

A WEEK AT A TIME

by J. M. RANKIN

ABOUT TOWN
We wonder if the spooning Romeo who used to shoot out the street light on South Eighth for the added seclusion it gave is still doing so.

And we wonder about the prominent local father who could always hear daughter coming in late but slept tranquilly through the visit of the burglar who stole his pants last week. Y'reckon it's just meanness in him?

We wonder if the Yankees didn't get a lot of kick out of Mrs. E. R. Legg's Southern accent when she was up North last year. Not that she neglects the r's so much but how she says 'ah' for 'I' as so many of us do hereabouts. Hear it over the telephone sometime.

We wonder if it would be all right to cite for the most careful driver of the week, Louie Ares, who drove so carefully by the West Ward schools the other morning as the little ones were gathering and dashing across the street. Since all our children go there, we like to remember his thoughtfulness.

And we wonder if there are not a lot of us as neutral as the Fort Worth shop that has a sign in the window: "We are neutral, we don't give a ----- who kills Hitler."

NOR EVEN FEARFUL

"England always loses every battle of a war but the last one," observed a cynical historian once. That was small comfort to hear before the hostilities really opened up. But when German U-Boats sank the huge air-craft carrier a few weeks ago and last week the battleship Royal Oak, it begins to look as if Britian is again running true to that form. These losses are serious, but we are not convinced nor even fearful that England is on the way to loss of her mastery of the seas.

A. J. Payne Buys Ready To Wear

A. J. Payne purchased last week the Ready to Wear stock of Mrs. Pearl Thompson at Consignee's sale and opened the store for business Saturday the 14th.

Mr. Payne is too well known to need an introduction in Slaton or the South Plains. He has had many years experience in the dry goods and clothing line and is consequently well equipped to serve the women of Slaton and the surrounding community with the kind of ready to wear that makes them recognized as well-dressed.

Saturday, the 21st, will close his Trustee's Sale, and he will go to market for new supplies of merchandise. Newest styles will be seen at the shop on North Ninth as soon as he returns and he invites the fastidious women to see his merchandise and compare his prices before buying elsewhere.

Uncle George Writes Home

Uncle George Marriott writes from South Texas that he is seeing some of Texas' unbelievable subtropical area and climate. Citrus fruits ripening, flowers blooming, and folks still thinking it is summer. Climate he caught a lot of fish and pleasures to prove it. Visited at Fort Arthur, Brownsville, San Antonio, Corpus Christi, Matamoros, Raymondville, La Sora, Houston, Beaumont, and no telling where else. Saw old Slatonites, J. W. Hise, Dale Watson, Robert Sledge, Harry Green, Otto Sexton, John and Bill Shelton, Merle Garriques. And as such letters usually end, "Having a good time. Home about November 15."

Mrs. Troy Bickerstaff of Amarillo arrived Tuesday and is visiting in the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Wilson, 300 South 5th Street.

Tigers Vs Post At Post Tonite

Antelopes One Down Try To Even Score

At Post tonight the Slaton Tigers, after a hard-earned meal of Bull-dog steak at Tahoka last week will go after the more tasty Antelope venison. The Post eleven will not be easy pickings for anybody's class B team, though they lost to Tahoka in the first conference game. That Tahoka team two weeks ago was a rough and rowdy bundle of uniforms fired by a bundle of Dynamite known as Minor.

Minor sustained an injury after the Post game that was renewed in the first play or two of the Slaton game and that finally took him out of the game entirely. And don't think Minor isn't a good hand. He is big and fast and has the best footwork of any high school player on the league, according to observing coaches.

Anyway when Tiger takes after Antelope, there is liable to be fireworks of an intriguing character. Coach Hamilton is saying little except that the Tigers are going to try to win this game. Visitors to Post Tuesday heard the Antelope Coach say Slaton visitors were welcome through the week, but when the whistle blows Friday night, the Antelopes are not going to stand to be pushed around.

Tigers Score Over Tahoka 26 To 0

First Conference Game Victorious

The first conference game for the Slaton Tigers was Friday, Oct. 13, in which Tahoka was undeniably the under-dog, the Tigers won their first important game of the season. "Surprising" is a word that can be applied to the Slaton team, because of their rapid improvement after an un-victorious start early in the season. The Tigers revealed the best form in several games, and it put new hope in the hearts of the Slaton fans.

The Slaton line-up at the start of the game was as follows: Stotts, center; Carter, LG; Clark, R. G. Smith, LT; Wicker, RT; Blasingame, RE; Mudgett, LE; Gentry, FB; Austin RH; Scott LH; and Ward, QB.

The game started off with a bang with Scott going four yards for Slaton's first touchdown after five other plays. Gentry, in the second quarter, went three yards for the second touchdown. Scott ran two yards in the third quarter for another touchdown, also kicking goal, which added a point in Slaton's favor.

In the fourth quarter Collier, a second string man, ran twenty-nine yards for a touchdown, also kicking a goal that was good. Slaton also scored a safety in this quarter which made a total of 28 points.

Slaton incurred penalties eight times for a loss of seventy yards, with Tahoka losing forty yards in six times. Slaton attempted five passes completing one for forty-five yards. Tahoka attempted nine passes completing two for a total of twenty yards.

Slaton had four penetrations with Tahoka one. In first downs, Slaton had sixteen, Tahoka four. Slaton gained a total of 372 yards and Tahoka, 200.

Slaton's team was an outstanding one, with every member showing up well. Blasingame played an exceptional defensive game, and all the men elicited in the backfield, as well as the men in the line.

Tahoka's Minor, who was hurt after the Post game, only played a short time, but was exceptionally good. He is reputed to be the fastest man in the state. Lehman, also of Tahoka, made a fifty-four yard run, and played a good game.

It was certainly a very exciting game, with the score 28 to 0 in favor of our own Tigers. Slaton fans are eagerly awaiting the game Friday, in which we hope Slaton Tigers will again come out victorious over the Post Antelopes.

Nelson Answers O'Daniel Letter

Thinks Special Call Would Be Useless

In a letter addressed to Governor W. Lee O'Daniel and dated October 17, Senator G. H. Nelson made a reply to Governor O'Daniel's recent letter to the legislators asking their opinions about the advisability of calling a special session in order to raise money for old age relief.

The Senator stated that he thought it useless to call the session unless some sort of understanding were had with a majority of the legislature that a compromise would be reached that would be agreeable, but that even in such case he feared no majority would deem itself bound by the understanding and the session would simply be $150,000 thrown away. However, he assured the Governor of his determination to cooperate with the Governor because of the obligation the lawmakers have to make effective the Constitutional amendment that authorized the Texas Social Security program.

The Senator reiterated his opposition to the sales tax or to a consumer's tax, holding them to be the same thing. He set out as his reason for voting for submission of the sales tax the feeling that if there was a public demand for a sales tax to the extent that a Constitutional amendment would be voted by the people, he should not deny the people the right to vote.

He reminded the Governor that he had promised the old people of Texas a thirty dollar pension to all over sixty-five, and that such pensions would take more money than is now being spent for public schools, colleges and highways to pay the bill. The Senator, however, offered to cooperate with the Governor in "every reasonable way."

Freight Rates Down On Grain, Feed

Lower freight rates on cotton seed products for short hauls are available now by authority granted last week. The reductions on the cotton seed products in some cases are as high as fifty per cent of the old rates.

Rough grains, too, are to enjoy rate reductions on short hauls up to one-third in some cases. "This will encourage the concentration of heads at processing points, and Slaton having established a reputation as a threshing and processing center of feeds, should receive more of the heads than has been coming here."

Red Raiders Have Fast Program Ahead

Bills Will Hold Billification

You might run around bawling your head off asking "Where's Elmer?" but on November 6th over at Ralls, you wouldn't have to ask "Where's Bill?" because Bill will be there. The occasion is the third annual convocation of Bills which will gather for mutual congratulations—or condolences—on the luck of having the name Bill to carry through life.

"Alfalfa" Bill Murray former governor of Oklahoma will be the principal speaker at the banquet that night, and Bill McCraw former Texas Attorney General had indicated he will attend the "billification."

Anybody with the name Bill or with any name that is frequently shortened to Bill is eligible to membership in the new organization. In fact is already a member, and merely delinquent if he doesn't attend, according to Rev. Bill Derr, Ralls pastor and this year's president of the Bills.

Legion To Meet At Hall Monday

Luther Powers Post of American Legion will meet Monday, October 23 at the Legion Hall. Commander Dennis urges all members to attend, as plans will be made for some observance of Armistice Day and for the launching of the 1940 membership drive. Feeding Program Begun For Year

Several Feeders Have Cattle In Slaton Pens

The 1939 feeding program has already opened in Slaton. The Plains Grain and Heads Handling Company and others have some five hundred head of mixed cattle in the pens. The Leuhr Packing Company of Los Angeles has about a hundred head which will be augmented this week to 500. McFarland of Sweetwater has a hundred head of cows. Arriving this week are four hundred head of heifers belonging to G. W. Higgins of Seymour. These will be fed in the pens of the West Texas Cottonoil Company.

There is a shortage of huddled feed in the immediate area surrounding Slaton that may curtail considerably the feeding program compared with last year's. Also the higher price of cottonseed meal may discourage some feeders. The price of finished stuff holds up well, however, and the profits made from the feeding last year will tend to encourage the enterprise.

Preparing Allotments For Cotton, Peanuts

College Station—Predicting that all 1940 cotton allotments will be in the mail by the middle of November, E. N. Holmgreen, state AAA administrator, said necessary information had already been received at state headquarters here for figuring allotments for 16 Texas counties.

Before any allotments can be mailed, however, the state allotment must be set up in Washington and broken down for counties by the state office, Holmgreen said.

A few counties have already furnished the state office with cotton histories of their farms, and the allotments for these counties will be set as soon as the county figure is available, the administrator announced.

Farmers should begin to receive their allotments through the mail the latter part of October, Holmgreen declared, and all allotments will be made in ample time before the cotton marketing quota referendum December 9.

All Texas farms growing peanuts for commercial use will be given allotments for 1940. B. F. Vance, assistant state AAA administrator, has announced.

Last year peanut allotments were set up for only eight counties, Vance said, but approximately 100 counties will have allotments for 1940. Allotment counties last year were Frio, Medina, LaSalle, Atascosa, Bexar, Eastland, Comanche and Wilson.

Any farmer growing commercial peanuts during 1937, 1938 or 1939, or who intends to do so in 1940, will be given an allotment.

Knights of Columbus Sponsoring Dance

The Knights of Columbus, who for the past ten years have had an organization in Slaton, are sponsoring a dance Saturday night, at the American Legion Hall, and the public is cordially invited to attend.

This dance is an annual affair, always being successful. With such a small admission, it is within the means of everyone to come and help this worthy organization.

This dance was originally planned for October 12, that date being Columbus Day, but due to weather conditions, it will be Saturday, October 21, and it is for all who come to have a good time and general get-together.

For further details, see the ad which appears in this issue of the Slatonite.

Handy Small Table Made of Camp Stool

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS HAVE you ever wished for a small, low table that would appear from nowhere and disappear again when you were through with it? Have you ever thought it would be nice if Father's ottoman could be folded up and put out of the way when not in use? Or perhaps you have unspaced a suit case in a guest room and wished for something other than the bed; a chair or the floor to put it on during the process? A camp stool plus a tray to fit the top makes a very satisfactory small table to place beside a game table or to set up for your books or mending basket by your favorite chair. But be sure to dress it up to best advantage. A remnant of material and some upholstery braid will do the trick. Stain and wax are suggested for the base as paint might be marred in folding the stool.

When your husband (or wife) gets cross, ugly and grouchy; when he finds fault with the coffee, the eggs, the bacon, and the cook, you may well suspect that he has a touch of biliousness or so-called 'Torpid Liver,' so prevalent in hot weather. All he may need to set him straight is a little Calotab, or better still, Calotabs, the improved calomel compound tablets that make calomel-taking a pleasure.

Calotabs give you the combined effects of calomel and salts, helping Nature to expel the sour, stagnant bile and washing it out of the system. One or two Calotabs at bedtime with a glass of water—that's all. Next morning your system feels clean and refreshed, your head is clear, your spirit bright, and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Thomas E. Dewey Once Country Newspaper Man Now Presidential Possibility

By FRANK PARKER STOCKBRIDGE

THOMAS E. DEWEY

"I started out to be a newspaper man," said the district attorney of New York county, as we chatted across his big, uncluttered desk, over a couple of bottles of coca-cola. "My father was editor and publisher of the weekly paper in Owosso, Mich., where I was born and where my mother still lives; and I learned to stick type as a schoolboy."

Thomas E. Dewey, the young man whom more Republican voters prefer as their presidential candidate for 1940 than any other in the field, according to all the important polls, took another sip of coca-cola and smiled reminiscently, as if recalling his first encounter with a type-louse. While he talked about his youthful days in the print-shop I was trying to size him up, to discover the secret of his rapid rise from small-town obscurity to national fame.

I wanted to find a convincing answer to the question many people are asking: "Will Dewey do?"

Is this young man, born on March 24, 1902, old enough to head a nation of 135,000,000 people? He will be nearly 40 when the next President is inaugurated, in 1941. That's two years younger than Teddy Roosevelt was when he became Chief Executive. It's three years younger than George Washington was when he took command of the Continental army. But, on the other hand, Tom Dewey at 37 is 16 years older than William Pitt the Younger was when he became Prime Minister of England. Mr. Dewey could echo with good grace Pitt's famous retort to a jeering opponent: "The heinous crime of being a young man I shall attempt neither to palliate nor to deny."

Dewey's Background.
What counts is not how many years a man has lived, but what he has done with the years. That and what he started with. Which brings us back to Owosso and Tom Dewey's background.

He was almost literally born a Republican. There is more truth than poetry in the famous lines from the operetta "Iolanthe."

Every little boy or gal Who's born into this world alive Is either a little Liberal Or a little Conservative.

Tom Dewey's grandfather was one of the groups of reformers who met in a grove at Jackson, Mich., and laid the cornerstone of the Republican party. He was kin to Admiral George Dewey, of the same New England stock. He founded the Owosso Times and passed it on to his son, George Martin Dewey Jr., who in turn passed on the gospel of Republicanism to his son. Tom Dewey got to know the party leaders of his youth, intimates of his father who was postmaster of Owosso and the local Republican leader. He speaks fondly of such party notables as Gov. Chase S. Osborn and Sen. Joseph W. Fordney, frequent visitors at the paternal home, and reveals in conversation his admiration for Teddy Roosevelt and Charles Evans Hughes, crusading Republican reformers of his boyhood. And he recalls vividly his father's vehement denunciation of Tammany Hall as the most corrupt political machine in the nation's history.

The 12-year-old boy didn't know it, but he was headed for a political career that was to lead him to New York and to a battle to a finish against Tammany.

Owosso folk who "knew him when" remember him as an active, imaginative boy, fond of the out-of-doors, who peddled the Saturday Evening Post, worked on occasion for neighboring farmers and built up the physique which makes him the untiring worker he is today. He was close enough to the soil to learn something of farmers' problems, and to acquire a love for the land. His pride today is in his farm in Dutchess county, New York, 20-miles from F. D. R.'s home. He wants his two little boys to grow up with something of the same freedom of the fields and streams that he enjoyed. He has to maintain a residence, a modest apartment, on Manhattan island, but his heart is in his real home, 60 miles north of the big town.

Passion for Music.
Besides remembering Tom Dewey as a bright boy who sometimes surprised his teachers by knowing more than they did, Owosso folk remember his passion for music. He was always whistling or singing or playing some instrument. His voice was true to pitch even in childhood. The old family doctor who officiated at his birth and is now president emeritus of the Dewey-for-President club in the home town says that Tom had a strong voice and used it vigorously from the moment he was born. When his voice changed at his early maturity it turned out to be a baritone of unusual range, with a vibrant quality or timbre which made people like to hear him sing.

He did not dream then that he was destined to tread the path of politics and that his voice would carry him a long way over that rocky road. When he entered the University of Michigan at 17 he thought he was heading for a musical career. He edited the college daily paper, naturally enough, but the glee club was of more consequence to him in those student days. In his senior year he began to glimpse something of the road whereby men achieve greatness, and added the first year of the law school to his regular senior course, at the same time studying music, singing in a church choir and running the varsity paper. That busy year was 1923, when he got his B. A. degree and sang a solo at the commencement exercises.

That spring he got something else. He won a scholarship for a summer course in singing in Chicago under a famous teacher. Before the summer was over his teacher advised him to head for New York; he had the makings of a grand opera star. So Tom Dewey spent the next two years in Columbia university law school, studying voice and singing for a year in a church choir. As another "side line" he edited the national journal of his college fraternity.

And, incidentally, he was studying politics, particularly the New York variety, in which he confirmed his father's judgment on Tammany. Between the urge toward a musical career and the ingrained pull of politics, the law was winning; it offered a gateway to the political life. Besides, it offered a more certain livelihood for a young married man. For in 1928, three years after gaining his LL. B. degree in law, Tom Dewey was making good in a big New York law firm and got married, to a girl from Texas whom he had met in his vocal classes. Frances Eileen Huit, a grandniece of Jefferson Davis, had had a short professional singing career before she became Mrs. Thomas E. Dewey. If Thomas E. Dewey Jr., now seven, and his four-year-old brother, John Martin Dewey, do not become operatic, radio or concert singers of renown, then there's nothing in heredity and environment. The Dewey homes, city and country, are filled with music.

His Speaking Voice.

And so is Tom Dewey's speaking voice. Before a jury or a political meeting or over the radio it has a quality which reaches people's hearts. Its tones carry conviction of the speaker's sincerity and of his genuine love for people. Studying his face and its expressions I wondered if the close-cropped, dark mustache did not conceal a real Irish upper lip, suggesting a strain in the district attorney's pedigree which might account for the power to "charm a bird off a tree," which has been attributed to him.

I dropped a hint of that random guess and—whist!—what do you think Tom Dewey said? "My mother was a Corriegan from County Cork." That accounts for many things, including the young man's sense of humor, which is so genuine that he can laugh at jokes on himself as well as on the other fellow. By the same token, the answer to the question, "Will Dewey do?" must be definitely yes if it relates to his ability to sway audiences. No Republican candidate for President, and I have heard all of them from James G. Blaine to Alf Landon, ever had such effective oratorical talent, and I think of only two Democratic candidates, Bryan and Franklin Roosevelt, to match Tom Dewey in vocal persuasiveness.

What else has Dewey got? It takes more than a voice to make a President, though some have tried for the job with no other equipment. Definitely he has that elusive something we call personality. Five feet eight, about the same height as his idolized "Teddy," he gives the same impression that Colonel Roosevelt gave at his age, of perfect physical fitness. Virility is stamped all over the young man's broad-shouldered, athletic figure, his thick, dark wavy hair and eyebrows, the trace of heavy beard that shows on his close-shaven chin as the day grows older. There is something reminiscent of T. R. in the set of his jaw, the bulging of the muscles when he sets his teeth to clinch an argument. The kindness of his wide, brown eyes is coupled with the determination and persistence which his face shows from any angle.

So far, so good. Tom Dewey's a charming person, but how did he get so far so fast? What has he done? Glance at the record.

Became Famous Over Night.

Young Dewey, like young Charles Evans Hughes, popped out of the obscurity of a humdrum law practice to find himself famous overnight. Like the present chief justice, he won fame by fighting the people's battles. In 1931 President Hoover appointed George Z. Medallie United States attorney for New York city. Mr. Medallie had met Tom Dewey, had been impressed by his knowledge of the law and his hatred of the crime and corruption which he saw all about him, and made him his first assistant, in charge of the office. Dewey likes to think of the three years he spent as the administrative head of the federal attorney's office, with a staff of 60 lawyers under him, as the time when he was "chief counsel for Uncle Sam." In that period he handled two-thirds of the big income-tax suits, as well as criminal cases.

He went after the big racketeers from the start. He proved his ability as a prosecutor by marshalling the evidence against "Waxey Gordon," beer baron of the Atlantic seaboard, and so presenting it before a grand jury and federal court that the racketeer is now serving a 10-year term in prison. The whole underworld was watching every move in that case, and so were the overlords of Tammany, under whose protection all racketeers flourished. That they never "got anything" on Tom Dewey speaks louder for his personal character than an encomium. The press and the legal profession were watching the young prosecutor, too, and New York realized that a new legal light had blazed forth.

Second Call to Service.

With the change in the federal administration, Dewey returned to private practice and by 1935 was earning $50,000 a year. Again came the call to public service. A "run-away" grand jury of the state courts threw the New York county district attorney out of the jury room, took matters in its own hands, and demanded of Governor Lehman that he appoint Thomas E. Dewey a special district attorney to investigate and prosecute racketeers from which politicians were prospering. The governor demurred, but yielded to pressure from the New York bar. Tom Dewey went back to battle against Tammany and crime. Again he went after big game and brought it down. In his two years as special prosecutor the record shows 73 trials of racketeers, big and little, and 72 convictions.

By 1937 the voters of New York decided they wanted to keep Tom Dewey on the job. He was elected district attorney by a huge majority. One of his earliest acts in office was to obtain the indictment of Richard Whitney, Wall Street financier, who pleaded guilty to embezzlement and is now in Sing Sing. Then he went after the biggest game of all, "Jimmy" Hines, kingfish of Tammany Hall. It took two shots to bring down that big one; the judge who presided at the first trial declared a mistrial because of a question Dewey asked a witness. On a second trial Hines was convicted and Tammany's strangle-hold on New York was broken.

Herbert Lehman, popular Democratic governor, announced early in 1938 that he would not run for reelection. That gave the Republicans some hope, but not too much. Roosevelt had carried the state for more than 1936 by more than a million; Lehman for governor by more than 650,000. The Republicans nominated Tom Dewey for governor. Panic-stricken Democrats frantically prevailed on Lehman to reconsider, and he agreed to run again as the only chance of saving the state for his party. The Republicans won the legislature, but Lehman beat Dewey for governor by a plurality of only 87,000, 1 per cent of the total vote. Outside of New York city Dewey's plurality was over 610,000. Tammany, the American Labor party, the Democratic O'Connell machine in Albany and the Communist party, which endorsed Lehman and cast 105,000 votes, mustered enough adverse ballots among them to elect Lehman by a narrow margin.

That campaign proved to all New Yorkers and the rest of the nation Tom Dewey's ability as a voter-getter.

Administrative Ability.

Now people are asking if he has administrative ability. I found one answer on his clean desk; he knows how to delegate work and authority in the largest organization of its kind in the world, with 80 legal assistants and a still larger corps of investigators, doing the vital job of cleaning up New York's criminal elements. He has cleaned out the time-servers, hangers-on and political job-holders who formerly infested the office, filled their places with hand-picked capable and loyal helpers, on whom he puts responsibility for all but the cases so big that he has to take personal charge. When he does that he gives his nights, days and Sundays to the case until it is finished.

So here we are, toward the end of 1939, with the nominations only eight months or so in the future, all the polls of public opinion reporting Tom Dewey the three-to-one choice of Republican voters over each of the other two leaders in the race, and he hasn't yet even declared himself a candidate, hasn't any political machinery set up to pick up delegates, hasn't even a publicity bureau. What kind of politics is that?

It's new and therefore puzzling to professional politicians. Many who have ambitions and preferences of their own are more than slightly alarmed. Some are demanding that Dewey "come out into the open" and tell the world what kind of a Republican he is and how he would run the country if he were President. Tom Dewey isn't setting himself up as a target for the sharp-shooting which would result from his acceptance of that invitation—not yet. Nor is he writing any "take it or leave it" platform for the Republican national convention. But he has studied politics, national politics, as well as he has studied law. He showed me a file in a desk drawer which contains as complete an analysis of presidential campaigns as I could have drawn up myself, and I thought I knew a lot about the subject.

Dewey's Platform.

All Tom Dewey is saying now, on political issues is summed up in a few words.

"I do not seek the support of the reactionary on the right or the radical on the left. The natural course of our institutions is down the middle of the road. During the past six years sincere efforts have been made to solve the problems too long neglected. But the administration of worth-while laws has struck a snag. The federal government has too often fumbled near the goal. It has callously wasted public funds for political purposes. The spirit of hostility and quarrelling toward business has kept millions of voters out of jobs.

"I am of the Twentieth century. We look forward and not backward."

That is the sort of thing "Teddy" might have said in his day. It is the sort of thing Tom Dewey would write into the Republican platform if he held the pen. What the country needs, as he sees it, is honest, efficient administration of the laws, not more laws.

That is liberalism in the true, old-fashioned sense of that much-abused word.

Will Dewey do? Write your own answer.

Important Fashions In Simple Patterns

THE smock-frock is really a fashion, not just a comfortable maternity dress. It's smart and young and practical. No. 1833 is a version of it that may be worn for afternoon, because the pleats, in both the smock top and the adjustable slip skirt, give it a touch of dressiness. Make it of flat crepe, thin wool or georgette.

Good for a Whole Wardrobe.
Unusually useful is the pretty frock for little girls (1836) because it can be made in two ways—with round collar and frills, or with the plain square neckline. Therefore you can thriftily make a whole wardrobe for your own small daughter, by using this simple pattern again and again. School cottons, like gingham or linen, as well as challis and jersey, are smart fabrics for it.

The Patterns.

No. 1833 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 5 1/2 yards of 39-inch material with short sleeves; 5 3/4 yards with long sleeves; 1 1/4 yards for the top of the slip; 3/4 yard for contrasting revers, cuffs, collar.

No. 1836 is designed for sizes 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 years. Size 3 requires 1 1/4 yards of 35-inch material; 1/2 yard for contrasting collar; 2 yards of pleating or frills.

Anyone don't know what it is till they have gone through with it, to be shut up with two rough neck boys and a bronco girl for three weeks and can't put your head out of the door and your wife for three days and nights that she didn't know anything. Good Sister Tucker we owe her a debt that we will never get paid.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS BY JOSEPH W. LaBINE

Soviet Presses New Conquests As World Looks Elsewhere; Nazi 'Ally' Is Sole War Victor

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.) Released by Western Newspaper Union.

RUSSIA:

Cat and Mice

Six weeks after it started, the war of 1939 had apparently been won by Russia, a noncombatant. The Soviet held two-fifths of Poland and controlled the little nations of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia whose German populations were repatriated by the Fatherland in what was Nazi-dom's most ignominious defeat. In all these countries Russia won important naval bases (see map) which gave her control of the Baltic sea and constituted a direct threat against Scandinavia. Lithuania, the last to capitulate, even accepted a part-Communist social order.

Finland was next, her delegation opening consultations in Moscow while the folks back home evacuated cities, strengthened the army and

THE WAR: From Rostrum:

Said France's Premier Daladier: "If Hitler really wants a durable peace it must be based on the security of nations, guaranteed reciprocally, without the danger of surprises."

Chimed in Britain's Prime Minister Chamberlain: "It is for Germany to make her choice. . . . Either the Germans must give convincing proof of the sincerity of their desire for peace . . . or we must preserve our duty . . ."

Said Adolf Hitler: "The decision of peace or war lies with others. We simply have a grave determination to fight."

From such a hopeless deadlock there seemed no alternative except a fierce war. But the still, small voices of peace began rising everywhere. In Germany it was the mysterious mobile radio station urging that Hitlerism be discarded. In France it was a few "defeatists" who were promptly slapped into jail. But in London it was little David Lloyd George, World War prime minister who only a week before had startled commons by demanding that Britain give careful consideration to Hitler's peace offers. Arguing that a collective pact among all European nations need not be "dependent on the word of Herr Hitler," Lloyd George was rumored leading a campaign against advocates of "war at any price."

Taking a cue from the earlier speech in which Lloyd George had counseled U. S. leadership in a world peace move, Herr Hitler first had his throttled press give the British statesman a build-up, then released a plea that America might help prevent Europe's frightful "bath of blood." But the U. S. was choosy; the White House and state department would think carefully before volunteering.

At the same time, other Britons looked askance at the allies' apparent plan to wage war only on the western front. Could anybody win from such stalemated positions?

On Land

There was every indication Germany planned to open a fierce thrust on the western front, thus retaliating against spurned peace offers. Paris heard that Hitler had summoned his generals, ordered them to clear the French off Nazi territory and to drive swiftly through Belgium and Switzerland in a great offensive. The first part of this order was evidently borne out when "suicide squads" of grenadiers were thrust wave after wave against French outposts. Scouting planes appeared over the lines taking photographs. Strangely, many a Nazi raid appeared to have a solitary aim—to capture prisoners and thus get information.

At Sea

man circles said Nazi planes had dropped 10 bombs in a single raid on British vessels blockading the North sea. Since the allies wanted no peace, the raids would continue. Commented the official German news agency: "The time of unequalled British control of the seas is gone forever."

(At Amsterdam, Netherlands, a Dutch seaman came home to announce he had sailed from New York on the long-missing German luxury liner, Bremen, had helped plow her through cold northern seas while she flew the Soviet flag, and helped dock her safely at Russia's Arctic ocean port, Murmansk.)

NEWS QUIZ

Know your news? One hundred is a perfect score. Deduct 20 for each question you miss. Anything about 60 is good.

2. Al Capone, former Chicago gang czar, is in the news now because: (a) he is taking plane lessons at Terminal Island prison, California; (b) he has become a fruit grower at his Florida home; (c) he will be released from prison next month.

3. His initials are Robert G. As official executioner for five eastern states, he electrocuted Sacco and Vanzetti and Bruno Richard Hauptmann, kidnaper of the Lindbergh baby. What's his last name? What happened to him?

4. Richard Gallogly is under life sentence in Georgia, convicted of a "thrill" murder in 1928. How did he make news recently?

5. Charles A. Byrne is New Orleans district attorney. He recently: (a) set a new record for prosecutions, for which the governor honored him; (b) was charged with blocking a grand jury's investigation of alleged graft and corruption; (c) started a racket-busting campaign similar to that of New York District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey.

CONGRESS:

Talk Fest

Washington's important news was not that the senate had refused 65 to 26 the resolution by New Hampshire's Sen. Charles W. Tobey to split the arms embargo repeal issue away from the rest of the pending neutrality bill. This was not big news because the administration bill seemed a cinch to pass whenever the final vote came.

Much bigger news was the fact that the issue of war vs. peace vs.

MISSOURI'S CLARK "Idiotic, moronic, unpatriotic . . ."

neutrality had stirred an unprecedented free-for-all in congress and elsewhere at a time when national unity was the watchword. There was angry speech-making, too much of it, fraught with a bitterness that might have made the U. S. look slightly silly and indecisive in time of crisis.

Missouri's Isolationist Bennett Champ Clark took the senate floor to maintain that the Tobey vote was no test. He stayed to make a speech on how the President's "limited emergency" proclamation has been used for dictatorial, warlike moves. Case in point: Placing the Panama canal under military control, an action Senator Clark said was valid only when the U. S. is engaged in war, or when war is imminent.

A speech the night before by Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson next attracted the senator. Mr. Johnson had said the U. S. army is as vulnerable to German mechanized legions as was the Polish army. Commented Mr. Clark: "In my judgment no more idiotic, moronic, unpatriotic remark ever has been made . . . To compare the situation in the U. S. with the situation in Poland . . . is an attempt to alarm our people . . . which to my mind is beneath contempt."

Next came Nebraska's Repeal-ist Edward R. Burke in a speech denouncing Hitlerism, predicting a revolution for Germany and urging the U. S. to cast its lot with the allies by providing every assistance "short of supplying men and money."

5. (b) is correct. Impeachment proceedings have been filed against him.

France's Heavy Artillery Trains on Siegfried Line

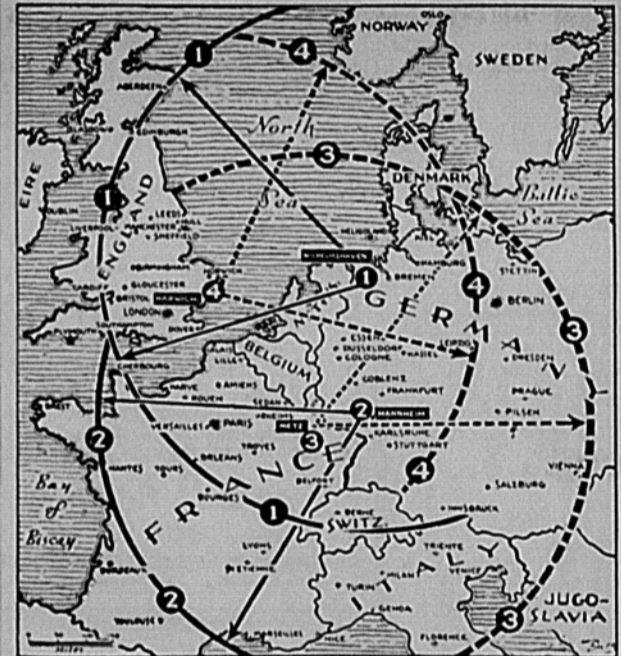

Shown here are the more powerful guns used by French troops in front line combat. No. 1 shows machine gunners in action, preparing to back up the Maginot line. No. 2 is a huge railway gun, run out on its spur track and aimed at some point in Nazi Germany. No. 3 is a trench mortar in action. The missile resembles a small aerial bomb. It is fired from the mortar on a high trajectory to drop down upon its objective, firing upon contact. No. 4 shows the interior of giant tanks carrying field guns, preparing to bore toward the Siegfried line into German territory.

Nazi Bombs Wreck American's Auto in Warsaw

Not at all pleased was Julien Bryan, noted American lecturer-photographer, as he looked over the ruins of his automobile in a shell-shattered Warsaw street. The picture was taken at the height of the siege by German troops. Bryan was the last American to leave the battered Polish capital before its downfall.

Danger Zones in Possible Air Conquest

Here's how German, French and British bombing planes would go about their errands of destruction, endangering the life of every civilian living in that territory within one of the enemy bombing "circles." From Wilhelmshaven, No. 1, and Mannheim, No. 2, would go German bombers to raid Paris, London and other cities. In retaliation, French fliers would start out from Metz, No. 3, and other bases behind the Maginot line, and British airmen would set out from Harwich, No. 4, on their egg-laying expeditions.

MacLeish Assumes New Library Post

"I know. But—Oh, I can't analyze it, Edith. I love you—no end. More than anything. But I won't ask you to marry me."

"Do you know how selfish you are, Baldy?"

"I know how wise I am."

"She made an impatient gesture. 'You're not thinking of me in the least. You are thinking of your pride.'"

"He caught her hand in his. 'I am thinking of my pride. Do you suppose it is easy for me to let Jane—take money from him? To feel that there is no man in our family who can pay the bills? I am proud. And I'm glad of it. Edith—I want you to be glad that I won't take—alms.'"

"Her wise eyes studied him for a moment. 'You blessed boy. You blessed poet,' she sighed, 'I am proud of you, but my heart aches for myself.'"

"He caught her almost roughly in his arms and in a moment released her. 'I'm right, dearest!'"

"No, you're not right. If we married, we'd sail to Italy and have a villa by the sea. And you would paint masterpieces. Do you think my money counts beside your talent? Well, I don't."

"My dear, let me prove my talent first. As things are now, I couldn't pay our passage to the other side."

"You could. My money would be yours—your talent mine. A fair exchange."

"He stuck obstinately to his point of view. 'I won't tie you to any promise until I've proved myself.'"

"And we'll lose all these shining years."

"We won't lose a moment. I'm going to work for you."

"He was, she perceived, on the heights. But she knew the weariness of the climb."

"Coming out of the garden in the late afternoon, they were aware of other arrivals at the Inn."

"Adelaide and Uncle Fred, by all the gods," said Edith, as they peered into the dining-room from the dimness of the hall. "Oh, don't let them see us. Adelaide's such a bromide."

"They crept out, found Baldy's car and sped towards the city. 'I should say,' Baldy proclaimed sternly, 'that for a man who is engaged, a thing like that is unspeakable.'"

"Oh, Uncle Fred and Adelaide," said Edith, easily; "she probably asked him. And she was plaintive. A plaintive woman always gets her way."

"Adelaide had been plaintive. And she had hinted for the ride. 'Why not an afternoon ride, Ricky? It would rest you.'"

"Sorry, but I'm tied up."

"I haven't seen you for ages, Ricky."

"I know, old girl. I've had a thousand things."

"I've—missed you."

"It wasn't easy for Frederick to ignore that Adelaide was an attractive woman."

"Oh, well, I can get away at four. We'll have tea at the old Inn."

"Heavenly, Ricky, I have a new blue hat."

"You could always wear blue." He decided that he might as well make things pleasant. There was a shock in store for her. Of course he had to tell her about Jane.

"I am going to marry Jane Barnes, Adelaide. The engagement isn't to be announced until she returns to Washington. But I want my friends to know."

"She put her elbows on the table, clasped her hands and rested her chin on them looking at him with steady eyes. 'So that's the end of it, Ricky?'"

"The end of what?"

"Our friendship."

"Why should it be?"

"Oh, do you think that your little Jane is going to let you philander?"

"I shan't want to philander. If that's the way you put it."

"So you think you're in—love with her."

"I know I am," the red came up in his cheeks, but he stuck to it manfully. "It's different from anything—ever that I've felt before."

"They all say that, don't they, every time?"

"Don't be so—cynical."

"She shrugged her shoulders. 'I'm not. Well, I shall miss you, Ricky, dear."

"That was all, just that plaintive note. But Adelaide's plaintiveness was always effective."

Jane was home again. Judy was better. Philomel sang. The world was a lovely place."

"Oh, but it's good to be back." Jane was telling Baldy at breakfast. The windows were wide open, the fragrance of lilacs streamed in, there were pink hyacinths on the table.

"It's heavenly."

"Baldy smiled at her. 'The same old Jane.'"

"She shook her head, and the light in her eyes wavered as if some breath of doubt fanned it. 'Not quite. The winter hasn't been easy. I'm a thousand years older.'"

"And with a wedding day ahead of you."

"Yes. Do you like it, Baldy?"

"He leaned back in his chair and surveyed her. 'Not a bit—if you want the truth—I shall be jealous of Mr. Frederick Towne.'"

"Silly. You know I shall never love anybody more than you, Baldy."

"She was perfectly unconscious of the revelation she was making, but he knew—and was constrained to say, 'Then you don't really love him.'"

"Oh, I do. He's much nicer than I imagined he might be."

"Oh, well, if you think you are going to be happy."

"I know I am—dearest," she blew a kiss from the tips of her fingers. "Baldy, I'm going to have a great house with a great garden—and invite Judy and the babies—every summer."

"Towne's not marrying Judy and the babies. He's marrying you. He won't want all of your poor relations hanging around."

"Oh, he will. He has been simply dear. I feel as if I can never do enough for him."

"She was very much in earnest. Baldy refrained from further criticism lest he cloud the happiness of her home-coming. The thing was done. They might as well make the best of it. So he said, 'Do you always call him 'Mr. Towne?'"

"Yes. He scolds, but I can't say Frederick—or Fred. He begs me to do it—but I tell him to wait till we're married and then I'll say 'dear.' Most wives do that, don't they?"

the subject up; she drew another cup of coffee for herself, and asked finally, "When is Evans coming back?"

"Not for several days. He will go to Boston when he finishes with New York."

"I see. And he's much better?"

"I should say. You wouldn't know him."

"He rose. 'I must run on. We're to dine at Towne's then?'"

"Yes. Just the five of us. It seems funny that I haven't met Cousin Annabel. But she's able to take her place at the head of the table. Mr. Towne tells me. He told me, too, that she wants to meet me. But I have a feeling that she won't approve of me, Baldy. I'm not fashionable enough."

"Why should you be fashionable? You are all right as you are."

"Am I? Baldy, I believe my stock has gone up with you."

"It hasn't, Janey. You were always a darling. But I didn't want to spoil you."

"As if you could," she smiled wistfully. "Sometimes I have a feeling, Baldy, that I should like life to go on just as it is. Just you and me, Baldy. But of course it can't."

"Of course it can, if you wish it. You mustn't marry Towne if you have the least doubt."

"I haven't any doubts. So don't worry. She stood up and kissed him. 'Briggs will come out for me—and we are all to see a play together afterward.'"

"Edith told me."

"Baldy," she had hold of the lapel of his coat, "how are things going with—Edith?"

"Do you mean, am I in love with her? I am."

"Are you going to marry her?"

"God knows."

"She looked up at him in surprise. 'What makes you say it that way? Has she told you she didn't care?'"

"She has told me that she does care. But do you think, Janey, that I'm going to take her money?"

He patted her on the cheek and was off.

Jane picked a spray of princess-ope and stuck it in her blouse. Oh, what an adorable world! Her world. Could there be anything better than Frederick Towne could give her?

Baldy's words rang in her ears—"Do you think I am going to take her money?"

Yet she was taking Frederick Towne's money. She wished it had not been necessary. Each day it seemed to her that the thought burned deeper: she was under obligations to her lover that could be repaid only by marriage. And they were to be married in June.

Yet why should the thought burn? She loved him. Not, perhaps, as Baldy loved Edith. But there were respect and admiration, yes, and when she was with him, she felt his charm, she was carried along on the whirling stream of his own adoration and tenderness.

She went back to her own little house, and found a great box of roses waiting. She spent an hour filling vases and bowls with them. Old Sophy coming in from the kitchen said, "Looks lak dat Mistuh Towne's jes' fascinated with you, Miss Janey."

"Aren't the roses lovely, Sophy?" Jane wanted to tell Sophy that Mr. Towne would some day be her husband. But she still deferred the announcement of her engagement.

"I've told one or two people," Frederick had said.

"Whom?"

"Well, Adelaide. She's such an old friend. And I told Annabel, of course. I don't see why you should care, Jane."

"I think I'm afraid that when I go into a shop someone will say,

"Oh, she's going to marry Frederick Towne, and see how shabby she is."

"You are never shabby."

"That's because I made myself two new dresses while I was at Judy's. And this is one of them."

"You have the great art of looking lovely in the simplest things. But some day you are going to wear a frock that I have for you." He told her about the silver and blue creation he had bought in Chicago. "Now and then I take it out and look at it. I've put it in your room, Jane, and it is waiting for you."

She thought now of the blue and silver gown, as Sophy said, "Miss Jane, I done pressed that 'wite chif-fon of yours twel it hardly hangs together."

"I'll wear it once more, Sophy. I'm having a sewing woman next week."

With the old white chif-fon she wore a golden rose or two—and sat at Frederick's right, while on the other end of the great table, Cousin Annabel weighed her in the balance.

Jane knew she was being weighed. Cousin Annabel was so blue-blooded that it showed in the veins of her hands and nose—and her hair was dressed with a gray transformation which quite overpowered her thin little face with its thin little nose.

As a matter of fact, Cousin Annabel felt that Frederick had taken leave of his senses. What could he see in this short-haired girl—who hadn't a jewel, except the one he had given her?

Jane wore Towne's ring, hidden, on a ribbon around her neck. "Some day I'll let everybody see it," she had said, "but not now."

"You act as if you were ashamed of it."

"I'm not. But Cinderella must wait until the night of the ball."

It was while they were drinking their coffee in the drawing-room that the storm came up. It was one of those cyclonic winds that whip off the tops of the trees and blow the roofs from unsubstantial edifices. The thunder was a ceaseless reverberation—the lightning was pink and made the sky seem like a glistening inverted shell.

Cousin Annabel hated thunder-storms and said so. "I think I shall go to my room, Frederick."

"You are not a bit safer up there than here," Towne told her.

"But I feel safer, Frederick." She was very decided about it.

So she went up and Baldy and Edith wandered across the hall to the library, where Edith insisted they could observe other aspects of the storm.

Jane and her lover were left alone, and presently Frederick was called to the telephone.

"I'm not sure that it's safe, sir, in this storm," Waldron warned.

"Nonsense, Waldron," Towne said, and stepped quickly across the polished floor.

Thus it happened that Jane sat by herself in the great drawing-room of the Ice Palace, while the wind howled, and the rain streamed down the window glass, and all the evil things in the world seemed let loose.

And she was afraid!

Not of the storm, but of the great house. She was so small and it was so big. Her own little cottage clasped her in its warm embrace. This great mansion stood away from her—as the sky stands away from the desert. All the rest of her life she would be going up and down those great stairs, sitting in front of this great fireplace, presiding at the far end of Frederick's great table—dwarfed by it all, losing personality, individuality, bidding good-bye forever to little Jane Barnes, becoming until death parted them the wife of Frederick Towne.

THE CITIZENS OF THE KINGDOM

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 5:1-16. GOLDEN TEXT—Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven.—Matthew 5:16.

Great and historic discourses are preserved with care and are read by succeeding generations with profit and interest even though they are recognized to be the utterances of weak and fallible men. The lesson before us presents what is "undoubtedly the greatest single discourse ever uttered by any teacher or statesman or philosopher in the whole history of the human race" (Smith). Take up your Bible and read the words of the text.

These verses are addressed to believers, to those who have actually taken Christ as king of their lives. These beatitudes are not a substitute for the gospel. They are not laws that the unbeliever can keep and thus be saved, for this would be utterly impossible for anyone to do, except the one who has been born again. Only he who knows and has called upon the power and grace of God in Christ can qualify to walk as a citizen of His kingdom.

I. The Christian's King (vv. 1, 2).

The words which fell from the blessed lips of the Lord Jesus on that day as He sat on the mountain-side were not the powerless declarations of an earthly philosopher or statesman, but of the Son of God who had humbled Himself and become the Son of Man who was still the King of kings and the Lord of lords. If you have not given glad and free allegiance to Him, do it now and you will then be ready to go on and learn of the Christian's character and influence which may be your possession in Christ.

II. The Christian's Character (vv. 3-12).

The eight characteristics of the Christian here presented are worthy of extended individual attention, but we can offer only brief suggestions.

"Blessed are the poor in spirit!" speaks of humility as a commendable quality. How contradictory the present-day philosophy which calls for self-assertion and self-reliance. But Jesus is not mistaken. The way into the kingdom of heaven is not that of assertive self-sufficiency.

"Blessed are they that mourn." The world does not believe that statement. It shuns the house of mourning. It tries without avail to philosophize away the fact of sorrow. The Christian, on the other hand, feels with his fellow man and thus receives a blessing.

"I walked a mile with Pleasure. She chattered all the way; But let me none the wiser. For all she had to say."

"I walked a mile with Sorrow. And ne'er a word said she; But, oh, the things I learned from her When Sorrow walked with me."

"Blessed are the meek." Ah, yes, poverty of spirit comes when a man rightly sees himself, and has a sympathetic touch with sorrow. Then he "inherits the earth," because he truly comes to enjoy it as a place of service and Christian growth, and not because he has a deed to a single foot of its soil.

"Note that it is the hunger and thirst for righteousness, and not the possession of it, that is blessed" (Plummer). Self-satisfied people know nothing of the glory of having such a hunger and thirst filled by God.

Time falls us to speak of the Christian's spirit of mercy which invites divine mercy; that purity of heart and absolute cleanness of mind and sincerity of purpose which enable a man really to see God even in this impure world; that Christlike spirit which makes him a peacemaker in a fighting world—yes, that spirit which makes him like the Master in sweetly bearing unjustified persecution. These indeed are the marks of the man who follows Christ as King.

III. The Christian's Influence (vv. 13-16).

"Salt" and "light"! What pungent and powerful folk are the real followers of Christ! Salt fights against rotteness, keeps things sweet and fresh. Dr. J. H. Jowett says, Christians "are to confront rotteness in politics; they are to meet it in the realm of business; they are to make for it in the field of sport; they are to be its enemies in the crowded streets of common intercourse; they are to defeat it in the quiet and sequestered ways of art and literature; everywhere they are to provide the antidote to corruption, and they are to overcome and destroy it."

Light has one function, namely, to illuminate. Wickedness and sin always love darkness, because their deeds are evil (read John 3:19-21). If Christ really dwells in us we cannot help but shed light about us wherever we go—a divine light which drives back the darkness of sin, of ignorance, of superstition, and replaces it with the sunlight of God.

Big Hits At The Palace Theatre

"Only Angels Have Wings," starts its sensational run at the Palace Theatre on the Prevue and Sunday and Monday. The film, which has been unanimously praised as the greatest screen adventure of 1939, co-stars Cary Grant, as an adventurous pilot in South America, and Jean Arthur, as a stranded American showgirl. Set against the colorful South American Andes mountains, "Only Angels Have Wings" tells a thrilling story of romance and adventure. In its cast, in addition to the co-stars, are Thomas Mitchell, Rita Hayworth, Richard Barthelme, Sig Ruman, Noah Berry, jr., Allyn Joslyn, Victor Kilian and other noted character actors.

The modern, sophisticated business woman, the type which prizes her independence to the exclusion of romance, learns about love in Paramount's new romantic comedy, "Honeymoon in Bali," which will have its local premiere on Wednesday and Thursday at the Palace, with Fred MacMurray, Madeleine Carroll and Allan Jones co-starred. The story tells about Madeline, a big-time executive of a Fifth Ave. apartment store, who falls in love with Fred, an adventurer recently returned from Bali. But she refuses to admit that she's in love with him. Fred does his best to convince her that love has a place in her scheme of things, but when she finds herself breaking down, she flees to Nassau for a vacation. The comedy and romance go into high gear when Fred goes back to Bali, and Madeleine, realizing that she loves him, follows him there, only to learn that he plans to marry another girl! But love finds a way! Involved in the proceedings in featured roles are Helen Broderick, Osa Massen and Carolyn Lee, new child "find."
