Crowd learns about tougher HJH policies

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

A crowd of about 300 persons learned Thursday night at an open house at Hereford Junior High about a new, tougher discipline policy that has already cut down on mischief at the school.

HJH principal Raymond Schroeder reviewed the new discipline plan and discussed some of the problems the school has faced this year. HJH teachers Brenda Reeh and Connie Gilbreath gave an overview of the new self-responsibility course taught to all HJH seventh graders, and Marc Williamson, Hereford's assistant superintendent for instruction, reviewed a new computer system to be used in the school's reading program.

A new discipline policy went into effect at the school on Nov. 10 after an unruly first two months at the school. Any discipline administered to a student for any offense is punishable by two swats or two days in after-school detention.

After a student has been referred to the office five times for minor offenses (including chewing gum in class, breaking in a cafeteria line, or other unruly behavior), the child is sent to an in-school suspension (ISS) classroom for five days or sent home for unsupervised home study (UHS) for five days.

The ISS classroom is limited to 12 students, Schroeder said. If the classroom is full, the overflow students are sent home for UHS.

After a student is first released from ISS or UHS, the student will, on the next referral, spend 10 days in ISS or UHS.

If a student has been in ISS or UHS twice, the student is warned on the next referral that the punishment will be 30 days on the very next offense, and the student could be classified as incorrigible and sent to the Stanton Learning Center.

Schroeder said any student placed on in-school suspension or unsupervised home study is given all the assignments the child would normally receive, and will have those assignments graded.

"Once a student has been in ISS for five days, we expect them to change their behavior," Schroeder said.

The principal said that unexcused tardies are not a major problem at HJH, with six minutes for students to go from one classroom to the next. Schroeder said there is no punishment for the first three unexcused tardies of the year, but on the fourth the student receives two swats or two days of after-school detention. On the fifth, the student receives one of the five referrals that would go toward ISS or UHS.

"These changes have impacted a lot of students, and I believe many have changed their behavior and made an improvement," Schroeder said. "You always have a few students who will see if you are going to do what you say you will do, and they have seen we will follow through on this policy."

"These rules have no effect on 90 percent of our students because they are at school to learn. We could make this policy even tougher and it wouldn't effect them. But every school has a few kids that you need to make rules for."

Schroeder said teachers are in the hallways between periods to monitor students, and are on watch in the HJH cafeteria and on playground areas during the 45-minute lunch period to supervise students.

"We are trying to monitor our students closely, and very few times will they be more than 30-50 feet away from a teacher or administrator," Schroeder said. "Help is always immediately available if a student has a problem, and we can help solve that problem."

Schroeder said the problems have ranged from minor offenses to some problems with drugs, students dropping firecrackers in a hallway, and a short-lived episode with some students who were members of a Hereford "gang."

"We had some students set off a firecracker in a hallway," Schroeder said. "They were walking together, one of them lit a firecracker, then they all moved 30 feet down the hallway before the firecracker went off."

"If there are 75 people in a group you don't immediately know which one might have been responsible, but we called in several boys and one of them had firecrackers in his jacket pocket. He was immediately sent to ISS."

"The next day, we had another student who had some firecrackers, and that student also went to ISS."

Schroeder said the "gang" problem erupted over the summer, but a police crackdown led to the arrests of several juveniles who were placed on strict probation.

After school started, two boys who had been members of the "Bishops" gang wore shirts to school that said "Bishops" on the back.

"We called the students in and visited with each of them about what would happen to them if there were any gang-related activities. The four boys we have who were members of that group have been very cooperative," Schroeder said.

The latest and potentially largest problem of the year was a bomb threat last week that authorities believe was called in by a student who was absent that day.

"The caller said the bomb would go off in 15 minutes," Schroeder said.

"The person who answered the phone recognized the voice, and we were pretty sure it was a prank."

"But even if you're 99 percent sure there's no bomb, the students' safety comes first. We held a fire drill and had the building evacuated in less than a minute. We searched the boy's locker and discovered nothing wrong there. We scouted around the building for about 25 minutes, and then let the students re-enter the building."

Schroeder said Southwestern Bell has placed a tracer on the school's telephone line to track down future pranksters.

"We're taking all the steps we can to alleviate problems," Schroeder said. "We'll even let you help if you want. Please come see for yourself the steps we are taking to alleviate potential problems."

"We had over 100 students on the honor roll for the first six weeks, and we have a lot of good students here. I believe we have a lot of good things happening."

Bush finishes economic team

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect George Bush, after promising that his new chief of staff will be a "take-charge kind of guy," is concentrating on completing his economic team before filling defense and national security posts.

Bush was making a quick trip-by helicopter this morning to Charlottesville, Va., for private meetings with some of the nation's governors, then heading back for a luncheon on Capitol Hill with House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas.

There was unusual turmoil in the Bush ranks Thursday when the president-elect announced his selection of New Hampshire Gov. John Sununu as chief of staff and endorsed Lee Atwater, his wily campaign manager, as the next chairman of the Republican Party.

Craig T. Fuller, Bush's vice presidential chief of staff for four years and co-director of the transition, called The Associated Press beforehand to reveal that having been passed over for chief of staff, he would quit working for Bush as of Jan. 20.

Fuller said he informed Bush before the election that the only post he would accept in the new administration was chief of staff. He said he harbored no ill will toward Sununu.

Sources close to Bush said Fuller had been offered several plums, including transportation secretary and head of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, but had turned them down.

In choosing the conservative, blunt-spoken Sununu and Atwater, a bare-knuckled campaign strategist, Bush may have been indicating to Democrats, who control Congress that he is prepared to play political hardball.

But he sounded a different note at his news conference, saying he expects Sununu "to build a constructive relationship" with Congress. He also called Sununu "a take-charge kind of guy" with the experience to work with his former colleagues in the statehouses.

Bush, who previously announced his choice of James A. Baker III as secretary of state and Nicholas F. Brady as a holdover treasury secretary, said he expects to announce a director for the Office of Management and Budget soon.

Transition sources have said that post is likely to go to longtime Baker aide Richard Darman, while Stanford economist Michael J. Boskin is likely to be chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers.

Bush has had to contend with a succession of economic bad news since his election. The stock market has fallen and the dollar has declined in value, with many analysts questioning Bush's ability or resolve to cut the nation's massive trade and budget deficits.

Bush aides hope fast action in naming his economic team will bolster confidence in the president-elect.

Bush said the OMB job "is important and I want to get our economic team in place. ... Most people would agree we've moved very fast so far. But I will go forward with the economic team."

Bush, who had a breakfast meeting Thursday with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and lunch with President Reagan, also held a private chat with former Texas Sen. John Tower, who is rumored to be a leading candidate for secretary of defense.

"We're going to start working on the national security portfolio pretty soon," Bush said, but he added that the economic team will come first.

Bush defended Sununu, an Arab-American, for his refusal to sign a proclamation two years ago condemning a 1975 United Nations resolution that equated Zionism with racism. Sununu was the only governor to balk at signing such a proclamation.

Bush said Sununu was "well within his prerogative" to not want to meddle in foreign policy as a governor. "Everybody knows my position on it, that I think that (U.N.) resolution is outrageous" and should be repealed, Bush said. He also pointed to Sununu's role in drafting the 1988 Republican platform, which called for a rescission of that U.N. Resolution 3379.

Sununu told reporters, "I have no problem saying that that (resolution) ought to be repudiated."

B-1B crashes in North Dakota

RAPID CITY, S.D. (AP) — A B-1B bomber crashed near Ellsworth Air Force Base in western South Dakota, the second accident involving the long-range strategic jet in two weeks, authorities said early Friday.

The B-1B crashed on the runway as it came in for a landing at about 1:30 a.m. EST, officials said. There was no immediate word on the extent of injuries to the crew.

"From monitoring the ambulance traffic, they say they were going to Ellsworth base hospital with four or five patients. We don't know if they're dead or alive," said Lt. Fred Brown of the Rapid City Police Department.

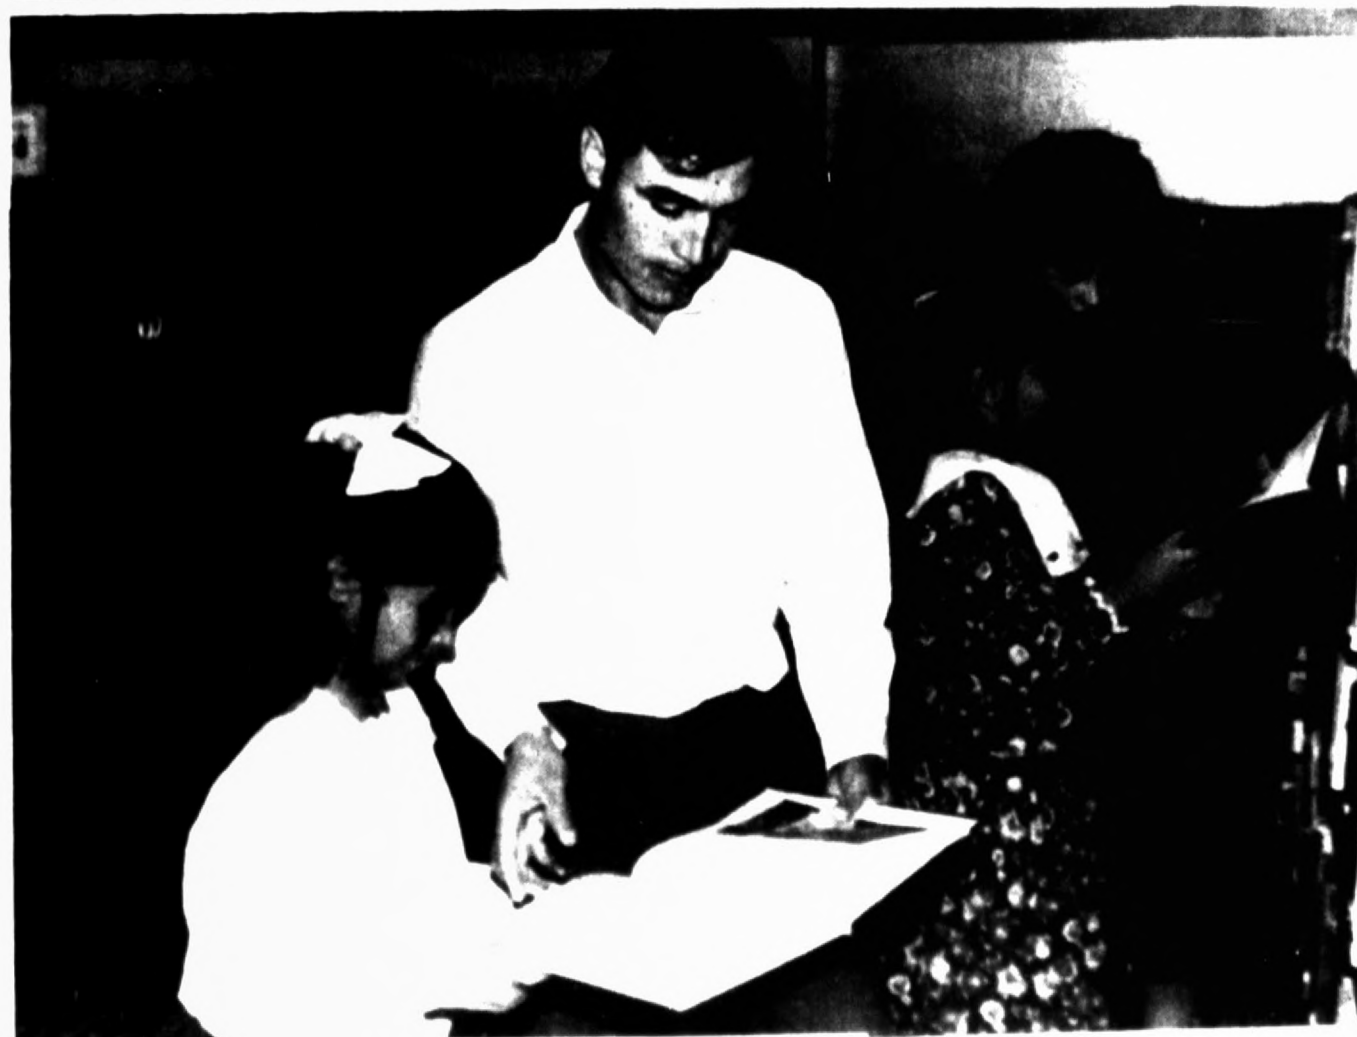

However, Navy Lt. Cmdr. James Kudla, a spokesman for the Defense Department in Washington, said, "Right now at least it looks like there were no fatalities."

The crash comes two days after officials reported that the Air Force had inspected and cleared more than two-thirds of the B-1B bombers grounded following a crash last week that destroyed one of the long-range planes in Texas.

Brown said the B-1B crashed on the runway as it came in for a landing at Ellsworth, which lies on the eastern edge of Rapid City. He said it did not hit any buildings and no one on the ground was known to be injured.

"Witnesses saw four people eject from the airplane before it crashed," Brown said. "It is possible that it came in too low and hit a power pole."

"Ellsworth has told us it was carrying a six-man crew," he said, adding that the jet normally carried four.

Closed banks reopen doors

By The Associated Press

Two Texas banks were reopening under new names today, one as a branch of another institution, after they had been closed and ordered placed under Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. supervision, the FDIC said.

Texas Banking Commissioner Kenneth W. Littlefield Thursday ordered the closing of East Texas State Bank of Buna and The Bank of Kerrville.

The FDIC said the East Texas Bank of Buna will operate as a branch of The First Bank of Bonham, and Bank of Kerrville assumed control of The Bank of Kerrville. Bank of Kerrville is a newly chartered subsidiary of Premier Bancshares Inc. of Victoria, Texas.

Regulators said depositors of both failed banks automatically will become depositors of the assuming bank, subject to court approval.

The announcements bring to 106 the number of bank failures in Texas. Nationally, there have been 184 failures. There have been five assistance transactions in Texas and 19 nationally.

The FDIC said the East Texas State Bank, with total assets of $21.8 million, was closed primarily because of problem loans.

"There had been some problem loans with former officers of the bank," Kathryn Woolford, FDIC closing supervisor, said from the failed bank's sole office in Buna, located about 30 miles northeast of Beaumont. "There were also some real estate problems."

The First National Bank of Bonham will assume about $20.7 million in 5,800 deposit accounts and will purchase about $13.9 million of East Texas Bank of Buna's assets, including $1.4 million of the bank's small loans, at a discount of $148,500, meaning the assuming bank would pay about $13.75 million.

The FDIC said to facilitate the transaction, it will advance $7 million to the assuming bank and will retain assets of the failed bank with a book value of $7.9 million.

Bank of Kerrville listed total assets of $39.9 million. The institution will assume about $32.5 million in 3,300 deposit accounts and will purchase $35.6 million of The Bank of Kerrville's assets at a discount or $7.8 million, meaning the bank will pay $27.8 million, the FDIC said.

The FDIC said it will retain $4.4 million of the failed bank's assets. The board of directors approved the deposit assumption of both banks under its authority to do so whenever it determines that such a transaction will reduce the potential loss to the FDIC.

The FDIC will recover a portion of its outlay through the liquidation of assets not transferred to the assuming bank. The FDIC said its claim will have priority over the claims of non-depositor creditors and shareholders of the closed bank.

Convention muses amusement

DALLAS (AP) — Charles Jenkins Jr. has kids figured out — he hopes.

Jenkins and about 10,000 other people in the amusement park industry, who figured some time ago there's more to amusing young people than letting them play in the rain, are gathered for a convention here this week to see what makes them excited enough to spend money.

"That thing will drive them crazy," he said, pointing toward a particularly innovative park ride. "They'll get on that thing over and over, again and again."

The occasion is the 70th Annual Convention of the International Association of Amusement Parks and Attractions, being held through Friday at the Dallas Convention Center.

What Jenkins is pointing at, and what a lot of other grown-ups are riding with childlike enthusiasm, is a high-tech version of the old multi-

Park rides utilizing technology

armed, rotating "spider ride" called "Telecombat."

What's unique about this model is that the passenger, instead of being at the will of the ride operator, can control which way his vehicle points, whether it goes up or down, and can "shoot" at other crafts on the ride using imaginary radar and a gun.

Jenkins is considering spending $400,000 for the ride to use at one of his amusement parks in Maryland.

"They will love this because it's a video game and a ride in one," said Jenkins. "You could pay a lot more than that for a used roller coaster and it wouldn't be as popular."

The IAAPA bills itself as the "largest international trade association for the world's permanently located amusement facilities."

Which, says organization spokesman Peter Irish, would rule out county fairs, school carnivals and fireworks stands.

The organization represents more than 1,700 park, manufacturer and individual members in more than 40 countries.

Members attending the convention say it is like a trading post, where ideas are exchanged, offers are made, accepted and turned down and people who compete with each other all year have a chance to, as Jenkins says, "get off each other's backs."

Take Jeff Smart, for example. Smart represents a company that sells the popular indoor basketball games, the ones where the object of the game is to sink as many baskets as possible in 30 seconds.

"The buyers are here," Smart said. "That's why we're here. We'll end up making some pretty good sales from the people we speak to here."

The amusement industry has not yet removed itself from old midway games such as throwing darts at balloons, but today's kids demand innovation, such as:

- Telecombat
- Blastar II, a space-age laser combat simulator
- MotionMaster, a movie theater with seats that move hydraulically in conjunction with the action film being shown.

Jenkins said he spent almost $6 million at a convention one year in the search for the ultimate crowd pleaser.

"Anyone who has anything to do with the amusement industry is here," said Jenkins. "When the park season ends, our work really begins preparing for the next year and we usually get half our work done at this convention."

FDA requires strong aspirin warning to pregnant women

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration is telling aspirin makers to warn women not to take the popular pain killer during the last three months of pregnancy lest they risk prolonged labor and unnecessary bleeding.

Aspirin products already must carry the standard warning: "As with any drug, if you are pregnant or nursing a baby seek the advice of a health professional before using this product."

This additional wording would be required under the FDA proposal issued Thursday: "IMPORTANT: Do not take this product during the last three months of pregnancy unless directed by a doctor. Aspirin taken near the time of delivery may cause bleeding problems in both mother and child."

A similar warning already is required for ibuprofen, the pain reliever used in such products as Advil and Nuprin.

Although it could be a year before the FDA will be able to impose the new labeling requirements formally, officials said aspirin manufacturers probably will move sooner to comply since there is little chance the agency will change its mind.

Indeed, the proposal stems from the virtually undisputed conclusion of an outside advisory panel that aspirin can contribute to bleeding problems for both mother and baby and prolong labor and should be taken only with utmost caution.

However, there is somewhat less consensus on some companion proposals contained in what the FDA calls an Internal Analgesic Monograph published in the Federal Register that deals with a number of issues involving non-prescription pain relievers.

For example, it notes that while the outside advisory panel found insufficient evidence that caffeine increases the effective action of other ingredients in popular pain relievers, the drug makers have submitted additional data.

As a result, the FDA said products such as Excedrin and Anacin can continue to include caffeine while the issue is reviewed more fully.

An accompanying proposal on non-prescription menstrual products would permit use of caffeine in combination with various pain relievers to relieve menstrual cramps and discomfort.

The FDA has concluded caffeine is useful in these applications as a diuretic, a substance that inhibits the retention of fluids.

The document also incorporates suggested guidelines for physicians, in advising their patients on aspirin use, to help prevent recurrences of transient ischemic attacks — sometimes called "little strokes" — or heart attack or angina.

And it says the FDA eventually will settle on label wording on the effect aspirin may have on reducing the risk of initial heart attacks.

The agency said it is awaiting more data from a study published last winter that suggested a reduction of heart attack risk among healthy adult males who took an aspirin every other day.

Drug bill contains new programs; no money to fund

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is signing an anti-drug bill that sharply increases penalties for recreational users and includes a federal death penalty for anyone convicted of drug-related killings.

But the bill only provides about $500 million for spending in the nation's battle against drugs, which falls far short of the estimated $1.4 billion cost of the programs envisioned by the legislation.

At this afternoon's ceremony in the East Room, Reagan was to be joined by his wife, Nancy, who has made the battle against drug abuse her cause.

The bipartisan measure was approved on a 346-11 vote in the House and passed by voice vote in the Senate in the waning days of the congressional session last month. Members of both parties used the bill to tout their anti-drug positions in the November elections.

As the bill was sent to Reagan, Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said its message is simple: "Don't do drugs. The country will not tolerate it."

It seeks to battle the use of illegal drugs through stricter law enforcement, tougher penalties, and increased treatment, rehabilitation and education. It also outlines a fund to help drug-producing countries in their battle against the illicit substances.

The bill contains stiff penalties for drug traffickers and users. Serious drug offenses would carry stiffer minimum prison terms.

The measure also makes it possible for those possessing small quantities of drugs intended for personal use to be hit with up to $10,000 in civil fines, although they would have the right to court review.

Beginning next September, those convicted of drug offenses could face loss of student loans and other federal benefits, for even a possession conviction.

Stagner presents program

Members of La Aflatus Estudio Club met Tuesday afternoon with Mary Williamson serving as hostess.

Della Stagner presented an eclectic program entitled "Potpourri of Information" which she had chosen from a recent radio broadcast.

During the business session with Williamson presiding, members made plans to send a love offering to the volunteers at the Wichita Falls State Mental Institution to help sponsor a Christmas party for the patients. The club sponsors this project annually instead of having a gift exchange.

Members will meet for a Christmas dinner at 12:30 p.m. Dec. 6 at Something Special.

Others attending the meeting included Pet Ott, Eva Gilleland, Bea Hutson, Lola Jewell, Virginia Beasley, Alberta Higgins and Etoile Manning.

Cake club holds meeting

The regular monthly meeting of the Sweet 'N' Fancy Cake Decorating Club met at the Community Center Nov. 10.

Carol Kelley, president, presided over the business meeting. She announced that a representative from J.C. Penney's will visit Hereford in December to hold a program on new techniques.

Members looked over the club's scrapbooks and it was noted that Betty Henson was one of the charter members of the club when it began Sept. 6, 1968. Henson is currently serving as treasurer.

Harder gives program on 'Healthy Holiday Fare'

Beverly Harder, Deaf Smith County extension agent, presented a program recently on "Healthy Holiday Fare" for members of the Veleda Study Club.

Harder read a letter to Santa asking for a trim figure, a lack of stress and headaches and a good report from her doctor. The letter continued to ask for all the traditional holiday foods of turkey and dressing, mashed potatoes, cheese and nut filled salads, plus all the favorite pecan and pumpkin pies, etc.

Tips were given to help in adjusting diets and cooking habits to achieve a healthy diet. The four major concerns of good nutrition are high sodium, low fiber, high sugar and high fat in the diets. It was stressed that reading labels is most important in selecting which foods to use for a family to avoid these problems.

Members were invited to visit the extension service office to have an individualized computer read-out for daily calorie and nutrition recommendations.

Following the program, President Norman Walden conducted the business session. The club collect was read and roll call was answered with a healthy food tip.

Ruth Fish, the hostess, served refreshments to Marcella Bradley, Jaunita Brown, Francis Crume, Della Hutchins, Betty Gilbert, Joyce Ritter, Walden and Margaret Zinser.

The next meeting will be in the home of Marcella Bradley. The program is entitled "Creative Holiday Crafts."

Through the first nine games of the 1988 football season, Sweetwater runningback Kenneth Norman played like Superman.

After leaving his phone-booth dressing room, Norman had over 1,500 rushing yards in nine games.

Norman picked up another 174 yards in last week's game with Andrews, but he changed mythological characters.

If you're a little rusty on your Greek mythology, you'll need to be reminded that baby Achilles was dipped by his mother into a fluid that would make him, well, Superman.

A few years later, when he was out slaying a few Trojans, they found out that the Greeks had held little Achilles by the heel when he was dipped. That's where the Trojans aimed all their arrows, and Achilles suddenly looked like Superman after enjoying a Kryptonite cocktail.

Norman left last week's game on crutches, but Hereford's preparing for the area playoff game Saturday night as if Norman were going to be 100 percent.

If he is, that red blur you'll see in their offensive and defensive backfields will be wearing No. 20.

If he's not, Hereford coach Don Cumpton says his team needs to be ready for a great Sweetwater football team anyway.

"If he's not there, I think they'll be like our kids," Cumpton said. "When we played Palo Duro, we got some people banged up on defense in the first half and shut them out in the second half. We rose up and played harder because we had to. I think they'll do the same thing."

If you're looking for someone to pattern Norman after, imagine Palo Duro's Michael Westmoreland, who picked up only 42 yards on eight carries against Hereford in the Herd's 20-9 win.

"But he's more elusive," Cumpton said.

With Norman, or anyone else, Sweetwater runs an offense fairly similar to Hereford's. The tailback will get the ball on a pitch sweep from quarterback Robbie Pierce, or Pierce will run the option and either keep the ball or pitch to Norman.

"But he's looking for the pitch," Cumpton said. "He wants to get the ball into Norman's hands everytime, if he can."

Sweetwater tries to keep opponents honest by giving the ball to fullback Ernie Munoz, who's averaging 77 yards a game, or by throwing the ball.

"But they don't throw the ball unless you make them throw."

Sweetwater vs. Hereford

WHEN, WHERE: 8:30 p.m. Saturday, Jones Stadium, Lubbock.

HISTORY: The teams have never played each other before.

AREA PLAYOFF: It's not the bi-district round. District 1-4A is one of the districts that received a bi-district round "bye." Some districts have already played a bi-district playoff game.

HAVEN'T WE SEEN THESE GUYS: If you think Sweetwater looks a lot like Levelland, that's because they do a lot of similar things. Levelland coach Buster Leaf coached with Tom Ritchie for 10 years at Idalou.

WHY SO LATE? Houston and Texas Tech play at 2 p.m., and Houston's average game this year has lasted three hours and 50 minutes. The teams are just hoping that Tech-Houston won't throw so much that the game won't be over by 8:30 p.m.

CUMPTON'S KEYS TO THE GAME: Hereford has to control Kenneth Norman. He'll get a few yards, but if Hereford's defense performs well, he won't break any long runs.

Hereford must move the ball on offense. He told the Hereford Lions Club on Wednesday: "If we can't run, we'll throw. If we can't throw, we'll punt. Puntin's not a good way to move the ball."

Cumpton's thoughts on:

ASTROTURF: I don't think it will make any difference. We've played on it before. It's fun to play on, and if we have any bad weather, it makes the weather less of a factor.

PLAYING ON SATURDAY: You get a full week to work on things. You don't do as much hitting as you do working on little things and preparation. You're not in such a big hurry when you have that much more time to prepare. I like it.

BEING IN THE PLAYOFFS: This team earned the right to do what it's fixing to do. When you get a good game like this with two good teams, anything can happen. We go in knowing that we have to play a good football game to do it, but I certainly think we have a great opportunity to win.

CHERISHED MEMORIES: Probably the Cleburne game for the most excitement. We were ready to start sacking everything up with 20 seconds to play. (Hereford won, 9-7, on a last-second field goal after a Cleburne turnover.) But I think one of the best was in 1981. We went down to El Paso and played Bel Air in the Sun Bowl. They were the No. 1 scoring team in the state in any classification. They had been scoring 44 points a game. We shut them out. (Hereford won, 22-0.)

Cumpton said. "It would be ideal for us if they had to throw the ball 25 times, because that would mean that we've stopped them on the ground."

While Norman has been doing most of the work on offense, the defense has given up fewer yards to 10 teams than Norman has gained all year. Opponents have made only 1,460 yards in 10 games.

"They're a bunch of good, quick, strong kids," Cumpton said. "Their noseguard (C.C. Carr, 165 lbs.) is small and quick, but they have two huge defensive tackles (280-lb. Jesse Palacios and 235-lb. Lucas Bugarin)."

"I think their defensive end, Doug Parkhurst, is their best defensive player. Norman, by far, is their best player in the defensive backfield."

Cumpton is cautiously optimistic when he talks about Hereford's chances.

I don't think there's anything special about what we have to do,"

Cumpton said. "We just need to be able to move the ball on the ground and throw when we want to, not when we have to."

"I think all of our players know they very seldom get the opportunity to play the No. 1 team in the state. Our players are really excited about the challenge ahead and will respond in a positive way. I think we'll play a great game. I'm excited and looking forward to it."

Peete's status uncertain

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The status of Rodney Peete figures to be uncertain until shortly before second-ranked Southern Cal faces sixth-ranked UCLA Saturday at the Rose Bowl in the 58th meeting of the crosstown rivals.

Peete, the Trojans' standout quarterback, was diagnosed Wednesday as having the measles. He had been admitted to a hospital Tuesday night so he could be fed intravenously, then was released Thursday in time to watch practice.

If Peete can't play, or gives it a shot and doesn't have the necessary stamina to continue, seldom-used Pat O'Hara would get the call at quarterback for the Trojans in one of the most important college football games of the season.

The nationally televised game begins at 12:30 p.m. PST. All tickets were sold by late September, meaning a crowd in excess of 100,000 will be on hand.

Elsewhere Saturday, top-ranked Notre Dame, No. 3 Miami and No. 4 West Virginia each face tough games as they try to keep alive their national championship hopes.

Peete was released from a Long Beach hospital at noon Thursday.

Lawmaker wants review of UIL role

AUSTIN (AP) — A state lawmaker says the University Interscholastic League needs to use a more open process in its regulation of contests involving public school students.

"Basically, this stems from scores of individuals who have concerns over how they've been treated, how rules are promulgated... how, at times, small children feel like they are being told to do things or not to do things in their extracurricular activities," said state Rep. Lena Guerrero, D-Austin, Thursday.

Bailey Marshall, UIL director, said he thinks schools in general are satisfied with the way the league works and would like to see it stay as it is. He said open hearings are held on proposed league rules, which also are reviewed by the State Board of Education.

Ms. Guerrero and Jane Hickie, another member of the Texas Sunset Advisory Commission, requested a sunset staff report on the UIL, which regulates interscholastic athletic, academic and musical contests.

The league would not normally be reviewed by the commission because it is under the University of Texas, which is not subject to such an examination, Ms. Guerrero said.

Ms. Guerrero said she and Ms. Hickie have heard many concerns about the UIL process. She said the league is a "very close-knit group" and people have found it difficult to have their concerns addressed.

No matter who regulates contests, Marshall said, complaints will exist because "that's part of competition."

The UIL staff is headquartered at the University of Texas at Austin. Any school district that receives minimum foundation school program funding is eligible for league membership.

UIL members are governed through a decentralized structure including several committees, the UIL director and staff. The league's rule-making body is the Legislative Council, composed of superintendents or principals of member schools.

Sherrill blamed in hush-money charge

DALLAS (AP) — Jackie Sherrill, the coach who turned the Texas A&M football team into a conference champion, was paying "hush money" to a former player as his athletic program was being investigated for violations by the NCAA, according to a published report today.

Former Aggie fullback George Smith told The Dallas Morning News in a copyright story that Sherrill paid him $4,400 in a series of cash and money order transactions dating back to November 1986.

Smith termed the payments "hush money."

Sherrill refused to comment on Smith's allegations, but John Keith, sports information director for the team, told The Associated Press early this morning that school officials would make an announcement today regarding The News story.

"The announcement will come from the president's office," said Keith, "not the athletic department. They'll need to read the story first."

Sherrill is also the athletic director for the school.

A&M president William H. Mobley and vice president Robert Smith, interviewed by The News on Thursday, said the university had notified the National Collegiate Athletic Association it had received allegations of additional rules violations.

Mobley said he has since ordered an internal investigation to be headed by Robert Smith, the official in charge of finance and administration.

"Based on our further discussions this morning and information you have available," Mobley said, "without question we'll proceed expeditiously and bring to bear investigative resources we need to seek to establish the validity of the issues on whether or not there are violations of NCAA rules or whether or not there are other institutional issues involved."

George Smith, a Georgia high school All-America when Sherrill recruited him in 1982, said he received $500 in cash on Sept. 13 — four days after Aggie officials announced at a news conference that the NCAA had levied major sanctions against the university's football program.

The newspaper said that payment, one of three Smith claims to have received since June 6, was sent to Smith's Atlanta home in an overnight express envelope. The envelope bore the return address of Bob Matey, a member of Sherrill's support staff.

Two other overnight express envelopes bore the return names and addresses of A&M receivers coach George Pugh and a Matey associate who is not employed by the athletic department, the newspaper reported.

The News said it obtained all three envelopes from Smith. One, which was dated Sept. 26 and contained five $100 bills, was opened in Atlanta in the presence of a newspaper reporter.

Later, in more than eight hours of tape-recorded interviews, Smith told

The News that Sherrill and his staff provided about $10,000 in money, extra benefits and airline tickets. Smith joined the Aggies in the summer of 1982 and quit the team in early 1984 to transfer to Clemson University.

George Smith said Thursday he had been contacted Wednesday night at his Atlanta home by coach Pugh's wife. As a result of that conversation, Smith said, he would refuse to stand by the statements he made in the tape-recorded newspaper interviews. Before those interviews, Smith signed a notarized, sworn statement that he would "be truthful in the information he provides."

A&M vice president Robert Smith, no relation to the former fullback, said George Smith had contacted him early Thursday, only a short time before A&M officials were to meet a reporter and editor from The Dallas Morning News. George Smith refused to say what his conversation with university officials entailed.

"If I say it didn't happen, nothing happened," Smith said Thursday. He said that Pugh, a longtime Sherrill assistant who recruited him, was being unfairly singled out by Sherrill as the allegations unfolded.

In interviews with The News, the ex-player recalled that Sherrill had pledged to "take care of me" and provide a good-paying job working around the head coach's College Station home.

Smith said Sherrill ultimately paid him hundreds of dollars for minor yard work — an apparent violation of NCAA extra benefits regulations.

In other alleged violations of NCAA rules, Smith claimed:

—Sherrill and Pugh routinely paid for round-trip plane flights between College Station and Atlanta.

—The head coach-athletic director also arranged for Smith to receive credit for a physical education course he did not attend during the summer prior to Smith's official enrollment at A&M.

—Sherrill was aware that Smith and other players were scalping their complimentary tickets to alumni at inflated prices. Smith claims a Sherrill assistant set up those transactions.

"I said, 'Well, coach, how will I get home in the winter months or for the Christmas breaks and things of that nature?'" Smith recalled. "He said: 'We can get you a summer job. That's not against the rules. Also I have work that I need done around my house. We can work that out. And I can pay you what I want to pay you ...'"

"Once he told me he was going to take care of me and I wouldn't have to worry about nothing, I said, 'Okay. I'm coming to school here.'"

The NCAA assessed Texas A&M a two-year probation in September after investigators substantiated numerous violations of regulations that govern extra benefits to athletes. The Aggies also were barred from post-season play this season.

Saints hope to harass John Elway

By The Associated Press

The New Orleans Saints hope they can harass John Elway this week the same way they bothered Jim Everett last week, and hope the result is the same.

New Orleans, trying to stay atop the NFC West, faces Elway and the Denver Broncos on Sunday. The Saints hurried Everett last Sunday and beat Los Angeles 14-10, giving them an 8-3 record and a one-game lead over the Rams.

"We've just got to go out and play against him and try like heck to get some pressure on him," Saints defensive coordinator Steve Sidwell said. "The most dangerous situation for us would be to let Elway stand back there in the pocket for a long time and give those speedy wide receivers a chance to get open."

The visiting Broncos need a victory as much as New Orleans. Denver is tied the Los Angeles Raiders and Seattle for the AFC West lead, all at 6-5.

The Raiders host Atlanta while Seattle travels to Kansas City. AFC East-leading Buffalo hosts the New York Jets and AFC Central-leading Cincinnati plays at Dallas. The Cowboys have lost seven straight games.

Chicago, on top of the NFC Central, is at Tampa Bay. The New York Giants and Phoenix are tied for the NFC East lead. The Giants host Philadelphia while Phoenix is at Houston.

In other games, Detroit plays Green Bay at Milwaukee, Pittsburgh is at Cleveland, Indianapolis at Minnesota and San Diego at the Los Angeles Rams. New England is at Miami on Sunday night and Washington is at San Francisco on Monday night.

Saints safety Brett Maxie said Elway often runs out of the pocket by design, whereas Everett scrambled only when he needed to.

"The difference with Elway is he tries to reverse into the pressure and elude you," Maxie said. "We've got to keep him staying upfield."

Broncos Coach Dan Reeves said his team is recovering from a series of injuries, although All-Pro linebacker Karl Mecklenberg is again out with a broken thumb.

For the Saints, fullback Craig Heyward and defensive linemen Jumpy Geathers and Tony Elliott are on a day-to-day basis, Heyward and Geathers with sprained knees and Elliott with a groin pull.

Phoenix will rely on backup quarterback Cliff Stoudt when it plays in Houston. The Cardinals lost Neil Lomax for two to four weeks with a knee injury last Sunday in their victory over the Giants.

The Oilers rank sixth in the NFL in total defense.

"They really get pressure on the quarterback and allow their corners and safeties to cover receivers," Stoudt said. "A quarterback that gets four or five seconds can make it tough on any defensive back, but the Oilers rarely give a quarterback that long."

The Cardinals are the NFL's top-rated offense.

"I just want to step in and try to keep things going the way they are and do the best I can with the limited amount of work I've received the past three years," Stoudt said.

ASK DR. LAMB

Will Whole Family Inherit Diabetes? BY LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am one of six children. My mother died four years ago from complications of diabetes. My dad has diabetes but his doesn't seem to be so severe. One brother developed diabetes at age 35, another at age 42. Both were very heavy sweet eaters and one was 40 to 50 pounds overweight. One sister is 38 and has been having high blood sugar for several years.

I am a 45-year-old female and about 20 pounds overweight, but I am on a strict diet and have lost 8 pounds. One brother, age 40, is very healthy and watches his weight and food intake. The other brother is 43 and a little overweight.

Our family doctor has told all the children that sooner or later all of us will develop diabetes. Is this true? Can this be avoided completely by going on a strict diet and keeping our weight at proper levels? We feel like we are doomed no matter what we do. If we could get a direct answer it might spark some changes in lifestyle before it is too late.

DEAR READER: There is not enough definite data to be absolutely sure. However, it is not certain that all of you will develop diabetes in time — particularly if you make an effort to decrease the risk.

There are two kinds of diabetes mellitus: juvenile diabetes, now called insulin-dependent diabetes mellitus (IDDM) and adult-onset, now called non-insulin-dependent diabetes mellitus (NIDDM). Your ages suggest the latter. When only one parent has NIDDM, the risk to a child also having it is 10 percent to 15 percent. The risk when both parents have NIDDM is not established. So there is a great deal of hope.

It is generally believed that there is an inherited tendency, and when you have that tendency, your lifestyle and environmental factors may trigger the disease. That means mostly diet. I would strongly encourage all of you to stay lean and fit. There are some interesting studies that show some NIDDM individuals can even have normal blood glucose levels by weight loss and exercise.

I have discussed diet, exercise and habits that are important in preventing and controlling diabetes in my new Special Report 89, Diabetes: The Sweet Sickness. I'm sending you a free copy that I'm sure all of you will want to read. Others who want this report can send $1 with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/89, P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713.

DEAR DR. LAMB: My father is 84 years old and would be doing very well for his age if it were not for severe, phantom pains which are excruciating. He had cancer surgery 23 years ago and his entire leg was completely removed.

He started having pain soon after surgery, but the sieges are now coming closer together and are of longer duration. He refuses to become addicted to pain pills. He says the more drugs one takes, the more you need.

What is the answer? Has anything new been discovered to help people who suffer so bravely?

DEAR READER: Phantom sensations of still having a leg or arm after it has been amputated are common. A small percentage of patients have pain, which can be severe. It is difficult to treat and many of the efforts have been unsuccessful. Nerve blocks sometimes help for awhile. Otherwise, surgery usually doesn't help. But your father might get some help from a pain clinic. Local stimulation with rubbing or electrical stimulation sometimes helps.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am an 80-year-old female and have congestive heart failure. My doctor wants me to be operated on to have a new valve put in my heart, but I don't want to have an operation at this age.

I have been taking medication for years — Dyazide, Lanoxin and Coumadin. I was in the hospital six months ago as I could not breathe. My feet turned blue and became very swollen. The medication cleared up the problem, but then I was taking Lasix and potassium pills. I tire very easily and have problems breathing when I walk. Have you any suggestions as to what I can do so I don't need the operation?

DEAR READER: Congestive heart failure literally means your heart muscle cannot contract with enough strength to pump all the blood your body needs. That is often because of coronary artery disease or heart muscle damage, but it can occur because of damaged heart valves.

The damaged heart valves cause the heart to work harder to pump the same amount of blood. That can be from an obstructed valve or a leaky valve or both. Often, when the valve is sufficiently damaged that it results in heart failure, there is a point when medicines can no longer strengthen the heart muscle or eliminate excess water to prevent the symptoms of congestive heart failure. That is when a person has difficulty breathing because of fluid in the lungs.

Lasix is a strong diuretic that helped to eliminate the accumulated water which caused the swelling. The potassium was given because Lasix may wash out too much potassium.

It is a difficult decision whether to have heart surgery or not when you are older, but many people in your age group do have surgery and tolerate it surprisingly well. There is a point when a person's condition cannot be improved without correcting the mechanical defect when one or more heart valves are involved. Unfortunately there is no way to correct the damaged heart valves without the surgery.

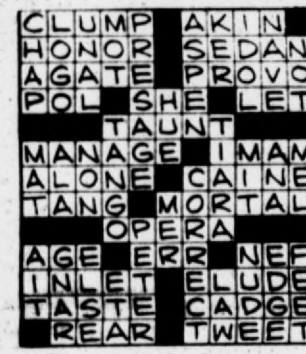

The average pencil can draw a line 35 miles long.

Former resident to speak at dinner

The public is invited to hear former Hereford resident, Nathan Hopson of Pampa, speak during the Hereford Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship dinner and meeting beginning at 7 p.m. Saturday at the Hereford Community Center.

The dinner will be catered by Caison House and special music will be provided by Gary and Alba Wilcox.

Hopson serves as director of the Public Works in Pampa. He has followed a career in public works and municipal utilities since 1970. Previous to that time, he was involved in various aspects of construction and the water industry.

The speaker is active in the Texas Water Utilities Association, the American Water Works Association and several utility short schools that are held annually in Texas.

Hopson is a native of Oklahoma. His parents moved to Deaf Smith county in 1936. He attended Hereford public schools and made his home here until 1973. He is married to the former Janey Ann Murrell, also of Hereford, and they have five daughters.

The first long-distance telephone call was made in 1884, between Boston and New York.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A while back you printed a letter from a reader who told about a museum where schoolchildren could go and see what a butterfly looks like. He ended by saying, "I'm not sure I want to live in a world where the only butterflies left are in museums." You responded with "Yoo-hoo—pagging the Environmental Protection Agency. Where are you?"

If you, Ann Landers, expect a federal agency to clean up after 240 million of us, you have a great imagination. Pogo's immortal remark fits the situation perfectly. "We have met the enemy and he is us."—Don G.H. (Buffalo)

DEAR DON: Well said. And now here are other comments from a well-informed readership that understood the problem far better than I.

From Santa Barbara: The population of the planet has passed the 5 billion mark and in 40 years it promises to be twice that. The central issue is not pollution but overpopulation. The underdeveloped countries need to practice birth control or eventually there will be mass starvation.

From Albany, N.Y.: Our society is slowly poisoning our earth, in the name of "cheaper," more convenient packaging, with no thought to the legacy of pollution that we are leaving our children and grandchildren. The culprits are many but plastics are the worst. Reject it! Demand paper.—Rev. M.W.

Los Angeles: You are worried about butterflies? So am I. But I am also worried about the lions, tigers, cheetahs, leopards, ocelots, grizzly bears, owls, elks, chimpanzees, whales, the snail darters and many species of fish. I also worry about people. One-third of our adults are functionally illiterate. No one knows how many street people freeze to death in New York. We have holes in the ozone and acid rain. American companies are raising the greenhouse effect by wiping out the rain forests in South America. Children in the Third World are starving while the Red Cross supplies are sold on the black market. These are the facts.—P.P.

Sarasota: What can we do to help save the world from self-destruction? Here are a few suggestions from an Average American who isn't an expert at anything: Share rides, save gasoline and cut down the pollution. Remember, the less plastic and Styrofoam we use the better. Buying recycled paper increases the demand. One ton of paper in the recycling bin can save nearly 20 mature trees. Energy saved means less toxins and a lower electric bill. The consumer has the power, Ann, not the Environmental Protection Agency.—J.W.

Chicago: What can we do to help save our planet? Steer clear of the "trash aisle." Say no to plastic bags. Demand paper.—A.R.S.

Minneapolis: Wake up, America! Let the manufacturers in this country know that you are not interested in fancy, "convenient" (and expensive) packaging. One dollar out of every $11 spent on groceries goes for packaging. This comes to $400 a year for the average family of four. Bear in mind that potato chips are cheaper in a bag. Don't pay for the box or the tin unless you're shipping. In May, 1988, the Worldwatch Institute in Washington announced that 90 percent of the volume of all household waste is now in packaging. What's more it's expensive. Americans now spend more today for packaging food than our farmers made for growing it. That's some statistic!—J.H.E.

So, dear readers. There it is—all laid out. What are we going to do about it?
