Objects of Boy Scout Week Outlined

One of the objects of Boy Scout Week is to bring to the attention of the citizenship of each community the vital facts with reference to its boyhood. We have found the following facts existing in this community.

There are in this community 94 boys between the ages of 11 and 20. 54 between the ages of 11 to 14, and 40 between the ages of 15 to 20.

We found that less than 60 of these boys attended school anything like regularly last term. Of this 60, 44 of them were from the ages of 11 to 14, and 16 between the ages of 15 to 20.

Of the 34 who never attended school only about 13 of them were really working, leaving 21 who neither attended school or worked. Most of this 21 were boys above 15.

At least five of these boys were what you would call delinquent, that is they had either been arrested or the city marshal had evidence sufficient for arrest.

We found only about 53 boys who had any connection with the Sunday Schools and churches of the community. More than 75 per cent of these 53 were boys between the ages of 11 to 14. The Sunday schools and church being the only constructive agencies in the community except one troop of Boy Scouts, the other 41 were without any kind of a positive and constructive program for character building and citizenship.

Another one of its objects is to find and enlist men who are qualified to act as Scoutmasters, and Assistant Scoutmasters, Troop Committeemen, and so on. In view of the facts stated above surely there will be some one in this community who will volunteer to do this much for the boys of Slaton.

Another object is to enroll as associate members of the national Council one million persons who believe in the Boy Scout Program and are willing to have it extended to more boys by paying one dollar or more for membership. Each community has its definite quota of this million. Our quota is six. Surely we will be able to find six men who will take associate membership in this great organization.

PUBLICITY SUPT.

"No Accident Week" June 22-28 Inclusive

Railroads under Federal control, comprising the Central Western Region, have set aside the week of June 22 to 28, inclusive, as a NO ACCIDENT WEEK. During that week the 350,000 railroad men employed in this Region will be asked to, in every possible way, guard against injury, will be asked to have in their makeup just a little more of the milk of human kindness, to be actuated by somewhat different motives and strive for a higher ideal than ever before—and it is to be hoped will be conscientiously and wholeheartedly striving to avoid an injury that might bring physical suffering to themselves or fellow-workmen or carry a sorrow into their homes.

Few people outside of railroad service know of the constructive, effective safety work being carried on today; as evidence of its accomplishments be it noted that in the Central Western Region alone, during the first three months of 1919, there were 90 fewer killed and 1050 fewer injured than in same period last year.

The Santa Fe say in their appeal for the individual co-operation of their employees: "The commodity we are trying to sell is Happiness, the price of it is merely an effort to do the right, the square thing; we will take an assurance of one's good intentions as the first payment, and promise larger and more lasting dividends than are possible from any other investment."

It occurs to The Slatonite that the period set apart by the railroads as "No Accident Week" might properly and profitably be similarly observed by the general public; if parents would begin that week to keep their children from making a play ground out of the public streets; if drivers of automobiles might begin to show some regards for the rights of others, drive more safely and sanely, and begin to show some appreciation of the dangers lurking at public grade crossings, etc., it would be a history-making week for this entire region.

House Party at V-Ranch.

The Robertson Ranch near Slaton was the center of an enjoyable house party last week. Miss Gertrude Nofan of Slaton and her friend Miss Zella Sharpless from Amarillo were present, and those attending from Lubbock were Misses Winnie Bates, Ouida Easter, and Ruth Hussey. A dance was given at the ranch Thursday night. On Friday afternoon the crowd motored to Ralls to attend the ball game and Saturday's recreation was a dance given in Slaton. A tired but happy crowd returned to their homes Saturday.—Avalanche.

At the Church of Christ.

Elder J. P. Strickland of Tahoka will preach at the Church of Christ here Sunday morning and evening. The general public has a cordial invitation to hear him.

Recruiting Office Opened Here.

Corporal Cox and Private Jaramillo have opened an office in the Caps' Hotel building for the purpose of recruiting men for the U. S. Army. They will be here only one week.

Slaton vs. Littlefield.

Slaton and Littlefield will cross bats at the City Park here Sunday afternoon. Game called at 4 o'clock. A good game is promised.

This will put the district about $20,000 or more over the top.

WHEN THE WELL COMES IN.

I've sold my mules and my brindle cow,
And my Georgia stock and my turn-in plough,
And the old brood sow, that I bought last spring,
And have bought some stock in a well, by jing,
They're going to bore somewhere, and when
They fetch her in just watch me then
As I'm shovelin' in my piles of tin
An' livin' high—when the well comes in.

'Twas the tiniest feller you ever see
That sold me the stock, and he says,
sayzee,
That a feller is a fool to sweat and toil
Instead of putting his money in oil
That'll make him rich in a little while
So his folks can live in the latest style
An' move to town and dress like sin
Without nothin' to do—when the well comes in.

When I told Poteet, who runs the bank,
That I'd bought the stock, the blamed old crank,
Said a feller was just a plain darn fool
To sell his stock and farming tools,
An' the other things that he has got to sell
And put his money in a wildcat well.
But you just wait and watch me grin
At old Poteet—when the well comes in.

When the well comes in I'm going to buy
A great big car, that's geared up high,
And then doll up from head to feet
And drive to the bank and see
Poteet,
And make him feel like a ten cent fool
For advertisin' me not to sell my mules
And farmin' tools and corn in the bin,
And buy oil stock—when the well comes in.
—Swiped, from the fellow who wisped it before.

A LITTLE LAY SERMON FROM AN EXCHANGE

If we had a daughter and found her loafing around the post office when she had no business there, we would see that she changed her conduct. And if she got in with a gang of girls and loafed around the street when we thought she was visiting a friend, we would see that she reformed. Yet, whose fault is it?

Parents should know what their children are doing and begin to look after them before they form habits that will make them a target for the devil to shoot at.

It does not take long to corrupt the most innocent of girls and make them a terrible sorrow, instead of a source of great pleasure to parents.

The busy, happy home girl is not apt to get into mischief and the girl who has a wise mother is not an idle girl. Girlhood is the time to teach the lessons of life and time to fit the daughter for her work in a home of her own, therefore it is criminal for mothers not to give their daughters a chance to make good wives and intelligent mothers. If home making can not be taught in the family home, then put the girl in a family where she may be taught housework, cooking, baking, sewing, laundry work and many necessary things that most women must know when they take upon themselves the duties incident to making homes, after they lay aside the wedding gown and veil. —Higgins News.

SENIOR GIRLS ENTERTAINED BY MRS. A. E. WHITEHEAD

After commencement exercises Monday evening each Senior girl was handed an envelope. When opened, nothing presented itself except a gilt-edged shasta daisy, fastened to a green tinted card, but upon further investigation it was discovered that under the petals of this daisy an invitation read like this:

"Senior girls to luncheon with Mrs. Whitehead Thursday evening, May 27, 1919, 7:30 o'clock."

On Thursday every girl responded and were exactly on time except Peggie Green and Beatrice Robertson, who were never known to be present at an appointed hour.

Each girl found her plate marked by a cut out College Miss in uniform, the square top, white shirt waist and tie of gold colored silk crepe paper.

A four course luncheon was served the girls by Misses Wheelock and Dickinson of Lubbock.

The color scheme of white and gold was carried out thru the evening, even into the individual cakes served with the cream which were iced with the class flower, the shasta daisy.

After luncheon the girls entertained the hostess with music and readings. An interesting conversation ensued, "Where will I go and what will I do in college."

At a late hour the young ladies assured Mrs. Whitehead of their appreciation and that the occasion had been one of the most pleasant of the graduation.

"I will put my coat over your head. Here is a little electric torch. Don't flash it until I am sure the coat is arranged so that you can do so without a gleam of light getting out from under." He pressed the torch and a bit of closely folded paper in the other's hand and carefully draped the coat over his head.

Barnes read: "Thank God! I was afraid you would wait until tomorrow night. Then it would have been too late. I must get away tonight, but I cannot leave—I dare not leave without something that is concealed in another part of the house. I do not know how to secure it. My door is locked from the outside. What am I to do? I would rather die than to go away without it."

Hastily he wrote: "If you do not come at once, we will force our way into the house and fight it out with them all. My friend is coming up the vines. Let him enter the window. Tell him where to go and he will do the rest. He is a miracle man. Nothing is impossible to him. If he does not return in ten minutes, I shall follow."

There was no response to this. The head reappeared in the window, but no word came down.

Sprouse whispered: "I am going up. Stay here. If you hear a commotion in the house, run for it. Don't wait for me. I'll probably be done for."

"I'll do just as I please about running," said Barnes, and there was a deep thrill in his whisper. "Good luck. God help you if they catch you."

"Not even he could help me then. Good-by. I'll do what I can to induce her to drop out of the window if anything goes wrong with me downstairs."

A moment later he was silently scaling the wall of the house, feeling his way carefully, testing every precarious foothold, dragging himself painfully upwards by means of the most uncanny, animal-like strength and stealth.

Barnes could not recall drawing a single breath from the instant the man left his side until the faintly luminous square above his head was obliterated by the black of his body as it wriggled over the ledge.

He will follow Sprouse. When he crawled through the window and stood erect inside the room, he found himself confronted by a tall, shadowy figure, standing half-way between him and the door.

He advanced a step or two and uttered a soft hiss of warning.

"Not a sound," he whispered, drawing still nearer. "I have come four thousand miles to help you, countless. This is not the time or place to explain. I haven't a moment to waste. I need only say that I have been sent from Paris by persons you know to aid you in delivering the crown jewels into the custody of your country's minister in Paris. We must act swiftly. Tell me where they are. I will get them."

"Not a Sound," He Whispered.

"Who are you?" she whispered only.

"My name is Theodore Sprouse. I have been loaned to your embassy by your government. I beg of you do not ask questions now. Tell me where they sleep, how I may get to his room that he is the prince?"

"I am constn."

"Not a sound," he whispered, "I will do what I can to induce her to drop out of the window if anything goes wrong with me downstairs."

"I'll do just as I please about running," said Barnes, and there was a deep thrill in his whisper. "Good luck. God help you if they catch you."

"Not even he could help me then. Good-by. I'll do what I can to induce her to drop out of the window if anything goes wrong with me downstairs."

man sits in there all night long, keeping watch. You could not approach Prince Ugo's door without being seen by that watcher.

"You said in your note to Barnes that the—something was in Curtis' study."

"The prince sleeps in Mr. Curtis' room. The study adjoins it, and can only be entered from the bedroom. There is no other door. What are you doing?"

"I am going to take a peep over the transom, first of all. If the coast is clear, I shall take a little stroll down the hall. Do not be alarmed. I will come back—with the things we both want. Pardon me." He sat down on the edge of the bed and removed his shoes. She watched him as if fascinated while he opened the bosom of his soft shirt and stuffed the wet shoes inside.

Then he said: "You are not dressed for flight. May I suggest that while I am outside you slip on a dark skirt and coat? You cannot go far in that dressing gown. It would be in shreds before you had gone a hundred feet through the brush. If I do not return to this room inside of fifteen minutes, or if you hear sounds of a struggle, crawl through the window and go down the vines. Barnes will look out for you."

"You must not fail, Theodore Sprouse," she whispered. "I must regain the jewels and the state papers. I cannot go without—"

"I shall do my best," he said simply. Silently he drew a chair to the door, mounted it and, drawing himself up by his hands, poked his head through the open transom. An instant later he was on the floor again. She heard him inserting a key in the lock. Almost before she could realize that it had actually happened, the door opened slowly, cautiously, and his thin wiry figure slid through what seemed to her no more than a crack. As softly the door was closed.

For a long time she stood, dazed and unbelieving, in the center of the room, staring at the door. She held her breath, listening for the shout that was so sure to come—and the shot, perhaps! A prayer formed on her lips and went voicelessly up to God.

Suddenly she roused herself from the stupefaction that held her. With feverish haste she snatched up garments from the chair on which she had carefully placed them in anticipation of the emergency that now presented itself. A blouse (which she neglected to button), a short skirt of some dark material, a jacket, and a pair of stout walking shoes (which she failed to lace), completed the swift transformation. As she glided to the window, she jammed the pins into a small black hat of felt. Then she peered over the ledge.

She started back, stifling a cry with her hand. A man's head had almost come in contact with her own as she leaned out. A man's hand reached over and grasped the inner ledge of the casement, and then a man's face was dimly revealed to her startled gaze.

CHAPTER XIV.

A Flight, a Stone-Cutter's Shed, and a Voice Outside.

"Why have you come up here?" She came swiftly to his side.

"Thank the Lord, I made it," he whispered, breathlessly. "I came up because there was nowhere else to go. I thought I heard voices—a man and a woman speaking. They seemed to be quite close to me. Don't be alarmed, Miss Cameron. I am confident that I can—"

"And now that you are here, trapped as I am, what do you propose to do? You cannot escape. Go back before it is too late."

"Is Sprouse—where is he?"

"He is somewhere in the house. I was to wait until he—Oh, Mr. Barnes, I—I am terrified. You will never know the—"

"Trust him," he said. "He is a marvel. We'll be safely out of here in a little while, and then it will all look simple to you. You are ready to go? Good! Sit down, do! If he doesn't return in a minute or two, I'll take a look about the house myself. I don't intend to desert him. I know this floor pretty well, and the lower one. The stairs are—"

"But the stairway is closed at the bottom by a solid steel curtain. It is made to look like a panel in the wall. You are not to venture outside this room, Mr. Barnes. I forbid it. You—"

"How did Sprouse get out? You said your door was locked."

"He had a key. I do not know where he obtained—"

"Skeleton key, such as burglars use. By Jove, what a wonderful burglar he would make! Courage, Miss Cameron! He will be here soon. Then comes the real adventure—my part of it. I didn't come here tonight to get any flashy old crown jewels. I came to take you out of—"

"You—you know about the crown jewels?" she murmured. Her body seemed to stiffen. "Then you know who I am?"

"No. You will tell me tomorrow." "Yes, yes—tomorrow," she whispered.

For some time there was silence. Both were listening intently for sounds in the hall. She leaned closer to whisper in his ear. Their shoulders touched. He wondered if she experienced the same delightful thrill that ran through his body. She told him of the man who watched across the hall from the room supposed to be occupied by Loeb the secretary, and of Sprouse's incomprehensible daring.

"Where is Mr. Curtis?" he asked. Her breath fanned his cheek, her lips were close to his ear. "There is no Mr. Curtis here. He died four months ago in Florida."

"I suspected as much." He did not press her for further revelations. "Sprouse should be here by this time. I must go out there and see if he requires any—"

She clutched his arm frantically. "You shall do nothing of the kind. You shall not—"

"Sh! What do you take me for, Miss Cameron? He may be sorely in need of help. Do you think that I would leave him to God knows what sort of fate?"

"But he said positively that I was to go in case he did not return in—fifteen minutes," she begged. "He may have been cut off and was compelled to escape from another—"

"Just the same, I've got to see what has become of—"

"No! No!" She arose with him, dragging at his arm. "Do not be foolhardy. You are not skilled at—"

"There is only one way to stop me, Miss Cameron. If you will come with me now—"

"But I must know whether he secured the—"

"Then let me go. I will find out whether he has succeeded."

He was rougher than he realized in wrenching his arm free. She uttered a low moan and covered her face with her hands. Undeterred, he crossed to the door. His hand was on the knob when a door slammed violently somewhere in a distant part of the house.

A hoarse shout of alarm rang out, and then the rush of heavy feet over thickly carpeted floors.

Barnes acted with lightning swiftness. He sprang to the open window, half-carrying, half-dragging the girl with him.

"Now for it!" he whispered. "Not a second to lose. Climb upon my back, quick, and hang on for dear life." He had scrambled through the window and was lying flat across the sill. "Hurry! Don't be afraid. I am strong enough to carry you if the vines do their part."

With surprising alacrity and sureness she crawled out beside him and then over upon his broad back, clasping her arms around his neck. Holding to the ledge with one hand he felt for and clutched the thick vine with the other. Slowly he slid his body off of the sill and swung free by one arm. An instant later he found the lattice with the other hand and the hurried descent began.

His feet touched the ground. In the twinkling of an eye he picked her up in his arms and bolted across the little grass plot into the shrubbery. She did not utter a sound.

Presently he set her down. His breath was gone, his strength exhausted.

"Can you—manage to—walk a little way?" he gasped. "Give me your hand, and follow as close to my heels as you can. Better that I should bump into things than you."

Shouts were now heard, and shrill blasts on a police whistle split the air.

On they stumbled, blindly, recklessly. He spared her many an injury by taking it himself. More than once she murmured sympathy when he crashed into a tree or floundered over a log. Utterly at sea, he was now guessing at the course they were taking. Whether their frantic dash was leading them toward the Tavern, or whether they were circling back to Green Fancy, he knew not. Panting, he forged onward.

At last she cried out, quaveringly: "Oh, I—I can go no farther! Can't we—is it not safe to stop for a moment? My breath is—"

"God bless you, yes," he exclaimed, and came to an abrupt stop. She leaned heavily against him, gasping for breath. "I haven't the faintest idea where we are, but we must be some distance from the house. We will rest a few minutes and then take it easier, more cautiously. I am sorry, but it was the only thing to do, rough as it was."

"I know, I understand. I am not complaining, Mr. Barnes. You will find me ready and strong and—"

"Let me think. I must try to get my bearings. Good Lord, I wish Sprouse were here. He can see in the dark. We are off the path, that's sure."

"Do you think he escaped?"

"I am sure of it. Those whistles were sounding the alarm. He may come this way. The chances are that your flight has not been discovered. Do you feel like going on? We must beat them to the Tavern. They—"

"I am all right now," she said, and they were off again. Barnes now picked his way carefully and with the greatest caution. He could only pray that he was going in the right direction.

An hour—but what seemed thrice as long—passed and they had not come to the edge of the forest. Her feet were beginning to drag; he could tell that by the effort she made to keep up with him. From time to time he paused to allow her to rest.

"You are plucky," he once said to her.

"I am afraid I could not be so plucky if you were not so strong," she sighed, and he loved the tired, whimsical little twist she put into her reply.

To his dismay they came abruptly upon a region abounding in huge rocks. This was new territory to him. His heart sank.

"By Jove, I—I believe we are farther away from the road than when we started. We must have been going up the slope instead of down."

"In any case, Mr. Barnes," she murmured, "we have found something to sit down upon."

He chuckled. "If you can be as cheerful as all that, we shan't miss the cushions," he said, and, for the first time, risked a flash of the electric torch. The survey was brief. He led her forward a few paces to a flat boulder, and there they seated themselves.

"I wonder where we are," she said.

"I am inclined to suspect that we are above Green Fancy, but a long way off to the right of it. Admitting that to be the case, I am afraid to retrace our steps. The Lord only knows what we might blunder into."

"I think the only sensible thing to do, Mr. Barnes, is to make ourselves as snug and comfortable as we can and wait for the first signs of day-break."

He scowled—and was glad that it was too dark for her to see his face. He wondered if she fully appreciated what would happen to him if the pursuers came upon him in this forbidding spot. He could almost picture his own body lying there among the rocks and rotting, while she—well, she would merely go back to Green Fancy.

"I fear you do not realize the extreme gravity of the situation. We must get out of these woods if I have to carry you in my arms."

"I shall try to keep going," she said quickly. "Forgive me if I seemed to falter a little. I—I am ready to go on when you say the word."

"You poor girl! Hang it all, perhaps you are right and not I. Sit still and I will reconnoiter a bit. If I can find a place where we can hide among these rocks, we'll stay here till the sky begins to lighten. Sit—"

"No! I shall not let you leave me for a second. Where you go, I go." She struggled to her feet, suppressing a groan, and thrust a determined arm through his.

"That's worth remembering," said he, and whether it was a muscular necessity or an emotional exaction that caused his arm to tighten on hers, none save he would ever know.

After a few minutes prowling among the rocks they came to the face of what subsequently proved to be a sheer wall of stone. He flashed the light, and, with an exclamation, started back. Not six feet ahead of them the earth seemed to end; a yawning black gulf lay beyond. Apparently they were on the very edge of a cliff.

"Good Lord, that was a close call," he gasped. He explained in a few words and then, commanding her to stand perfectly still, dropped to the ground and carefully felt his way forward. Again he flashed the light. In an instant he understood. They were on the brink of a shallow quarry.

MOTORS INSTEAD OF DOGS

Trip Over the Cascades in a Gasoline Sleigh Was a Distinct Success.

A spectacular trial trip was recently made across the Cascades in a motor sleigh, and a number of photographs, taken at various stages of the journey, are reproduced in Popular Mechanics. The achievement of the motor sleigh was almost as amazing as that of the first army tank, conquering, as it did, all kinds of obstacles. Skimming the surface of snowfalls, old or new, the strange little vehicle broke its way through primeval passes with never a stumble. The rescue of an automobile, hopelessly stalled in the drifts of Snoqualmie pass, was a mere incident in its progress. Crossing a deep gully on a pair of hemlock poles was but one of the day's adventures. The intended substitution of the motor sleigh for the dog drawn sledges of Alaska's snow-bound post trails means more, to the people of that great territory than may be generally realized. Jack London and others have limned the malemute as a romantic figure; but the followers of the trail know well he is never that. It is the elimination of much human hardship, as well as canine inefficiency, that recommends the gasoline method.

Time's Changes.

"Times shore change," philosophically said Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge. "Just tuther day, as it were, nobody thought anything in pertickler if a feller took a demijohn to church under the back seat of his wagon, and after the sermon had grown sorter tiresome winked a few of his friends outside to help him lap it up and fool around and swap horses and mebbey fight a little in a general way."

Proud of His "Profession."

"Burglars who served in the army are going back to their old trade," said a London police official the other day. "These men deliberately elect to live by stealing because they find it adventurous. It was with the same spirit that they joined the army. At least one convicted burglar won the Victoria cross." Confirmation of this characteristic is provided by a captain in a famous fighting regiment, who declares that one of the bravest men in his company, a corporal with a D.C.M. and other honors, declared himself a professional thief. "His one regret," remarked the officer, "was that the recruiting authorities would not let him describe his occupation on his attestation papers as 'burglar.'"

NICARAGUA ASKS AID OF UNITED STATES

LANDING OF AMERICAN FORCES TO PREVENT THREATENED INVASION REQUESTED.

TOOK OUR FRIENDLY ADVICE

Concessions and Help Given During War Cited as Grounds for Request for Assistance.

Washington.—Nicaragua has asked the United States to land forces there to cope with a threatened invasion from Costa Rica. The state department is investigating the situation. The Nicaragua delegation here, declare that following the collapse of the revolution in Costa Rica, President Tinoco has massed large forces on the frontier.

Tinoco, whose brother, as minister of war, is at the head of the Costa Rican army in the field, has charged that the Nicaraguans aided the revolutionists. The Nicaraguans have denied the charge and cited that it was the liberty party in Nicaragua, members of the old Zelaya regime, that went over to Tinoco.

"We believe that the time has arrived when the United States, in view of the friendly attitude that Nicaragua has manifested in giving that country the option for building the canal through Nicaragua and for the cession of the two naval passes, and also bearing in mind that Nicaragua entered the war against Germany in harmony with the United States and to aid the allies, should take a hand to protect Nicaragua against her foreign foes.

"The presence of a hostile army on our border is a constant menace to the peace of Nicaragua. In accordance with the plan by which the United States gives us friendly advice, we think that the United States should give us the moral and material protection of a sufficient guard on our frontier to prevent an invasion."

HOBBY WANTS TEXAS CAVALRY ON BORDER

GOVERNOR ASKS WAR DEPARTMENT TO CALL FIRST AND SECOND BRIGADES INTO SERVICE.

Washington.—Declaring that the Mexican situation is so critical that a larger force of troops on the border is necessary to protect lives and property of citizens, Governor Hobby of Texas has requested Secretary Baker to call into the federal service the first and second brigades of Texas cavalry and to mobilize them at a convenient point.

The war department immediately telegraphed the commanding general of the southern department, who has charge of the border guard, asking his views on the request and for any information bearing upon the situation described by Governor Hobby.

Border Conditions Quiet.

Confidential reports reaching the war department within the last week regarding the situation in northern Mexico, contained no information, it was said, that would lead officers to hold the opinion expressed by Governor Hobby. The border guard at present exceeds 20,000 troops, including cavalry, infantry, field artillery, air squadrons and engineer units, distributed from Yuma, Ariz., to south of Laredo. The latter point is headquarters of the fourth United States cavalry. Behind these is an ever larger force at the demobilization camps or en route.

Major General De Rosey C. Cabell, in command of the Mexican border district, has standing orders to dispose of the American troops as he thinks best to protect lives and property.

REJECTION OF GERMAN PROPOSALS ASSURED

ALLIED PEACE DELEGATES WILL HAVE REPLY READY BY END OF NEXT WEEK.

Paris.—Positive instruction have been issued by the council of four to all commissions working on the reply to the German counter-proposals to complete their reports as soon as possible.

Premier Lloyd George, because of a division of opinion and differences among the British experts working on reparations, is acting as his own expert and is attending the meetings of the reparations commission.

The Italians are showing great uneasiness over the unsettled Adriatic problem, as Premier Orlando insists that it must be settled before the Italian parliament meets June 18.

A general drive along the line for a speedy completion of the reply to Germany has been noticeable for the last two days. The experts have been meeting constantly and there is a general disposition to wind up differences, which a member of the American delegation said would be reconciled speedily.

In French official circles there is a growing conviction that Germany will not sign the peace treaty. The reply will be submitted as an ultimatum with a short time limit in which Germany will either have to take or leave the conditions as offered them.

The most important modification under consideration, namely, the question of reparations, probably will not involve any material changes in the treaty as originally presented.

The instructions to the reparations commission in the proposed supplementary agreement would enable the Germans to know at once the amount of reparations due under certain "categories" of reparations, such as pensions, separation allowances, maintenance of war prisoners and the destruction of ships at a fixed figure per ton.

It is understood that the question of a plebiscite in Upper Silesia practically has been decided affirmatively.

No change with regard to responsibilities, punishment of the former emperor or the disposition of the German colonies is regarded as probable.

"I am convinced that our treaty project violates none of my principles," President Wilson is quoted by the Matin as having said when he was made acquainted with the German counter proposals to the peace treaty.

The members of the American peace delegation, disturbed by the reports that copies of the German peace terms have reached New York, is undertaking to check up all the copies issued in order to ascertain if they are mislaid.

It is understood that the Berlin government is sending photographically reproduced copies of the peace terms to every United States senator and representative.

Harvest Help From Mexico Wanted.

Dallas.—Reports received from 53 of the leading commercial associations throughout the state indicate an increasing shortage of farm labor. With the exception of six localities, the demand for more help is general. In several instances it is said that returning soldiers show a disposition not to accept work on the farm. The action of the Texas chamber of commerce in contemplating steps for the abridgement of the immigration laws affecting Mexico is in most cases indorsed.

WIRES ARE RETURNED TO THEIR OWNERS

POSTMASTER GENERAL SAYS EXISTING RATES WILL REMAIN IN EFFECT.

Washington.—Telegraph and telephone companies whose lines have been controlled and operated by the government since last August 1 have been ordered to resume immediate operation for their own account by Postmaster General Burleson.

The postoffice department, however, under terms of Mr. Burleson's order, retain a measure of control of the service, pending final legislative action by congress.

Regulations prohibiting discrimination against wire employees because of union affiliation, maintaining existing rates and charges and instructing companies to keep special accounts to facilitate cost settlement between themselves and the government, are retained in effect under the order issued by the postmaster general.

Mr. Burleson accompanied the order with a statement giving the reasons which impelled him to take the action. He asserted that the president having recommended the return of the properties, the senate interstate commerce committee having indicated that immediate return was advisable and the house committee having, through hearings, manifested a desire for action toward that end, he felt it his duty to return control to the various private owners.

EXPLOSION IN MINE KILLS EIGHTY-THREE

300 POUNDS BLACK POWDER DETONATED IN MINE NEAR WILKES-BARRE, PA.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa.—Eighty-three men dead and 50 others burned and maimed, many of whom will die, is the toll of a disaster in the Baltimore tunnel of the Delaware and Hudson Coal company in this city Thursday. Seven kegs of black powder, 300 pounds in all, were detonated, and the dead and maimed were literally roasted by the super-heated gas flames following the explosion.

The tragedy occurred while the men were on their way to work. Owing to their working places being two miles from the mouth of the tunnel, the men were making the trip in a train of fourteen mine cars drawn by an electric motor, the powder being carried in two cars in the middle of the train.

The train had penetrated the tunnel about 200 feet, when, August Ruddle, one of the survivors, says, the overhead trolley wire sagged, and, touching a steel powder keg, formed a short circuit. In an instant there was a shower of sparks and a terrific blast. A great sheet of flame, drawn by the air current, enveloped the helpless men, who were huddled closely together in the cars, with no possible chance to escape.

Owing to the ventilating system, the smoke and flame was drawn inward and the first intimation of the disaster to those on the surface was the shrieks of anguish of the injured.

When the rescuers first entered the tunnel, they found the dead and dying piled in heaps in the cars and all along the tunnel.

Bodies of the dead were burned to a crisp. Of the dead, 60 were found dead in the tunnel and 14 others succumbed to their injuries at the hospitals. Only 49 have been identified.

141st Back From Overseas.

New York.—It was a jolly crowd that leaned over the rails of the U. S. S. Troy as she neared the Hoboken docks, bringing the 141st infantry, a total of about 3,000; the thirty-sixth divisional military police, 128 men; 440 of the 11th supply train and 78 men of the 11th engineer train, all of the thirty-sixth division; also 305th supply train. This easily was an Oklahoma and Texas day at the docks, although the regiment is almost exclusively of Texas men.

GREAT BELIEVER IN BLACK-DRAUGHT

Oklahoma Lady Tells How Her Husband Believes in Black-Draught and Uses It For Many Ailments.

Nowata, Okla.—Mrs. W. B. Dawson, a resident of this place, says: "My husband is a great believer in Black-Draught and thinks it cures about everything. It is splendid for headache, constipation (which usually causes headache), indigestion or any kind of stomach trouble, and we just keep it for these troubles. I don't know when we haven't used it, and we always find it satisfactory."

I know it has done us both a lot of good and saved us many dollars. I use it in teaspoon doses at first and follow with small doses, and it sure does make a person feel like new.

It cleanses the liver better than any other liver tonic I have ever used, and after taking a thorough course nature asserts itself and you are not left in a constipated condition that follows a lot of other active medicines. This is one thing I like especially about it.

For over 70 years Theodor's Black-Draught has been in use for many simple ailments and today is a recognized standard remedy in thousands of family medicine chests. It will pay you to keep Black-Draught in the house for use when needed.

The forty-fifth annual Statewide Sunday School Convention for all denominations will be held at Galveston June 21, 22, 23, and 24.

Special rates of one fare and one-third will be on sale Friday, June 20, good for ten days. The fine program and attractiveness of Galveston at this season will assure a large attendance.

Much interest has been manifested throughout the State. North Texas delegates are planning to go in special cars, leaving Dallas Friday night, June 20. Other sections should do likewise.

Saturday will be spent in sight-seeing, recreation, surf bathing, and a probable banquet on the beach Saturday night. Sunday delegates will attend Sunday Schools and preaching services and great mass meeting, afternoon and night. Monday and Tuesday regular convention sessions will be held including addresses, conferences, educational and departmental meetings in which many noted speakers from Texas and other States will have a vital part.

Every Sunday School in Texas should be represented by the pastor, superintendent, departmental leaders, officers, teachers and pupils. Schools and organized classes should pay the expenses of delegates, if necessary, as it will prove a fine investment.

SNAP SHOTS.

(From Dallas News.)

For our part, if we were opposed to woman suffrage at all it would be because we are afraid of the women.

Our observation is that when stockings cost five dollars a pair they are going to be seen.

What a woman can't understand is a person whose feet give him so little trouble he hardly realizes that he has any.

Furthermore, if we had a hen we might have some eggnog if we had some nog.

Percy Noodles says that when he asked the capitalist's daughter if her father had anything saved up for a dry day she said yes indeed, papa had ten barrels of extra-dry.

Sometimes a woman is so devoted to her home that she stays there all day.

Personally we don't claim to be much of a chiropodist, but our conviction is that many a lady could avoid corns by wearing her husband's shoes.

Furthermore, we never expect to invest in another oil well until a fortune teller has added his recommendation to the geologists report.

One of the fortunatest things in this world is that a good cook doesn't have to be teased to perform like a good singer wants to be.

Mrs. Peavish says the reason she thinks there was fraud in the suffragist election is because if all the anti-suffragists are like Mr. Peavish's friends they are capable of it.

As a general thing, when nephews and nieces have a rich bachelor uncle it makes them mad for a woman even to look at him.

In this part of the country some stockings have become so thin you can tell whether her ankles are blonde or brunette.

Furthermore, why isn't the man who picks out such dignified names for new collars allowed to name the new dances?

And, as for that, why wouldn't it be possible for a Texan to deposit the contents of his cellar in a bank and check it out by the drink?

Mr. Peavish says that the reason Mrs. Peavish isn't speaking to him now is because he laughed out loud at a joke in the paper and she thought he was reading the returns from the suffrage election.

He Slept in Sections

Ed Jackson, secretary of state, who was one of the students at the United States officers' reserve training camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison had to spend one of the cool nights in the trenches, as that is part of the training given to the embryo officers. As he emerged from his "bunk" the next morning he was met by one of his fellow students.

"Well, how did you sleep last night?" inquired Jackson's friend.

"In sections," gruffly replied the state official.

"How's that?"

"Well, first my right foot was asleep, and then my left one; then one arm and then another, and so on. But I guess if I added them all up I got in a pretty good night's rest."

WHY NOT HAVE A PAVILION ON PUBLIC SQUARE?

It has been suggested by several that a pavilion in the park on the public square would be a nice thing for the town. Indeed it would. There are many uses to which it could be put. For instance, during the summer months the churches could use it for their revival meetings, it would be an ideal place for picnic parties, public speaking in warm weather, a good camping place for automobile tourists that come through our city, and last but not least, it could be fitted up for a ladies rest room, and would be an ideal place for ladies that come in from the country to spend a time while shopping here. Who will head the list with a substantial donation for this enterprise?

The U. S. Department of Agriculture says it costs an average of $36.50 to keep a dog a year—and this doesn't include the dog tax. Some canines are rather high at that yearly maintenance.

The Eternal Feminine Glows in Gowns

Fashion is inclined to be tolerant and broad-minded this summer allowing several paths to be favored, so long as they lead to the same goal. And the goal in afternoon gowns is styles that are utterly feminine. One may reach it by traveling the rich, sleek, silky way, or take the dry route that leads through clouds of thin, misty materials. Even the silhouette varies according to the character of the fabrics wherewithal we are clothed. Silks float about the figure and cling to it, organzies wreath and froth about it; we have dresses nipped in at the waist and dresses that hang as straight as a chemise, but they are of a daintiness and a luxuriousness that are dear to women.

Here are two very dissimilar frocks for afternoon that illustrate the foregoing. One of them is a black and white combination in which georgette crepe makes the upper half and black satin the lower half of a handsome gown. Thread embroidery on the georgette enriches the frock and leads up to the heavy silk cord that lies about the waist and loops over at the back. Elbow sleeves proclaim this a midsummer model.

Dotted voile is to be credited with the daintiness of the frock at the right of the group. It has a narrow underskirt and a long, tucked tunic that is quite full over it. The full bodice with round neck has three-quarter length, tucked sleeves and fastens at the left front with small round buttons. A dress of this kind without a sash doesn't seem to be in the mind of designers this season, and here we have three long ends of narrow ribbon falling from a bow at the waistline. These gay, fluttering ribbons are characteristic of the season.

There are many lovely colors to choose from, according to their becomingness, in plain and in figured voiles. The latter appear to have the preference, there is something so unpretentious about them. They are enticingly dainty and make it easy to meet the demands of fashion in afternoon gowns.

Sport Hats and Others

Because the late summer hat takes its cue from the sport hat, and resembles it more or less, it is sometimes difficult to make up one's mind just which of the last millinery arrivals are to be classed as sport styles. But no one is concerned much about the matter. "Late summer" includes everything the shops show, from now until early fall is ushered in, and "sport" styles are worn almost everywhere. The late summer hat is not burdened with much trimming, for it must contrive to look cool. There are exceptions to this rule in hats and trimmings made of the airiest fabrics, among the loveliest of dress hats, but generally the late summer hat has a flavor of outings—vacations, journeys—and divides popularity with sport styles that serve the same purposes.

In the group of hats shown here a leghorn faced with white crepe georgette leads off. It is a simple affair so far as trimming is concerned, for it has a band of ribbon about the crown with flat ornaments set at intervals against it. At the top an organdie hat that will look cool in August weather contents itself with a braided pattern on the top crown and similar motifs on the brim at the front, back and sides. There is a crushed band of organdie about the crown. Other materials are used for late summer hats, as printed and embroidered voiles, cretonne and batiste.

Georgette crepe makes the lovely sport hat at the right of the group with its high, soft crown and smooth brim. A band about the crown made of folds of the crepe is as elegant a finish as the most exacting taste can demand.

If you are considering a sport hat give attention to the new and picturesque models called "tapestry hats" that are made of cretonne, with brims faced with braid. They are beautiful and practical and full of color, but untrimmed, except for a band of narrow ribbon, usually of velvet, about the crown.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

By Mary Graham Bonner

BLUE TONGUED LIZARD.

"Good-morning" said the Salamander in the zoo.

"Good-morning," said the Blue Tongued Lizard.

"What have you to say for yourself?" asked the Salamander. "I crave conversation, I do."

"What in the world do you mean when you say that you crave conversation?" asked the Blue Tongued Lizard.

"I mean," said the Salamander, "that I want some talk. In short I want to chat with you."

"Oh," said the Blue Tongued Lizard, "that is different."

"What is different?" asked the Salamander.

"Talking and chatting," said the Blue Tongued Lizard. "I didn't know what you meant when you talked about conversation, and still I do not know what you mean when you speak of craving a thing."

"Ah," said the Salamander, "you do not understand anything as yet."

"Then you had better explain from the beginning," said the Blue Tongued Lizard.

"That is true," said the Salamander. "It wouldn't do much good if I went on talking with a creature if the creature didn't understand me."

"It wouldn't do much good," said the Blue Tongued Lizard, "unless you wanted to hear yourself talk."

"Some creatures do like to hear themselves talk," said the Salamander, "but I am not one of them. No, I don't care about hearing myself talk."

"And that you can tell from the fact that I crave conversation, or a talk, or a chat. But of course I will have to explain these things to you before we can have a nice talk."

"Yes, please explain them to me," said the Blue Tongued Lizard.

"Conversation means just the same as a talk or a chat. When people have a conversation with each other they have a talk with each other," said the Salamander.

"And when animals, or salamanders or lizards have a conversation with each other it means just the same—that they have a talk or a chat with each other."

"Now, when I said that I craved conversation it meant that I was very anxious for a conversation or a talk. I was very eager for it. A pig, for instance, would speak of craving for food, meaning that he was most awfully anxious to have some food. See?"

"Yes," said the Blue Tongued Lizard, "now I understand you thus far."

"Well," said the Salamander, "it is as far as I have gone."

"But you said that you craved conversation," the Blue Tongued Lizard said; "have you had enough in explaining to me all that you had said before?"

"Oh, no," said the Salamander, "I didn't have enough. I only talked a little myself. I didn't have a real conversation. I want to hear you talk. Then I will tell you if I agree or not, and then I will talk. We will talk in turns."

"Well," said the Blue Tongued Lizard, "I look very much like a small white snake. I have a blue tongue and of my blue tongue I could talk a great deal."

"I have always been so pleased that I had a blue tongue. I would hate to have a red tongue. That is so commonplace. Just think! If a doctor came to me and said:

"Please put out your tongue!" Why, how proud I would be to put out my beautiful blue tongue."

"In fact, I am so proud of it that I will do it without asking; that is, I will do it of my own free will and accord, without anyone urging me to do so."

"And I am so glad that I have been named after my tongue, for that is unusual. Few creatures are named after their tongues. In fact, I don't know that I can think of any at this moment."

"To be named after one's tongue is splendid; that is, if one is a blue-tongued lizard and is proud of the fact."

"Yes," said the Salamander, "you are unusual and to be named after a tongue is something which doesn't very often happen. Thank you, Blue Tongued Lizard. I have enjoyed my talk with you immensely."

COCA-COLA WILL BE USED TO CHRISTEN ENGINE

Program Will Feature Exercises at Fire Hall on Wednesday.

(From Nashville Tennessean.)

Ann Dallas Dudley, the new fire engine at the Waverly-Belmont fire hall, will be christened on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock with appropriate exercises. Mrs. Guilford Dudley, for whom the engine gets its name, is one of the state's pioneer suffrage workers and it is due to her untiring work that partial suffrage was given the women of Tennessee. Mrs. Miles Williams, a resident of the twenty-first ward, is chairman of arrangements, and also a pioneer suffragist, and little Judith Winston Folk, the 6-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reau Folk, also a pioneer suffragist and the youngest member of the Nashville organization, has been chosen sponsor. Miss Folk has selected as her maids the following young girls, daughters of prominent suffrage leaders: Travana Dudley, Lenore Kenny, Kate Barksdale, Harriet Ingram, Mary Sue Cantrell, Jane Davis and Elizabeth Smith.

At the christening not champagne but a bottle of coca-cola will be broken and the maids will shower the engine with yellow flowers. Speeches will be made by Mayor William Gupton, Commissioner Tompkins and Chief A. A. Rosetta. Mrs. Dudley, a member of the national suffrage organization, and Mrs. Reau Folk, chairman of the city organization, will be honor guests of the occasion.—Adv.

Do you put your "O. K." on your day's work?

Laws are not alive until they are executed.

IT'S NOT YOUR HEART; IT'S YOUR KIDNEYS

Kidney disease is no respecter of persons. A majority of the ills afflicting people today can be traced back to the kidney trouble.

The kidneys are the most important organs of the body. They are the filters of your blood. If the poisons which are swept from the tissues by the blood are not eliminated through the kidneys, disease of one form or another will claim you as a victim.

Kidney disease is usually indicated by weariness, sleeplessness, nervousness, dizziness, headache, stomach trouble, pain in loins and lower abdomen, gall stones, gravel, rheumatism, sciatica and lumbago.

All these derangements are nature's signals that the kidneys need help. You should use GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules immediately. The soothing, healing oil stimulates the kidneys, relieves inflammation and destroys the germs which have caused it. Go to your druggist today and get a box of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules. In twenty-four hours you should feel health and vigor returning.

After you feel somewhat improved continue to take one or two capsules each day, so as to keep the first-class condition and ward off the danger of other attacks.

Ask for the original imported GOLD MEDAL brand. Three sizes. Money refunded if they do not help you.

Good Riddance. "Shall we hire a detective to watch our wedding presents?"

"I hardly think that will be necessary, my dear. Our friends have seized the opportunity to work off a lot of old junk."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The General Tendency. "Everybody in America belongs to some kind of a social or commercial organization," observed the distinguished visitor.

"Yes," answered Senator Sorghum. "We have developed into a nation of leagues."

Their Faithfulness.
"Force of habit is almost as hard a master to some people as rum is said to be," commented the landlord of the tavern at Grudge. "Although the post office moved to its new location more than a month ago, and, too, though they never were compelled by law to do so, 'most any time o' day a bunch of prominent and influential lunkheads can be seen standing in the doorway of the old post office room, patiently waiting for busy people to come, as they used to, and serenade past them, trying to get in."—Kansas City Star.

Hard facts do not always make an impression on a soft-headed man.

The Effects of Opiates.

THAT INFANTS are peculiarly susceptible to opium and its various preparations, all of which are narcotic, is well known. Even in the smallest doses, if continued, these opiates cause changes in the functions and growth of the cells which are likely to become permanent, causing imbecility, mental perversion, a craving for alcohol or narcotics in later life. Nervous diseases, such as intractable nervous dyspepsia and lack of staying powers are a result of dosing with opiates or narcotics to keep children quiet in their infancy. The rule among physicians is that children should never receive opiates in the smallest doses for more than a day at a time, and only then if unavoidable.

The administration of Anodynes, Drops, Cordials, Soothing Syrups and other narcotics to children by any but a physician cannot be too strongly decried, and the druggist should not be a party to it. Children who are ill need the attention of a physician, and it is nothing less than a crime to dose them willfully with narcotics.

Castoria contains no narcotics if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. Genuine Castoria always bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

EATONIC FOR YOUR ACID-STOMACH

Hard to Determine.

Ruth Clifford, the moving picture star, has a cousin overseas. Recently his name appeared in the casualty list as wounded.

"Yes," said Miss Clifford, "in answer to an inquiry by her director, 'he was wounded, but not seriously. We had a letter from the regimental surgeon.'"

"Where was he wounded?" asked Gerard.

"We are not quite sure. The surgeon mentioned the place, but we don't know whether it's an anatomical phrase or a French village."

Bitter or Better Baking

A letter makes a great difference in a word. A word makes a great difference in baking powders.

If the little word "alum" appears on the label it may mean bitter baking.

If the words "Dr. Price's" stand out bold and strong, they surely mean BETTER baking.

This is only one reason why it pays to use

DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER

Made from Cream of Tartar derived from grape

Contains No Alum—Leaves No Bitter Taste
