Mis-spent 15 minutes a day and, at the end of the year, you will have wasted nine days of 10 hours each.

Seven trucks, loaded with bread which was going to be fed to hogs, were seen in a single day recently heading east out of Dallas. No doubt an equal number of such trucks could have been counted on the highways leading west, north and south from that city.

Multiply this by all the cities, large, medium and small in Texas, and you have thousands upon thousands of loaves of bread being fed to the hogs weekly—at a time when paper, flour, sugar, yeast, milk and shortening should be conserved for our fighting forces and the civilian population forming the second line of defense. Consider the electric power (vital to national defense) and the manpower (which is even more vital) that were consumed to produce this mountain of virtually wasted bread.

Why does this situation exist and can't something be done about it? L. Self of Terrell, president of the Independent Bakers Association of Texas, has an explanation for the condition—and his organization offers a solution.

The cause, he declares, is that each baker serving a grocery tries to out-do his competitors in the size of the pile of loaves he stacks on the store table, on the theory that the bigger the mound of his bread, the more likely the customer is to buy that brand. The result is that each baker leaves far too many loaves because he feels he must make this showing in order to attract the customer's eye.

But the grocer gets the bread on consignment—he pays only for the loaves he sells. Next morning, the baker's truck comes around and collects the unsold loaves — and these represent the bread that, by hundreds of truckloads, is disposed of for almost nothing as food for hogs and for similar uses.

The remedy? Self says it is for the grocer to pay for all the bread he gets. In this way, the merchant will order from each baker only the amount that he needs. That will eliminate this staggering waste that not merely runs into thousands of dollars each week but represents the loss of materials, electric power and man-power that the nation needs to help win this war.

It is estimated that the amount of bread so wasted each week represents the output of every bakery in Texas for one day out of seven! Self hopes that Texas citizens will write to Leon Henderson, the national price administrator in Washington, and to their Congressman and urge that the proposed remedy be adopted for the duration of the war.

Mexican proverb:

One can not learn to swim in a field.

Praise the man whose bread you eat.

He loses all who loses the right moment.

Even in hell, one finds companionship.

He who says much must be right sometimes.

For a marriage to be peaceful, the husband should be deaf and the wife blind.

That's a wise delay that makes the road safe.

Beware of one who is always laughing, as a fool; and of one who never laughs, as a knave.

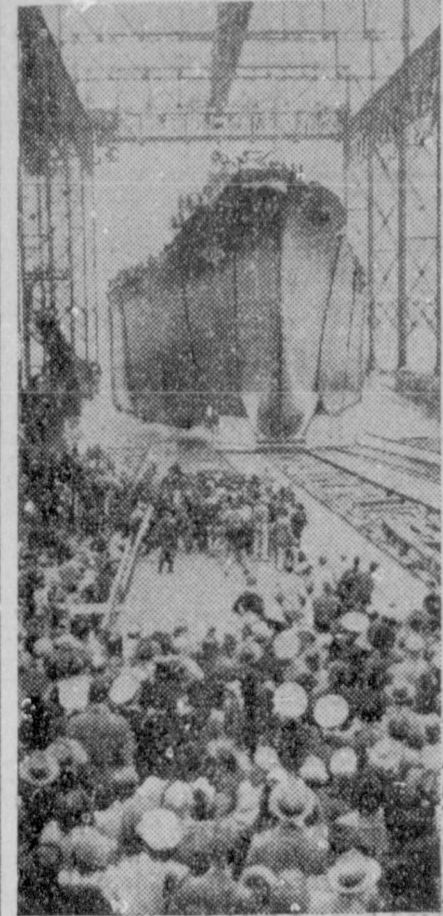

An old mountaineer, who had never visited a town of any size before, decided to accompany his son to a small nearby city and see what the place looked like. Climbing out of the car on the main street, the old man appeared fascinated by the pavement. He scraped his feet on the hard surface and bent over and touched it with his fingers.

Amazement turned to scorn, and the old man turned to his son and drawled: "Well, I don't blame 'em for building a town here. This ground is too darn hard to plow, anyhow!"

"Miss Epsom," said the colored parson impressively, as he led her into the brook for baptism, "It's gwine to lead you out inter dis beah stream and wash out every spot o' sin you's got!" "Lawsy, pahson," giggled the damsel, "in dat 'll ole shallow creek?"

Pete King was in the News office Monday morning and stated he had numerous solicitations to make the race for County Commissioner, but had not decided as to whether he would enter or not, but if the solicitations were strong enough he would make the race. He stated he would not make any formal announcement yet as there is plenty of time.

Sipping Cocktails With Windsors And Interviewing Forger All In Day's Work For Former Burkett Girl

Editor's Note: From Kathryn Cravens, widely known news commentator, this week came a letter telling of her activities in New York. In compliance with recent requests she included a brief article which should be of interest to readers of the Review. It is remembered that Kathryn Cravens was born and reared at Burkett and is a sister of Mrs. Wiley Newton of that community. Her programs are heard regularly over the New York radio station WNEW daily except Sunday at 9:45 each morning.

Some cynic asked bitterly "What can one expect of a day when one has to begin it by getting up in the morning?" Getting up is my chief problem as a radio commentator because I have to arise at 5 A.M., in order to write my broadcast and get to the studio before nine o'clock for late bulletins coming over the news ticker. However the real work of the day is not the actual writing but the gathering of my "News Through A Woman's Eyes." Every day I must interview some personality who makes the headlines or find a human interest story which holds the humor or tragedy or bravery of unknown men and women. Thus, when the Duke and Duchess of Windsor came to New York I had cocktails with them at the Waldorf; an hour later I was in a Bowery flophouse talking to a forger who had deeply resented the New York Sun's implication that he had stolen an Abraham Lincoln letter from the Library of Congress. "It isn't true," he told me in outraged innocence, "I didn't steal the Lincoln letter. I stole the Benjamin Franklin letter."

Two interviews a day is generally my limit. The time is spent covering a Broadway opening, snooping about for glamor-gossip in nightclubs or—if I am lucky—having a quiet evening at home catching up on new books and reading history. But I always write my broadcast scripts in the early morning. My mind is rested at that time even if I'm not!

The war has naturally affected all radio commentators. We have a grave responsibility toward our listeners. News must be presented with discrimination, truth, and good taste. Gone are the days of sensationalism when "reliable reports" were broadcast as facts, when haphazard reporting and credulous thinking misled and misinformed the public. I hope they are gone forever. But the war is not a subject I enjoy discussing on the air. Women, and men too, are surfeited with horror and need release from it when they tune in on a broadcast. That is why I search for stories about unusual, inspiring or amusing people. Yet from the time that wholesale murder occurred at Pearl Harbor avoidance of war news became impossible. My problem at present is to reconcile my conviction that we need to escape from war news with the tragic fact that we cannot.

My listeners are realists, as most women are. They are quick to detect insincerity, so I must talk to them about what I really feel, not what I think they think I should feel. They want to hear about what Helen Keller is like in her own home; they are curious about what Emily Post serves at Luncheon and they want to know about Carrie Jacobs Bond's garden. But they aren't very interested in Peggy Hopkins Joyce's clothes. "Who cares?" they write "Tell us about someone who's really doing something." So I interview the woman head of New York's Civilian Defense—and letters pour in from fans asking how they can be of service to their country.

Letters from listeners are sometimes pathetic, sometimes infinitely touching, often comic. In my first year of broadcasting from New York I received 228,000 letters within five days. Now after five years fan mail still intrigues me. This week a man wrote me to please ask the state of California to pay his way out there and give him a job raising lettuce. He would consider $80.00 a week. A woman wrote: "My husband has been drunk for ten days. What can I do to sober him up?" And another woman listener informed me that she had read some of my articles in newspapers. "I bin figgerin'," she wrote, "for a long spell of time that I'd like to be a writer too. I ain't got no edjucashun but Mom says I share do write a pretty hand." A young girl asked my advice about marriage—"Should I marry this boy who hasn't any money? I love him..." The pitiful thing about these people is that they think you are omnipotent. They really think you can help. So you try.

When I can get the time I fly to where the news breaks, and cover developments in Washington, inspect Navy receiving stations, find a story at Long Sing or visit a "haunted" house in Boston. I strive for variety always in my broadcasts, the contrast of laughter and tears that is the fabric of people's lives. Often I'm exhausted. I hate that alarm clock that awakens me six times a week at five in the morning. But when I shake the sleep from my eyes and watch the first faint sun gleam across the rooftops of Manhattan, I realize that a lot can be expected of a day that begins with getting up! In every nook and cranny of New York there's a story waiting to be told. It's my job to find it.

Among the outstanding geographic features in Texas, none exceeds in impressiveness the many canyons carved out of the layers of rock and clay which have covered the surface of the State since remote times. In Texas may be found every kind of canyon characteristic of the Southwest and West, from the gloomy box type, with its narrow perpendicular walls rising nearly 2,000 feet above the stream floor, to tree-lined ravines chiseled by clear-running streams.

Water — especially storm water — is the principal force which sculpts canyons. In regions of little rainfall, sudden terrific downpours may hurl an avalanche of water, stones and even large rocks through the gorges in nature's continuing process of leveling the earth's surface. The canyons of Texas are located within a region having an annual rainfall of from 15 to 25 inches lying west of the 100th meridian. The elevation of the canyon country varies from 2,000 to 5,000 feet above sea level.

Palo Duro and Tule Canyons in the Texas Panhandle, are a dual product of the forces set in motion on the High Plains ages ago. Together they drain thousands of square miles of territory reaching to and beyond the New Mexican border. The upper reaches of Palo Duro Canyon constitute the headwaters of Red River, which carries the silt and loam of the High Plains into the Gulf of Mexico. Red River derives its very name from the red clays stripped by erosion from the Jeoply-cleft, Permian Red Beds.

ture's elemental warfare. One huge mass, known far and wide as the Lighthouse, is 200 feet high and can be seen for miles in its garish green layers of alternating sandstone and clay.

Tule Canyon, a tributary of Palo Duro Canyon, lies wholly in Briscoe county; while much shorter than Palo Duro and less widely advertised, it is nevertheless highly pictorial and interesting. It is as deep as the Palo Duro and its walls in some places seem to rise even more steeply and forbiddingly out of the depths.

It is Trans-Pecos region of extreme West Texas that we come to the really great canyons of our State. As a result of the erosion of successive uplifts combined with the intrusion of igneous formation, some of the most interesting geologic and geographic features in the entire nation have been created there. Along the northern border of the Trans-Pecos area in the Guadalupe mountains, which extend into Texas from New Mexico, are located several of the most beautiful canyons of the Southwest. About 100 miles to the south, in the Davis Mountains, are several fine canyons, and a similar distance farther in the same direction are the canyons along the Rio Grande.

Deeper and more formidable canyons of the Davis Mountains are Limpia, Madera, Little Aguja, Big Eguja, Horse Thief and Cherry, all of which are flanked by walls ascending to heights of 1,000 to 1,500 feet. In their upper levels they carry forests of western juniper, piñon pine, limber and ponderosa pines. Into these more or less forbidding canyons only burro trails lead, although recently efforts have been made to open roads from Balmarhea into their lower reaches.
