There seems to be a growing apprehension, a distrust of what the future holds in certain sections of the economy most sensitive to government controls, a reaction that is beginning to creep into other areas which therefore have never questioned the security of their constitutional rights. It is beginning to be realized that what the Constitution said 100 years ago with respect to private ownership and the exercise of personal rights is not the same as what it says today in the language of interpretative decrees.

Under the pressures of changing economic and social realities—which have a way of becoming translated into political forces—a new document of fundamental rights is being formed. Those who thought that a simple and supposedly clear statement of principles was enough to guarantee their permanence in the form intended, reckoned without the factors of birth rates and liberal immigration laws. Politicians, like business men, tend to heed the imperatives of profit; it is necessary to get elected.

In plain words, the Constitution is being rewritten by interpretation. For instance, in majority opinions supporting a decision outlawing State and local laws against "sit-ins" where the defendants are in "pursuit of a constitutional right," certain of the U. S. Supreme Court justices held that a business which is subject to Constitutional provisions is involved with the State and, therefore subject to Constitutional provisions against discrimination on the basis of race, religion etc. in the sale of its services.

The projection of that principle, it seems to me, threatens the very existence of private ownership and free enterprise. It has long been accepted in our society that the right to hold property is the right to do with it as one pleases so long as it does not impair the same rights of another.

The right of private ownership is the right to make decisions about what to do with it—to sell or not to sell, to hold or not to hold. Without that right, private ownership, and hence private ownership, becomes meaningless. The right to refuse a service may be socially bad, but it is vital to the security of the free enterprise system. There is no way to make a distinction between services withheld on the basis of race, creed or color and what is withheld from motives of good management, other than court action and what a confusion and mass of litigious management our citizens will have cut out for themselves if it comes to that.

We may need a new political creed of business ownership and management in this country. There is no doubt that all of us—business and labor, included—need more profound and dedicated sense of our obligation to society in the conduct of our economic affairs. But even if such a need could be realized and secured by law—which it cannot without a secure basis of public conviction—it seems to me that the process should be done by the people, and not by a small symposium of men, no matter how wise, dedicated and leaned they may be. Only in such a way can there be a real and unqualified acceptance of the change.

Mr. and Mrs. Birt Roberts, Mrs. C. E. Darnell, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Roberts and daughter, Pauline, spent the day Tuesday with their cousins, Mr. and Mrs. "Dock" Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Wylie Cox, and Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Carlson at the Lueders Baptist Encampment grounds.

Petry, Jr., Chairman of the Commission; and J. H. Kultgen, member of the Commission.

Rain Total Climbs To Almost 7 Inches In Week

Thundershowers which followed an explosive and varied pattern over the area Monday night and Tuesday morning, dumped from 1.5 to more than six inches of rain over the territory.

There was a smattering of hail in some sections, but about all the damage done was from washing of the fields by the heavy downpours in certain areas. The Romney territory received 5.75 inches of rain, a telephoned report by Conrad Schaeffer, a farmer in that community, said. There was considerable washing of plowed fields, he reported. The rain was accompanied by strong winds, but damage was negligible from this source, he said. Benefits of the moisture during the past week far outweigh the losses sustained, he said.

The Okra community also received excessively heavy rains while residents of the May community reported 3.3 inches fell in that Brown county community.

Rising Star City Hall gauge recorded 1.6 inches, bringing the past week's total to almost 7 inches.

CofC Endorses City Program For Sewage Control

The Rising Star Chamber of Commerce, meeting at noon in the Elite Cafe, gave unanimous endorsement to the program of the City for rebuilding its sewage disposal plant and modernizing the sewer system.

It is a necessary and worthwhile project," said President James Rutherford.

The members agreed. The City has called an election for June 1 to authorize issuance of $64,000 in revenue bonds to help finance the project. Remainder of the financing is sought in a $28,500 grant of funds through the State Health Department, which will not have to be repaid. The revenue bonds will be paid out of revenues of the City utility system and will not be a charge against ad valorem taxes.

The CofC also approved re-chartering of the Boy Scout and Cub Scout troops in the city. A hut, built of tile on City Park property to house Scout activities, will be dedicated shortly. Connections to water and sewer lines and to electric power are yet to be made.

About $200, remains to be paid on the hut, and this sum, together with funds needed to complete utility connections, will be sought by popular subscription.

RE-WEAVING MAY BE THE ANSWER

What do you do when a live cigarette ash burns a hole in your newest dress or suit? Don't relegate the garment to the ragbag if it has a burn or tear.

Re-weaving is an ancient art, and many professional dry cleaners offer a re-weaving service.

Re-weaving originated in the fabric mills of Europe where it was used to repair defects in the bolts of cloth. There are several terms used to describe reweaving, such as French weaving, in-weaving, piece weaving and over weaving. Basically, the two best-known methods are French weaving and piece weaving.

Both of these methods can be invisible as long as the weaver duplicates the exact weave of the fabric and as long as the correct method is used for each type of damage such as moth damage, acid burns, worn areas, burned areas as tears.

In French weaving, the weaver takes new thread from the seams of the garment mended. Using a sewing needle, he replaces each damaged yarn one by one. In piece weaving, the weaver cuts out a square piece of fabric from an unexposed area of the garment to be mended. He ravel out all four sides of the piece, leaving one-half inch fringe around all of it.

Re-weaving is not inexpensive because of the time and skill needed to do a good job. It can save an expensive garment from the ragbag—and it certainly is cheaper than replacing the garment.

New federal rules requiring disclosure of all materials used in making shoes have been announced recently by the Federal Trade Commission.

The FTC said the rules will go into effect at the manufacturing level in 90 days and will apply to labeling and advertising.

These were among the principal requirements:

No trade name or coined name may be used if it falsely suggests shoes or slippers are made of a certain material. For instance, it said, nonleather materials may not be described as "dura-leather" or "bark-hyde".

If imitation leather is used, this must be disclosed through such statements as "imitation leather shoeboard" or "outer-sold, innersole linings composed of imitation leather."

If a leather material is embossed, dyed or otherwise processed to look like a different kind of leather, the label must tell actual type used. For example, "simulated alligator made of split cowhide."

All labeling disclosures must be made in the form or stamps tags or labels fixed to the shoe in such a way that they will remain in play until delivered to retail customers. All labels must be the type that can be easily seen and understood upon casual inspection of the product.

14 Billions Are Paid Annually In S. S. Benefits

Have you ever wondered what happens to the social security taxes that you pay? Does it ever get back to the people who pay the taxes? The answer is "Yes," according to H. L. Weatherly, Field Representative from the Abilene School Administration District Office.

At the present time, social security benefits are being paid at the rate of over 14 billion dollars a year. More than 18 million people receive a benefit each month.

Contrary to what many people believe, not all social security benefits are aged, retired people. Over two million children and 434,000 young widowed mothers are getting benefits under the program. In addition, monthly benefits are now being paid to about 700,000 disabled workers and to 500,000 wives and children of these disabled workers.

Right here in Eastland County, over $140,000 will be paid about June 5 in social security benefits for May 1963. These benefits are primarily intended for the beneficiaries' own economic security, but they also help business in the community. Most of the money is spent for food, clothing, and other expenses.

"It is interesting to note that the average old-age benefits nationally for December 1962, was $76.19 and that the average such benefits for this State was $68.49, and $65.69 for Eastland County," Weatherly added.

As It Looks From Here

By Omar Burleson, M. C. 17th Texas District

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In 1962 the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives conducted hearings in connection with alleged abuses by corporations in deducting expenses for income tax purposes.

It was developed that some large businesses maintained summer resorts, yachts and even deducted expenses for big game hunts in Africa for the pleasure of officers and members of boards of directors.

As a result, the Congress passed a law giving the Internal Revenue Service power to close these loopholes by regulations.

There was widespread complaint and publicity on the apparent abuses. Stockholders in some of the corporations named and demanded that action be taken.

It is not possible to spell out every detail in legislation. The general intent of the Congress is usually expressed in a report accompanying each bill, but in most every law, verbiage is comparatively brief and usually followed with the words, "Under such procedures and regulations as may be promulgated," followed by the name of the Executive Department under whose jurisdiction the law is to be administered. In other words, the Executive Branch of Government does administer and execute laws passed by the Legislative Branch.

In the case of the tax bill of 1962, the Internal Revenue Service has adopted procedures which are more severe and have more far-reaching effects than many of us believe was intended by the Congress. As a result business leader now say they are unable to claim "good will" expenditure under accounting systems which make it practically impossible for them to comply. Hotels, restaurants, dispensers of food and entertainment, say that it is causing a real depression in these trades and putting people who render services of this nature out of business.

Mr. Steven B. Wilson, Chairman of the board of the Fram-

Corporation, says, "Business in America is done on the basis of confidence between individuals. The larger the responsibilities, the more critical it is for executives to know and understand each other. Such personal knowledge is not obtained simply sitting at desks discussing business. Social and recreational relationships are a part of the process."

Mr. Wilson further says that, by reason of highly competitive business activity, it is more necessary than ever that executives have use of complete entertainment budgets. "Entertainment for the purpose of building good will with customers is no less important than national advertising. There are no limits to the funds which can be devoted to advertising," said Mr. Wilson.

Many business executives feel that if their business is to continue successful and to pay taxes on profits, its officers, executives and salesman will have to spend money to entertain customers, prospects and others who have an effect on their businesses. These expense will not be allowed except under very limited conditions by the Internal Revenue Service under the interpretation of the 1962 law.

Business in this country is based on "good will" in one form or another. Of course, any business must prove its product, but to prove its quality or efficiency it is necessary to interest people in buying it.

America became the world's leading industrial nation through hard competitive selling which requires substantial expenditures for this abstract thing called "good will." Good will often is a consideration in the price of a business. It is not to be found in the inventory, but rather in the firm's standing and the attitude of its customers towards it.

The tax writing committee of the Congress is now having another look at what was intended by the law. Witnesses are being heard as to the effects of the interpretation by the Internal Revenue Service unless the Internal Revenue Service adopts more practical and workable regulations, changes in the law may be recommended by the Committee. The principal determination is whether more tax money is lost than gained by the reform.
