Jackson State College Boast Four All-American Candidates this Year

Among the 1968 Tiger crew, four players are candidates for College Division All-American. They are: Richard Caster, Richard Harvey, Leroy Mason and Jimmy Carr.

Jackson State finished the '67 season with a 6 - 3 record and led the nation in the combined professional Football Draft. The gridsters are aggressive in their struggle to make the '68 season one of the best ever.

Caster hails from Williamson High School in Mobile, Alabama, 6'5" - 225 lbs. and plays end. He was the leading receiver for the Tigers during the '67 season. Caster said, "With the success of the team I can accomplish any goal. One of those goals is to be the nation's No. 1 receiver." This summer the Alabamian worked on getting open and catching the ball. With this conquered, Caster awaits the start of a long season.

Harvey, a product of 33rd High School, Gulfport, Mississippi, tips the scales at 190 lbs. and stands 6' 2". With nine interceptions under his belt from last year, he plans to get 11 this year. Some of his great attributes are: speed, range and sure tackling. The Harrison Countian is a top pro prospect. Harvey said, "Football is a game of endurance - physically and mentally, you have to be in shape." Harvey believes in staying in shape year-round to be ready for a tough season, like the one that lies ahead.

Mason is from Henderson High School, Starkville, Mississippi, 6' 2", 210 lbs., and caught the most important pass of the '67 season, which caused the upset defeat of mighty Grambling. He had an in-and-out season last year as a pass receiver from the wingback position.

During the spring training, Mason worked hard to overcome all deficiencies. Good speed and great hands will be his ticket to stardom this season.

Jimmy Carr came to Jackson State from Carver High School in Tupelo, Mississippi, 6'5" and 240 lbs. He was the main stay of the 1967 Tiger line at the position of defensive end. With ability, size,

United Negro Vote Could Be Victory Key In November

A determining factor in the outcome of the November national elections could very well be a united Negro vote. Taking into consideration the fact that there is as much diversion within the Negro voting contingent, as any other specific faction of our civilization, this possibility is hazy.

There is definitely, and more so this year than any other election year, a divisiveness within the Negro electorate as to whom we could throw our support for the best consideration. There is only one determining factor to be considered in our choice that would certainly be agreeable to all facets of the Negro electorate. This would be Justice, in all phases of national endeavor. Who can best lead and influence this justice in government procedure?

We have to take into practical consideration the geographical aspects of the parties and their respective candidates. Let's look at the parties' perspective.

In those states that have Republican governors, both in the south and other climes, Negroes have made decided economic and social gains, but very little political gains—except in Michigan and Pennsylvania, Arkansas and Florida.

Even in New York, under Nelson Rockefeller, the Negro political picture is far from its top status under former governor Tom Dewey. The California Negro has suffered a sharp decline in his political spectra under the governorship of Ronald Reagan.

Nixon, who is stateless in reality, can point to no contribution to Negro political aspirations. Massachusetts did give us a U. S. Senator, but who is not specifically identified with the Negro cause.

The Democratic party under the national leadership of the Kennedy-Johnson-Humphrey combine made a concerted effort in all directions of justice for the Negro, but were unable to influence Congressional action in this direction effectively and complete. Some Democratic governors, including John Connally of Texas, have greatly advanced the Negro economic spectra, and helped to influence his political participation in state affairs. But this has principally been in the south.

Even, under Maddox, the Georgia Negro has seen a sharp upclimb in political recognition. And Negroes actually made some political gains in Alabama under the governorship of the late Lurene Wallace, wife of George Wallace, who is seeking the presidency on a third party ticket.

In all probability, the Democratic party has come forth with an acceptable coalition of forces that will offer the Negro the best choice. But many Negro leaders are groping with their heads in the sand for a means of proving to the Democratic party that they are dissatisfied with its past record.

To effectively support our over-all hopes and aspiration, politically, we are forced to back the Democratic party nationally. On the other hand, from state and local level perspective, we would play it smart to support Republican candidates, who offer a choice against Democrat evasiveness.

For instance, in Texas, GOP gubernatorial candidate Paul Eggers is much more preferred than Preston Smith. And GOP's Jim Collins, for Congress and Joe Kirvin for the state legislature are better for Negro aspirations than their Democratic counterparts.

The problem here is that the Negro must not be inclined to hitch his wagon to an overall party star, but to vote his conviction nationally on one perspective consideration, and locally on another.

Whoever the Democrats could have nominated nationally, including Maddox, would be more preferable than the Republican ticket. We must show our non-committed political affiliation by our local and state vote. Voting a split ticket in November should present no problem, and certainly would prove our point—that we are not dedicated to support any particular party down the line.

Racism May Come in All Colors

It has been recently observed by many that the so called "big shot" Negroes should help their own kind. This is all too true, but they seldom if ever do. They tend to forget from whence they come.

The lack of involvement in the slums or flat areas by the middle-class Negroes who forgot that their parents were often a part of this situation, and the deep-seated white racism are two grievous weaknesses that beset black Americans. That fact was projected at the recent National Urban League Convention in New Orleans.

In looking on the local level, it is difficult to understand how middle-class Negroes who have berated the white racists for their attitude toward black people, can at the same time refuse to go into the trouble areas and help raise their unfortunate brothers and sisters to a higher standard of living.

The cold, brutal truth is that most "big shot" Negroes refuse to contribute any of their time or money to improve the lot of their people. They fail to realize that they will not do just the very thing they expect the white community to do. They also fail to realize that the little success they have achieved is due directly to the support which they have received from the mass of their own race. Too many so-called black leaders shout and yell about the injustices heaped upon them by prejudiced whites, while at the same time they are just as guilty of these same injustices—upon their own people. It is past time for those who would hold themselves out as leaders to go down into the areas within their community where problems exist and help to work their own people up to a better way of life.

Apparently, Whitney M. Young, Jr., Executive Director of the National Urban League, is beginning to get the message, that unless the "leaders" take positive action to improve the lot of the black masses, they will endanger and weaken their own status.

Recently President Johnson hit the nail on the head in a speech before the National Medical Association when he declared: "To you who are more fortunate than most of your fellow black men, and you women, too, you doctors . . . you must be your brother's keeper. You must provide leadership. You must provide the brains and the vision and the courage and you may have to pitch in a few dollars now and then to do it."

This is a reality, we as Negroes must not forget from whence we came. We all have a terrific job to do and we must start it now. Of course, there have been white racists who have placed obstacles in our path. We have finally reached the point where many of these can be overcome, but at present we have not even began to overcome the "big shot" attitude toward our brothers and sisters who are less fortunate. This must start now—not later.

Around the Hub City

Around the Hub City would echo the feeling of the director of the Multi-Service Center, Mrs. Murry Peppers, when she said, "You'll always be greeted with a smile when you come to the center."

This was made known last Friday night at a "Meet your Center Director" social sponsored by the Operational Board. Scores of people, young and old, enjoyed the short program and refreshments.

Mrs. Peppers gave a brief outline to the residents of East Lubbock who made the meeting.

Joe A. Kelly, Executive Director of the Community Action Board, gave remarks at the affair. He was also joined by T. J. Patterson who is assistant director.

Mrs. Ruthie Harris, president of the Operational Board, served as mistress of ceremonies.

Immediately following the social and meeting, the center was turned over to the young people. They had a good time doing the latest dances while those who desired went outside for more conversation.

It would appear as though the center is off to a bang-up start, especially with the interest shown by both young and old last Friday evening.

The Multi-Service Center belongs to the people of this area and it is up to the people to help write the script in order to tell the Community Action Board what they want and what they would like to do in order to make their community a better place in which to live. This will also do as one mother put it, "Help prepare our young for the future."

Emphasis is being placed on minority groups, Negro and Mexican-American, in regard to business ventures.

Because of this, Around the Hub City would like to inform you that the Small Business Administration (SBA) has been directed to look into these communities to find people who are interested in obtaining loans.

It has been also noted that less than 3 per cent of all SBA loans throughout America have gone to minority groups.

A meeting will be held Monday night, September 9th, at 7:30 p.m. at the Multi-Service Center, located at East 24th and Weber Avenue, for people of this community who are interested in learning more about SBA, and, by the same token, find out what steps are needed to apply for such loans.

A representative from the Lubbock office of Small Business Administration will be present at this meeting to explain the new directive which was recently issued by Washington.

Don't forget this meeting Monday, September 9th, at 7:30 p.m. at Multi-Service Center.

A pan of grease on a stove caught fire at the Bud Simmons residence, 2102 East 19th Street, while the owners were away last Sunday. The kitchen was heavily damaged.

Mr. and Mrs. Caesar Graves and daughter, Cecille, and Mrs. Robert Anderson and T. J. Patterson attended the double wedding of their neices and cousins at Wichita Falls, last week.

Cecille was enroute to Bishop College after the ceremonies at St. John Baptist Church. She is a junior at Bishop this year.

Mary & Mac Private School opened its doors Tuesday with students getting ready for a new year at the Blue and White. Mrs. L. S. Graves is expecting new plans for Mary & Mac this year.

Visiting with the Woods families last week were Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Porter of Pelham, Texas; Mr. and Mrs. Warren G. Cavitt and son of Fort Worth; and Mrs. Eudora Woods Cannon and Willie Davis of Dallas, Texas. Mr. Porter is a brother of Mrs. Eli Woods and Mrs. Cannon is a sister of the Woods brothers.

Rev. and Mrs. J. L. Walker and family left last Friday for Charlottee, North Carolina, due to the death of his aunt.

Mrs. Elsie King has returned from Colorado Springs, Colorado, where she has been on a semi-vacation the past five weeks. She experienced her first plane flight.

"Watch The Little Guy"

This column is sure that you are familiar with this slogan each year, "WATCH THE LITTLE GUY". As you know school doors opened this week and with all excitement behind those doors, the little guy will sometimes forget to look both ways before crossing the streets. Therefore, Mom and Dad, we should be extra careful about the way we control our driving this week and every week.

We should be especially careful in the school zones of which we sometimes find ourselves driving without reason. Please obey those rules and regulations which are so important for the little guys who may very well be your son or daughter.

Please watch out for the little guy!!

Book Worm Thief

As you may recall last week in this column, you read about a 'good guy in a white hat who turned bad'. This week we have a thief who is apparently a book worm.

You see, Inez Taylor, 1514 East 6th Street, reported to the Lubbock Police Department that someone entered her house through the rear door and took a set of World Book Encyclopedias which were valued at $279.

You would think this was enough for one haul, but he felt it necessary to swipe the two dictionaries which were standing by. One thing is for certain, this thief has the necessary ammunition to learn something.

It was also learned that the rear door had been pried open and the screen cut.

Theft

James Boyd, 2402 East 7th St., reported that someone came into his yard and took his bike while he was minding his own business.

Of course James is upset, so if you should see a strange bike in your neighborhood, please inform him.

Burglary

Maxey Community Center will sponsor a teen dance Friday, September 6, 1968 from 8:00 to 11:00 p.m. at Maxey Community Center, 30th and Oxford Avenue. Music will be furnished by the "Traveling Salesmen". Admission will be 75 cents.

hattan Drive, reported that someone unknown took a vending machine from his store which is located at 1324 East 24th Street. The machine is valued at $12.50. It was also learned that $3.50 worth of pennies were inside the machine.

He has no idea who could have done such a thing.

Fight

Police were summoned to an apartment in Green Fair Manor in regard to a fight. Once there, police observed a woman who was apparently in drunken state walking in front of an apartment at 2808 Weber Drive.

She was arrested because of being in a most drunken state.

Man Rolled

A Fort Worth man who was in our city over the week end got a bad reception from some females. He told police that he was talking to some ladies at a house on Avenue D when he was lifted of approximately $80 which was in tens and twenties.

He had no idea his billfold would be taken from him, but after searching further, the billfold was gone with the money.

Weekly Prayer

Let us pray to our Father in Heaven that we will one day treat our fellow man as we would like for him to treat us. Let us begin today uplifting ourselves and in turn we will uplift our brother.

Mrs. Ida Jackson, an Austinite who is a teacher in the public schools there, was one of the consultants in the recent "Cross Over Teacher" seminar held at Ko Ko Palace last month.

She was representing the University of Texas in this endeavor. Mrs. Jackson has also served on the faculty of Huston-Tillotson College at Austin.

The "Night Walkers" will furnish the music for a teen dance at Rodgers Community Center, Friday, September 6. The time will be from 8:30 to 11:30 p.m., and admission will be 50 cents per person.

The Betty R. Duncan family reports a very pleasant four days spent in Fort Worth, Texas. They were visiting Mr. Duncan's mother and other relatives.

We are very proud to learn that some young men yet have a mind for business, I dropped by a certain service station the other day to find it was closed but not for long because a young man just back from Vietnam opened it again. This station was Larry's Gulf Service but is now known as Beasley's Gulf Service and is located 1024 3rd St. In talking with Mr. Beasley he told me that he will be carrying a full and complete line of access-

THE COLLEGE STUDENT SPEAKS

About the "New" and "Old"

By Doris Brown

Negro Press International

One day, while visiting a newspaper office, I struck up a conversation with a repairman who was fixing a teletype machine used to transmit news dispatches.

I asked how old the machine was, and his answer astounded me: The machine, invented some 50 years ago, was about 35 years old. Most newspapers in the area use teletype machines of that vintage, he added.

Not long before, I had read about the new developments in the transmission of messages by machine—such as a device which "sprays" letters onto paper at a rate of thousands of words per second.

I asked whether machines like that had been put into use.

"No," was his reply. "They're too expensive to buy and operate."

Machines, like the old-fashioned one he was repairing, can be purchased for less than $100, in some cases, and are easy to repair, he

New Y W C A Classes Planned

An exciting program at the YWCA will start this week with many new classes and most of those that have been offered in the past included in the fall schedule, according to Miss Dorothy Lomax, chairman of the YWCA Program committee.

New classes include modeling, genealogy, alterations of both men's and women's clothing, upholstery and a speech course for ladies. Among the classes which are being offered again are tennis, golf, exercise, swimming, sewing, tailoring, defensive driving, beginning and advanced conversational Spanish and bridge. Classes for the younger members will include guitar, a dancing class for children and a charm course entitled, "A Month of Beauty", for high school girls.

Two unusual classes are a course on football, "How To Watch Football," and a course in car maintenance and safety, "What's Under The Hood?" Both of these are taught by authorities and should be of general interest to the women and girls of the area, according to Miss Lomax.

The program will officially start with the first meeting of the class, "How To Watch Football" on Tuesday, Sept. 10. Leete Jackson, Jr., executive director of the Red Raider Club, will teach the course which will meet at the YWCA, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. on two Tuesday evenings. The course is planned and timed to make football games more enjoyable and comprehensible. The class is free to all YWCA members, but membership and pre-registration are required.

On Thursday, Sept. 12, two golf classes are scheduled. The morning class will meet at 10:00 a.m. and the afternoon class at 5:15 p.m. Both classes will meet for one hour each Monday and Thursday at the Meadowbrook Golf Course for five lessons. The classes will be taught by Jay McClure and Calvin Garrett of Meadowbrook; equipment is furnished. Pre-registration at the YWCA is required.

Two YWCA clubs that suspended meetings for the summer will start meeting again this week. The Yettes, a club for fifth and sixth grade girls attending K. Carter, Guadalupe and Carroll Thompson schools will meet at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday. Also starting this week will be the Live Y'ers, YWCA senior citizens club, at 11:00 a.m. Friday. Live Y'ers club is open to all interested men and women. The club meets twice monthly at the YWCA for dominoes, "42", and covered dish luncheons. The ladies of the Lubbock Crosby Garza County Medical Auxiliary furnish transportation for those needing it.

YOUR HEALTH CONTROLS YOUR LIFE

Parents May Not Know Child Is Hurt

Children are full of activity—and often accidents. Children under the age of five are especially full of energy and curiosity, and no matter how carefully his play-time is supervised he can be injured. All children fall down, run into objects, and hurt themselves in a variety of ways. It's all a part of learning. Often, however, the parent is not even aware that the child has suffered an injury.

It would be easy enough if symptoms of spinal injury in these cases showed themselves right away. Sometimes they do, and it is easy to see a connection between the injury and the disease. But often there are no noticeable warning signals . . . time passes and the injury is forgotten.

Many illnesses come on so gradually that it is difficult to say when they began. A malfunction in the body may be "lived with" for months—or even years—before definite symptoms of illness appear.

The nerves, in these cases, were able to function, but only barely, and as time passed the nerves became deadened under pressure as if with drugs.

Every toddler does a lot of climbing. A typical case is the two-year-old who climbed on the couch, then up on the arm where he stood for a moment before plunging to the floor with a mighty flop. He yelled, and cried.

His mother rushed to him, looked for cuts or bruises and found none. The tot went to sleep, when he woke he was his usual busy, curious self. Time passed, and the child seemed to have developed a slight limp. When he was examined by the family Doctor of Chiropractic, it was learned that one leg was shorter than the other due to a slipped sacroiliac joint.

The condition was corrected in a short time, and the boy was able to walk and run. Had the slight limp been ignored, he likely would have been hampered not only by a limp, but a curvature of the spine and resultant nerve pressure at several points along the spinal column.

Dr. D. D. Palmer, the founder of Chiropractic, said, "The moment a vertebral subluxation exists, that moment disease begins."

Sometimes a simple accident is the root of disease developing later in life. Insidious diseases usually develop slowly, because the organs, glands and all parts of the body put up a valiant fight to function normally until pressure on nerves causes them to fail.

It is wise to have all of the family checked periodically by your Doctor of Chiropractic. It is always good to know youngsters are healthy. If anything is amiss, it can be corrected in almost every case.

The College Student . . . added.

How strange, I thought, that the news-gathering industries—of all industries—would continue to rely on "primitive" equipment.

Then, I began to reflect about the constant emphasis in our society on "newness," "change," "development," "growth," and "futurity," and it occurred to me that the "old things"—among them, teletype machines—are often still with us, despite our disdain for anything or anyone over 30 years old.

In some instances, the disdain is showered upon anything that is over five years old.

A good number of the devices we use daily—the phonograph, motion-picture camera, telephone, automobile, radio, electric light, television—were invented more than 50 years ago.

Many a housewife prefers a sewing machine built before the turn of the century ("It doesn't break down as often"); and an older automobile is just fine with men who know a thing or two about mechanics ("The new ones seem to be unrepairable—except in the shop, and the repairs may not hold up for long.")

In Chicago, the public transportatation system only recently phased out rapid-transit cars built before World War I. (The older cars had the advantage over the newer ones of having reversible seats.)

And who doesn't prefer old to new wine, the first edition of a book to a recent reprint, antique to assembly-line furniture?

Philosophically, it's the same story of "oldness" standing up well against "newness." In fact, the newer ideas are often found to be the older ones in disguise. (Socrates said as much, when, in defending himself against charges of corrupting the youth, he maintained he was but disseminating the community's ancient traditions.)

People speak these days of society's need to conduct its affairs in a spirit of love, rather than out of a regard for economic gain, as if a new value had been discovered. But the notion that "spirituality" must triumph over "materiality" goes back to the Bible and possibly antedates it.

Similarly, concern about the poor and oppressed is sometimes presented as a recently developed idea, when, in fact, it dates back to the Hebrew Scriptures.

Even the restless demand, so often heard today among the young, that society be made over is largely based on religious concepts of spiritual renewal found in the Bible.

The Old Testament philosopher Ecclesiastes summed up the "oldness of things" when he maintained "There is nothing new under the sun"—a view I am upholding in this column. And, indeed, it is the world's essential changelessness that one finds to be increasingly overwhelming, all-encompassing, and significant as he matures.

According to a book entitled "The Nature of the Non-Western World," the challenge faced by poor countries is not so much to abandon their older values as to use them to produce economic abundance and to make needed social reforms.

This is an important lesson all men need to learn. For we seem obligated either to affirm old traditions mindlessly, regardless of their original purposes; or to disregard them, with the same mindlessness, in the name of an ancient modernity.

Both traditionalists and non-traditionalists forget that the "old ways" of thinking and acting may well be meaningful and useful. (The traditionalist often exalts the "old ways" precisely because he considers them meaningless and useless—a view with which the modernist derisively concurs.)

But instead of pitting the "old" and the "new," we must learn how to synthesize them and to prepare for the new on the basis of what we have learned from the old.

We need to be receptive to truth, regardless of its origin, to appreciate beauty, irrespective of its age, and to love wisdom, whatever may be its source.

Just as an old-fashioned teletype machine may still be useful, ancient philosophical notions and practices may still be serviceable for both the present and the future.

Let us, therefore, not dishonor the old either by either defying it or defaming it. Instead, we must utilize all things, regardless of their age, for the service of man.

"Cosmic Collisions" Topic For September Planetarium Programs

To the physicist, collisions which occur in the universe are numerous and varied, and in the modern scientific age some "collisions" are being used to advantage.

For example, the principle which inspired the invention of radar was the knowledge that by bouncing waves off an object and reflecting it on a scope a sort of picture of the object could be obtained.

It had been predicted that the planet Icarus would crash into the earth when it crossed the earth's orbit in June. On June 15 the earth had already passed that point in its orbit when the asteroid crossed. Scientists will not have to worry about it crossing that close for another 19 years.

These and other "Cosmic Collisions" form the topic for the lecture-demonstration at the Planetarium at West Texas Museum at 3 p.m. each Sunday during September.

Planetarium shows are open to the public. Admission is 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for students. Parking is available in the Museum parking lot.

The above program will be shown September 8, 15, 22 and 29. The Planetarium will be closed September 1 for the Labor Day weekend.
