

New Governor Says Legislators To Support Him

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Gov.-elect Bill Clements thinks he's on the same wave length with most Texas legislators, as he was with Texas voters on Nov. 7.

"I think that most of the legislature understands that most of them were elected by the same people that elected me," Clements said in an interview with the Associated Press. "They feel a responsibility to be responsive to what I am talking about. There is not one set of voters out there who elected me and another set who elected the legislature.

These are one and the same people.

"You would be amazed how many legislators have told me they fully understand that."

Clements, who talks fast and moves fast, does not take office until Jan. 16 in what may be the most elaborate gubernatorial inauguration in several decades. But he has been busy since the general election votes were counted in a small 10th floor office of a downtown office building.

Day after day, and some nights, there has been a constant stream of visitors and job hunters to the small office where the 61-year-old self-made multi-millionaire sits behind a bare wooden desk.

Clements' plan for dealing with the predominantly Democratic Legislature is simple - follow the aggressive personal contact method that was so successful when he was Deputy Secretary of Defense in Washington.

"I have met with four groups that constituted more than 100 members of the Legislature," he says proudly. "In addition I have met with a large number of committee chairmen and people like that on a one-on-one basis...I intend to develop these personal relationships with the legislators and be fully sensitive to their needs and their responsibilities to their own constituents...I represent all the people of the state. I'm where this whole process comes together as being the highest elected official statewide and I intend for us to have a legislative program that is responsive to this state."

Clements will make an inaugural address on Jan. 16 and present his proposed state budget about Feb. 1. But there will be no big unloading of his entire program at one time.

"We've got several months before we end up with definite answers to these questions and I'm not going to cut off the process half way through or even before it starts," he said.

The big issues of the session are easy to point out.

"You have to put tax reduction No. 1 and No. 2 undoubtedly is the issue of improving the quality of our education. Between those two there is the school finance problem, a separate issue but a part of both."

Next, Clements says, are our relations with Mexico. He has plans to meet with Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo, at a date to be announced later, and discuss three subjects that also are of interest to the Texas Legislature.

"Illegal aliens, that's a problem that's got to be solved," he said. "There's not any question whatsoever that Texas has a role to play in this. For us to be in default and abrogate our position is absurd."

Clements favors a return of some form of the old bracero program where Mexican workers would be admitted under temporary work permits.

"President Lopez Portillo and I are in complete agreement on this," he said. "By Mexico and Texas agreeing to this puts enormous pressure on Washington and puts aside this nonsense of an amnesty program put forth by President

Arctic Storm Dumps Snow, Ice on Area

By PAUL SIMS

And ASSOCIATED PRESS

An Arctic cold front moved southward across the Red River into the Panhandle early today, bringing with it freezing drizzle and snow.

Trees and automobiles were covered with ice this morning after it began drizzling in Hereford shortly after midnight. Police reported that city streets had begun to ice over by mid-morning and discouraged travel as the Hereford area was placed in a winter's storm watch by the National Weather Service.

A traveler's advisory was issued for the area, with weathermen predicting intermittent light and freezing drizzle today, along with snow which was expected to become heavy at times.

"We've predicted one or two inches of snow, but I'm reluctant to say that we won't get any more. It looks like it could be heavy," a weather service spokesman in Amarillo told The Brand.

This morning's low was seven degrees, with the high today expected to be only in the upper teens. Lows tonight, weathermen predicted, will range from five to 10 degrees.

The front also is affecting other parts of the state. The Dallas area, still attempting to dig out from last weekend's devastating ice storm, expected additional accumulations of ice from the latest storm.

The same storm created hazardous driving conditions and disrupted business operations earlier as it passed through Oklahoma. Schools were closed there and many highways, including Interstate 35, the main route between Dallas and Oklahoma City, was closed at times because of icy road conditions in the Arbuckle Mountains.

Texas living south of the area anticipating the latest wintry onslaught had little to look forward to weatherwise. Dense fog cut visibility to near zero in the Hill Country and dense fog was reported in South Texas as well as in areas of the Panhandle. Forecasts called for drizzle rain and some possible thunderstorms in

Commodity Exports Reported, Panel Says

WASHINGTON (AP) - Charges that many sales of U.S. farm commodities to overseas buyers go unreported have "little foundation" in fact, an Agriculture Department task force has told Congress.

The task force also raised doubts whether Congress could pass new, tougher laws that could be effective in requiring overseas affiliates of U.S. companies to report speedily their transactions with the Soviet Union and other big customers of American farmers.

A preliminary report by the task force was sent to House and Senate agriculture committees this week. It had been ordered by Congress to be delivered by Jan. 3.

After the Soviet Union secretly bought huge quantities of U.S. grain in 1972 - including wheat equal to one-fourth of the U.S. harvest that year - the department has required export companies to report within 24 hours sales of 100,000 metric tons or more.

The sales are made public by USDA with the intention of informing farmers, consumers and others in the trade about the export flow of U.S. farm commodities and thus, if possible, avoid the surprise of soaring prices that resulted in 1972.

The task force report did not make any recommendations to Congress and explained that an advisory committee that has been examining export reporting has not completed its work. A final report with recommendations was promised by

Feb. 15.

Department auditors recently examined the records of seven U.S. exporters "for suspected reporting irregularities" and found that each of the firms, which

Rogers Installed as President of Chamber

"Involvement 79" is the theme for the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce this year, and president Ken Rogers Thursday night pledged to make that slogan a reality in the activities and projects of the community organization.

Rogers was formerly presented the president's gavel by 1978 president Speedy Nieman and other officers and directors were installed at a C of C dinner last night in K-Bob's Restaurant. The new board will be recognized at the annual chamber banquet next Thursday night in the Bull Barn.

Rogers, president of Lone Star Agency, installed the other new officers and directors. They are: Jake Webb, vice president; Dr. Milton Adams, treasurer; and directors Earl Brookhart and Joan Coupe. The new Women's Division president, Mary Herring, is also a new director.

Before passing the gavel, Nieman expressed appreciation to directors for their support and cooperation during the past year and also praised the work of manager Mike Carr and the office staff.

He also paid special recognition to directors whose terms ended this year. They are Joe Shollenbarger, Tom Hamlett, Mack Tubbs and Milton Adams. Holdover directors are Paul Abalos, Raymond Schlabs, Butch White, Jerry Payne, Dave Hopper, Jonny Cloud, Rogers and Nieman. Adams was appointed to fill a vacancy on the board last year and was re-elected as a director.

Rogers reported that most of the committee chairmanships have been filled and that each director will be assigned two committees to serve as an advisor during the coming year.

New C of C President

The president's gavel changed hands for the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Thursday night as Speedy Nieman, left, handed over the reins of the organization to Ken Rogers. Other officers and directors were installed at the annual C of C installation dinner at K-Bob's Restaurant.

Jake Webb is the new vice president and Dr. Milton Adams is the treasurer for 1979. All the officers and directors will be recognized at the annual banquet next Thursday night at the Bull Barn.

Davis Defense Set

To Rest Case Today

HOUSTON (AP) - Defense attorneys, ending their fifth week of testimony, said they intended to rest their case today in the murder conspiracy trial of millionaire Cullen Davis.

Dallas lawyer Phil Bureson said the defense has four potential witnesses remaining but he doubted more than two would actually be called.

"I'll believe it when I see it," said a weary prosecutor.

Trial Judge Wallace Moore informed newsmen Thursday he expected the defense to wind up by noon and he instructed the state to have its rebuttal witnesses on hand.

Moore said it was "very likely" the case could reach the jury next week.

"I think they'll rest. They've gone too long as it is," grumbled prosecutor Jack Strickland prior to today's session. Strickland indicated state rebuttal would not exceed more than two days assuming

Shah Skis, Announces Civilian Prime Minister

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) - Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi emerged from near-seclusion in his palace to take his family to a ski resort near Tehran for a brief vacation after naming a civilian prime minister in a bid to quell months of bloody violence. The shah's chief foe hiked the price of a settlement, saying the monarch must be jailed for life and the royal family's wealth confiscated.

The embattled Iranian ruler appointed Shahpour Bakhtiar on Thursday to head a civilian Cabinet to replace the military regime he drafted last November in an unsuccessful attempt to crush religious and political opposition to reign.

After signing the royal decree naming Bakhtiar prime minister, the shah, Empress Farah and their children went to the ski slopes at Jajroud, 40 miles east of Tehran. Ardeshir Zahedi, Iran's ambassador to Washington and a close confidant of the shah, said it was the monarch's first vacation from the capital

Information Received In Stockade Killings

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation said Thursday that it received more than 50 "potentially good pieces of information" after releasing composite drawings of three persons wanted for questioning in connection with twin unsolved mass murders.

The drawings were released of two men and a woman wanted for questioning in the murders of the three-member Melvin Lorenz family, and in the Siroin Stockade slayings last summer.

Arthur Linville, OSBI agent heading a special task force, said Thursday more than 50 persons had telephoned in about the identity of the two men and a woman depicted in the drawings.

Investigators indicated that the promising date included names and places where the suspects and a pickup owned by Lorenz had been seen before and after his family was shot to death June 22, south of Purcell on Interstate 35.

"We have gotten extremely good response from the composite drawings, and are very enthusiastic at this point that something may break in this case," Linville said.

Police Officers

Shot In Gun Battle

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Two police officers were shot and the suspect in the gunplay was reported dead after a shoot-out at a north side home this afternoon.

The officers were identified as Don Stutts and J.C. Gual. Police said Gual was shot in the head and taken to John Peter Smith Hospital in an ambulance. Stutts was taken to the hospital in a squad car.

Both were in undetermined condition. An officer answering a disturbance call was shot first. When backup units arrived, another policeman was shot. The house later caught fire.

A fire department dispatcher said five trucks were dispatched to 3401 Pearl St. at 2:30 p.m. The fire was reported out about 3 p.m. The cause of the blaze was unknown.

China Oil-Rich

Claims Researcher

HOUSTON (AP) — China is potentially a major oil-rich country, perhaps comparable to the Middle East, a U.S. Geological Survey researcher said Thursday.

With accelerated use of foreign technology, the geologist said, it could take the Chinese only a few years before finding out if the potential is realized. If it is, production from huge basins might begin in 5 to 10 years, he said.

Dr. Edward C.T. Chao discussed China's efforts in earth sciences at a session on "China's Science is World Prospective" at the 145th national meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Right now, the giant Taching oil field, discovered in late 1959, is the largest oil producer in China and produces about one-half the national output of 730 million barrels a year.

While emphasizing that estimates of total crude oil resources and reserves are competing speculative and cannot be confirmed until the proper exploration work is done, Chao said the estimates range from 100 billion barrels to 400 billion barrels.

Nugent Sworn In

As Commissioner

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) — New Texas Railroad Commissioner Jim Nugent, whose predecessor resigned after his family inherited natural gas-producing land, says he has sold his own oil and gas-related financial holdings to also avoid a potential conflict of interest.

Nugent, 56, a Kerrville Democrat who represented a sprawling Hill Country legislative district for 18 years, was sworn in here Thursday to the powerful three-member commission that regulates Texas' oil and natural gas production.

Nugent was appointed by Gov. Dolph Briscoe to serve the remaining four years of Jon Newton's six-year term.

Newton resigned Dec. 7, saying he wanted to avoid a possible conflict of interest resulting from natural gas production on South Texas property recently inherited by his wife.

After being sworn in by Chief Justice Joe Greenhill of the Texas Supreme Court, Nugent told an overflow hometown crowd, "I had certainly financial holdings which raised the question of a conflict of interest when Gov. Briscoe first notified me of my appointment.

"As of this time, I have sold those holdings which presented a conflict of interest or have them under a binding contract of sale, which will be closed as expeditiously as possible," he added.

Police Report

Mike Ferguson, 700 Bradley, reported that someone broke the windows out of a house under construction sometime Thursday.

A bottle was thrown through a window at TG&Y on West Park.

defense cross-examination is not extensive.

Davis, 45, who spent four days on the stand, is accused of plotting the murder of his divorce judge and others on an alleged death list.

Despite nine weeks of testimony, the jury must decide essentially whether to believe Davis or his chief accuser, FBI informant David McCrory, 40.

McCrory testified that Davis ordered him to hire a gunman to kill Judge Joe Eidson and the defendant paid him $25,000 when he thought the judge was dead.

The FBI wired McCrory for sound and recorded two conversations last August in which Davis discussed mass murder and the money to finance it.

Davis maintained he "played along" with McCrory to expose and extort a plot against him and to win over killers purportedly hired by his estranged wife Priscilla.

It was Mrs. Davis, 37, the defense insisted, who master-minded a scheme to frame Davis in an attempt to enhance her position in the high-stakes divorce case.

Most of Thursday's testimony unfolded outside the jury's presence, with lead defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes questioning private investigators.

Haynes vowed to show that an independent investigation related to this case was bank-rolled by the defendant's younger brother and was part of a "ongoing conspiracy" against his client.

But he failed to forge a relevant link between Bill Davis and the current proceedings and Judge Moore ruled the investigator's testimony inadmissible before the jury.

Fort Worth attorney Joe Shannon, who headed the "side-bar investigation," said he did not know who was financing the operation, adding:

"I was told that Bill Davis was not involved in this matter."

He said he was hired by a Denver attorney, Richard Shaw, to assemble the investigating team, but that he never learned who Shaw represented.

"He indicated to me he had a client but he did not tell me who it was, Shannon said. "He told me who it was not."

Haynes argued that Bill Davis, ousted by Cullen and Ken Davis from the families vast business empire, had both the money and motive to arrange the investigation.

Shannon was the chief prosecutor in Davis' 1977 Amarillo murder trial at which Davis was acquitted of killing his 12 year old stepdaughter.

State Wilderness Planned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland today recommended that three roadless areas in East Texas, currently under federal protection and totaling 10,212 acres, be designated off-limits to hunters, timber operations and vehicular traffic.

The three are in San Augustine, Montgomery and Houston Counties.

They would carry a wilderness designation and could only be reached by foot or canoe. No vehicular traffic will be allowed if Bergland's recommendations receive congressional and presidential approval.

Bergland's announcement covered more than 51 million acres from New Hampshire to Alaska that have been under study by the Agriculture Department's Forest Service for the past 18 months.

Ten other areas in Texas were recommended for non-wilderness status which allows recreational development, hunting and fishing, and limited timber operations.

The department designated three other areas for further planning. Those areas, totaling 18,188 acres, accounted for most of the 4,338 letters sent by Texans to the forest service in response to their environment impact statement on the redesignation of federally protected areas.

The National Forest Service received more than 264,000 replies from almost 360,000 persons.

The majority of responses from Texans - 2,376 - urged omission of designated areas which include private land. A NFS team of specialists in Salt Lake City tabulated the mailed responses.

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture M. Rupert Cutler said, "I think I am safe in saying no environmental statement since the passage of the National Environmental Policy Act in 1969 has so thoroughly involved the public."

Cutler, representing Bergland at the crowded morning press conference, added that the recommendations will be accepted by both the President and Congress "after a little fine tuning."

Cutler said that of the 26 million acres of prime timber land included in the national study, six million acres were recommended as wilderness - making them off limits to lumbermen.

But he stressed that most of the six million acres were in "difficult access" areas and "on the low side of the timber production scale."

The three areas recommended for wilderness designation are:

-Little Lake Creek in Montgomery County, 2,700 acres;

-Big Slough in Houston County, 4,593;

-Turkey Hill in San Augustine County, 2,919.

The areas recommended for further planning are:

-Chambers Ferry in Shelby County, 4,817 acres;

-Graham Creek in Jasper and Angelina Counties, 7,766 acres;

-Four Notch in Walker County, 5,605.

The Four Notch received 407 letters from a coalition from Texas environmental groups that went under the name "Save the Four Notch."

The areas recommended for non-wilderness designation are:

-Winter Bayou in San Jacinto County, 608 acres;

-Big Creek, San Jacinto County, 6,331;

-Jordan Creek in Jasper and Angelina Counties, 7,579;

-Bounds Peninsula in San Augustine County, 1,748;

-Boggy Creek in San Augustine County, 1,868;

-Harmon Creek in Walker County, 2,025;

-Big Woods in San Jacinto County, 1,323;

4 Pardoned

By Governor

AUSTIN—Four persons sent to prison from the West Texas area have been released by Gov. Dolph Briscoe upon the recommendation of the Board of Pardons and Paroles.

Jose R. Villarreal, convicted Nov. 18, 1977, in Deaf Smith County of burglary of a building, was paroled to Potter County after serving and earning two years and 14 months of an eight-year sentence.

Also paroled to Potter County was Lida Olmos, convicted Oct. 7, 1977, in Gaines County of conspiracy to commit theft over $10,000. He had served and earned two years and four months of a seven-year sentence. The other two men were paroled to Lubbock County and Howard County.

The Abundant Life

GOOD SERVICE

BY BOB WEAR

LIFE HOLDS AN OPEN DOOR FOR US, for all of us; and there is no barrier, unless we have thrown up one in our own faulty thinking about and understanding of life. This open door is called, "good service"; the service each one of us can give, according to our own abilities and opportunities. If the door is closed to us, it is because of our own self-imposed blindness. It is not really closed. The trouble is that we can't see it.

"USEFULNESS" IS A GOOD COMPANION WORD for "service," a word which expresses one of the finest of human traits. Basically, we, by nature, have a need to feel that we are useful. Giving the "service" we can give, when we can give it, in the best way we know how, fills this need. This is good for us, in addition to whatever we may have accomplished for some other person, or worthwhile cause.

"NOTHING IN THIS WORLD is so good as usefulness. It binds your fellow creatures to you, and you to them; it tends to the improvement of your own character and gives you a real importance in society, much beyond what any artificial station can bestow." - B.C. Brodie.

TOO MANY OF US ARE WAITING for something big, or spectacular to do. It seems that we are convinced that we are ready to serve, that we actually want "to serve," and that we "will serve"; when the opportunity is worthy of our consideration. So we wait; but for most of us, perhaps all of us, this grand opportunity never comes. In the meantime, days which are filled with opportunities are passing by.

SERVICE IS "SERVICE," whether it is what we call "little" service or "big" service. This classification is a mistake. Most of us must be pleased with what we call "little" service, and there is nothing wrong with this.

ALL OF US APPRECIATE "GOOD SERVICE." We consider this need when we purchase an automobile; or an appliance; or go into a department store; or into a service station; or visit a doctor, lawyer or other professional person. "Service" is the one ingredient that can make the difference in our choice of automobile, or appliance, or department store, or filling station, or doctor, or lawyer. More and more, people are talking about "poor" service.

"GOOD SERVICE," whether in the broad, general life pattern; or in the more specifically structured business and professional areas of life-action, can do much to restore and preserve some of the most needful and helpful elements of personal and social life.

THINKING OF SERVICE as "big" or "little" is a mistake, because it is a source of discouragement and is a distortion of the life structure. "Service" is service, and we can make it "good service."

Farm Antique Auction Set For Saturday

A farm goods and antique auction, sponsored by the American Agriculture Movement, will be held at the Merchant's Building of the Tri-State fairgrounds in Amarillo Saturday, beginning at 10 a.m.

On sale will be varied items from the farm community of the Texas Panhandle.

Half a beef, furnished by Palo Duro meats, will be given away free after the last auction item is sold.

Also featured will be a "country store" where homemade bread, cakes, pies, cookies, jams and jellies will be available.

New pickups, trucks and campers will also be on display by Amarillo and area dealers.

Clements

Carter. Another matter to be discussed would be the border drug traffic.

And third would be Mexico's new oil and gas reserves.

"It is absolutely necessary that we now commit to market some reasonable amount of Mexico's gas and oil for our energy requirements in the United States and allow us here in Texas to conserve our national resources in a technical and reasonable basis."

"Talking with Mexico about these three main things would set the tone for what the United States does at the national level," Clements declared.

Clements says he is not only optimistic of his relations with the legislature, but he is not afraid of the strongly entrenched Democrats either.

"I feel strongly that the people of Texas have spoken, they have said what they want in approving the tax relief amendment by 85 percent. And as governor I feel a strong responsibility to see that constitutional amendment is fully implemented, both to the letter and in spirit," he said.

"If the Legislature in its wisdom sees fit to do otherwise and violates the will of the people and does not carry it out to the letter and the spirit, I will veto it."

Clements says he pays no attention to speculation the Democratic legislators might pass a state spending bill early so they would have time left to override any gubernatorial veto.

"I'm not afraid of that," Clements says with a smile. "I see no sign of that."

Neither does Clements see any big obstacles from Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, presiding officer of the Senate, and House Speaker Bill Clayton.

Hobby has been publicly doubtful of Clements' chance of getting a $1 billion tax reduction.

Bullock To Send Rep. to Hereford

AUSTIN — State Comptroller Bob Bullock has announced he is sending a representative from his Amarillo Field Office to Hereford on Wednesday, Jan. 17, to assist local taxpayers and answer questions about state taxes.

Bullock said enforcement officer Silvestre Bonilla will meet with local taxpayers at the County Judge's Office in the Deaf Smith County Courthouse from 10 a.m. to 12 noon.

"If Deaf Smith County Merchants, and Oldham County

Merchants, or any one else for that matter, have any questions about state taxes or need help in preparing tax forms, Mr. Bonilla will be there to assist them," Bullock said.

"We're trying to cut the red tape in this office and we believe these face-to-face sessions with taxpayers help do just that," Bullock added.

The Amarillo Field Office, headed by Claudia Stravato, serves the twenty-five counties of the Texas Panhandle.

THE REV. BERNARD MCGORRY

Parish to Say Farewell To Rev. Bernard McGorry

Parishioners of St. Anthony's Catholic Church will honor their pastor, the Rev. Bernard McGorry, S.A., Sunday after the noon Mass with an Appreciation Dinner in the school cafeteria. Rev. McGorry is being transferred to Pelham, N.Y. for tentative assignment.

Sunday's dinner will be a covered dish luncheon and all interested persons are welcome.

Rev. McGorry has served St. Anthony's parish four different times, totaling 15 years in Hereford. He came here as assistant pastor in 1955 and served until 1959. He was assigned to work in British Columbia until 1961. He then served two years as Chaplain at Raybrook TB Hospital in New York.

The priest returned to Hereford for the period of 1962-66. The North Carolina missions were his next station until 1969, when he became Chaplain at Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center in New York City. In December of 1971, he began parish work at St. Gabriel's Church in the Bronx, N.Y.

Father McGorry returned to St. Anthony's, this time as pastor, in the autumn of 1973. He has been at St. Anthony's for the past five years.

In 1963, Rev. McGorry administered First Holy Communion to the same local individuals who he had baptized during his first years here. In recent years, he has been celebrant at the weddings of the same parishioners.

Rev. McGorry enjoys sports, and during his first tenure here, he coached baseball at St. Anthony's Parochial School. In the 1960's, he organized a softball team for young adults. In 1976, he spearheaded the formation of another team.

The priest has witnessed several major events during his clerical service in Hereford. In 1957, two years after Father McGorry's arrival here, the first Catholic church building was moved from Sampson St. to St. Joseph's parish. The new Knights of Columbus Hall of Country Club Drive was dedicated during Father McGorry's pastorate in 1966. The most recent improvement was the addition to St. Anthony's School this past year. Rev. McGorry is a native of Allentown, Pa., where he received his early education. He studied at Catholic University in Washington, D.C. and went to Graymoor, N.Y. to prepare for the priesthood. He was ordained June 2, 1951.

His parents and two brothers still reside in Allentown. He has a sister living in Baltimore, Md. Assuming the pastorate of St. Anthony's will be the Rev. Paul Haefner, who has been serving as associate pastor.

Ann Landers Nurses Resented

DEAR ANN: After reading in your column the other day about the man who had an affair with his nurse, I decided to write. Maybe I'm crazy. If so, please tell me. When my husband was a hospital patient, he wanted all personal care -- baths, bedpan clean-ups -- to be done by the female nurses, student nurses and aides even though I was available and expressed a willingness to do everything for him that needed to be done. I thought we had a good marriage and this seemed very strange to me but because of his condition I didn't protest.

In most cases the girls were very young -- some still in their teens -- obviously too young to give this kind of care to a man. My husband has always had an eye for the ladies so I can't help but feel it was a cheap way to get sexual kicks. Of course some of the attention and care he received was necessary, but some of it wasn't (such as back rub). I now become extremely upset when I think that everything which was once private between us has been seen by at least a dozen females in that hospital.

Am I wrong to feel hurt, jealous and resentful? This has been eating on me and affecting my appetite and sleep. -- True Blue Wife

DEAR T.B.W.: In your opening paragraph you said, "Maybe I'm crazy. If so, please tell me." Well dear, I'm telling you.

Any woman who would resent a nurse or an aide seeing her husband's body in the line of duty and suspects he is getting some cheap kicks out of it is a little off her rocker. Those nurses and aides attach as much importance to your husband's body as a mechanic who is working on a car.

If this continues to eat on you, I suggest you get some professional help. To lose sleep over such a thing is really borderline nuts.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 43-year-old woman, happily married to a good man. Recently I saw a movie on television with a beautiful young star. In one scene the star and her co-office workers were gossiping about the office Don Juan. One girl said, "That guy would kiss any dame between 18 and 80 so long as she didn't have a hairlip."

I resented that statement as being ignorant and hurtful. For the majority of the population it was probably funny, but for several thousand people like myself, who was born with a hairlip, it was a gross insult.

Perhaps you think I'm too sensitive but I put up with so much cruelty from children when I was growing up that I don't think I should have to take any more. What's more, adults should have more sense.

TV is such a powerful force that once a remark like that is made the damage is done and unfortunately, there is not a damn thing you can do about it. But thanks for listening, Ann. I feel better already. -- S.S. of Suburbia

DEAR S.S.: Any derogatory remark about a handicapped person is in extremely poor taste -- and you CAN do something about it. Write to the sponsor of the program and the president of the network and complain. The consumer is king -- if only he knew it.

Do You Talk To or With?

The next time you talk, pay attention to the way you go about it. Talking "to" children means telling them how we want something done. It expresses a demand for obedience and requires an image of our thinking.

Talking "with" children allows us, along with them, to search together for solutions to problems and ways to improve a situation. Thus the children have a creative part in the family harmony. This discussion does not mean that adults give up their leadership role in the household. Or that the kids are running the show. Quite the contrary. Discussion does mean the development of cooperation.

Mays Hoping For Olympic Spot

By MARC HERRING
Brand Sports Editor

Hereford will have its first-ever Olympic team member at the 1980 Games if the goals of James Mays are realized.

Every track athlete dreams of being able to run in the Olympics and Mays is not any different. Presently a sophomore at Texas Tech University, Mays competes in the 800 meters and the mile relay for the Red Raiders.

A state champion half-miler while in high school, Mays will be devoting his athletic time to track exclusively this year. As a freshman, he played on the varsity basketball team at Tech and ran track in the spring.

With him not being in track shape he still set a new meet and school record in the 600 dash at West Texas State University Indoor Meet last spring.

He ran a 1:10.6 in the race -- just six-tenths of a second off the time needed to qualify for nationals. Another record set was the Texas Tech mark for the two mile relay on which he ran the third leg.

With track being given his full attention, basketball had to take a back seat.

"I thought that I would miss playing basketball, but as of yet I haven't," Mays said.

Basketball has been a major part of Mays' life -- during high school he played on the varsity for two years and in his senior year was selected as the MVP of the district. With these credentials he was offered basketball scholarships at some schools but, wanting to be at a larger institution, he went with the track offering.

JAMES MAYS
... Olympic Hopeful

Not playing college level basketball has not kept him off the court though as he competes in an intramural league and also spends his free time officiating high school games in the Lubbock area.

"I am hoping to coach basketball in high school after I graduate," Mays said. He is a physical education major whose grade point average is good enough to put him on the Dean's Honor Roll.

With basketball as his first choice, track still is most important at this time since it is putting him through school.

As a freshman last year his best time in the 800 meters was a 1:52.1, a time that he thought should have been better.

"I know I can do better since in high school I ran a 1:52 flat, but I never got the chance to really get in shape last year," Mays said. "With my concentrating on track I hope to break the 1:50 mark before the year is over."

To be competitive in track on the college level means working out year-around, Mays said. With most of the workouts being a type of conditioning as well as training there are many miles ran during the year.

"My workouts when I don't have a meet usually consist of warming up by jogging five miles, stretching, running 10 440 yard intervals (running a 440 in 65 seconds, then resting 65 seconds before running another) and then a two mile run as a type of warm down exercise," Mays said. "Of the weeks that I have a meet each day is different, and as the meet gets closer the workout is lighter."

These workouts for Mays are during the track season. In the off-season he runs cross-country for the Red Raiders, not necessarily for the best time but to stay in shape.

Weighing in at muscular 170 pounds now, Mays plans on having a running weight of 165 pounds spread over his 6-2 frame.

"I weighed 163 pounds in high school, and I feel that that weight is just about right for me," he said. "To lose the five pounds that I'm over will have to come from my upper body, as I want my legs to keep what muscle they have."

Workouts are mostly done on his own or with other members of the track team that run the same events. Regardless of where he is, Mays tries to have a workout, unless the weather is bad. Along with the running that is done each day, a program of weight-lifting is also included in his personal schedule.

The indoor track season starts Jan. 27 with a meet at Lubbock Christian College, and the following week Mays returns to the WT meet. Following the Southwest Conference indoor meet to be held in Fort Worth there will be a two week break before the start of the outdoor season.

With the coming of the outdoor season, Mays will start the long trek to a place on the Olympic team.

Mavericks Split With Canyon Purple

The La Plata ninth and seventh grade boys basketball teams continued their perfect record in district play last night as they defeated the Canyon Purple teams at Canyon.

Using the scoring of Alan Wartes (25), Don Delozier (17) and Aubrey Richburg (16), the Maverick freshmen coasted to a 84-47 victory. The seventh grade, behind the 25 points of Steve George, whipped the Canyon team, 43-14. Both teams now boast 2-0 records in district play.

The eighth grade, also playing at Canyon could not make the night a sweep for the Mavs as they fell 35-23. Leading the locals in scoring was Ricky McCracken with eight points.

The girls also played the Canyon team, with the seventh winning while the eighth and ninth lost. The seventh grade used good team shooting to post their 33-23 win. The eighth grade, with Stephanie Foster scoring six points could not deny Canyon the victory in a 16-15 loss. In the ninth grade game Debra Rogers scored 10 and Amy Schumacher scored eight, but it was not enough as they lost 42-29.

Next action for the Mavericks will be Jan. 8 against Dumas.

NMSU Rolls Past WT, 102-87

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) - Sharpshooter Chuck Goslan broke open a tight game Thursday with six straight points midway through the second half as New Mexico State rolled to a 102-87 win over West Texas State in a Missouri Valley Conference basketball duel.

The 6-foot-3 Goslan pumped in 24 points to share game scoring honors with teammate Slab Jones.

The Aggies, 10-3 overall and 1-0 in conference play, shot a sizzling 55 percent from the field in the second half and destroyed the Buffalo's tenacious zone defense with outside shooting.

The Aggies took a 49-47 lead after one half of play, despite shooting a cold 37 percent from the floor.

Rounding out double-figure scoring for the Aggies were Greg Webb, with 17 points, and Cyrus Cormier with 10.

Dan Elmer paced West Texas with 22 points, while George Sims and Dave Wilburn added 14 each. Erskan Robinson netted 12 points for the Buffaloes, who shot 42 percent for the game.

West Texas fell to 5-6 for the year and 0-2 in the MVC.

Ice Hampers Dallas Workout

DALLAS (AP) - The Dallas Cowboys, wandering like nomads through the ice-bound city looking for places to practice, have slapped tight security on their workouts after a brief scare Wednesday.

With their Forest Avenue practice field frozen over, the Cowboys worked out at the Cotton Bowl. It was there, a suspicious-looking character was noted by Cowboy scout and sleuth John Wooten.

public relations department trying to pinpoint the workout location brought a response of "They haven't decided yet."

The Cowboys have been watchful of practices since the George Allen years when they claimed he had spies out and about.

Dallas leaves at 7 p.m. Friday to fly to Los Angeles for Sunday's National Football Conference title game.

"It turned out to be an elevator man," said Wooten. "But we can't be too careful since the Rams have three scouts in Arlington."

Wooten added, "I'd rather work out at the Cotton Bowl than our practice field anyway. There are some apartments overlooking the practice field and that can drive you crazy."

The Cowboys kept secret until the very last minute details of their workout schedule.

Jabbar Leading Vote-Getter

NEW YORK (AP) - Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of Los Angeles is the leading vote-getter so far in fan balloting for the Western Conference All-Star team that will face the East in the National Basketball Association All-Star Game Feb. 4 at Detroit.

Pugh-- A Playoff Vet

DALLAS (AP) - Figure it up yourself.

Twenty-three National Football League playoff games at a conservative $5,000 each is over $100,000.

That's what Dallas Cowboys defensive tackle Jethro Pugh has earned in the pressure-cooker playoffs where each play is magnified a thousand times.

Pugh, who has been bothered by a twisted knee, will run his record string of NFL playoff games to 24 Sunday if he sees duty against the Los Angeles Rams in the National Conference title game.

The NFL playoffs have been both cruel and kind to Pugh, a 14-year veteran out of tiny Elizabeth City State who was drafted in the 11th round in 1965.

Recall, it was Pugh who was the victim of Jerry Kramer's classic block on Bart Starr's quarterback sneak that gave Green Bay the NFL title in the 1967 "Ice Bowl" game.

Not only did Pugh have to live with constant replays of the last-second touchdown, but to this day he suffers from extreme cold because of frostbite from the sub-zero temperatures.

Pugh has been in four Super Bowl games and has two championship rings.

His string does not include two Playoff Bowls where the semifinal losers met in the NFL playoffs before the merger with the old American Football League.

"Somebody on this team will break my streak," said Pugh. "Both safeties Cliff Harris and Charlie Waters have been in 17."

Ironically, Pugh has never been to a Pro Bowl or named All-Pro.

In his salad days of the 1960s and early 1970s, Pugh was always overlooked because of Dallas' other tackle, Bob Lilly. After Lilly retired, along came Harvey Martin at end and Randy White at tackle to take the spotlight.

"I'd rather have the playoff record," said the quiet-spoken Pugh, who is the sole survivor of the original Doomsday Defense.

Pugh is only 34 but has been bedeviled lately by a back injury and more recently the twisted knee. Larry Cole has won the starting spot away from Pugh.

"I wasn't aware I was in the NFL record book until someone mentioned it in the off-season," said Pugh.

The wait is over!
You can thrill again to the happiest sound in all the world.

THE HOT DOG VENDOR

There was a man who lived by the side of the road and sold hot dogs.

He sold very good hot dogs.

He put up signs along the highway and advertised in the newspaper telling how good they were.

He stood on the side of the road and cried:

"Buy a hot dog, Mister?"

And people bought.

He increased his meat and bun orders.

He bought a bigger stove to take care of his trade.

He finally got his son home from college to help him out.

But then something happened.

His son said, "Father, haven't you been listening to the radio and watching TV?"

There's a big depression. The foreign situation is terrible. The domestic situation is worse."

Whereupon the father thought, "Well, my son's been to college, he listens to the radio and watches TV and he ought to know."

So the father cut down on his meat and bun orders, took down his signs and cancelled his newspaper ads and no longer bothered to stand out on the highway to sell his hot dogs.

And his hot dog sales fell almost overnight.

"You're right, son" the father said to the boy.

"We certainly are in the middle of a great depression."

No Matter What You Sell... We'll Help You Sell More of It!

Oilers, Steelers Are Bruise Brothers

PITTSBURGH (AP) - They've been brothers in bruises, exchanging hard knocks with no hard feelings, and even finding fraternity in fractures.

They are the Houston Oilers and the Pittsburgh Steelers, who take something of a love-hate relationship into Sunday's clash here for the American Football Conference title.

"You enjoy playing a team like Houston. It's football, purely good, hard football," said Steeler Coach Chuck Noll.

"Everything is settled right there on the field, and it makes it a very pleasant thing," Noll added.

Pleasantries aside, there was that 1977 game in Houston in which Terry Bradshaw sustained a cracked wrist, backup quarterback Mike Kruczek had his shoulder separated, and defensive back Tony Dungy would up quarterbacking the Steelers in defeat.

Oiler quarterback Dan Pastorini, knocked from that 1977 game with a severely sprained ankle, took another pounding when the two teams met again this season in Houston.

Pastorini sustained three cracked ribs in that game. Oiler rookie running back Earl Campbell cracked one rib.

Houston also lost rookie wide receiver Mike Renfro for the season in that game with a knee injury.

Houston Coach "Bum" Phillips called the contest "the most physical I've seen in 31 years of coaching."

Jerry Meins, the Oiler trainer, called it "World War III."

Yet just as in past encounters, there were no punches, no angry words, and no cheap shots.

They've been belting one another twice a year since they entered the AFC Central together in 1970. Yet they retain mutual respect.

"I think that's a tribute to the Pittsburgh organization and their coaching staff, as well as their players," Phillips said this week.

"That's the way football ought to be played, hard and clean and the best team wins."

The two teams split this season, the Oilers winning here and Pittsburgh winning in Houston. Overall, Pittsburgh has a 13-5 edge in the series.

"There's no animosity, but it's always very, very physical when we play Houston," said Steeler defensive end L.C. Greenwood.

"They played hell out of us even when they didn't have a good record," said Joe Greene.

"We play hard football and dare the other team to do the same thing," Greene added. "The Oilers always accept the dare."

Bradshaw remembers that last game in Houston for the chivalry of the contact.

"I never played in as tough a game against a team I respected more," he said. "I played tough games that were full of fights, arguments and cheapshots. But Houston knocks your butt off, smiles, and tells you, 'great play.'"

Steelers safety Don Shell, whose tackle helped fracture Earl Campbell's rib in that game, later prayed on the side line for Campbell's well being.

Some Steeler fans, not known for warmth toward Pittsburgh foes, have even sent the Oilers friendly mail.

That's a carryover from last season when an Oiler victory over Cincinnati boosted Pittsburgh into the playoffs, a favor for which the Steelers sent each Houston coach and player an attack case for Christmas.

"I've gotten some real nice letters from their fans," said Phillips.

"They said they were hoping we'd get into the playoffs and play them a third time. They're gonna root for Pittsburgh, but they wanted us to know they were pulling for us to get there."

"Phillips feels that respect will linger no matter what the outcome Sunday.

"There's kind of an admiration between the two teams and the two cities," he said.

Tricks Worry Rams

DALLAS (AP) - They are known as "Tom Landry exotics."

You saw one in the last Super Bowl. Fullback Robert Newhouse took a pitch and threw a touchdown pass to Golden Richards. Newhouse had been practicing the play since July for that one precious moment.

You saw one last Saturday against Atlanta. Linebacker Thomas Henderson took a reverse handoff from Butch Johnson on a kickoff and fell flat on his posterior. Henderson scored a touchdown on this play once.

You saw one against the New England Patriots. Fullback Scott Laidlaw took a handoff, ran precariously close to the line of scrimmage, whirled and lateraled back to Roger Staubach, who nailed a wide open Tony Hill for a touchdown.

You saw one in 1975 in the Dallas-Los Angeles Ram National Conference title game. Staubach faded back in the shotgun formation and flipped maybe a one-yard shovel pass to Preston Pearson who ran for a touchdown.

And there have been a lot of "exotics" you may have missed.

Did you catch the tight end in motion who threw a crunching blow on a defensive tackle to spring Tony Dorsett for a 63-yard gain?

Did you catch center D.D. Lewis' head-bob in the second Washington game that made the Redskins jump offside for a costly penalty?

Of course, the Los Angeles Rams know about all those Landry "exotics." But what worries the Rams, and justifiably so given Landry's gambling nature, is the ones they haven't seen. Landry counts on this unsettled state in the opponent. Witness his shifting, jumping, multiple offenses and defenses.

Landry says of the Ram: "You have to attack and beat them. You can't play conservatively and beat a team that is good."

Pressed on his "exotic"

Phillips A Good Ol' Boy

HOUSTON (AP) - Houston Oiler Coach Bum Phillips, decked out in his Columbia blue cowboy boots and western hat, patrols the Oilers sideline like McCloud pursuing his man on the streets of New York.

Clearly, the man is an interloper, out of place in this age of the computerized game plan, two-inch thick playbooks and impersonal win-at-all-costs philosophy.

Phillips, his lantern jaw chewing at his favorite tobacco, would look more at home driving his pickup down to the feed store or give him a horse and he could make a cigarette commercial.

But a head coach in the sophisticated National Football League?

You'd never hear Tom Landry stand before a post-game gaggle of newsmen in his best pin-strip suit and announce "Our players had a lot of chances to let their milk drop today."

But that's what good ol' boy Phillips did after one game, followed of course by puzzled looks and an explanation.

"You know what that is," Phillips said. "It's a country expression. You know, give up. That's what a cow does when you go to milk her. She just don't want to give up to start with."

Yet for all of his down home, country bumpkin appearance, this galoot has somehow managed to knit the once laughable Oilers into a band of warriors that is within one game of playing in their first Super Bowl.

A victory over Pittsburgh Sunday would advance the Oilers to Miami Jan. 21, possibly against Landry's Cowboys in an all-Texas NFL finale.

Phillips came to the Oilers in 1974 as defensive coordinator under Sid Gillman and the following year became head coach. A highly respected defensive coach, Phillips quickly established that he could command the whole field.

One of Phillips' biggest assets as a head coach has been his ability to bring the team together as a unit. When things got tense, a Phillip one-liner has often saved the day.

When humor wouldn't work, a straightforward man-to-man talk got the job done.

As a defensive coach, Phillips switched the once porous Oiler defense to a three-man front and then did a selling job with the reluctant Oiler defensive unit.

Earlier this year, Phillips added offensive coordinator to his titles when the incumbent, Ken Shipp, resigned following a dispute with quarterback Dan Pastorini over game plans.

With Pastorini having his best season and rookie Earl Campbell adding a new dimension to the ground game, the Oilers compiled a 10-6 record and made the playoffs for the first time since 1969.

The folksy Phillips has replaced former University of Texas Coach Darrell Royal as the state's leading country philosopher.

Asked about Campbell's habit of slowly dragging himself to his feet after a run, Phillips quipped "He may get up slow but he goes down even slower."

Prior to playing the Browns in frigid Cleveland this year, Phillips was asked if he would take the team to Ohio early to get used to the cold weather.

"No," Phillips said. "You can't practice being miserable."

Phillips' country boy routine is no act. He was born in Orange, Texas, about 90 miles east of here, and to say he never left his roots would be an understatement.

He was headed for a lifetime in the oil fields rather than coaching the Oilers when he quit his job rather than contribute to a charity he didn't support.

While driving home, he passed the campus of Lamar University, then Lamar College, and stopped to watch football practice. The coach, impressed with Phillips' raw-boned physique, invited him to try out.

Phillips hasn't been away from football since.

A devoted fan of country music singer Willie Nelson and just about any mournful three-chord country song, Phillips is so well liked by his teammates that he inspired center Carl Mauk to rewrite a verse from the Wabash Cannonball.

Mauk will sing his entire composition in an off-key gravel voice to anyone who doesn't even ask.

His tribute to Phillips ended: "Here's to Head Coach Phillips. May his name forever stand. And always be remembered, by the fans throughout the land. When the Super Bowl race is over, and the Cowboys finally fall, we'll carry him back to Houston on the Oiler Cannonball."

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) - Two free throws by 6-foot-6 sophomore Mark Smith with five seconds remaining gave fourth-ranked Illinois a 65-61 college basketball victory over Indiana Thursday night in the Big Ten Conference opener for both teams.

Indiana led by as many as 8 points during the first half, but the Illini outscored the Hoosiers 10-2 in the final 3:18 of the period, including a 6-point burst by reserve Levi Cobb, to tie the score 33-33 at the intermission.

The lead seasawed in the second half, but a 15-foot jump shot by 6-foot-4 guard Steve Lanter put the undefeated Illini ahead to stay at 45-44.

CLEVELAND (AP) - The Cleveland Indians have offered one-year contracts to two free agents - outfielder Bill North and pitcher Pete Broberg.

North, 30, played out his option last season with the Los Angeles Dodgers. He is a left-handed hitter with a lifetime .275 batting average in the American League and an average of 55 stolen bases a season. Cleveland General Manager Phil Seghi said the Texas Rangers also were in the bidding for North.

Broberg, 28, is a right-hander who bounced around the major leagues during his career, winning 14 games for Milwaukee in 1975 and going 10-12 for the Oakland A's in his option year last season.

Seghi said three other teams drafted the rights to Broberg, but he was not aware if they had made any bids for the veteran pitcher.

Football League franchise, before Davis appointed him head coach 10 years ago.

This past season he became the 13th coach in pro football history to reach 100 victories and his winning percentage of .763 is the highest in the 100-victory club.

Davis indicated there would be no decision on a successor to Madden until "I think about it for a week to 10 days," and he added that Madden was welcome to stay in the organization.

"I want John to take a month off, two or three months, whatever time he needs to get this problem (the ulcer) under control, and then whatever he wants to do with us, he's welcome to do," Davis said.

Oakland Coach Retires

OAKLAND (AP) - John Madden retired as coach of the Oakland Raiders Thursday and said, "I'm never going to coach again."

His decision was made, Madden said at a news conference, partly because of an ulcer condition.

But, he added, "I gave it everything I had, and it's basically that simple - I don't have it anymore."

There was no immediate announcement of a successor to the 42-year-old Madden, who compiled one of the best coaching records in National Football League history, 103-32-7, over his 10 seasons with the Raiders.

Madden's eyes filled with tears as he spoke Thursday and he said at one point, "Things like this are easy to talk about and hard to do."

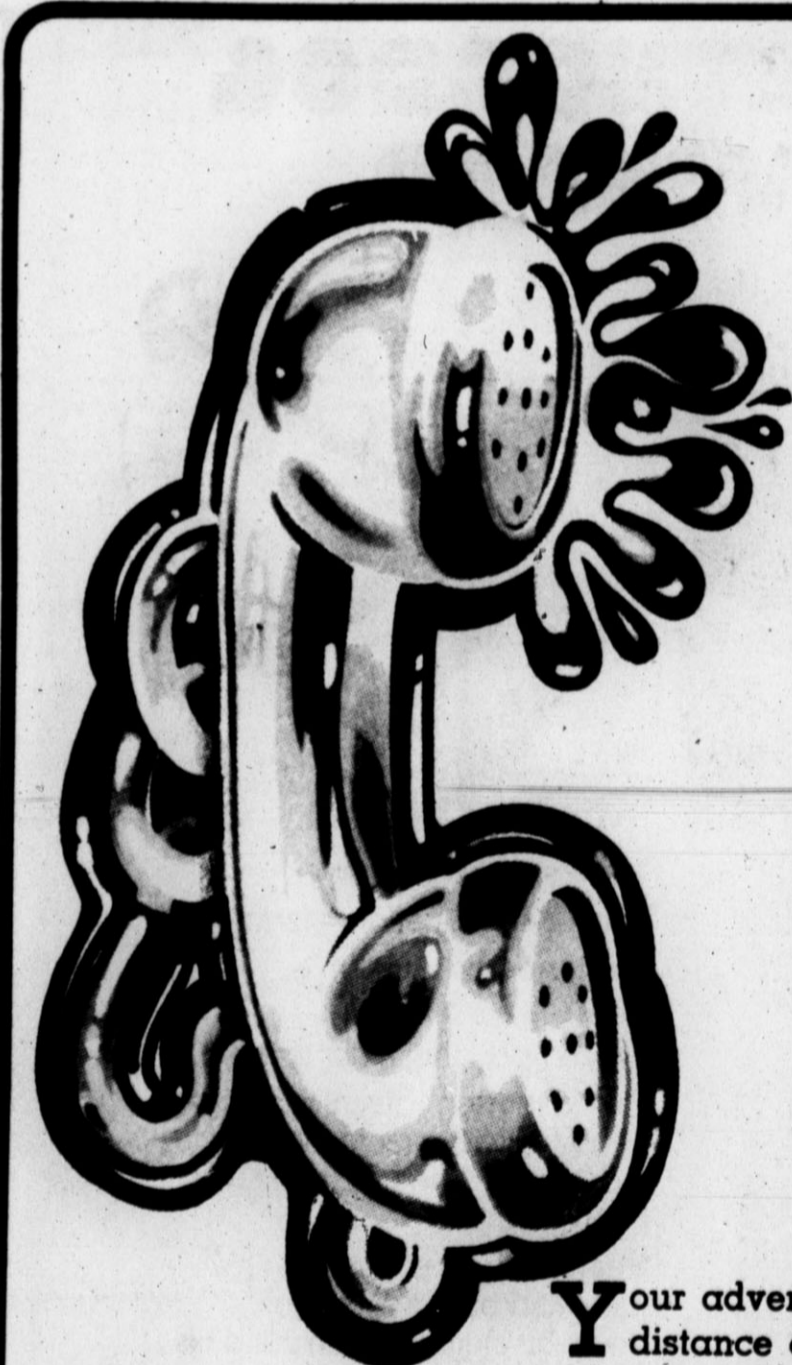

Al Davis, managing general partner of the Raiders, said the team called the news conference "with a touch of sorrow but also with great respect for a job well done, perhaps one of the best in the history of football."

Madden stated emphatically that he had no thoughts of moving to another NFL team.

"I'm an Oakland Raider. I started with them when I was young and I will always be an Oakland Raider," he said. "I can't understand people going from one place to another."

Madden served two years as an assistant coach with the team, then an American

Boots Important

KETCHUM, Idaho (NEA) - There are two main busi-nesses in the Sun Valley area of central Idaho. One is skiing. The other relates to the paraphernalia of the sport.

Scott USA employs 160 people in its administrative headquarters and assembly plant, second only to Sun Valley Resorts. The latter shoes people by the thousands up and down the mountains that ring the town of Ketchum and its adjoining village of Sun Valley. The former shoes them.

Understand first that skiing, while graceful and breathtaking in execution, is a torturous ritual. Aficionados must have psyches that are part masochistic.

They adorn themselves with layers of clothing, none of it particularly flattering. Brigitte Bardot would come out looking flat-chested in a warm-up suit and Angie Dickinson's shapely legs in warm-up pants would take on the sturdiness of a Moscow street sweeper. Don't ask what happens to the posterior. Ski outfits, even in hues that foster color blindness, promote unisex.

Everybody walks in ski boots with the lurching gait of Frankenstein's monster. Not only that, but they hurt. They feel like they weigh 25 pounds, and they come pretty close to it. The feet are imprisoned in molds as ungiving as iron, and there's always a spot pressing on an arch or an ankle or a toe. To get them on, a maze of buckles must be adjusted and snapped with all the frustration of Charlie Chaplin on an assembly line.

This is where Scott USA comes in, like Clark Kent entering a phone booth. There has been a startling transformation in ski footwear.

When skiing was still in the Snowshoe Thomson phase (he used to carry the mail on foot over the High Sierra) and on into the post-World War II period, leather hiking boots were the essential equipment. You had two sets of laces, but there was no real firmness. The introduction of plastic shells solved that problem, and metal buckles eliminated tedious hand-lacing. But boots were still cumbersome and heavy.

light ski boot, molded from plastic into upper and lower shells, with only one adjust-able buckle.

It weighed 5.1 pounds then, and it weighs 5.1 pounds now, a powder-puffery lightweight that seems like bedroom slippers to the long-suffering skier.

The writer remembers a Hollywood starlet mincing about in them at a Bear Valley, Calif., celebrity ski race half a dozen years ago, and the boots attracted as much attention as her derriere.

Today, Scott makes 40,000 of those boots annually (they're not cheap at $190 a pair), which isn't close to the million sold worldwide by Nordica, an Italian manufacturer. But there aren't enough Scotts manufactured to meet the demand.

"Our boots sell for $260 in Europe," says Lyn Sabala, a Ketchum native who is the director of foreign market-ing, "because of the ex-change rates. And still we sell as many as we can ship over."

Sabala admits that competi-tion racers don't flock to Scott for footwear - "though they predominantly use our poles and goggles" - they don't feel that it has the firmness and stability of heavier gear. But for the recreational skier, or even the hotdogger who special-izes in free style antics, the Scott product has tremen-dous appeal for its lightness and ease.

The boots may last only three or four seasons be-cause plastic has a fatigue factor.

Comebacks Featured the Sports Year

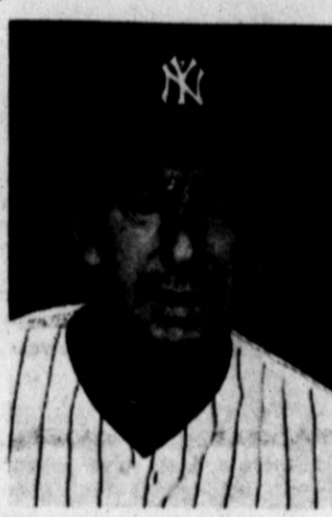

By Charles Morey AP Newsfeatures

This was the year of the comeback in sports. A battered, old battle cry, "Never Say Die," was taken down from the attic, dusted off, and, like Aladdin's Lamp, made to do wondrous things.

A team that wouldn't be beaten, the Yankees, couldn't be beaten...not even when the situation was hopeless. Gary Player, a golfer who laughed at a scoreboard that told him he couldn't win, charged to a classic victory in the Masters.

Jimmy Connors and Chris Evert, once a romantic item, stood apart atop the tennis world. Connors was rated No. 1 among the men by a computer which made Bjorn Borg wonder if computers understood Swedish.

There was the usual turnover among National Football League coaches. There were ten new ones at the start of the season and two more got a pink slip during the campaign.

BILLY MARTIN

for five days. The Yankees won all five games. Then Martin put his spikes in his mouth with some ill-chosen remarks about Owner George Stein-brenner and Jackson and was forced to resign. Before that, as manager of the White Sox, was hired to succeed Billy.

Like the family that grew tired of fighting among itself, the Yankees decided to fight the world, especially Boston. They set out in chase of the Red Sox and caught them by sweeping a four-game set at Fenway Park in September, coming back one week later to win two out of three in New York.

The Red Sox finally pulled themselves together and fought their way into a tie at the end of the regular season. The Yanks and Red Sox met in a one-game playoff for the Eastern title in the American League at Fenway Park on Oct. 2. The Yanks won it, 5-4, on a three-run homer by Buckey Dent and a long screamer into the center field bleachers by Reggie Jackson with no one on. The Yanks then knocked off Kansas City for the third year in a row in the playoff for the pennant.

The Yanks looked tired going into the world series and their opponents, the Los Angeles Dodgers, who had disposed of the Phillies in the National League playoff, jumped on New York for two straight victories in Los Angeles. But they made the mistake of going to New York for games three, four and five. The Yankees won them all and closed things out with a 7-2 victory in Los Angeles.

three rounds. That was an enormous handicap to over-come but there was more. There were seven other play-ers in between Player and Green.

Gary had won the Masters twice before and he figured he knew what it took. What it took was a course-record equal-ling round of 64 and a final total of 277. The stocky short-er from South Africa holed a 15-foot putt on the 18th green and then watched chal-lengers Tom Watson, Rod Fun-seth and Green all miss on the final hole. Hubert fanned on a three-footer that would have put him in a tie with Player.

All Regains Title Muhammad Ali lost his undisputed heavyweight title to Leon Spinks in Las Vegas in February. Ali trained for a five-round fight and was a weary, old gladiator after 15 when Spinks' arm was raised in vic-tory. A short time later, Lhon lost half his crown. The World Boxing Council stripped him of its share of the title for failure to defend it against Ken Nor-ton. Norton only held the championship a short while before losing it to Larry Holmes in June.

MUHAMMAD ALI

Ali got his return shot at Spinks in September in New Orleans and used all his ring guile to befuddle the awk-ward Leon. It was a unanimous verdict for Muhammad.

Tom Watson again led the men's division of the PGA in money won with $362,429, a record sum. Jack Nicklaus was fourth with $256,672. Watson won five tournaments while playing in 24 and aver-aged $15,101 per tourney.

Austin and 16-year-old Pam Shriver, the losing finalist to Chrisie in the U.S. Open.

Pete Rose had the baseball world counting on his fingers as he hit safely in 44 straight games for the Cincinnati Reds. It tied Willie Keller's record of the 1890s but was 12 games short of Jose DiMaggio's all-time mark of 56, established in 1941. After the season, Rose became a free agent.

Two no-hitters were pitched. Tom Seaver ended his long chase after one by holding the St. Louis Cardinals hitless in a 4-0 decision for Cincinnati. Bob Fosch of the Cardinals stopped the hard-swinging Pirates without a hit in a 5-0 victory.

Once again it was revolving door time for big league managers, especially in the American League. Bob Lemon took over for Billy Martin on the Yankees and won a pen-nant and world series. Earlier Lemon had been shelved in Chicago where Larry Doby re-placed him and then at the end of the campaign, Larry lost out to Don Kisinger.

Jim Fregosi replaced Dave Garcia with the California Angels. Les Moss moved in for the retiring Ralph Houk at Detroit right at the end of the campaign.

DAVE PARKER

but still a tough pitcher, won the NBA championship with a 21-6 mark at San Diego.

The free agent market was not as busy as in the past few years. Pete Rose was the prize catch and attracted the best offer. Tommy John, the bi-ionic southpaw and Luis Tiant, the Havana Perfecto, left the Dodgers and Red Sox, respec-tively, to sign with the Yankees.

The Washington Bullets won the NBA championship, out-lasting Seattle in a seven-game finale. Kentucky took the NCAA title. The Montreal Canadiens won the Stanley Cup again and Al Unser took the Indianapolis 500. Los Angeles was awarded the 1984 Summer Olympics after months of endless bickering and in-fighting between L.A. politi-cians and the International Olympic Committee.

Turnover in NFL Coaches The Dallas Cowboys won the Super Bowl in January, easily overcoming Denver. The Cow-boys had a rough trip in the first half of the 1978 season but pulled themselves together and late in November were playing like formidable chal-lengers for the 1979 Super Bowl. Once again, they were led by quarterback Roger Staubach.

Notre Dame won the 1977 college football title on New Year's Day, 1978, with a romping win over Texas while Okla-homa was losing to Arkansas in the Orange Bowl.

In candor lies our hope

WASHINGTON (NEA) - Like the laundry soaps periodically repackaged with a label proclaiming "all new ingredients inside," the national legislature that convenes here this month will be widely identified as the "new" 96th Congress.

But just as the detergent too often turns out to be merely a minor variation of the same old formula, the 96th Congress will differ little from its recent predecessors.

A wave of institutional reform during the past decade has produced numerous substantive changes, but the task remains largely unfinished. In some cases, the initial reforms have produced unexpected harmful results.

In the past, most of the pressure for improvement has come from outside groups and individuals because the legislators have been instinctively protective and defensive in rebuffing criticism of their institution.

But one of the most significant developments of the past few years, especially in the House of Representatives, has been the increased willingness of the lawmakers themselves to publicly discuss and debate their problems.

Two notable recent examples of that trend are "A House Divided," a television documentary produced by Capital Cities Communications, Inc. and last year's resignation speech by Rep. Otis G. Pike, D-N.Y., one of the most respected members of the House.

Pike's candor and insight make his farewell address a truly remarkable document. Talking about the unhealthy symbiotic relationship between special interest groups and his colleagues, he says:

"The parade of daily fund-raisers in the Democratic Club or the Republicans' Capital Hill Club in Washington — whereby the unions, corporations, trade associations and lobbyists are systematically though legally milked — is just ... nauseous."

In the television documentary broadcast in late December, Rep. Leon E. Panetta, D-Calif., is refreshingly honest in describing what too many of those donors demand in return for their money:

"I got approached by a lobbyist from (a maritime union) who said ... we gave you $2,000 in your last campaign (and) we expect a vote for this bill ... They said we don't have to talk substance, we gave you the money and we expect (your) vote."

Another participant in the Capital Cities program, Rep. David R. Obey, D-Wis., also talks frankly about the army of approximately 15,000 lobbyists permanently encamped in this city:

"You are harassed by one issue group after another. You get so many interest groups who couldn't care less if I vote for World War III as long as I vote for their pet projects ... then they are happy as clams."

On another crucial issue, Pike is both eloquent and indignant:

"The day-to-day operations of the House, the time we spend, the hours of our lives are to a large extent controlled by a small group of procedural nit-pickers ...

"No congressman minds working hard on important issues — Lord knows there are enough of them around — but this congressman is weary of wasting his time on drivel."

On the same subject, the documentary cites "a dawn-to-dusk workload too exhausting for even the most dedicated and ambitious representative" and last year's record-breaking 1,540 votes in the House, many on trivial issues.

"There is no way," concludes Obey, "that any human mind can absorb enough information to be intelligently informed on all those issues."

"Pike acknowledges that 'people expect a good deal from their public servants' but rejects the notion of 'being expected to put in a full day's work in the office every day and a full night's appearance on the banquet or meeting circuit every night.'"

Tradition-bound institutions like the House invariably are reluctant to accept change, but there's hope for needed future improvements if other lawmakers will join Panetta, Obey and Pike in a candid discussion of the issues.

VIEWPOINT

Better, Not Less Government Is Issue, Says Hobby

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby interprets the public mood in Texas as wanting better government - not less.

Hobby said a recent magazine article "concluded quite correctly that there is not a big groundswell for a reduction or withdrawal of governmental services, but there is a concern about the efficiency with which those services are being delivered."

Hobby said in an interview he expects major proposals in 1981 from a special legislator-citizen committee on the delivery of such services.

The 1979 Legislature will be Hobby's fourth as presiding officer of the Senate, but his powerful position takes on even larger dimensions with the election of Texas' first Republican governor in a century. Hobby is now the No. 1 Democratic spokesman in the Legislature.

Will the election of Bill Clements automatically trigger a Democratic-Republican legislative tug-of-war?

"I hope that's not what develops - it certainly could," said Hobby. "Democrats have been in the overwhelming majority, but Republican members of the Legislature have never had difficulty passing legislation because they were Republicans."

Conversely, he said, Republican senators have not tried to exert senatorial courtesy to block the confirmation of gubernatorial appointees from their districts just because the appointees were Democrats.

"I'd hate to see that change," Hobby said.

As the state's top Democratic officeholder, however, might he not be placed at direct odds with Clements?

"That obviously is a possibility," Hobby said. "It is not a situation I would enjoy."

When asked if he is planning his own campaign for governor in 1982, Hobby said, "I haven't made up my mind to run for governor in 1982. I haven't made up my mind not to - it's far too early."

Pre-session speculation has centered on the state budget and tax cuts, particularly Clements' statement that as much as $1 billion might be returned to Texas taxpayers.

"I don't think anybody is more for cutting taxes than I am," said Hobby, "but when you talk about cutting taxes responsibly, you've got to talk about where you can reduce expenditures."

Hobby noted that the four major areas of appropriations - education, welfare, transportation and criminal justice - constitute 85 percent of the budget, and he added:

"So, if you're talking about reductions of that magnitude $1 billion, you're talking about major program reductions, and I haven't heard anybody say where those major program reductions ought to be."

Hobby said, however, he favored repeal of the 10 cents per $100 state property tax and the sales tax on the utility bills paid by small business establishments and retail stores. He said the state severance tax on oil and gas ought to be changed so that more of the tax load can be placed on natural gas going out of Texas.

Asked about the possibility of excluding up to two personal autos from property taxation, Hobby said, "I'm not opposed to that."

Hobby said he thought the Legislature could quickly enact laws implementing the home-stead exemptions and special provisions for agricultural land provided for in constitutional amendments adopted Nov. 7.

He said he hoped a proposal to include intangibles such as stocks and bonds in formulas for determining state school aid had been "laid to rest" by computations that showed this would take away virtually all aid from metropolitan districts.

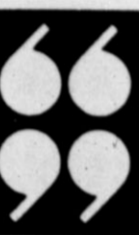

Ask any portion of Rep. Wayne Peveto's so-called tax reform bill might be salvaged, Hobby said, "I would like to see that portion passed which would allow counties to have a centralized assessing agency for all subdivisions in the county, if the people in the county want it."

He said, too, that the Legislative Budget Board's proposed spending bill envisions no reduction in the state employee work force. Clements has said he would like to reduce the number of state employees by 25,000 through attrition.

"It's a very tight current level of services type budget," Hobby said, with major increases proposed only among prison guards and animal health inspectors. The inspectors are needed to head off a possible federal quarantine of Texas cattle, Hobby said.

"First, let me show you some of our standard approaches ..."

ERA Extension Renews Challenge

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Though the drive toward ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment remained stalled, 1978 ended on a note of hope for backers of the measure that would prohibit discrimination on the basis of sex.

As the original seven-year deadline of March 22, 1979, approached with only 35 out of the needed 38 states having ratified the ERA, a move to extend the time limit gained momentum and a crowd estimated as high as 100,000 gathered in Washington's muggy July heat to demonstrate for extension.

Action by the House the next month and by the Senate in October set a new deadline of June 30, 1982, adding 39 months to gain the required ratification by three-fourths of the states.

The National Organization for Women and other supporters promised a stepped-up campaign to get the amendment added to the Constitution. Phyllis Schlafly, who heads the Stop ERA movement, vowed to continue to oppose it.

Meanwhile, figures released by the Labor Department showed that women working full time earned an average of $5,000 a year less than men in most large metropolitan areas.

Department economist Howard Hayghe explained that women have traditionally been concentrated in clerical and service jobs which are generally lower paying than the posts held by men.

"And even when they enter the professional-technical occupation group," he added, "women are concentrated as teachers, nurses and in occupations that are relatively poorer paying than traditional male jobs, such as lawyers and doctors."

A study by the Scientific Manpower Commission showed that the percentage of degrees going to women in the sciences, engineering, medicine, denistry and law had soared in recent years.

But the report added that, except for beginning engineers and industrial chemists, "women's salaries are lower than those of men with comparable training and experience at every age, every degree level, in every field and with every type of employer."

Another study, by the American Association of University Women, showed that women in higher education have made no statistical gains on faculties since the federal government outlawed sex discrimination in education in 1972.

The number of full-time faculty women at colleges and universities remained at 25 percent, the number of women presidents remained at 6 percent and the number of chief women business administrators at 5 percent.

Nevertheless, women continued to make their own push toward equality. With all the sex barriers they have been breaking in recent years, it might seem their precedent-setting days are on the wane. But a look back at 1978 shows they were still making inroads in jobs once dominated or held exclusively by men.

at Dalhousie University in Halifax, Nova Scotia.

The U.S. Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point, N.Y., became the first of the nation's five service schools to graduate female students, awarding diplomas to eight women among the 245 midshipmen.

Women representing all branches of the military were included for the first time in the White House honor guard at the urging of first lady Rosalynn Carter.

The Marines became the last of the services to name a woman as general, with Margaret A. Brewer, 47, receiving the silver star of a brigadier general and becoming director of information for the corps.

The Air Force officially recognized motherhood by providing a three-piece dark-blue maternity uniform, combining a tunic top with skirt or pants, for pregnant Air Force women.

Tradition was shattered when women officers reported for duty aboard Navy ships and enlisted women became full-fledged crew members on non-combat ships. The way was cleared when Congress enacted legislation ending a long-standing ban on assigning women to ships other than hospital vessels and transports.

And the Coast Guard, which only in 1977 began allowing women to serve on sea duty, announced that the service will no longer have any restrictions based solely on sex to govern the training, assignment and career opportunities of its personnel.

At the Rhein Main Air Base in West Germany, Airman 1st Class Donna Stewart became the first female aircraft marshal of the Air Force in Europe.

Closer to home, 45-year-old Jane Cahill Pfeiffer, named chairman of the National Broadcasting Co., achieved the highest post ever attained by a woman at any of the three networks.

Nancy Hays Teeters, 48, newest member of the Federal Reserve Board, is the first woman member since Congress created the central bank system in 1913.

Faye Wattleton, 34, became the first woman, the first black and the youngest national president in the history of Planned Parenthood, heading a network of 189 affiliates in 43 states and the District of Columbia.

The Rev. Mary Michael Simpson, a Canon Residentiary at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York, broke centuries of tradition as the first ordained woman to preach in London's Westminster Abbey.

In Maine, Deborah Palmont, 28, as that state's first woman game warden, underwent a training course with 17 men.

"As far as her group is concerned she's accepted and she's just becoming one of the guys. Not many of them can run as fast as she can," said Alanson B. Noble, chief of the Inland Fisheries and Wildlife Game Warden Service.

Hanna Holborn Gray, 47, was named 10th president of the University of Chicago, the first woman to head the school in its 85-year history.

A retired Air Force lieutenant colonel, Norma Maine Loer, was named dean of the George Washington University School of Government and Business Administration, the first woman to head a major U.S. school of business.

And for the first time all of the Seven Sisters colleges were headed by women when Bryn Mawr College selected Mary Patterson McPherson as its sixth president.

Ellen Fleysber, 33, as deputy police commissioner for public information in New York City, is the first woman to hold the highest information office in the police department. She is a former newspaper and television reporter.

Muriel Humphrey, 65, became the only woman in the Senate when she was appointed by Minnesota Gov. Rudy Perpich to the seat left vacant by the death of her husband, Hubert. Later in the year she was joined by Maryon P. Allen, Democratic senator from Alabama, who replaced her late husband, James.

Mrs. Humphrey announced in April that she would not seek election in November to the remaining four years of her husband's term, preferring to return to Minnesota "and resume life as a private person with ample time for my home, family and friends."

It looked for a time as though Bella Abzug, former New York Democratic congresswoman, might involuntarily be going back to private life after her defeat in the contest to serve the remainder of New York City's Mayor Ed Koch's congressional term. But President Carter chose her and Carmen Votaw, president of the National Conference of Puerto Rican Women, as co-chairmen of the National Advisory Committee for Women.

In the November elections, Nancy Landon Kassebaum, a Kansas Republican, was the first woman to be elected to the Senate since Margaret Chase Smith of Maine in 1966. With Mrs. Humphrey and Mrs. Allen retiring, she will be the only woman in that body next year. In the House there will be 16 women, a loss of two in the 435-member chamber.

An early women's rights crusader was honored when the Senate Banking Committee approved a new dollar coin to carry a profile of Susan B. Anthony, the first woman to appear on a U.S. coin.

FAITH DEMONSTRATES THE FALLACY OF FALSE PRIDE

Pride can be a major stumbling-block to the solution of many of the problems involving our fellow human beings. It is a false facade that often prevents us from seeking needed help, ending a quarrel, forgiving a minor grievance or admitting our own mistakes. Faith can demonstrate the error of this stubborn trait, by exposing pride as an enemy, totally incompatible with the love that is taught in the Bible. So go to your Church and learn how to tear down this barrier of pride that may be the only thing standing between you and happiness.

"Pride goeth before destruction, and an haughty spirit before a fall."
— Proverbs 16:18

I pray to God to keep me from being proud.
—Samuel Pepys
