a new commercial development.

— A resolution protesting U.S. involvement in Central America passed in Boulder, Colo. A similar measure was leading by a 53-47 margin in Seattle with 57 percent of the precincts reporting. And a San Francisco measure opposing U.S. involvement in El Salvador won by a margin of 74,627 votes to 65,366.

— Also in San Francisco, a measure calling for repeal of federal laws requiring bilingual ballots won 61.6 percent of the vote. And an anti-smoking proposition guaranteeing smoke-free areas in workplaces was a cliffhanger with 74,624 for it and 73,546 against.

— A proposed rent control measure affecting unincorporated areas of Los Angeles County that would roll back rents to January 1981 levels was headed for defeat. With 159 of 541 precincts reporting, 21,500, or 63 percent were opposed to the measure, and 11,650, or 37 percent were in favor.

— In the affluent desert retreat of Rancho Mirage, voters led by former President Gerald R. Ford rejected a measure aimed at blocking construction of a luxury hotel and residential complex. Frank Sinatra was among those on the losing side. Ford was an investor in the proposed development.

— St. Louis voters rejected a $63.5 million bond issue which would have funded part of the nation's largest voluntary school desegregation program between a city and its suburbs. The final vote was 35,129 for, and 28,402 against, but a two-thirds majority was needed for passage.

— Voter turnout was a heavy 66 percent in Cambridge, Mass. for a proposal to turn that university town into a "nuclear-free zone" where nuclear weapons research would be banned. Cambridge counts votes by hand, and vote results won't be known for days.

— Houston voters, by a 58-42 margin, voted to build a $175 million downtown convention center. They also approved establishment of a 911 emergency phone system.

— Three western Massachusetts towns — Springfield, Chicopee and Agawam — voted 2-1 against proposals to fluoridate their water supplies.

— LaPorte, Ind. voters approved a plan to create their own municipal electric utility, and break ties with Northern Indiana Public Service Co. The vote was 4,758 to 2,065. Backers claimed the city will save $90 million over the next 10 years.

— Concord, N.H. voters overwhelmingly approved a nuclear freeze resolution — the first passed in that state since the Soviets downed a Korean jetliner. Democratic presidential hopeful Walter F. Mondale campaigned for the measure last weekend.

— Washington state voters passed a measure creating a citizens commission empowered to redraw legislative boundaries every 10 years beginning 1990.

— Texas voters approved nine constitutional amendments, including one allowing the state to withhold delinquent child support payments from a person's paycheck.

— Voters in Dover, N.H., blocked by almost a 2-1 margin a plan to transfer the city's fire department to a private Florida firm.

— Wayne County, Pa., in the Pocono Mountains, rejected a pair of legalized gambling referendums. One would have permitted slot machines and other forms of casino gambling, and the other would have given individual communities the option to allow gambling.

W. Wilson Goode, 44-year-old son of a sharecropper, won election in Philadelphia as the first black mayor of the nation's fourth-largest city. Blacks now control City Hall in four of the six largest U.S. cities, including Chicago, Los Angeles and Detroit.

"I said all along I was running to be mayor of all the people and I intend to be mayor of all the people of this city," Goode told thousands of cheering supporters. "I'll be a good mayor. I'll work hard. God bless all of you."

With 99 percent of the vote counted, Goode had 387,266 votes, or 55 percent; Republican John Egan had 259,478, or 37 percent, and independent Democrat Thomas Leonard had 55,739, or 8 percent.

Charlotte, N.C., also elected its first black mayor, with Democrat Harvey Gantt narrowly defeating Republican Ed Peacock, and Richard Hatcher, one of the nation's first big city black mayors, easily won a fifth term in Gary, Ind.

In Georgia, Kathryn McDonald told supporters they had all "fought a good fight" after she was beaten by legislator George "Buddy" Darden. The special election was for the 7th District seat occupied by her husband until he was killed when the Soviets shot down a Korean jetliner Sept. 1.

"But we have been handicapped," she said in conceding. "...It's very difficult to put your whole heart in something when half of it is broken."

Mrs. McDonald had pledged to follow the ultra-conservative policies of her husband, who often voted against the Democratic leadership in the House. Party chairman Charles T. Manatt said it was "particularly gratifying" that Darden won since he was "running as a national Democrat."

still subject to change concerning Proposition 8, which was losing by a margin of 52.61 percent against, 47.38 percent in favor.

Another close race as of late Wednesday morning was proposed constitutional amendment No. 10, with about 53 percent in favor and 46 percent against.

Ruland said 1,133 people cast ballots yesterday in the county's 12 voting precincts.

National referendum results told

Here are the highlights of referendum results in voting Tuesday.

CALIFORNIA: San Francisco voters overwhelmingly in favor of a federal amendment to end bilingual ballots. But two other measures were judged too close to call: one enforcing a city ordinance requiring non-smoking areas in workplaces, and a second which placed tough environmental restrictions on future city construction. About 7,000 absentee ballots are still to be counted.

Citizens in the desert celebrity retreat of Rancho Mirage rejected a proposal to change zoning laws to block construction of a luxury hotel and housing complex. Frank Sinatra approved the hotel, while former President Gerald Ford, an investor in the project, was a leading backer.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA:

Voters approved a proposal making it city policy to preserve the 17-year-old Rhodes Tavern, the oldest commercial structure in the district. It had been scheduled for demolition to make way for a planned office and retail complex.

INDIANA: LaPorte voters overwhelmingly approved a plan to create a municipal electric utility — the first created in the state since 1946.

MAINE:

A proposal to ban the annual moose hunt was overwhelmingly defeated. Backers of the measure insisted that it isn't sport to kill the official state animal. Pro-hunt groups countered that the hunt is a good way to manage the state's herd.

MISSOURI:

St. Louis voters turned down a $63.5 million bond issue, which needed a two-thirds majority for approval. It had been proposed as a way to comply with a federal court order to desegregate and improve the city's schools.

NEW HAMPSHIRE:

Dover residents voted down a plan that would have allowed a private company to run the city's fire department for the next five years. Concord voters approved a nuclear freeze referendum.

NEW YORK:

A $1.25 billion "Rebuild New York" transportation bond was approved. The measure was backed by Gov. Mario Cuomo and New York City Mayor Ed Koch as a way to repair that state's crumbling bridges, roads and railways.

OHIO:

Voters defeated proposed constitutional amendments to repeal all state taxes enacted in the last year, and to make it harder for the legislature to pass future tax laws. Also defeated was a proposal to raise the minimum beer drinking age from 19 to 21.

RHODE ISLAND:

Voters approved $63.5 million in state bonds to fund renovations at the state prison, facilities for the mentally retarded, the installation of water lines and a program to replace roads and bridges.

TEXAS:

Houston voters to build a $175 million downtown convention center and decided to set up a 911 emergency telephone system.

State voters adopted nine constitutional amendments, including one that allows the state to withhold delinquent child support payments from paychecks.

STAYING POWER By Bob Wear

If what we are doing or trying to do is worth doing, if it is justified and legitimate, we can probably succeed, if we have the "staying power." Everything else being equal, persons who maintain the quality of "staying power" will do better in everything worthwhile.

We are often faced with the temptation to give up, but this is one temptation to which we must not yield. If our expectation is reasonable, and we have good cause for attaining our goal, we must not quit. We may have to make some corrections in our activities, and improvement can usually be made. In some instances, we may find it necessary to seek counseling, but we must not give up.

We have a great capacity for the "staying power" we need to live satisfactorily.

This potential will more or less develop along with our over-all personal development; however, it may require some special attention to deal with special challenges and opportunities.

We make mistakes, of course, but we must correct these, to the extent we can, and continue the great experience of living. In this, our "staying power" will help us along. We are learning, and the more we learn about the elements of a stable and effective life structure, and tie all of these together, the easier it is to maintain the helpful quality of "staying power."

There will be good days and not so good days, but, since we are moving along in an affirmative and constructive way, life is the best it can be for us, and we can be happy with it. This is personal success.

Tech coach gets confidence vote

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Texas Tech head football coach Jerry Moore has got a vote of confidence from the university president despite the team's disappointing 3-4-1 record so far this fall.

University President Lauro Cavazos scoffed at mid-season criticism of Moore and told the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal he has never considered a coaching change.

"I see some things coming, some tremendous potential. There are some coaches in this conference who've been around for a long time. It has taken them a long time to build good programs and the tradition that goes with those programs," said Cavazos.

The Red Raiders generally were picked by pre-season polls to finish in the bottom half of the Southwest Conference standings, but one national magazine ranked Tech as the nation's No. 20 team in its pre-season ratings.

Athletic Director John Conley said naturally the Texas Tech fans and the athletic department are disappointed the team hasn't been able to live up to their expectations, but added that "I think they were too high to begin with."

O'Brien's post as NBA chief is up in air

NEW YORK (AP) — Larry O'Brien, whose current contract as National Basketball Association commissioner expires Feb. 1, is believed to be on the verge of announcing a decision about his future in the job.

O'Brien was expected to be the subject of a "major news conference" called by the league for today, but there was plenty of uncertainty about what would happen.

A television sportscaster reported Tuesday night that O'Brien was expected to announce his retirement, but another source close to the league said the announcement would be a two-year extension of O'Brien's contract.

Mary Albert, on WNBC-TV, said David Stern, the league's executive vice president in charge of business and legal affairs, was a leading candidate to succeed O'Brien.

Whitefaces respect 'Mojo' but not standing in awe, says Taylor

The Hereford Whitefaces are preparing to meet Odessa Permian in a bi-district football game Saturday, and Coach Jerry Taylor told Whiteface Booster Club members Tuesday night that "we respect the Panthers, but we're not going to stand in awe of them...we plan to get after 'em Saturday night."

After booster club president John Bunch introduced Taylor, praising the coach and his staff and the players, Taylor said he felt somewhat like a person who had just received the Academy Award. "There are so many people to thank, and I don't have time to name all of them."

Instead of naming two "players of the week," the coaching staff presented all of the senior team members for that honor. The squad has 30 seniors of the 43-man roster. Taylor said, however, that the junior varsity would make the playoff trip and many of them will be suited up.

"I can't think of any one single element more important to our success than the JV program," said Taylor. "They run the opponents' plays at the varsity each week and they take a beating. There's no way we can utilize them in the game, but they've earned the right to go."

The booster club selects a "Fan of the Week" each week to be on the sidelines with the team, but Bunch said they had decided on a different plan this week. "Everyone will be the fan of the week, and we want you in Lubbock supporting the Herd."

The booster club has presented "most valuable player" certificates during the season to players on each squad. Named by the coaches as Marron JV players of the week were Vince Medrano on defense and Curtis Cotten on offense. The White JV had Tommy Gallagher as MVP on offense and Joe Zuniga on defense.

The junior high teams completed their season last week playing each other. Stanton's James Salinas presented Donnie Rieve and Kyle Streun as the 9th grade MVP's; Jimmy Gowdy and Edward Martinez as the 8th grade honorees; and Keith Brown and Karl Schumacher as the 7th grade MVP's.

Coach Talley of La Plata recognized Clint Cotten and Roger McCracken as the 7th grade recipients; Darrell Page and Tim Long as the 8th grade honorees, and Wesley Brown and Gilbert Esqueda as the 9th grade MVP's.

Coach Taylor announced that the team will go to Lubbock Thursday for a practice session on the artificial turf in Jones Stadium. The session will be used to familiarize the players with the turf and the shoes to be worn for the game. Permian has artificial turf on its home field.

During the booster meeting Tuesday, Taylor also introduced volleyball coach Sharma Smith to talk about her program. She praised her team for great effort this season, and said the team performed well despite the fact there is no junior high program, which other teams in the district have.

Football has changed BYU's Young leads nation

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

To show you how football has changed over the years, in 1959, running back LeGrande Young led Brigham Young University in total offense with 423 yards — all by rushing — for the entire season.

His son, Steve, has surpassed that total four times — in one game.

Steve Young, a 6-foot-1, 195-pound senior, is the latest — and, some say, the greatest — in a long line of pass-happy BYU quarterbacks.

Through nine games, he has completed 251 of 359 passes — 69.9 percent — for 3,323 yards and 25 touchdowns and tops the NCAA's pass efficiency chart with 166.2 points. He also has rushed for 418 yards and leads the nation in total offense with an average of 415.7 yards per game.

That's a whopping 118.7 per game ahead of runnerup Doug Flutie of Boston College, and, with two regular-season games remaining, well in front of the NCAA major-college record of 385.6 set by Young's BYU predecessor, Jim McMahon, in 1980.

"He's a good one," says Coach LaVell Edwards, who has turned out Gary Sheide, Gifford Nielsen, Marc Wilson, McMahon and Young, one after the other. "I don't know if he's the best ever. It's hard to compare. He's by far the best runner. He could be a great running back. He's going to be a great pro quarterback. He has a very strong arm — he just needs more experience reading coverages."

"But all those other guys had a redshirt year. Steve never did. And last year, the toughest thing was that every time he turned around, people wanted to compare him to McMahon."

It couldn't have bothered Young too much because he passed for 3,100 yards and 18 touchdowns, while rushing for 407 yards and 10 TDs.

"I try to keep telling myself not to get into comparisons and to be my own man," Young says. "I try to live up to those kind of expectations, but whatever it takes to get my team in the end zone is the big thing."

"I sort of got thrown into the fire right away (when McMahon was injured against Colorado in 1981), but in that kind of situation you learn real quick. You learn to dance in the fire. I never got to the point where I was waiting (for someone to graduate) and I think it's made me a better player."

Although Young has always been a quarterback, Edwards says he was recruited "with the idea of making him a wide receiver, running back or defensive back, but he never had that idea."

"Quarterback has always been my kind of spot," says Young. "I like pressure situations, being the guy they're gonna boo if things don't go well. I like a spot where you've got to do it."

"Coach Edwards told me he'd give me a shot at quarterback, but he kind of said it like, 'Yeah, sure ... There were some hairy times my freshman year when they tried to pressure me to play another position. But something right always happened.'"

The right things are still happening. Best of all, Brigham Young himself, a founder of the Mormon Church, is now known as Steve Young's great-great-grandfather rather than the other way around.

Hagler-Duran bout draws big bucks

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The show is scheduled for 400 closed circuit locations with three million seats. There also is pay-per-view television in Los Angeles and Chicago and, although sources at the fight are hesitant to talk about it, there also will be delayed home television showings by both NBC and Home Box Office later this month.

The money is nice, of course, but pride and prestige enter into this fight, as well. "Two days, no more champion," said Duran, gesturing toward Hagler.

The promotion put together by Top Rank and Caesars Palace has a huge revenue potential for the middleweight division. Hagler is guaranteed $5 million and percentages of other income could push his total to $8 million. Duran has a lower guarantee of about $1.5 million, but his percentage trigger comes more quickly, and he could pocket $4 million.

Coach Taylor announced that the team will go to Lubbock Thursday for a practice session on the artificial turf in Jones Stadium. The session will be used to familiarize the players with the turf and the shoes to be worn for the game. Permian has artificial turf on its home field.

During the booster meeting Tuesday, Taylor also introduced volleyball coach Sharma Smith to talk about her program. She praised her team for great effort this season, and said the team performed well despite the fact there is no junior high program, which other teams in the district have.

Murphy named as MVP again

Atlanta slugger Dale Murphy insisted he was surprised by his second straight National League Most Valuable Player award, but his philosophy makes the honor seem logical.

"In this game, if you're doing something right, you need to do it every year," the Atlanta Braves' center fielder said.

The Baseball Writers Association of America on Tuesday made Murphy the fourth NL player to win back-to-back MVP awards since the honor was created in 1931.

Murphy received 21 of 41 first-place votes cast by a panel comprised of two writers from each National League city. Andre Dawson of Montreal, Mike Schmidt of Philadelphia and Pedro Guerrero of Los Angeles each received one first-place vote.

Murphy had two second-place votes and one for fifth for 318 points as each panelist voted for 10 players. Dawson got 213 points, followed by Schmidt with 191 and Guerrero with 182.

"I never thought of something like that happening," said Murphy, whose humility has been a trademark.

"It's just tremendous. It's a thrill again."

Murphy led the league this year with 121 runs batted in and with a .540 slugging percentage. He was sixth in batting average (.302); second in runs scored (131); second in home runs (36); sixth in hits (178); third in on-base percentage (.393); fourth in walks (90); and tied for fourth in game-winning RBI (14).

He also stole 30 bases to become the sixth major leaguer to hit 30 home runs and steal 30 bases in the same year.

At 27, Murphy is the youngest of the National Leaguers to win consecutive MVP awards. The others were the Cubs' Ernie Banks (1958-59), the Reds' Joe Morgan (1975-76) and Schmidt (1980-81).

Murphy is the second Brave to win the award. Henry Aaron won it in 1957.

"I'm extremely honored and happy to share it with my teammates and coaches," Murphy said, adding that the individual honor could not erase the team's disappointment in missing the playoffs. The Los Angeles Dodgers beat the Braves by three games to take the National League West title.

Murphy will receive a $100,000 incentive bonus, placed in his contract last year after his first MVP award. He has four years to go on a contract setting his base salary at $1.3 million a year.

Murphy joined the Braves from their Richmond farm club in 1977. In 18 games, he hit .316. The next season, he hit only .227, but he had 23 homers, and in 1979, his average climbed to .276 with 21 homers. He hit 33 homers in 1980, 13 in strike-interrupted 1981. In his first MVP year, he hit .281

Campbell wants to leave Oilers

HOUSTON (AP) — Running back Earl Campbell, who said after he was benched Sunday that he has no future with the Houston Oilers, says he hasn't changed his mind and has asked the team to trade him.

Campbell said during the Tuesday morning filming of "The Earl Campbell Show," which airs Saturday on KPRC-TV, that he wants to play the last year of his National Football League contract with another team.

"It was pretty obvious what I said over the weekend, that I think the best thing would be for me to be out of here as far as playing football with the Houston Oilers," Campbell said. "Even this morning I still feel that way."

"The writing was on the wall a long time ago," Campbell said. "I hope the Houston Oilers organization will follow up on it. That would be best for all of us."

Campbell complained bitterly when he was benched Sunday during a 55-14 loss to the Bengals.

"I guess my future with this team is no place," he said. "I wouldn't treat a dog the way they treated me today."

Campbell was pulled from the game late in the third

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD AP Sports Writer

It was experience and tradition versus enthusiasm and youth, and this time experience and tradition won.

Boston's veteran center, Robert Parish, outmuscled rookie Steve Stipanovich for a rebound and banked it into the basket as time expired to give the Celtics a 99-97 victory Tuesday night over the Indiana Pacers, the youngest and least-experienced team in the National Basketball Association.

The Pacers, who average just over 23 years old and less than two years NBA experience per player, are "a frightening group of youngsters," said Boston Coach K.C. Jones. "They never know when to stop. They hustle extremely well and are a scrappy group. They are very well coached."

But "it would have been a better education if we would have won," Pacers Coach Jack McKinney said.

Indiana's Herb Williams scored 16 of his game-high 32 points in the fourth quarter to bring the Pacers back from an 80-66 deficit after three periods. Two free throws by Clark Kellogg, who added 22 points, tied the score at 97-97 with 16 seconds left.

Then Parish saved the Celtics, whose 5-1 record is the best in the NBA.

In other NBA action, it was Milwaukee 97, New York 90; Washington 119, San Diego 113; Chicago 100, Kansas City 97; Portland 122, Houston 104; Los Angeles 133, Denver 124; Seattle 123, Phoenix 116, and Golden State 97, Atlanta 90.

Lakers 133, Nuggets 124

Earvin "Magic" Johnson,

quarter with Houston trailing 41-0. The loss was the Oilers' 17th in a row and made the team 0-10 this season.

Head Coach Chuck Studley said he made the move to protect Campbell from injury.

Campbell said he respects Studley and thinks he is doing a good job.

"I'm just one of those individuals in America, that it's time they get a new address," he said.

Studley took over the head coaching job midway through the season, when Ed Biles resigned the post.

Campbell, who won the Heisman Trophy in 1977 at the University of Texas, was the first pick in the NFL draft the next year. He led the league in rushing each of his first three seasons, gaining 1,934 yards in 1980.

For past presidents

What do they do now?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Why doesn't the United States make better use of its presidents once they've left office? Right now we've got three of them sitting in mothballs, their minds still sharp, human libraries of the kind of knowledge that only can come from having been there.

The cheapshot answer, with variations on the theme, is that they had plenty of time in the White House to make a mess of things. Still, we paid for their on-the-job training and we're still paying them well, so why not — as Jimmy Carter might say — get the best advice?

Harry Truman, who lived 20 years after he left the White House, had strong ideas about what ought to be done with retired public officials.

"A man who has had the experience of a president, or a vice president, or a speaker of the House gets a chance to become much more familiar with our government than anyone else," he said. "We must not shelve or thrust into obscurity men with such unique experience."

But sheldom is what the United States bestows on its former chief executives.

Richard Nixon was discredited and brought down by his flaws, but he also achieved detente with the Soviet Union and opened the door to China. He writes and talks extensively about foreign affairs. It was once rumored he would be appointed ambassador to China and why not?

Gerald Ford, who calmed a nation rent by Watergate, knows from 25 years in the House all there is to know about how administrations can work their will with Congress. It was knowledge that could have benefitted his successors.

Carter, the president who sat on Menachem Begin and Anwar Sadat until they reached their Camp David agreements, now sits in Georgia carving chairs while blood flows with renewed vigor in the Middle East. Special envoys come and go, using the Camp David accords as their benchmark, but none of them is Carter. All three former presidents testified recently before the Kissinger commission on central America. It was the first time there was a formal bid for their advice.

Former presidents do, of course, have many forums to make their views known. Nixon has written four books since leaving Washington. Ford is on the lucrative convention circuit and he's lectured to more than 130 college audiences since leaving Washington. A news conference called by any of the three is bound to be well attended.

No sitting president, of course, would be willing to be upstaged by a former president. When Ford set a kind of deputy president role as the price for being the Republican vice-presidential candidate in 1980, Reagan decided the cost was too high and turned to George Bush.

Some observers say the problem with appointing a former chief executive as, say, a special envoy or head of a special commission, is that he wouldn't want to report to a secretary of state.

But that ignores a trait common to every ex-president of the United States. They all want to be useful to their country.

For Dallas

Assassination prompted scorn

DALLAS (AP) — Hardly had the echoes of gunfire faded in Dealey Plaza when the storm began.

A city of hate, they cried, in a state too big, too rich, too proud, too violent and surely peopled by lunatics, extremists, bigots, rednecks and coarse oil millionaires.

"There is something rotten in the state of Texas," asserted the periodical Nation.

"It is, of course, entirely true that President Kennedy could have been assassinated anywhere; but he wasn't. The terror was not loosed upon us all from Tulsa or Albuquerque or Shreveport: it happened in Dallas."

The date was Nov. 22, 1963, and suddenly it was no longer fun being Texan, whether native born or adopted. A young president had been murdered on the streets of Dallas, and the state as well as the city came under instant siege.

Nobody in his right mind actually held Texans or Dallas responsible for investigating the assassination. But some did imply that Texans should bear partial responsibility because of the nasty political atmosphere that existed in Dallas at the time.

Supreme Court Chief Justice Earl Warren, among others, suggested that a "climate of hatred" in Dallas might have inspired Lee Harvey Oswald to violence.

Among those who disagreed was former Texas Gov. Price Daniel, who, in the traumatic days after the shooting, said:

"During the past 10 years, Oswald spent more time in Russia than in Texas. Library records show that his reading material was pro-Communist. He certainly was not a product of Dallas, having lived there less than two months, a far shorter time than in New York, New Orleans, San Diego, Moscow and Minsk.

"It does not seem possible that an objective sociological study of the influence of this man's environment would have been confined to a city where he resided for such a few weeks."

It was true, however, that a small but noisy right-wing group jostled and spat upon Lyndon and Lady Bird Johnson when the late president, then a U.S. senator, campaigned in Dallas in 1960.

And no one could deny that Ambassador Adlai Stevenson received similar treatment when he came to town in 1963 on behalf of United Nations Day.

The president's position in Texas was shaky and he had spent five months planning his trip with Vice President Lyndon Johnson and Gov. John Connally. Kennedy had barely carried Texas in 1960 and had lost Dallas County to Richard Nixon. Kennedy wanted to insure the 25 electoral votes from the vice president's home state in 1964. Besides, the Democratic Party needed funds and a $100-a-plate dinner was planned in Austin to help raise them.

An incidental issue was a feud between Johnson and U.S. Sen. Ralph Yarborough over patronage and other senatorial prerogatives. It was not a reason to make the long trip, but having Yarborough travel with the presidential party was meant to show unity.

On Nov. 21, handbills were distributed in Dallas with convict-style photographs of Kennedy and the caption: "Wanted for Treason."

The next day, a full-page ad appeared in The Dallas Morning News. Something called the "American Fact-Finding Committee" demanded to know why the president had "ordered the Attorney General to go soft on communism."

A Dallas oil executive named J.M. Shea Jr. would later assail the city's "excited rightists" in Look magazine. Said he:

"Had Nikita Khrushchev or Fidel Castro conspired to kill the President, they could have found no better spot than Dallas — a city where the blame would automatically fall on our own lunatic fringe."

Shea maintained among other things that Dallas civic leaders, while "an intelligent and dedicated group," viewed their leadership in a narrow sense.

"When the hate throwers came along, they simply stood back and let the stones fly," he said.

"They, like most of us, allowed the fanatic fringe to intimidate the whole town."

In the early 1960s, Dallas was a city of 750,000, neither an oil town nor a cow town but emerging as a center of trade, transportation, manufacturing, banking, insurance, finance, fashion and even culture.

The city was run by a coalition of businessmen and bankers, the Dallas Citizens Council, which had the reputation for making decisions, and then making those decisions stick.

But the events of November 1963 shook the hierarchy as nothing before or since, raising doubts about that leadership and concern for the city's continued growth and prosperity.

As former City Manager Elgin Crull told U.S. News & World Report in 1964:

"It shocked us. It inflicted a civic wound that will hurt for a long, long time. But this is a resilient city. We knew that we couldn't just stand still and grieve."

"So we are trying to build a better city."

One recent morning, Stanley Marcus ushered two newsmen into his office high atop a downtown skyscraper and discussed his city then and now and the changes that have occurred since "Dallas' darkest hour."

"Change means many things," said Marcus, the crown prince of specialty retailers and the guiding force behind the Neiman-Marcus mystique. "I think what has happened is that Dallas has matured."

A town of the early 1960s, he said, has become a city of the 1980s, still conservative but enhanced by immigrants who have new and bold ideas and opinions and who broadened the Dallas political and economic perspective.

"Take a look," he said, pointing down to the glittering banks, office buildings, plazas, and hotels that have sprung up in recent years.

"I think it is significant that the financial balance was not hurt."

He said the influx of people from other parts of the country also tended to "water down" or "lessen" the influence of rightist and redneck dissidents.

The city's image two decades ago was distorted, he said, by the combination of a noisy "redneck community" and a wealthy, highly articulate "North Side" group which supported ultra-conservative Dallas congressman Bruce Alger.

Anybody who disagreed with them about Kennedy was called a communist, Marcus said. "It was an easy way to put people down at that time."

"I'm sure I've been called a communist because I didn't agree with the establishment."

He said it's "hard to blame a city or a county" for the attitudes and atmosphere of 1963, "except for what the leadership did or did not do."

The Johnson and Stevenson episodes exposed a dark side of Dallas that went largely unchallenged by either the establishment or the local press, Marcus maintained.

"We didn't stand up to the extremists ... or challenge the bigoted groups," he said.

Ann Landers

Bothered by relatives' requests

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am sitting here sick at heart. The fourth relative has just phoned for information so she can complete "the family tree."

My parents were strick Catholics. Forty years ago I eloped with a man I loved. He wasn't Catholic and I was six months pregnant. Within weeks the marriage went sour. My husband disappeared.

Three days before the baby arrived I married a friend of my brother's, a sweet and gentle man a few years younger than myself. He wasn't Catholic either, so the family considered me a harlot. We moved 2,000 miles away and for 40 years have been extremely happy.

The last relative to call says he plans to publish a family history and needs my cooperation. I told him I didn't wish to be included because no one around here knows anything about me, and that's the way I want it.

He said if I refused to volunteer the information, they would find it on their own. What can I do?-- Anonymous Please

DEAR A: Your relatives will probably dig up something on their own, but rise above it and don't be concerned. You owe them nothing.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: In all the years I have been reading your column you have printed only one letter from a father who is paying child support and resents his ex-wife dressing like a million bucks while the kids look like street urchins. That letter described my situation perfectly.

I get our son for one month in the summer and again at Christmas time. Whenever his mother drops him off I have to spend at least two days shopping to get him presentable. His arrival wardrobe consists of torn underwear, socks with holes, faded jeans and T-shirts and beat-up sneakers. The boy has no handkerchiefs nor a decent suit. I asked, "What do you wear to church?" His reply, "We don't go."

Last Easter I sent a check for $200 and asked my wife to buy Johnny a new suit and some shoes. She wrote back and said his last year's suit was fine and she'd bank the money. Instead, she bought herself a dress and said she'd replace the money as soon as she could.

True, some fathers run out on their families and do everything possible to avoid paying child support, but those of us who pay regularly think we should have some evidence that the money is spent on the kids, and not on the ex-wife's back.--Skunked In Ill.

DEAR SKUNKED: The letter you thanked me for produced hundreds of complaints from women saying their support checks were inadequate, late or nonexistent, and that I had a lot of nerve taking the side of the lousy ex-husband.

Granted -- some ex-husbands are liars, skunks and irresponsible louts, but there are many who behave decently and want to do the right thing. I believe they are entitled to see the receipts for merchandise that was supposedly purchased for the children.

Residents return from foliage tour

Local residents, Elizabeth Wills, Inez and J.W. Witherspoon, Jessie Matthews, and Robert and Alice Thompson, tour escorts, recently returned from the Smoky Mountain Foliage Tour sponsored by Trailways Tours of Amarillo. The travelers enjoyed the scenic autumn beauty in North Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee, Kentucky, Arkansas and Oklahoma during the 11-day trip. Highlights included a visit to Graceland, the home of Elvis Presley; Beale Street, where W.C. Handy became the Father of the Blues; Opryland, where the group saw Minnie Pearl and Roy Acuff at the Grand Ole Opry; and the Country Crossroads and Country Music Hall of Fame. The group also stopped at the Kentucky Horse Center and Horse Park; Ashland, the home of Henry Clay; the Biltmore House and Gardens in Asheville, N.C.; and Rock City Gardens and Ruby Falls. The tourists took a trip to the top of Lookout Mountain by incline car. The travelers enjoyed a farewell banquet in Texarkana.

Quilts discussed, viewed by members

Norma Walden presented a program on "The Lost Art of Quilting" to members of Veleda Study Club Monday night at the E.B. Black House. She noted that the Methodist Church ladies used to quilt at the Black House. She showed examples of quilted Christmas decorations and gave ideas for using old, worn-out quilts. Mrs. Walden urged all of the members to try quilting, even if only a small piece. She then introduced Pat Fisher, who told how she began quilting and displayed some of her quilts. Of particular interest was a quilt that she and her daughters are piecing which has blocks depicting various Christmas symbols.

Mrs. Fisher also shared several excerpts from a book entitled "The Quilters, Women and Domestic Art." President Joyce Ritter presided over the meeting. Club collect was recited and roll call was answered with a show and tell of favorite quilts. Members brought several old and beautiful quilts which were displayed and their history related. Hostess De Ann Sisson served refreshments to those present, including Marcella Bradley, Juanita Brown, Janice Brownlow, Donna Lindeman, Marcella McLain, Norma Martin, Patricia Weldon and Margaret Zinser.

CANCER ANSWER LINE American Cancer Society M. D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute

QUESTION: Is the American Cancer Society studying the relationship of the environment to cancer? ANSWERline: Yes. The largest cancer study in American history is now under way with more than one million persons participating to determine what factors in the environment, life-styles, habits and other considerations have to do with cancer in humans. The project, "Cancer Prevention Study II," will take about six years to complete. QUESTION: What is cancer quackery?

ANSWERline: Cancer quackery is the practice and promotion of unproven methods of cancer management. These methods are promoted and sold for prevention, diagnosis, or treatment of cancer despite the fact that they are not proven nor recommended for current use based on careful review by scientists and clinicians. Unproven methods are promoted for general public use without the necessary evidence demonstrating that they are both safe and effective. There are many varieties of drugs, diets, devices and machines, and self-induced healing promoted for cancer management that are unproven.

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN — Controversy over whether to release federally stored corn to relieve drought-ridden ranchers in West Texas continued to build as a partisan issue last week.

Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower and Atty. Gen. Jim Mattox initiated a lawsuit to force the U.S. secretary of agriculture to release surplus grain for a 27-county area in West Texas.

The lawsuit claims that the grain stored in Plainview is unfit for human consumption and is musty, weevily or moldy. The two Democratic officials launching the lawsuit say the grain, which costs about half a million dollars monthly to store, could feed livestock in the drought area through the winter.

The target of their suit, John Block, made no comment on the legal action.

Block, a Republican, has said he lacks authority to release the corn because it has not deteriorated to a low enough grade.

On this point, it seems, federal inspectors and state inspectors are headed on a collision course.

Collision Course

Block says that federal figures have the deterioration level at 1 percent. State inspectors say 53 percent of the grain has deteriorated while in storage.

The political partisan overtones of the controversy are obvious, especially as Texas Democrats jockey for leverage to prevent a Republican president from winning re-election. A foul-up on Block's part could hurt Reagan state-wide, not just in West Texas.

But the issue could blow up in the faces of Hightower and Mattox, if their deterioration claims prove wrong.

The error would provide detractors of Hightower, who is not a farmer or rancher, with more ammunition about his lack of knowledge of agriculture.

Mattox, who faces a bribery indictment in Travis County, has enough troubles without making more enemies.

Senate Inquiry

The issue will be settled

Stockpile high on dairy products

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's huge stockpile of dairy products continued at a record level as of Sept. 30, despite a modest decline in the butter inventory.

According to an annual report by the Commodity Credit Corp. the inventory of "uncommitted" butter at the end of the last fiscal year was 391.2 million pounds, compared to 402.7 million pounds on Sept. 30, 1982. The CCC is a wholly owned agency that finances price support operations for the Agriculture Department.

The "uncommitted" amounts do not include commodities that are scheduled to be used in school lunch programs or donated to needy people.

However, the agency reported the cheese inventory rose to 902.7 million pounds as of Sept. 30 from 825.1 million a year earlier, and non-fat dry milk supplies were nearly 1.35 billion pounds, compared to 1.18 billion a year earlier.

Under the government's program, the CCC must buy surplus butter, cheese and non-fat dry milk from processors to prop up the price of milk paid to dairy farmers.

Last fiscal year, those purchases totaled around $2.6 billion, compared to $2.4 billion in 1981-82.

According to the CCC's annual report, the net purchases of dairy products were equivalent to 16.7 billion pounds of milk or 12.3 percent of the total milk sold by farmers last year. In 1981-82, the purchases were equal to 13.8 billion pounds or 10.4 percent of milk sales.

Net farm income up slightly, but doubt lingers about 1984

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government financial indicators continue to show some improvement in the overall financial situation of farmers this year, although there is still considerable doubt about 1984.

The Agriculture Department says farm income prospects for 1983 "are moderately above" last year's estimated $22 billion — a figure which takes into consideration changes in the value of farm inventories.

For 1983, net farm income is expected to be $24 billion to $26 billion, compared to an earlier forecast in the range of $25 billion to $29 billion.

USDA will inspect grain

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is going to re-inspect millions of bushels of government-owned grain stored in Plainview, Texas, to see if it is in good condition.

John Ford, a deputy assistant secretary, said Monday in Texas that the inspection would take about two weeks.

Some members of Congress have contended the grain stored in Texas has deteriorated in quality and should be sold to farmers and ranchers at cut-rate prices to feed drought-ravaged livestock.

The new forecast was announced last week at USDA's annual outlook conference.

The revised forecast was also included Monday in a summary of a new analysis which will be issued later this month. All of the decline from the earlier income projection was due to the declining value of inventories held by farmers.

"Because the drought cut output sharply (this year), the value of crop inventories is now expected to fall $6-8 billion," the report said. "Stocks at the end of 1983 ... will likely be below those of a year earlier."

Looking at next year, the report said "small crops and unpromising exports" in 1983 are forces that are shaping what lies ahead for farmers.

"Strong foreign competition, good crops in importing countries," and high prices combined with a strong dollar will likely depress U.S. farm exports," it said. "As for the domestic picture, low crop production has raised feed prices and has helped boost meat production temporarily."

"So, the strengthening U.S. economy, which would normally help livestock prices the most, will begin to boost them only after herd cutbacks ... are finished later in 1984."

In Illinois, the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago said Monday that farmland values in the Midwest leveled off this

U.S. agriculture dominated by non-farm issues that affect prices

COLLEGE STATION — U.S. Agriculture is no longer an island onto itself. In fact, it is dominated by non-farm issues that have sent farm incomes into a tailspin since 1979.

"Farmers are experiencing severe financial distress largely because farm groups and their policymakers have exerted little influence over the many complex non-farm issues affecting and controlling agriculture," said Dr. Carl Anderson, economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Monetary and fiscal policies and international trade actions of governments impact heavily on the economic health and agriculture, Dr. Anderson pointed out. These outside influences embrace interest rates, trade subsidies of other countries, the internationally strong dollar which discourages exports and encourages imports, tariffs, trade restrictions, inflation, economic conditions at home and overseas, foreign credit conditions and required shipments on U.S. vessels.

"National farm income has fallen sharply in recent years due to these influences, plummeting from $32.3 billion in 1979 to $22.1 billion in 1982," Dr. Anderson said. "Not only have export markets declined sharply during these years, but this country's recession and high unemployment have caused sagging domestic markets."

While domestic markets have improved some in recent months with the economy on the upswing, overseas markets hold the key to farmers' hopes, Dr. Anderson claimed. Currently, about two out of every five crop acres are devoted to production for foreign customers. In Texas, more than half the cotton, wheat and rice crops are exported.

"If farmers expect reasonable earnings from a high level of crop production, they must overcome some major hurdles in international trade," Dr. Anderson said. "Yet little action is under way to deal with the things that are curtailing our exports—the strong dollar, foreign trade subsidies, trade barriers, unfair tariffs, shipping restrictions, unfavorable trade agreements and poor foreign credit conditions."

Dr. Anderson believes that considerable effort should be devoted to an in-depth analysis of trade policies. This should include distributing Commodity Credit Corporation-owned commodities to foreign customers, expanding credit to foreign buyers, and encouraging trade agreements with other industrialized countries. Trade with third world countries also offers opportunities, and expanded PL 480 shipments (food for peace) might expedite trade and develop markets with these countries.

What does the future hold as far as agricultural policy is concerned?

This year's PIK (payment-in-kind) program was a short-term effort to deal with the chronic surplus production problem that has been plaguing American Agriculture. This program has been expensive and difficult to administer and could have been avoided by an effective supply-management program in 1981 and 1982, Dr. Anderson believes.

"This leaves us at a crossroads of market-oriented farm programs versus effective supply-management," Dr. Anderson said, "that encompasses mandatory production controls and possible marketing quotas."

"There's no doubt the present farm program will be changed because of its cost," Dr. Anderson added. "Whatever program takes its place must respond to non-agricultural issues of international policies and monetary and fiscal policies affecting interest rates, money supply and the growing budget deficit. If not, the farm sector will continue to go downhill."

In the Kremlin

Indecision fuels rumors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unusual indecision in the Kremlin is prompting top officials of the Reagan administration to suspect Soviet leader Yuri Andropov is seriously ill.

"I don't think it necessarily makes them more dangerous," a leading U.S. Kremlinologist said Tuesday. "But there will be a period of uncertainty."

Administration analysts met at the White House on Tuesday to try to piece together what few clues have been gathered about the Soviet leader's health. Colds have been given as explanation for Andropov's absence from several scheduled meetings since mid-summer.

But when he skipped an indoors celebration of the Russian revolution Saturday night, suspicions here deepened. They grew stronger when he did not appear atop the Lenin Mausoleum on Monday in the annual revolution day parade.

Leonid Brezhnev managed to show up a year ago, even though he was near death. Experts here were unable to recall a Soviet leader ever missing the event.

Andropov had not been scheduled to give the formal speech at the Palace of Congresses on Saturday night. The honor is rotated among full members of the Politburo, and it was Grigory Romanov's turn.

"But since Andropov did not even appear for the indoors event 'one has to assume there is a real problem,'" said the U.S. official, declining to be identified. "Whether it's life-threatening or not, I do not know."

"If he cannot be propped up for two hours, he's in really bad shape," said another official, who also asked not to be named.

Andropov, 69, succeeded Brezhnev a year ago and moved quickly to try to revive the sluggish bureaucracy and curb corruption. On the international front he vigorously competed with President Reagan for Europe's favor in promoting arms control proposals.

But he appeared frail. Known to have had a heart condition for more than 15 years, he was also believed by some Western officials to be suffering from a kidney ailment.

Only two weeks ago, in an interview with Pravda, Andropov offered a new Soviet proposal to restrict intermediate-range nuclear missiles in Europe. Administration officials are pondering how to respond.

But the Soviets have not taken an initiative for several weeks in negotiations on longer-range nuclear weapons.

Officials are inclined to think that the Soviet leadership now is a collective one. While there is no evidence Andropov is not mentally alert "there are limits, if someone is indisposed, to his ability to get things done," the Soviet expert said.

However he and two State Department officials who keep tabs on Soviet policy cautioned there is little concrete information to base judgments on.

Chancellor backs dean

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The chancellor of the University of Texas system says he is satisfied that the dean of the UT Medical Center Hospital in San Antonio cooperated fully with grand jurors investigating infant deaths at the hospital.

The dean, Dr. Marvin Dunn, has been cited for contempt of the Bexar County grand jury for allegedly failing to fully comply with a subpoena demanding all paperwork related to the hospital's pediatric intensive care unit.

Chancellor E. Don Walker disputed the grand jurors' contentions, and, in a statement released Tuesday, said it has always been the system's policy to "cooperate fully with any inquiry by a law enforcement agency."

Walker said he talked at length with officials of the UT Health Sciences Center at San Antonio and with attorneys about the grand jurors investigation of the infant death rate at the facility.

"I am satisfied that this policy has been carried out" by Dunn and other personnel of the medical facility," said Walker.

"We are convinced that Dr. Dunn has acted in good faith throughout this investigation and has attempted to the best of his ability under the circumstances to put before the grand jury all information that has been available to him in this matter," said the chancellor.

A contempt hearing for Dunn had been scheduled for Tuesday, but District Attorney Sam Millsap postponed it until Nov. 16 so grand jurors could devote all their efforts this week to learning "what happened to the babies."

The grand jury has been looking into a string of infant deaths at the pediatric unit of Medical Center Hospital between 1978 and early 1982.

Millsap has accused Dunn, whose medical school helps staff the public hospital, of not being responsive to the grand jury's demand for information.

"We have done and will continue to do everything possible to assist the Bexar County district attorney and the grand jury in completing this inquiry at the earliest possible time," said Walker.

Gene Jones, 33, a vocational nurse who once worked at Medical Center, has been indicted in nearby Kerr County on one murder charge and causing serious injuries to six others by injecting them with a powerful muscle relaxant.

In a non-leap year, the middle day of the year is July 2.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.
Absorbing calcium

DEAR DR. LAMB — You have got me worried that I may not be getting enough calcium in my diet. I cannot drink milk, except a little in coffee, and calcium tablets give me indigestion.

I have been cooking hot cereal with the calcium tablet which dissolves. Would this destroy the calcium?

Are eggs a good source of calcium? I eat two for breakfast as I have no cholesterol problem.

DEAR READER — I'm glad I have gotten your attention. No, eggs are not a very good source of calcium. The most you can expect is about 30 milligrams per egg. That means your two eggs for breakfast give you only 60 mg of calcium and you should have at least 800 mg a day.

I'm not sure why you can't use milk. Perhaps you can use it in desserts or sauces or in some food that requires milk as an ingredient.

If you can't use milk, you should have a calcium supplement. How much calcium you need depends a lot on your total diet. It is a mistake to think you will get a lot of calcium from vegetables that are often mentioned as calcium sources. Usually this calcium cannot be absorbed from your digestive system. Phytic acid and oxalates both decrease your absorption of calcium. Phosphorous, as found in lean meats, enhances your calcium absorption.

You can grind up or mix your calcium tablet in your food. It may not be as readily absorbed. For example, the cereal you eat will decrease calcium absorption. But you just use more. And you can put it in apple sauce or other fruits. If you take your calcium at the same time you drink fruit juice, such as orange juice, that will enhance absorption.

You might take Os-Cal 500 tablets. Two tablets a day will go a long way in meeting your requirements. Or ask your doctor which preparation he thinks you should take.

I am sending you The Health Letter 17-6, Nutritional Aspects of Minerals, to give you more information on what affects your calcium absorption. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Would you please explain lupus disease to me? Someone told me it's an allergy to the sun. Is that true?

DEAR READER — It is a very complex disease. The systemic lupus erythematosus is most often seen in young females with arthritis, skin rash and fever. The skin rash may have a butterfly shaped distribution over the nose and cheeks.

The cause is not known but we do know that the body starts forming several different antibodies that react against the person's own body. These antibodies can attack the skin, joints, heart, liver, kidney or other tissues.

It is not an allergy to the sun but individuals who have the disease should avoid the sun as it seems to make the condition worse or triggers attacks. There are remissions during which a person may have no real effects from the disease for indefinite periods of time.

There is a discoid lupus that is a localized skin lesion without all the problems that occur with the systemic form.

'Twas the Snake that Died!

We soon learned that we were on the island of Malta. The people of the island were very kind to us, building a bonfire on the beach to welcome and warm us in the rain and cold.

As Paul gathered an armful of sticks to lay on the fire, a poisonous snake, driven out by the heat, fastened itself onto his hand! The people of the island saw it hanging there and said to each other, "A murderer, no doubt! Though he escaped the sea, justice will not permit him to live!"

But Paul shook off the snake into the fire and was unharmed. The people waited for him to begin swelling or suddenly fall dead; but when they had waited for a long time and no harm came to him, they changed their minds and decided he was a god.

Near the shore where we landed was an estate belonging to Publius, the governor of the island. He welcomed us courteously and fed us for three days. As it happened, Publius' father was ill with fever and dysentery. Paul went in and prayed for him, and laying his hands on him, healed him! Then all the other sick people in the island came and were cured. As a result we were showered with gifts, and when the time came to sail, people put on board all sorts of things we would need for the trip. Acts 28:1-10

Polly Fisher
Helping child cope

DEAR READERS — A special letter today — one which should be welcome advice for anyone who has a child immobilized from an accident or illness. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — Recently, my 7-year-old granddaughter was in the hospital with a broken leg in traction. We cut her panties and shorts down the sides at the seam and sewed on bias tape with the ends long enough to tie. This permitted her to wear clothes and "undies." It made her happier and I'm sure it helped in her recovery. These also worked well when her big waist-high cast was put on. After the cast was removed, we took off the bias tape ties and restitched them closed at the regular seams.

We also used several ways to help her pass the long days when she had to lie flat and still. Some of these were:

Small toys, jewelry, crayons, pencils, barrettes and hair ornaments, cards, puzzles, small dolls, lotion, dusting powder and other small items were all put into a large grab bag. She was allowed to pull something out every day. She really looked forward to this.

She planted seeds in a planter and waited and watched for them to grow.

We punched holes in her get-well cards, strung them on yarn and hung them in her room.

She got a new homemade dress for her fashion doll every day. She also got muu-muu type dresses in matching fabric for herself and her doll.

When she was home, we used the top of our chest-type freezer as a bath and shampoo table. It was the only surface large enough to accommodate her big cast.

She made hats for her fashion doll. We cut out the crowns from colored egg cartons and glued on ribbons, lace and tiny flowers. These fit the doll perfectly.

We also made sure she had a newspaper regularly. Her name was in it several times and her picture once. To our surprise, she also read a lot of the rest of the paper.

Hope no one has to use these, but they were very helpful when we needed them. — CAROL
