Ship That Rescued Ellsworth and Aid from Icy Fate

Penetrating the ice floes that hem in Little America in the Antarctic, the British royal research ship Discovery II, pictured at London as it was being provisioned, flashed to the world the news that the two-month search for Lincoln Ellsworth and his pilot, Herbert Hollick-Kenyon, had ended happily. The two explorers were found safe and in good health, encamped on the ice. Missing since November 23, they were grounded when their plane ran out of gas twenty miles from their goal.

T. V. PHILLIPS IS A SUICIDE

Despondent Over the Death of His Wife, Kills Self at Home

T. V. Phillips, 42, principal of the Pleasant Valley school, died last night at 7:00 o'clock at his teacherage home of a self-inflicted gunshot wound.

Despondency over the death last week of his wife was given as the reason of the suicide. His wife died in a Memphis hospital early last week after being ill for more than a year.

A note written and left on a nearby table by the well-known school man read: "Call McMinn (a Childress undertaking firm); have him pick up my body. Bury me in my new gray suit in a casket just like Naomi's. Sell my property and pay my debts." The note was signed "Tom."

"Naomi" referred to in the note was his wife. She was buried in (Continued on Page 8)

TWO ACCIDENTS SATURDAY ON ICY PAVEMENTS

Car is Wrecked When Strikes Railing on Red River Bridge

Two unusual accidents happened in and near Memphis Saturday afternoon, caused by slippery ice that had formed on the pavement from the snow.

One accident occurred on the corner of Sixth and Noel streets Saturday afternoon about 5:00 o'clock, and the other happened when a man driving a late model Chevrolet sedan bearing a Rusk County license number crashed into a bridge railing.

The Rusk County car was traversing the long concrete bridge that spans the Prairie Dog Fork of Red River Saturday afternoon about 3:00 o'clock when the car slipped and crashed into one side of the bridge and rebounded into the other side. The automobile was almost completely wrecked. (Continued on Page 8)

Colony of Farmers to Be Established In Hall County Soon

The good collection record of the Memphis office of the Rural Resettlement Administration may prove the deciding factor that would bring a colony of farmers from over the state to the rich farming lands of Hall County.

Rural Resettlement Administration officials of the state office are considering the setting up of a "model farm community" in Hall County, near Memphis.

During 1935, the local office, of which A. N. Crandall is manager, has collected over 85 per cent of all loans made by the government through the RRA here. Loans were made to Hall, Donley and Armstrong county farmers.

Retirement of sub-marginal land has been the resettlement ad- (Continued on Page 8)

County May Lose Benefit of Work If Men Not Secured

Hall County may lose her chance to profit from the state shelterbelt tree program, Frank N. Blevins, National Re-employment Service manager here, stated this morning.

It is necessary that 17 men eligible for relief from the Esteline community sign up for work on the tree belt program, Mr. Blevins stated. So far, only one (Continued on Page 8)

To Assemble Display From County For Fat Stock Show

Any person in Hall County who has put up and cured meat this past year and who is proud of his ability as a meat curer is asked to get in touch with County Agricultural Agent R. E. L. Pattillo, who is attempting to collect meat to take to the Amarillo fat stock show next March.

A new division, the cured meat exhibit, has been added to the stock show this year, and the county agent would like for Hall County farmers and stockmen to (Continued on Page 8)

The Weather

WEST TEXAS: Partly cloudy, warmer tonight; Tuesday, partly cloudy, warmer except in southwest.

Locally, the weather is cool today, although the sun is shining brightly. At 8.00 a. m. the temperature was 22, which rose to 42 by noon. Quite a bit of snow is still on the ground, but will probably be gone by night.

PLAY BY LOCAL WOMAN ON AIR

Centennial Play by Mrs. Greene Put on Air by KGKO

"The Last Page," prize Centennial play written by Mrs. R. S. Greene of this city, was broadcast yesterday afternoon at 5:00 o'clock from Station KGKO, at Wichita Falls, by the Little Theatre of that city.

The play, which won first place in the statewide contest of short plays to be featured by Centennial programs, has as its setting the village of Salisbury, five miles south of Memphis, the father of this city but long a memory now.

SOME PEOPLE THINK MAR... IS A LOTTERY - THEY'RE ADV... TRYING ANOTHER TICKET.

Chief of Police Middleton directing the placing of some "Slow" buttons on the square Saturday afternoon, with his collar buttoned up around his neck and his hands in his pockets. That guy can do better directing with his hands in his pockets than anybody we know of.

Bob Seyfarth, advertising manager, watching the calendar and impatiently waiting for Thursday each week. Thursday is the day he collects the grocery ads, and he never fails to call on Joe Chitwood and levy on Joe's stock of cheese.

Chesty Walker's Ford sitting in his front yard yesterday morning with the motor purring along full blast, and nobody in sight. We just wondered if Coach let the radiator freeze the night before.

Two young ladies do a novelette on the walk in front of the Democrat yesterday morning. One of them slipped, grabbed the other and they both went 'boom.' Then the argument started, and as far as one could see them, as they went down the street, it kept up. The grabbed was apparently expostulating vigorously with the grabber about the whole affair.

Several of the Cyclone basketballers promulgating alibis Saturday. It seems according to them, that about the only reason Memphis hasn't been winning any games is because of this, or that, or the other... with not a word said about the possibility that their opponents might have been the better teams.

The sports editor with boots on Saturday. However, he had his trousers pulled down over them, so nobody would mistake him for a high school girl.

Ed Cudd using the family car for taxi yesterday, while one of their regular taxis was in the repair shop.

Leon Montgomery challenging the We Saw editor to a shooting match. Nothing personal—just a trial of skill in the shooting gallery on the west side. We didn't take him up, for all we can shoot is the bull.

N. W. Durham getting extravagant and ordering a taxi to go home for dinner yesterday.

Shorty Alexander trying to give somebody an over coat last week-end, via the punchboard route.

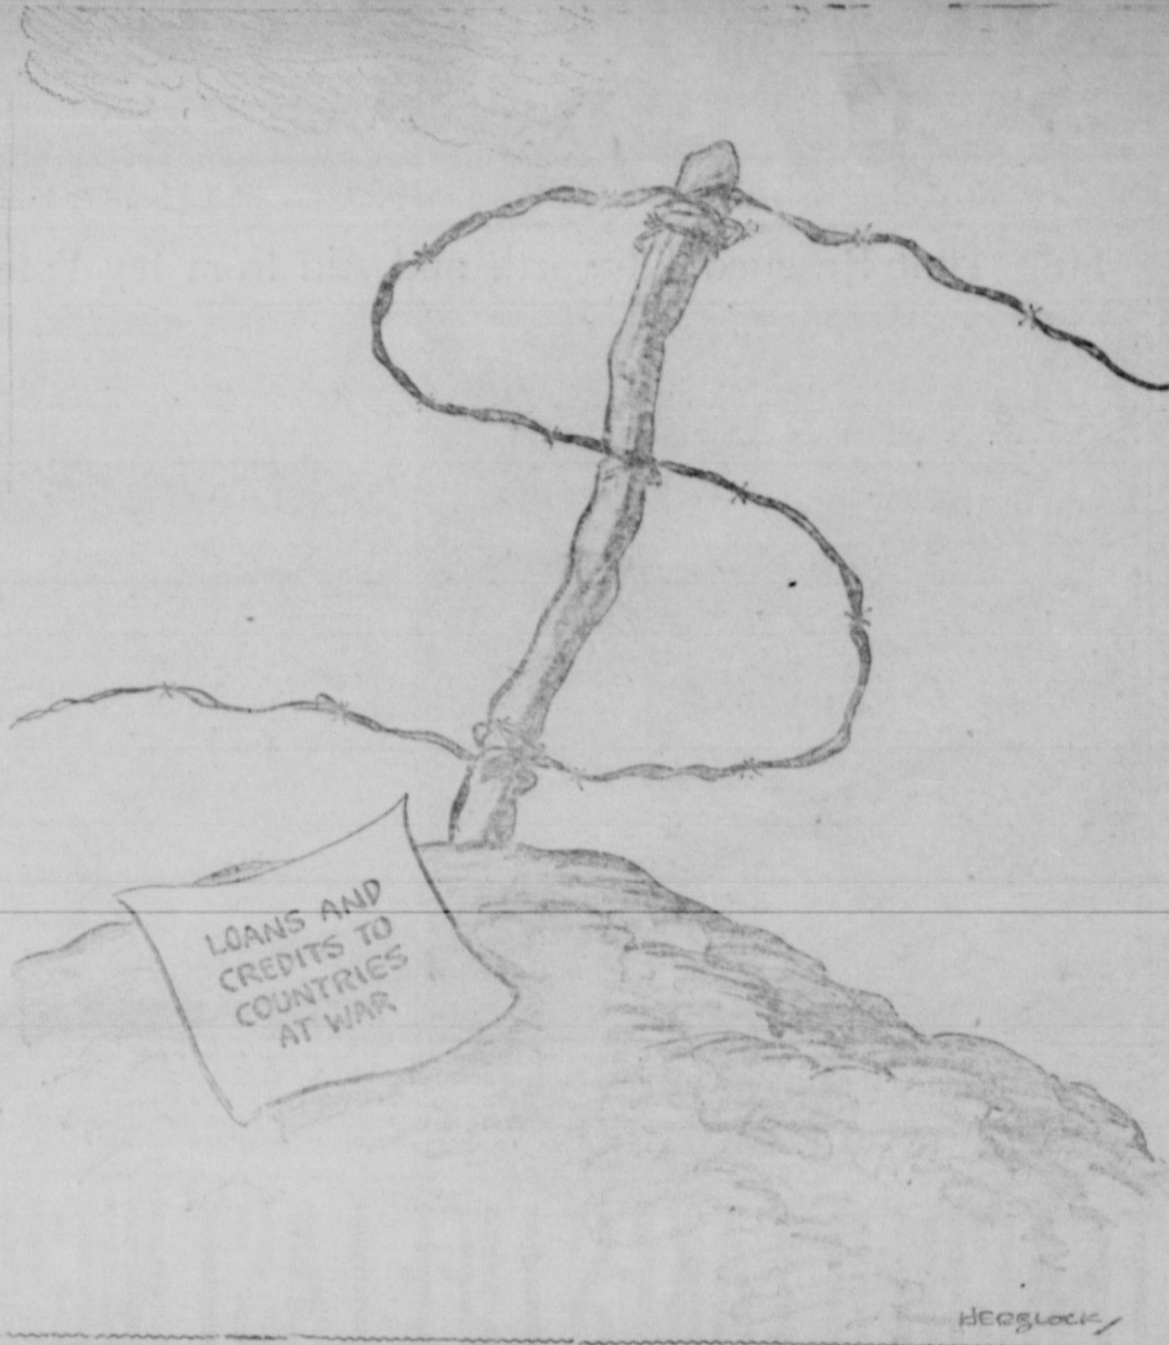

Here in the office Saturday explaining to the news editor that while his folks were away he stayed with friends in the city.

The red-headed son of Alman Kinard carrying a bottle of milk in one hand this morning and drop-kicking a football. Coach Walker should keep his eye on that boy. In a few years he'll probably be able to make the Cyclone and be fullback and waterboy all at the same time.

Charlie Meacham smiling over the neat and efficient appearance of his newly arranged and decorated prescription department.

Several of the folks on the north side laughing over the burglar scare at the Bayouth Smart Shop one night last week. It seems that the proprietors came back from a trip down the road one night last week, and stopped at the store. When they turned on the lights, they saw some of the dresses in the display case move, jumped at the conclusion that there was a burglar about, and went for the law. When the fearless lawmen arrived and carefully crept into the store with drawn pistols, they found—a kitten.

CAN LIFE'S SANCTITY BE EXAGGERATED?

WASHINGTON is not the only place where, of late, they have been inquiring into the causes of war. A royal commission has been sitting in London, digging with Britanic thoroughness into the doings of munitions makers, and some of its best pay dirt has been found in the footprints of that mysterious and rather sinister gentlemen, Sir Basil Zaharoff.

The commission managed to slide a witness chair under the dignified person of Sir Herbert A. Lawrence, chairman of Vickers, famous for its production of war materials.

Sir Herbert did all right under direct questioning, making the customary denials that munitions makers have any wish to see war come into the world; but he made a little slip in a prepared statement which he read to the commission, and Sir Phillip Gibbs, a member of the commission, pounced on him for it.

In his statement Sir Herbert referred to "an honorable but perhaps mistaken ideal respecting the sanctity of life and the iniquity of war."

Sir Phillip immediately quizzed him about it.

"I think," said the chairman of Vickers, "that the question of the sanctity of human life has sometimes been exaggerated to the disadvantage of certain other facts of public life."

"Do you think you could exaggerate the iniquity of war?" asked Gibbs.

"Yes, I think I can," returned the munitions magnate.

Little unintentional revelations like this can be of more importance than weighty disclosures concerning production schedules and profit-and-loss statements; for while it is good for us to find out all we can about the way war, the weapons war is fought with, and the dividends that are made therefrom, are tangled all together, it is even more vital that we know just what sort of men the war-makers are.

Whether anything ever comes of it, we're learning these facts in this country and they're learning them in England.

Roosevelt is wiping a grin off his face.

The president is more than enough of a politician to know when his celebrated charm, and such as "my friends" begins to wane. In his new "fighting" role, that sort of restrained and relaxed attitude is not in vogue.

The change was noticeable in Roosevelt's address. But perhaps even more significant was his demure annual "schoolroom" address—the correspondent—when he discussed the year's budget in a demure tone.

Last year, estimated at a tax of 1,000, he was no different, and almost hilarious.

This year—when we were far more fortunate than even able to maintain a semblance of budget-balance the other way around a sober, more serious probably someone will call him "the man in Hoover's shoes."

Occasionally they smile—never one of those fashionable variety of smiles which are now to be seen on special occasions.

Thus far none of the credit for anything quite so gay. But certain persons will see to it that he does not have a magazine article which would adversely affect his personalism.

Although Dr. Tuowell used with restraint as a New Deal Roosevelt has no hesitations in making his demands of his enemies—and some of them have been dropped.

Tuowell's recent resignation suggests that he might be a political animal. Many people were surprised when he refused the offer to be Tuowell's successor.

Tuowell has received orders to submit to the White House a report of his Los Angeles call for a standstill in the workers' and business' financial and industrial activities.

For the very first time Roosevelt had appeared in advance—no one knew—and that he had been accustomed to dining with the president.

That's just another of the ways Roosevelt has been playing up to his friends without taking any responsibility for their utterances. He has had Tuowell's liberal idea of the president's hand in playing up to his friends.

Amy said, startled, "What's wrong? Are you ill?"

Miss Craig. She feels like singing.

"Okey," Jim said. Then to Julia: "What d'you want to sing?"

"I know most of the new things." She looked at Henri Lamb. "How About 'Accent on Youth'?"

Lamb nodded. "That's a good number. Let's have it. And leave your hat here. I want to see your hair under the spot." When Julia removed her hat he gave a little exclamation of approval. "Say, that ought to look good!"

As Julia went downstairs and across the empty dance floor to the platform, she walked as one in a trance. The spotlight was blinding at first, but she was grateful for it because it hid the big emptiness of the room—and it hid, too, the disconcerting figure of Lamb. But when Jim started in at the piano, Julia forgot everything but the plaintiff, haunting song. And she sang it well. She knew she did.

On the final chorus, Henri Lamb walked close to the microphone. When she had finished, he patted her hand. But he was shaking his head, too, and she heard him say: "Not quite yet. But you're coming along."

"You mean I—won't do?"

"I'm afraid that's it." He looked at her seriously. "It's a tough racket, anyhow, girlie. Why don't you forget it?"

Stammering her thanks, her eyes filming with tears of humiliation, Julia rushed from the platform. She was almost out of the door when she remembered she had left her hat upstairs. She ran for it, hoping she wouldn't confront Henri Lamb again.

Beside her hat on his littered desk she saw the half-open letter which Peter Kemp had written to Lamb. Peter had typed it out in clear capitals which even her glance could not miss. It said: DEAR HENRI—THIS IS JULIA CRAIG WHO WANTS TO SING IN YOUR CLUB. BUT WHEN YOU GIVE HER A TRY-OUT I WISH YOU'D REMEMBER I'M IN LOVE WITH HER AND DON'T WANT HER TO BE A SINGER.

CHAPTER IV

Her face flaming with swift anger, Julia read Peter's note again. She whirled impulsively, and saw Henri Lamb standing in the doorway. His heavy face, too, from anger. For several seconds he could not speak in his embarrassment.

"After all," he said, at last, "I—you see, Peter Kemp is a friend of mine. He once did a great favor for me."

"Did it occur to you," asked Julia, "that I might not be interested in whether Peter Kemp is in love with me? And now I—I'll never speak to him again."

"Because he's so much in love with you?" asked Lamb quietly. Then he added, "But I am sorry. You—you must think very badly of me now."

"The only thing I'm interested in is whether I'm good enough to get a job in a night club, Mr. Lamb. Will you please tell me that—honestly?"

Henri Lamb shrugged. "Your voice is good for these modern songs. And you are an attractive young woman. That counts a lot, too."

"But not good enough for the Green Club?"

"I didn't mean that. As I said, I was trying to help Kemp." He smiled wryly. "I'm afraid I've done a bad job of it." He crossed the room. Then he turned to Julia again. "The woods are full of passable singers, Miss Craig. I could turn down the next dozen that come in through that door—and still find others."

Julia nodded. "I see," she said tensely, and left the office. As she passed through the little ante-room she felt the curious glance of Jim, the young man who had played her accompaniment while she sang "Accent on Youth." He followed her part of the way down the stair.

"Don't let it get you down," he said in a low voice. "You've got lots of stuff."

"T-thanks," faltered Julia, and stumbled into the dark lobby of the Green Club. In another moment she was in the blinding glare of the street. Her cheeks were still hot with humiliation and anger, and she dreaded returning to the office.

But return to the office she did, and when she had settled herself at her desk she picked up the telephone and asked to be connected with Peter Kemp. When he answered she said slowly, "This is Julia. Quite by accident I read your note to Henri Lamb. Thank you very much."

In the silence that followed she could almost feel his astonishment at the other end of the wire. Then he burst out, "But, Julia, I—"

"There really isn't anything else to say, Peter. Goodby."

She had hardly replaced the instrument in its cradle when Peter himself was in the room.

"Julia, I—know it was a rotten thing to do. But I—can't you see that it was only because Julia got up from her desk in a quick, angry movement which effectively stopped his faltering defense. "I'd rather not talk about it, Peter. I've a headache and I'm going home."

"Won't you let me take you?"

Julia read, "When you give her a try-out remember I'm in love with her—"

"No," said Julia putting on her hat. "I'd much rather go alone."

It seemed odd to let herself in to the little apartment so early. Not since she had started to work for Woodford and Brooks had she left the office before 5:15. Somehow this realization made her more determined than ever to leave it one day soon forever.

With a weary sigh of relief she dropped onto the davenport and closed her eyes.

Soon she was asleep, to be awakened later by the sound of Amy's key in the lock. Her roommate started at sight of Julia on the davenport. "What's wrong? . . . Are you ill?"

Julia shook her head and smiled weakly. "Just a slight case of shell shock. I sang for Henri Lamb this afternoon."

Amy's eyes widened. "No fooling?"

"No fooling, Amy. But I didn't get the job."

Amy made a sound of dismay. "I've been down at the Green Club a lot—and I never did think he knew a singer when he heard one," she said loyally.

Julia leaned forward excitedly. "He did say my voice was good, though, Amy. I—I think he might have given me a chance if it hadn't been for that note that Peter Kemp wrote."

Julia told her of Peter's advice to Henri Lamb.

"That was a mean trick," Amy agreed. "But the poor kid's so much in love with you that he doesn't know right from wrong. Or maybe he's heard that all's fair in love and war. But I've some news of my own for you, darling."

"News?"

"Royal Nesbitt is going to take me out tonight. He telephoned this afternoon and I told him about you."

"Amy! He'll think I'm a fool."

Amy Sanders pierced Julia with a glance. "Listen—you're old enough to know better than that. No man thinks a girl is a fool when she has eyes and hair like yours. When Royal drops in tonight I want you to do a song for him."

"But why?"

"I want him to know you really can sing. He knows everybody who even thinks they run a night club. He knows some song writers, too. Wouldn't it be grand if you could make your start with a song written especially for you?"

Catching some of Amy's infectious enthusiasm, Julia laughed. "You're certainly a tonic, Amy. And after this afternoon, I think I need it."

"Well, said Amy, "you know darned well that I'm all for you if you're dead sure this is what you want to do. But I'm still advising you to settle down to the simple life."

"You don't take your own advice," mentioned Julia mischievously.

"Why should I? Nobody else does." Then Amy's tone grew serious. "But I will some time."

"You mean Royal Nesbitt?"

"Heavens, no. He's not serious about anything or anybody. But he's fun to be with. We're just good friends."

Julia had never quite approved of Royal Nesbitt, and Amy knew it. She knew the reason for Julia's disapproval too, though she never mentioned it. If Royal Nesbitt was not exactly wealthy, he at least had a great deal more money to spend than the other young men Julia and Amy had known. Yet the source of his income was somewhat obscure. The Nesbitt name was a pioneer one in the city, but this Nesbitt, the gayest and youngest seemed to possess none of the attributes of the pioneer. He was likeable and had literally hundreds of friends. Julia liked him—but when it came to Amy Sanders, she wasn't so sure.

He was as gay and certain of himself as always when he called at the apartment that evening. Tall and good looking in a rugged way, he cheered Julia and she felt instinctively that with his help she could really attain what she wanted. He had been in the room only a few moments when Amy pushed

WHY SEX APPEAL SELLS GOODS TO YOU AND ME

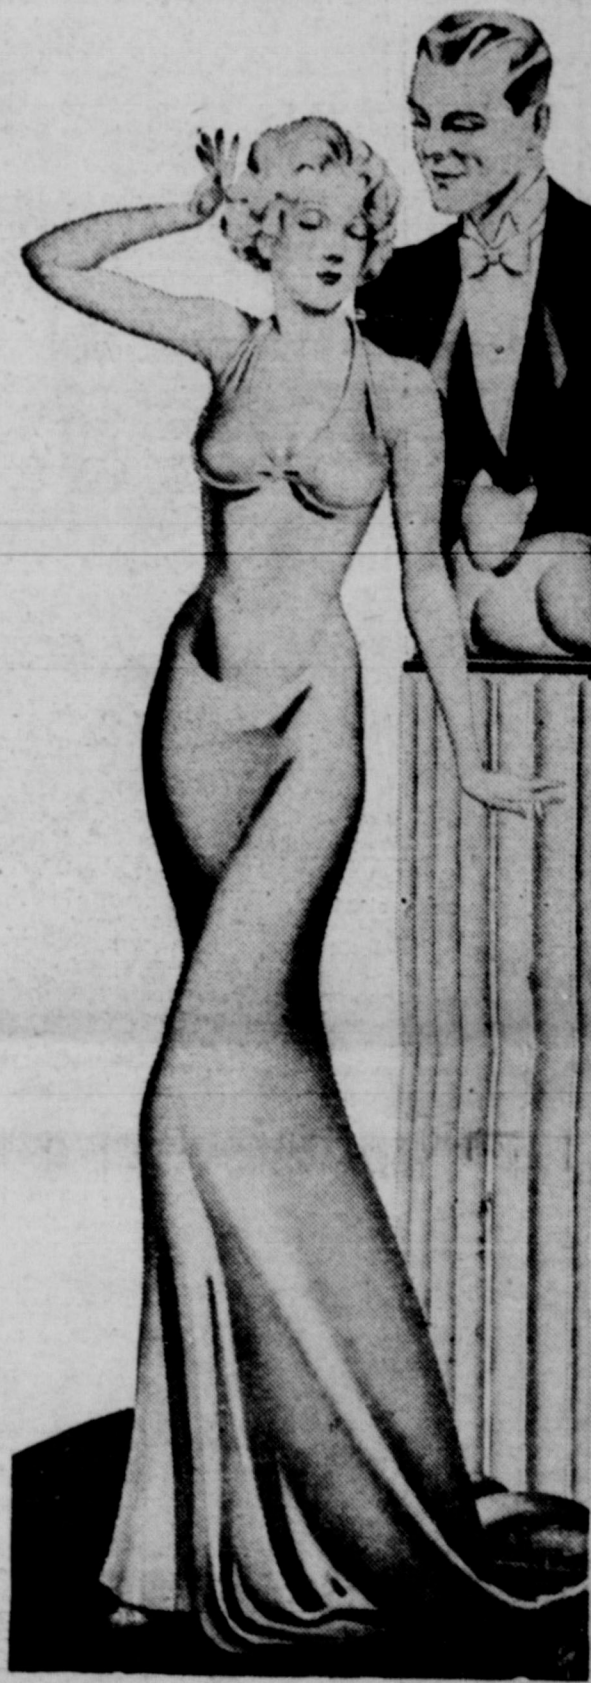

Be she 16 or 45, a girl dresses, primps, perfumes and cultures herself to please a man. And conversely, nine men out of ten want to look and act their best to please the little lady who sits across the aisle, across the office or across the breakfast table.

For sex is one of the strongest factors that determine our behavior—including our buying behavior. And the merchant who knows when to make his ads sparkle with sex . . . will he sell more goods?

Yes! Because sex, hunger, mother-love, ambition, the desire for knowledge or comfort or protection are basic life-urges. We are born with them. They pierce deep into our emotions and make us do and act and buy when argument and logic fail. Advertising that uses these appeals wisely is bound to get results!

Through its exclusive franchise to the Meyer Both Newspaper Advertising Service the Democrat is able to give each advertiser free of charge these potent "urges" . . . in the form of advertising illustrations and copy that make readers buy.

That is why Democrat advertising will sell more goods for you cheaper than any other advertising medium.

Newlin P.T.A. Entertains

Special to The Democrat
NEWLIN, Jan. 20.—The Newlin P.T.A. sponsored an old fashioned community "Tacky Party" at the School Auditorium Thursday night. Old trunks were searched for antique hats, dresses, shawls, etc., which took the wearers back some 25 years. One costume was said to be 35-years-old.

Games were played during the evening, at the conclusion of which an old fashioned spelling match was held.

Prizes for the tackiest couple went to Mrs. J. E. Townsend and Doc Messick. Old fashioned stick candy was served to about one hundred guests.

Cameraman Clicks With Morgan

How times do change. Yes, you really can believe your eyes—that a none other than J. P. Morgan, international banker and one-time photographer evader, shaking hands with John S. Thompson, NEA Service photographer, at the Senate Mutilations Inquiry in Washington, D. C. Thompson and Morgan have been friends since the famous midget episode, when lensmen pictured the banker holding a tiny woman on his hip.

J. B. Woodington of Pampa spent the week-end here with parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Woodington.

John Hammond of Clovis, N.M., spent Saturday and Sunday here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Hammond.

Mrs. Erlene Pennington of Clovis, N.M., was a weekend guest in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Hammond.

Mrs. Edgar Hays arrived from Bowie Friday to make Memphis her home. Mr. Hays came to Memphis three weeks ago to accept a place as linotype operator at the Democrat. They are at home at 1021 West Main Street.

Mrs. John Reed of Lakeview is a Memphis visitor today. A fine line of trees, shrubs, rose bushes and evergreens at Hightower's. 222-1f.

him toward the davenport and announced that Julia was going to sing.

Then Amy took her place at the tiny little piano which, she often said, had cost her many an installment and was her particular pride and joy. She played well, and whenever she played for Julia's singing she played more than well. Nesbitt settled back with an amused and tolerant smile.

But as Julia's soft, husky voice drifted into one of the sad, mad tunes of our modern day, his smile faded, his expression grew serious and interested. When she had finished he did not speak for a while, and then he said, "I wish you'd do another, Julia."

This time Amy chose a curious and dragging blues song that was a combination of genuine darky folk tune and the "hi-de-ho" of Harlem. There was a quiet quality in Julia's singing that lifted the song far above its insane lyric.

Nesbitt got to his feet. "I've spent a good share of my life listening to night club singers," he said. "You can go places, Julia. And I'm going to see that you do."

Amy smiled at her roommate. "You see, Julia? And when Royal says a thing like that, he means it!"

Nesbitt's eyes met Julia's squarely. "I was never more serious in my life," he told her quietly.

The showing of five hams, five picnic shoulders and five sides of bacon is the main feature of the exhibit addition. The 15 pieces of the exhibit are to be shown from three different persons.

Several 4-H Club boys over the county are feeding beef calves to show at the Amarillo fat stock show. Among those in the county with especially good looking calves are Edgar Sam Bob and Gene Ewing of near Estelline, and Joe Montgomery of Lesley.

Two Accidents—

but the driver escaped uninjured, although shaken up considerably.

Alfred Melton of Lakeview and Charlie Williams, negro, of Salisbury, figured in the other accident. Melton had parked his car at Sixth and Noel streets and was carrying a load of groceries out to his car when Charlie Williams, negro, driving a big truck belonging to Charlie Williams, prominent farmer of Salisbury community, attempted to turn the corner near Crawford's Grocery.

The truck slipped on the dangerous ice and crashed into the rear end of the parked automobile, knocking the light Chevrolet touring car up onto the sidewalk and blowing out two tires, breaking one door and denting the rear end considerably.

Want Men For—

Estelline man has signed for the work, which was scheduled to start last Friday.

Beginning of the setting out of trees in Hall County has been postponed until the coming Friday when district shelterbelt officials from Childress and Wichita Falls supervise the opening work.

The men who work on the tree-planting and fence-building work are to receive $24 per month as compensation. All who wish to sign for the shelterbelt work are asked to call at the local NRS office in the Hall County National Bank Building.

Hall County is one of the five counties in Texas that are to receive the tree belts this year.

A. Anisman went to Fort Worth Saturday night to attend the Shoeman Convention in session there yesterday and today. He will go from there to Dallas to buy new spring merchandise for the Popular Dry Goods Store.

Mrs. Clyde Robertson and son, Marvin, left yesterday for their home at Centerville after a visit here with their daughter and sister, Mrs. Alan Brown. They will visit relatives in Knox City en route.

T. V. Phillips—

Childress.

"It was a straight case of suicide," Joe Colvin, Hall County sheriff, declared this morning. Colvin and County Attorney Carl Periman were called to the scene last night at 8:00 o'clock. A formal coroner's report was not given as Dr. C. Z. Stidham, county health officer; W. L. Wheat, Memphis Justice of the Peace; and W. H. Blanks, Lakeview Justice, were all ill.

An official coroner's report was to be issued from Childress today, Sheriff Colvin said.

Phillips was found lying on his bed, bleeding profusely, by his sister, Mrs. Day, who had been making her home with him. She had just returned to the teacherage after getting a container of milk from a neighbor.

On seeing Phillips on the bed, Mrs. Day thought that he had had a hemorrhage and ran to a neighbor's for assistance. She returned with a sister, Mrs. H. P. McJunkins, who lived near by, and it was then that they discovered the gun lying on the bed also.

Phillips had shot himself through the right temple with a single-barreled .410 gauge shotgun, the charge coming out the top of his head.

In accordance with the last request of Phillips, a McMinn ambulance from Childress was called, and the body was carried to Childress last night, where funeral arrangements were being made today.

Phillips and his wife had been married 17 years, all of which time they had taught school together. They taught at Plaska, Farnell and Pleasant Valley in Hall County. Mr. Phillips was principal of the Plaska school when the new building was built, and he was instrumental in having the school curriculum extended. He was widely known in school circles over this section.

Mr. Phillips returned to his home at Pleasant Valley, which is 14 miles southwest of Memphis, yesterday afternoon after spending the day with his parents at Carey. He had visited in Memphis on Friday and Saturday, and Saturday he appeared to be reconciled to the loss of his wife.

Other than his parents, he is survived by a brother, L. O. Phillips of Williams, High in Childress County; and two sisters, Mrs. Day and Mrs. McJunkins of Pleasant Valley.

Government—

ministration's project that has received the widest publicity, and it is the retirement of the sub-marginal land that may bring a colony of farmers to Hall County from over all of Texas.

The Resettlement Administration plans to retire 50 million acres of land that is now being farmed in the nation, and farmers on these poor lands will be sent to better farming communities and set up with farming equipment by the federal government, through loans.

The persons backed by the government are given a farm management plan, encouraged to plant gardens, and to keep cows and chickens in order that they may be self-sustaining. A "model farm community" has already been set up near Lubbock.

Under the farm management plan the government will be required for the small farm and model home within 20 years. Loans for capital needs, including livestock, are made for as much as five years. Seed and feed loans are not made for more than two years.

until Monday of next week.

The court docket for the January term is fairly heavy with 19 criminal and 16 civil cases slated to come up for a hearing. Of the 19 criminal cases, 13 are whiskey charges—either illegal possession of untaxed whiskey, or possession of untaxed whiskey, or the purpose of sale.

The present session of court will run until February 8.

boxing committee. The latest entries are R. G. Schoonover, 14, 110 pounds, and Jake Godfrey, 23, 165 pounds.

Boxers who desire to enter the tournament in any weight class are asked to see Mr. Doss at once.

The horseshoe pitching tournament is also attracting much attention and will be closely contested. This is the first of a series of contests in this sport, to be held monthly, under the sponsorship of the Daily Democrat. Officials, shoes and stakes for these contests have been received and may be seen in the window of the Democrat office.

Entries are also coming in slowly for the various novelty races, but the bulk of the entries for these events are expected to be made the days of the carnival.

Big four-sided signs were placed at the four sides of the square this morning, advertising the Carnival of Values.

Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Greene, Mr. and Mrs. Ingram Walker and Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Roper spent yesterday in Clarendon as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Greene.

Dr. and Mrs. Ward Hicks of Clarendon spent the week-end here with his mother, Mrs. J. T. Hicks and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Hudgins.

Homer Thompson of Colorado Springs, Colo., is here because of the illness of his mother, Mrs. T. J. Thompson.
