OUR WEEKLY SERMON

Four Men
By Max I. Reich, D. D., Director, Jewish Missions Course, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

From the prophet Jeremiah comes a message as appropriate now as it was to the people who first heard it. "Thus saith the Lord, Let not the wise men glory in his wisdom, neither let the mighty man glory in his might, let not the rich man glory in his riches; but let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth me, that I am the Lord which exercise loving-kindness, judgement, and righteousness, in the earth: for in these things I delight saith the Lord" (Jer. 9:23,24).

Life, after all, is much the same as it was thousands of years ago. In Jeremiah's day the learned man the man of strength and influences, the man of wealth, was considered successful and was envied by others. Is it any different in our land today?

1. The wise man has succeeded as a student. He has won university degrees. He is an authority in his particular department of research. He may be a scientist, a philosopher, an educator, a literati. Men listen to him as to an oracle when he speaks.

2. The man of might may be a political boss who has attained to a position of great influence. He easily tops the lists of votes in an election. His name is a household word.

3. The man of wealth is a getter, a successful merchant, a banker or speculator. He has the golden key which can open doors otherwise closed. Men call him a financial wizard. Many will strain every nerve to get to where he has arrived.

But God's word makes very little of what these men have made their goal in life. Not that learning power and wealth are necessarily evil, but they are not the best. There are higher values. They cannot be compared with the knowledge of God. In that is found a higher wisdom, a greater power, and choicer wealth.

Now God desires to make himself known, and in order that we might know Him He has (1) created the universe, telling us of His wisdom, power, beauty etc.; (2) written a book — the Bible, telling us of His ways in judgment or grace; (3) incarnated Himself in the unique personality of Him whom the Apostle Paul said that the glory of God shines in His face, and who himself declared, "He that hath seen me, hath seen the Father."

Christ's incarnation has done three things: "It has brought God near. It has made God clear. It has made God dear." And to know God, as told out in Christ, is "eternal life," the very happiness of heaven begun on earth.

Yeah? Who says so!

Seed Selection Worth While

Experience of 277 farmers in Gaines County this cotton season is showing that an approved variety of cotton seed will out-yield consistently the short-staple varieties in that area. And the chosen variety is opening in the fields just as rapidly as the others.

E. Morris, Gaines County agricultural agent, reports that these 277 farmers organized three cotton variety improvement associations this year and are co-operating in the government's cotton planting and seed improvement program. These cotton growers purchased their seed from sources approved by the State Cotton Planting Seed Improvement Committee, and the cost was little more than ordinary cotton planting seed.

Here is an example Morris cites. The first bale of one-variety cotton ginned at Seminole gin this fall made a 510-pound bale from 1,730 pounds of snaps. It graded strict middling and had a staple length of 31/32 of an inch. The short staple varieties, he says, are grading strict middling and stapling 13/16. Consequently the grower of the approved variety is getting a difference of $7.75 per bale in loan value.

THIS WEEK'S LESSON

"Adam and Fallen Man" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, November 7.

The Golden Text is: "Cease ye from man whose breath is in his nostrils: for wherein is he to be accounted of?" (Isaiah 2:22).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Whoever is born of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him; and he cannot sin, because he is born of God" (1 John 3:9).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "When speaking of God's children, not the children of men, Jesus said, 'The Kingdom of God is within you; that is, Truth and Love reign in the real man, showing that man in God's image is unfallen and eternal'" (page 476).

"I'M THIRTY-SEVEN"

NO one likes to watch youth wave good-bye, and when the years start creeping up on them, many women succumb to the temptation of having public knowledge of their age well under its accurate total. That's all well and good, but the strain of being on the alert and living in holy terror of making a slip is hardly worth while. At least, it is hardly worth while to Mary Astor, who tells in her own words why she doesn't lie about her age.

"I am thirty-seven," writes Miss Astor in the November issue of Cosmopolitan Magazine. "I tell the truth about my age because I am too lazy to lie about it." That is certainly refreshing frankness, and from a famous movie star who has been an actress for twenty-three years.

Lying about one's age, narrows them into a channel where they must always be on guard. They cannot reminisce. To talk about their childhood is taboo. They must be careful of every word, every remembrance, for any truthful slip may date them.

"Songs particularly are given away, for all youngsters around sixteen or seventeen memorize the lyrics of hit numbers. If ten to fifteen years later, you so far forget yourself as to croon these old-timers in public you are irrevocably dated."

Of course, Mary Astor admits that it gets to be really something while dancing with a number of service men, to hear them remark: "You know, Miss Astor, you are my mother's favorite actress." However, she is philosophical about it all. "Youth and youthful beauty are the two things that must go—and we know it. Trying to hold on to them is just as foolish as trying to hold a man who is on the way out, and as heartbreaking."

Mary Astor has her own recipe for keeping young while getting on. It is simple, and based on proven results... her success is proof enough, and she has the comfort of truth in everything she does. Not that she is against anyone fibbing their way through, if such is their desire.

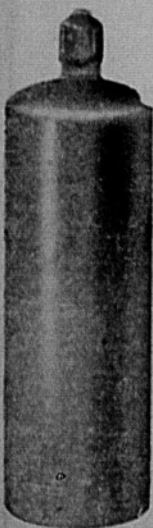

"Lying about one's age is like dyeing one's hair: If you think it makes you more attractive and are happier in consequence, go ahead, by all means. But remember that it rarely fools anybody, and that it is an awful nuisance to keep up."

Robert Scott who has been home on a short visit, will leave tomorrow for California, where he will enter the service of the Marines.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilmer Smith, Wilson, Rt. 1, received the following interesting letter from 1st Lt. J. W. Smith in Hawaii:
"In my last letter I sent some photographs of our Hawaiian feast and said I would tell you about it in my next letter, so get in a comfortable chair because here it comes. I will send some more photos in another letter.

"On the morning of the feast we were visited by two men who were natives of the Island. They brought with them two pigs dressed, weighing about one hundred lbs. apiece. They supervised the digging of a big hole and the building of a hot fire therein, and when the fire was going good they threw in many rocks... volcanic rocks that were sorta spongy looking... that is, they were porous. After about two hours heating they proclaimed the fire and rocks ready for the pigs, so the pigs were laid on a bed of banana leaves (green ones) which were spread out on a piece of chicken wire about as large as each pig. Now remember, these pigs had been gutted and the heads were on but split down the lower jaw... The only part that was not split on the under side was the breast between the two front legs. The pigs were laid on their backs on these beds, and the shoulders cut loose from the ribs in the pits (sorta arm pits). In each arm pit (as I'll call them, were placed some of the hot rocks and there were hot rocks put in the mouth, throat and the whole chest and belly cavity and also in the split between the pelvic bones. Then the two front legs were wired together and the two back legs were treated the same and then the back and front legs tied together, there holding the hot rocks. The fire—now a smouldering mass of coals—was raked smooth and a thick layer of green banana leaves laid over it and then the pigs were laid along this bed. They, in turn, were covered with banana leaves and the leaves with burlap and the burlap with ground and the job was complete. That was 10:30 a. m.

"They remained that way until about 3:30, when a USO troupe came and put on a hula, while a few native women and men prepared the feast. The show was grand but getting back to the feast... Tables were set in two long rows, covered with white paper and flowers and food was set out, and what food! Our pigs were the main course and the meat just fell off the bones. They were uncovered at 3:30, picked up in their hammocks and carried to a table where the delicious pork was put in little pasteboard pans, like you get in a butcher shop, for the individual, and that was placed on the table. Beside that, in more pans and paper cups, were other things that were as follows: Cooked octopus in coconut milk, salmon in chopped onions and tomatoes (the salmon was raw, but delicious anyway), sweet potatoes. (I forgot about those, but will come back to them in a minute). Poi, the National dish, and a desert of coconut milk and cornstarch in gelatin like squares. Now the sweet potatoes: Before the pigs were buried, several sacks of sweet potatoes were placed about them in sacks forming sort of a wall and they were buried with the pigs and finished with the pigs and they were delicious. They were just laid on the table and you ate them right out of their skins. What you would have liked was the octopus. The poi is good if eaten right. You eat everything with your fingers, even the poi, which is just thick paste. You get a mouth full of meat or something, dip your fingers in the poi, raise them out and catch the stringers and then suck your fingers and eat the poi as you eat the meat. The desert was good... sorta like coconut jello, if there is such a thing. Everything is eaten with the fingers, which sounds messy, but isn't so bad. You know how many fellows are afraid to try things... I'll bet I ate enough for three people, but I can't remember enjoying an unusual thing so much and I know you would have also had a good time

Love, Smitty."

RESCUE PILOTS OF THE PACIFIC

ONE of the little publicized jobs that play so vital a part in this war is performed by fliers whose major objective is the rescue of American fighter and bomber pilots and crews shot down at sea or over coconut-fringed islands.

Official records show that more than sixty percent of the American pilots forced down have lived to reach their home base and fly again. "Those of us who have been making daily sweeps over Pacific expanses are particularly proud of our results," writes Lt. William Jancabek, U.S.N., in the November issue of Cosmopolitan Magazine.

"The Japs regard their pilots as we do spent bullets. When a Jap goes down in nine cases out of ten he's out of the game for keeps. On the other hand no American is considered expendable as long as he is alive."

It is an amazing record that these heroic pilots have set up when you consider that the planes they use are for the most part big, slow and vulnerable. Day after day they are exposed to the fire of the faster fighter planes of the enemy. You can get some idea from Lt. Jancabek when he says: "They are sitting ducks for a flock of Zeros, and most of the time they are dead ducks if caught on the water."

The importance of their work is figured on the balance sheet of fliers in the Pacific war. Today, as a result of Japan's recklessness with her pilots, the quality of Jap air fighters is going down, while the quality of ours is going up. It takes a lot of training to produce good fliers, and we are thankful as they are for the PBY rescue pilots.

Because corn fields are "excellent hideouts for Partisans" the Croat Minister for the Interior has ordered all farmers to cut their fields by the end of this month. If they are not cut by then they will be burned. This information, reported by U. S. Government Monitors, came from a dispatch to newspapers by M. I. I., controlled Hungarian news agency.

Ration-Time RECIPES

Apples are a favorite in every household. This simple-to-make dessert will add interest to any meal.

APPLE CRISP
1 quart sliced apples
1/4 cup water
1 1/4 teaspoons cinnamon
3/4 cup sugar
1/2 cup flour
1/2 cup margarine

Place the sliced apples in a shallow baking dish. Add the water and 1 teaspoon of cinnamon. Blend together the sugar, flour and margarine until crumbly in texture. Spread this mixture over the top of apples. Sprinkle with the remaining cinnamon. Bake uncovered in a moderately hot oven (400° F.) 40 to 50 minutes, or until the apples are tender and the top is brown.

Other favorite low-point recipes are found in a 32-page cookbook "Ration-Time Recipes." Free copy may be obtained from National Cotton Council, Box 18, Memphis (1) Tennessee.

"Good" Is Good Enough In War

"Good" is good enough to help win the war—when it comes to fattening cattle for wartime meat production.

• There is not enough feed to put on the weight and finish required to make "choice" and "prime" beef, say the nation's livestock authorities, and cattle should be fed shorter periods to lighten weights to make the available supply of feedstuffs produce the maximum quantity of satisfactory meat.

For the same reason lambs should be fattened as much as possible on pastures and roughages; and hogs should be fed to lighter weights. In the production of milk, greater dependence will have to be placed on good pastures, farm roughages and better management of the dairy herd.

These points are brought out in the statement of policy issued by the War Food Administration, which is working with livestock leaders and producers in efforts to conserve and use efficiently the limited supplies of grains, protein concentrates and other feeds. They are essential to prevent present shortages of feeds, particularly cottonseed meal and cake and other protein concentrates from becoming more acute, and to make sufficient quantities available for the nation's breeding stock.

Carefully followed, the program offers these additional advantages: It will help to remove surplus cattle and sheep from range areas, produce meat in less time, and reduce the cost of producing meat for market.

"Luxury" foods the highly-finished, choice meats for which American stockmen are famous, will come back more quickly after the war, if today's efforts are concentrated on maximum production of meat so important as a source of protein energy, minerals and other essentials for men and women in the war effort.

Change Oil Now Says Wholesaler

It is time to change over to Conoco Winter weight Nth Motor Oil, says M. L. Murray, local wholesale distributor for all Conoco Products.

Go to your local Conoco dealer and have him check your car over carefully says Mr. Murray. He will be glad to check your battery, ignition system, cooling system and your tires, for your Conoco dealer is a well trained service man and he is anxious, like all Conoco dealers, to see to it that your car is in tip-top condition. Your Conoco dealer is just as anxious to see to it that your car is in good shape and your tires properly inflated as you are yourself, for he wants to help you keep your car running. Get the habit of stopping at the Conoco sign, says Mr. Murray, and you'll have a good car when a lot of people can no longer drive.

A recent scrap rubber campaign in Brazil brought in approximately 6,613,000 pounds of rubber for the United Nations war effort.

CLOTHES ARE PRECIOUS TAKE CARE OF THEM

Clothes need more attention now than they have since the last world war and when you have them cleaned, it should be done with utmost care, say the experts at Bray's Cleaners in Lubbock. It takes the right kind of equipment, thousands of dollars worth of it, to do the cleaning right, machines that are made to do certain cleaning jobs and only the best cleaners are so equipped. Bray's in Lubbock suggest that clothes should be taken care of better than ever before. When you have rough work to do, change to work clothes and save your better things for the quality of clothing may not be as good later on. Do not have your clothes cleaned any more than is necessary, but when you do, have it done by properly equipped cleaners such as Bray's in Lubbock.
