DISPELLING SUDDEN DEATH

Safety Measures Being Taken Today

By J. C. FURNESS
Author of "..... and Sudden Death"

J. C. Furness

On fine Saturday and Sunday afternoons the natives of a certain country village in New York state gather in the fields, at a spot near a bad curve and a narrow culvert, to see the sights. The motorist spinning through this treacherous spot may notice them, but he is not aware what they are there for. If he were, he might not run the culvert and scream his tires round the curve quite so dashingly. They are waiting with the ghoulish anticipation of a flock of turkey-buzzards far enough away to be safe, near enough to see everything-for bad accidents to happen.

It's bad enough to see them and know why they wait so patiently. It's worse to realize that they are seldom disappointed. Speed and carelessness always put on a good show for them so they will return next week end looking for more. And they are gluttons for the brutal melodrama of capsizing cars, smashed and battered bodies, speeding ambulances, blood, agony and death.

Motorist's Battle Being Fought

By this time you may be sick of hearing that the year 1934 killed 36,000 people in motor accidents. When the 1935 figures are compiled, you will probably get equally tired of hearing them. But there are things being done about it, efforts being made to spoil these bloody-minded yokels' afternoon sport. The battle to save the motorist from sudden, hideous death and disabling injury is being fought along new lines on a dozen fronts at once.

Certain newspapers, abandoning the journalistic tradition of soft-peddling horrors, are trying to make words convey to the reader just what happens when steel and glass and momentum combine to shatter human beings into mangled corpses. One paper is even printing a casualty list of the year's killings, with names, ages and addresses, so full of mothers and children and old men and women that it sounds as if the city had been the victim of a bombing-raid. A large life-insurance company is sending out floats displaying wax-works graphic, bleeding, sickening wax-works, worse than anything Madame Tussaud's—an itinerant morgue, parked where crowds are thickest to show the man in the street what he is asking for when he takes a chance on the road.

Government Taking Hand

Governmental authorities are feeling round for new ways of compelling the motorists to behave sanely, experimenting with compulsory insurance to keep the irresponsible driver off the road, hoping that compulsory inspection of cars will do some little good in reducing the small number of accidents attributable to mechanical defects. They are mulling over such drastic possibilities as governors on all cars to keep them down to 45 miles per hour, or instituting a volunteer body of secret vigilantes, picked from drivers with absolutely clean records, to make confidential reports on the license numbers of recklessly driven cars. They are pushing campaigns to pledge drivers to observe elementary safety-rules. Bill-board and poster warnings are on the up-beat.

Others are investigating just what does make for safe driving. A large oil-company, for instance, put 22 test-drivers, below average in driving ability, to driving a total of 570,000 miles over ordinary roads with a strict code of rules to observe. The astounding results showed that, during all those 570,000 miles, none of them so much as nicked a fender—solely because they rigidly followed such simple "musts" as never pass on a curve, never swing out of line without clear vision a long way ahead, always signal clearly, and so forth. They averaged forty miles an hour day by day under all kinds of driving conditions and yet the record-keeping instruments showed that none of them had ever hit over 45! That runs once and for all the heavy-footed drivers' excuse that, to make a respectable average, he has to shade sixty part of the time. Facts like those mean something when you come to drive with the motoring-safety problem. Lighted Road Seen As Protection

Other engineers are tinkering with the road itself, trying to save there as they have already saved lives with railroad block signals and marine radio. The fact that motoring fatalities are 64 per cent higher in proportion to traffic at night gives them a salient point of attack. Even the best headlights give only a fluttering illumination, streak the road with pools of shadows, blind the other fellow as they suddenly swoop on him over an unexpected hill. Those hazards mean car after car in the ditch with its occupants screaming, bleeding, dying in the dark.

On a stretch of road in Ohio, complete with straightaway, hills and curves, they have recently installed a sample of what their new kind of lighting can do for highways. It can and does literally transform a treacherous night-road into a road bathed in artificial sunlight—without the glare. As you enter the lighted zone and switch down to parking—and tail lights—only because the law requires them after dark—the light is so natural that it does not strike you as a miracle. You appreciate it only when you drive out the other end and are suddenly pitchforked into the old kind of unlighted highway, as if the sun had suddenly gone out at high noon, leaving you again at the mercy of your headlights.

Forcing or cajoling the motorist into driving safely is only half the battle—and always an uphill battle at that. The other half consists of giving him a safer car and a safer road, so that the average driver, who probably wants to behave, will have the best chance to cash in on his good intentions.

INDUSTRIAL REVIEW

N PARK, Mass., Dec. 3. Prices are roughly forty per cent above the level of 1929. With only a few interruptions, the market has been moving forward steadily since July, 1931. That this rise has been the result of a general boom in the stock market, which in July, 1933, is yet near its peak.

Fundamentals

Successful investors periodically take in fundamental conditions. All is said and done, factors are by far the most important influences on their fingers burnt are those who lose sight of trends of industry and their emotions. As Numpy stock market rule, remember the long-pull trend of prices is ruled by reason.

in stocks has again public's imagination. On share days have, re-daily carries a can of all Street stories are wick into the headlines. mean only one thing— is temporarily, at least, gone. So this is one of when an inventory of al conditions should be are a few things to REAL BUSINESS — In 1933, business has forty-six per cent. We had sixty-two per cent came from the depression to the X-Y normal line on a chart. Furthermore, upswing has been maintained during the last year. Since September, it jumped eight per cent. In these same periods the industrial stock average advanced 160 per cent, respectively.

CORPORATION PROFITS — of many leading companies made tremendous profits in 1935. A few concerns actually made more money than in any other year in history, even though their business has not been so good. This is due to inefficiency; to elimination of labor-saving machinery; to operating economies. Many of these factors, however, are rapidly increasing unemployment and hence may have a DIVIDENDS — With better and bigger profits, dividends have been one of the features of 1935. Within the several of the biggest companies in the country have extra dividends. Many are making small paydays where a year ago none being given to the stockholders. This is a big psychological factor for investors like to feel that their investments are at least "earn-keep". Investors, however, should make sure whether dividends are coming from earnings or from surpluses of years ago.

INTEREST RATES — Another reason on the market is the rise on bonds, savings bank and other forms of investment. Many investors today feel that they have little to lose by buying government bonds and by building savings accounts. They are buying sound common well-established companies a good record. This is a reason for the present stock quotations.

STABILITY OF INFLATION — While the stock market is pushing into new heights in the last few months the market has been faltering. The reason for this is that investors, holding fixed-income securities, are protecting themselves against a rise in the living which will come through artificial currency steel operations, capacity production for woolen mills and automobile factories, plant expansion by big companies, and other good news is breaking every day. Wages are increasing, salaries are being boosted, and profits of small businesses are better. Confidence that the depression is definitely over is spreading throughout the country. This is very important and means that sometime within the next year or two some stocks should sell at double or treble their present prices.

7. NEW TAXES — Congress last summer passed surtaxes and capital gains taxes which are practically confiscatory. These taxes may take as much as fifty per cent or more of the capital gains on stock transactions from very wealthy investors. The natural result is that such investors are reluctant to sell. Apparently, the government has adopted "sanctions" against the selling of stocks.

before the crash in 1929, brokers while the figure is only $792,000,000 today. This clearly indicates that speculation has not run rife. Securities are in strong hands and are being held for the "long-pull" rather than for speculative purposes. In some special cases there may be large blocks of stock hang-loans totalled $8,549,000,000 hanging over the market, but in general stocks have been bought out.

AS ROSS HUTTON finished telling his little daughter the story of Christmas, of the shepherds and the Christ child, and had as tactfully as possible explained about Santa Claus, Polly heaved a sigh. "Well, I think there's a Santy Claus and I hope he brings me a sheep like the ones in the story."

The day before Christmas, Ross saw a white woolly lamb in the window of a toy shop. He was glad he had walked to his office. Otherwise he might not have seen the lamb. He would stop on his way home and get it. But one of the men in the office offered to drive him home, so the lamb was forgotten until he heard Polly as she was being put to bed tell her mother she hoped "Santy" wouldn't forget about the "sheep." Ross looked at his watch and decided the shop would probably still be open. Anne called to him to ask where he was going, and he answered, "Back in a few minutes."

When he parked his car before the shop, he thought that the lamb might not be there struck him for the first time. He felt much relieved, therefore, when he saw the lamb in the window.

As he tucked the package under his arm and turned to leave the shop, a little boy came in. Ross heard him ask the proprietor if he still had the lamb that was in the window that morning. He was told the gentleman just leaving had bought it. "Oh," the disappointment showed in his voice. Wasn't there something else he would like?

Santa Claus Had Brought Her a Sheep and a Baby Doll. But there didn't seem to be anything else.

As he got into his car Ross caught sight of a small boy standing before the window, his gaze fastened on the place where the lamb had been. He seemed so disappointed, it was too bad there wasn't another lamb for him, Ross thought as he drove away. But probably something else would catch his fancy and he would forget all about the lamb. Children were like that. Ross wondered though if Polly would have forgotten so easily. He scarcely thought so. The poor little thing would have been mightily disappointed. He was glad he had remembered before it was too late.

But try as he would he couldn't get the picture of the little fellow out of his mind. Halfway home he turned his car around and went back to the shop. The boy had left, so Ross asked the proprietor if he could tell him where the boy lived. He lived just around the corner. He often came into the shop. Tonight he had come to buy the little lamb for his small sister, and was so disappointed when he found it gone. The proprietor had tried to interest him in something else, but he hadn't been successful.

right in this current rise. CONCLUSION — Congressional bombast and campaign mud-slinging may cause temporary declines over the next year but basic business gains ultimately dictate the trend of stock prices. The latter are 250 per cent above the lows of July, 1932, but they are still only sixty to seventy per cent of the average price from 1925 to 1929. My studies over a period of thirty years fail to show a single instance where a major upward swing in stocks collapsed while business was still below normal on the Babsonchart. This week's reading on the latter shows that while business is 21 per cent above a year ago it is still 16 per cent below normal. So I am still bullish on the "long pull" for a carefully selected list of such a list, however, should be watched by people. (Copyright — 1933 Financial Bureau.)

feared long-distance threats in the nation. He is a handy chap on either end of a pass. NEA Service alone named him on the 1934 All-American team, and he stood in with plenty to spare.

Riley Smith, 200-pound Alabama quarterback, is one of the foremost blockers in the land. When the Crimson Tide missed the ball carrying of Millard (Dixie) Howell, Smith suddenly revealed that he had exceptional talent along that line, too.

It is unnecessary for me to tell you about Grayson. Bob Zuppke, Lou Little, Jimmy Phelan, Frank Thomas, Howard Jones—every coach who has seen him—describe him as the most vicious ground gainer in the sport.

Although he weighs 192 pounds, Grayson is one of the fastest men in the world. This product of Portland, Ore., would win both sprints and hurdles in the average track meet. He calls plays from fullback and became a sharpshooting thrower of forward passes during the 1935 grind.

Tinsley is pictured as the most polished end in Dixie since Gerald Dalrymple, Tulane's All-American of 1930 and '31. Wendt carries out all end assignments in masterful style.

Dick Smith and Detzel charge fast and have the speed to get down the field. They are a great help to ends.

Capt. Biff Jones reports that Wheeler, 227-pound senior, wrecked the line of every Big Six opponent of Oklahoma. Weller pulls out of the line to lead plays, and is a bulwark in the Princeton forward wall.

Lester, a dependable snapper-back, combines all the other qualities of the topnotch center.

This team may not suit everybody, but it would be entirely satisfactory to any coach if one like it reported each Sept. 15. I doubt that the second and third squads are as much as a step behind, and, in conclusion, I might add that any coach gladly would settle for a combination picked at random from the boys let down with honorable mention.

onor a small group, it is my duty to slight many remarks. These days of varsities of 80 are, not even 33 places are to give credit to all the young men entitled to it.

All-American teams long have become a recognized part of the holidays. Post upon them.

The Minnesota team as an example. Dick Smith, tackle, is the star of the Gophers' place, although seniors graduate without having been on the loss. Ed Widseth, Minnesota's tackle, is on par with Smith, a junior and drew fewer than a balloting that gave no one one position to one in.

Widseth finds himself on the team, along with such other good players as his team-mate Sheldon Beise; James Moscrip, place-kicker; and James (Whata) Whitley, crack Alabama

From 219 Players
Each is mighty proud of all his, but I do believe that along in anyone's all-star list. He is one of the finest backs that I have ever coached in his best season. He runs on line bucks as well as back I have ever seen, and is equally capable when blocking on defense.

And any, too, that Minnesota has not have gone through the unbeaten and untied record of such a capable all-round player as Vernal (Babe) LeVoi. He started the season as a fullback, switched to right half when we lost Julius Alfonso, and finished at quarterback after Capt. Glenn Seidel suffered a broken collar bone in the Tulane engagement.

LeVoi turned in an outstanding job at each position and never lost any of his effectiveness, yet all this phenomenal senior gets for all of his stellar performances and weeks of hard work is honorable mention.

I dwell on these players just to let everybody know that I realize to the fullest extent how coaches and admirers of the many stars feel when similarly treated.

But enough of that. Here's well in his first year as Oklahoma's coach, and other Big Six and southwest coaches said so many nice things about J. W. (Dub) Wheeler, Sooner tackle, that room is made for him at from a monumental mass of opinions and 219 recommendations.

The Western Conference has a slight budge with three players. The east, south, and southwest land two places each, and the Pacific coast and Big Six Conference one each.

Four Chosen Unanimously
John Jacob (Jay) Berwanger of Chicago, Robert Wilson of Southern Methodist, Riley Smith of Alabama, and Robert H. Grayson of Stanford are the backs.

The ends are Merle Wendt of Ohio State and Gaynell Tinsley of Louisiana State.

Art Detzel of Pittsburgh is paired with Dick Smith at tackle.

Capt. Biff Jones, who did so well in his first year as Oklahoma's coach, and other Big Six and southwest coaches said so many nice things about J. W. (Dub) Wheeler, Sooner tackle, that room is made for him at guard. His partner is John A. C. Weller, an outstanding star of an outstanding Princeton team.

Darrell Lester, Texas Christian captain, is the center.

Selectors virtually were unanimous in designating four players—Berwanger, Wilson, Grayson, and Weller, Riley Smith, Tinsley, and Lester were pronounced favorites.

For three falls, Berwanger did half the ball foting, the punting and passing, directed the attack and defense, and backed up the line of a comparatively weak Chicago club. One of the most accomplished all-round backs who has galloped over Big Ten chalk lines in years, this track and field man averaged four years per attempt against the toughest kind of competition, and 37.5 in kicking.

Although weighing only 150 pounds, Wilson is one of the most

Christmas In The Rockies

By Katherine Edelman

CHRISTMAS in the Rockies! I felt thrilled, excited, as our train wound its way in and out through the mountains, thundering through the crisp, pine-scented air. Now, we were climbing an almost precipitous grade, now, slowing down for a dangerous curve, while every little while as a stretching plain was reached, the steady hand upon the throttle sent the long line of cars speeding like an arrow through the bright December sunshine.

We were on our way to spend Christmas with Uncle Jerry and Aunt Emma. They had sent a hearty invitation for us to come out, and now we were almost there. I held my breath at the sheer beauty of the scene that stretched before our eyes. Mountain peaks that seemed to touch the sky, canyons dropping thousands of feet, lakes covered by glittering thicknesses of ice, vivid green pines, looking like giant Christmas trees. I had never seen, never even visualized anything so beautiful.

A loud shriek from the big whistle, a slow crunching and grinding of brakes, and our train came to a stop. Uncle Jerry, rosy and smiling, stood waiting upon the platform, giving dad, mother, Helen and myself a true western welcome. "Aunt Emma is all excited about your coming," he beamed.

A short drive through a wonderland of beauty, and the big sprawling ranch house came in sight. Aunt Emma stood in the doorway, and a cowboy, who was grooming a pony, looked curiously at us.

All was bustle and excitement, hurry and preparation. Even the horses and ponies in the corral seemed excited, as if they sensed something in the air. The afternoon and evening went by on wings.

Christmas morning dawned upon a world that looked even lovelier than it had yesterday. A million icicles hung on bush and tree, a sky of turquoise stretched itself across the snow-covered mountains and valleys.

Inside the ranch house a fire of crackling logs threw its ruddy glow over the living room. The dining table was spread with tempting foods. Breakfast of home-cured ham and sausage, fluffy flapjacks and syrup, steaming hot coffee with thick cream.

Then a short drive to the little church, an inspiring talk by the pastor, and the strains of the old and beautiful Christmas hymns; neighbors and friends stopping Uncle Jerry and Aunt Emma to wish them "Merry Christmas."

Back again through the clear, frosty air, and later the big Christmas dinner. Golden-brown turkey and dressing on a big blue platter, a huge mound of snowy potatoes, native vegetables and relishes, tempting pieces of mince and pumpkin pie. And best of all, an appetite that only the mountains can give.

A hundred things to see during the afternoon, the horses and ponies, the ranch equipment, the silver fox farm that Uncle Jerry had started, and a special show the cowboys put on for our benefit.

Food again in the evening, and after a happy time around the fire, the cowboys standing around the piano, where Helen played the old Christmas carols, their lusty voices joining in the beautiful words. I thought of the beautiful setting outside as they sang:

Silent Night, Holy Night!
All is calm, all is bright,
Round yon Virgin Mother and Child
Holy Infant so tender and mild,
Sleep in heavenly peace!

I stole outside for a few minutes as they went on to the next lines. A new moon was sending its silvery light down upon the world, a million stars added their smaller gleam. Around me I felt the faint, mysterious noises of night in the open places, the stirring of unseen, unknown things. My lips and heart joined in the words that floated out from the warm, lamp-lit room.

Silent Night, Holy Night!
Shepherds quake at the sight!
Glories stream from heaven afar,
Heavenly hosts sing Alleluia;
Christ the Saviour is born!

I have spent many a happy and memorable Christmas, but never one as wonderful, as unforgettable, as this Christmas spent in the Rockies.

There Is A-

in doing it. Ross interrupted to know in just which house the boy lived. Then in order to have some satisfactory excuse to offer at home, he bought a baby doll for Polly.

When somewhat later he came into the living room where Anne was busy trimming the Christmas tree, she wanted to know where on earth he had been. He shook his head and put his finger to his lips as a warning not to waken Polly. He placed the package under the tree and with a happy smile he began helping with the work of trimming.

The next morning he was awakened by Polly's happy cry that she knew there was a "Santy Claus" because he had brought her a "sheep" and a baby doll just as she asked him to. Ross sprang out of bed and into the living room. Where could the "sheep" have come from? For there was Polly with a lamb under one arm and the doll under the other.

"Where?" Ross asked, pointing to the lamb. Anne whispered that she had bought it.

"There is a Santy Claus, isn't there, Daddy?" Polly's voice implied she was giving information rather than asking it.

Ross heartily agreed with her: "There certainly is a Santa Claus beyond a doubt."

16 SHOPPING DAYS TILL CHRISTMAS

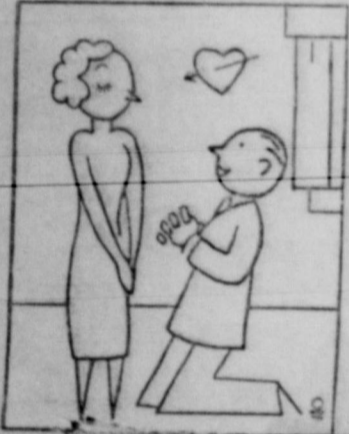

What more fan mail? You bet, this time from one of our customers who signs himself "Old Man Baldy," complaining that we've "done him wrong."

He says that we're picking on him just because he's an "old" man, bald-headed and with holes in his underwear. Says the reason he has to depend on somebody else buying him E.V.D.s is because he's not able and has to get somebody to help him out who doesn't know him so well.

"Old Man Baldy" also informs us that he knows of a young lady he's afraid is going to get into trouble one of these days soon... a blonde young lady. He says he saw her pass his grocery store the other day with a broken finger, all splinted up with a diamond ring, and that he remembers having seen her going around quite a bit with our sports editor.

Well, Baldy, we've been expecting something to happen there any time, ourselves.

We know Jack's "that way" about the blonde in question, but we've decided he's going to wait until after school is over.

Half the farmers in the county around the Harrison Hardware Company and the Ritz Theatre yesterday, for the Avery demonstration.

And while the elders were busy with the demonstration, most of the younger young men were crowded around the Texas lobby, looking over the publicity pictures for "The Road to Ruin."

Doe Odom's new Terraplane with a dented rear fender the next day after Doe got it.

The publisher trying to locate his car, so he could make up his Rotary attendance by a trip to Childress. He didn't find the car until too late.

And heard Shirey Patrick answer the phone at Womack's yesterday. He called Harry Womack to the phone and said, "The War Department." We didn't know whom he meant until we heard Harry's conversation. All that we heard was "Yes, yes, yes, uh-huh, yes, all right," so it must have been his wife doing the talking.

Several football players roll up their trousers legs and walk out of a store yesterday while Pon Phelan was telling one of his stories. Pon was telling about the Amarillo wrestling matches and making it quite a vivid account.

Bill Alexander with two week's growth of beard on his face. He said he was showing his friends that he could grow it.

Hundreds of farmers at the Tractor Demonstration yesterday afternoon.

Jack Norman yesterday afternoon sporting a nunch that will weigh close to 30 pounds.

Victor Walsh after being mistaken for a father, stop wearing glasses.

THE ART OF BEING KIND IS A FINE ART

The art of being kind is really a fine art, comments Channing Pollock, popular American playwright, in the current Rotarian Magazine, and, he suggests that the Yuletide season provides an appropriate time to give it study and practice.

"I remember one 25th of December that was simply made for me", he writes, "by a soft, strange voice at the other end of the telephone wire that said, 'I'm afraid you've got the wrong number, but Merry Christmas all the same'. And in reverse, I remember countless other voices on phones that implied very definitely that I had deliberately asked for a wrong number, and conspired with the operator to pick one whose owner was in the bath.

"It is so easy to smile and be agreeable, and even to do the small kindly thing, that I'm a little puzzled that it isn't a more common habit. One reason, I suppose, is that courtesy requires a two-way street.

"I don't excuse, but I do sympathize with the man who quits giving his seat to women in crowded street cars, after the 15th woman had taken it without a word of thanks. But here my wonder is at those 15. Dying, they should be condemned to an eternity of swaying floors with an infinity of straps just out of reach.

"I find," he continues, "that I have a definite weakness for the policeman I saw lugging the basket of an old Jewish woman through the traffic of Canal Street, and the busy man who wrote a long and courteous letter to the utter stranger in quest of information, and the cigar or drug clerk who leaves his counter to instruct a non-paying visitor in the use of the dial telephone.

"I think life would be easier if more of us liked people. All kinds of people under all kinds of circumstances. I think our heaviest burdens would be lighter, and our important problems less worrisome, if we didn't have to carry so many little loads of thoughtlessness, and have our minds and hearts troubled by so many trifling rubs.

"It's really quite easy to write a kind letter. It's easier still to say a kind words. More than anything else in our journey through life, they rate us as first class, second class, or steerage.

WASHINGTON. Naval and diplomatic bluffs and that the conference will be convened in London. The gesture and that the conference will come of it but England, and the United States will not tell their taxpayers that the only reason for the international conference. Nevertheless, the conference is a hope—and it can be a great authority that it can have American delegation. Limitation can be in Japan made to meet on parity with the United States.

The administrative bluffs and bluffing and bluffing that most of the American delegation decided the theory. The only other nations that can be brought into a conference against Japan, thereby her that it would be to back down for her complete denunciation Washington and London.

Hope to slow down primarily on the fact and America will be sympathetic under either than at any national conference. Recently the British led their long-standing and sought to play the cards and Japanese.

Lately, however, diplomatic insiders, they have been developing a some fear of Japan and that Japanese aggression sooner or later lead to a Japanese clash in the Far East.

This time it is expected British and the American work together to head off a nautical race and will set other nations attending the conference.

Japan wants a 5-10-10 fleet because she expects it to be a first-class power. Land and America spreads her sphere through further China and because she was of being able to hold all she takes.

Every naval power neither the British fleet could meet Japan, even with the prevailing. The lands are so far apart protect that America's fleet view the British fleet with petrol.

It is even worse than of the combined British fleet could meet the Japanese at their home grounds.

And the idea of a conference now is new. The situation in the Mediterranean has led to keep much of it in European waters, but the bulk of it into the Mediterranean to access the British vital Mediterranean Suez Canal line to India.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

After the death of her parents, lovely DANA WESTBROOK, child of her mother's second marriage, comes to America to live with her grandmother, MRS. WILLIARD CAMERON.

Dana's half-sister, NANCY WALLACE, feels bitter toward her.

Mrs. Cameron decides to introduce Dana to society with a party, hoping rich RONALD MOORE will become seriously interested.

Dana, meanwhile, has met and become attracted to young DR. SCOTT STANLEY, Nancy, who masks her love for Ronald behind an antagonistic attitude, dresses happily for the Party. Her happiness fades when she sees Dana, radiant and beautiful, in a twin frock.

Dana alone on the porch while Ronald goes to bring her a glass of punch, hears a whistle from the garden. She goes there and finds Scott Stanley.

Returning, Ronald finds Nancy on the porch. In the darkness he kisses her, thinking she is Dana. Nancy's vehement anger puzzles him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XI

The wind grew stronger, swaying the branches of the great elms, but Dana was not disturbed. The avenue ahead stretched like a long, cool oasis in the midst of torrid heat.

Dana walked briskly, and after a while turned from the avenue into a new street — finding a piquant pleasure, as she always had, in the unexpected.

The storm came almost without warning. Those drifts of clouds which had parted now and then to show wide expanses of blue had not prepared the girl for the sudden, terrific onslaught of win and rain. With the sun completely gone now, night descended swiftly. In the growing darkness, pelted mercilessly by the rain, Dana ran with no sense of direction.

Surely this was the street. Only it wasn't! There were running steps behind her. And then a deep voice, a voice strangely and reassuringly familiar, called: "Will you please tell me why you chose an evening like this for a stroll?"

Dana whirled, stared, and then laughed. Her voice, wind-blown, reached Scott Stanley in shaky little jerks. "I might ask you the same question."

"I'll tell you later," Scott answered. He lifted her in his arms.

Even in that moment of bewilderment, Dana was conscious of relief at having someone take command of the situation. The rain furiously contested every step Scott took, beating against him savagely, aided by an equally fierce wind.

Only once did he speak, "Put your face against my shoulder, Dana."

She obeyed and found it pleasant, having her face hidden against Scott's rough coat.

Then he halted and Dana looked about to stare curiously. Scott was opening the door to a house, exactly as though he owned it.

"This is where I live," he said, as though reading her mind.

Dana repeated Scott's words, her eyes widening "This is where you live—? But how—?"

"I was looking out the window," he told her, "and cursing my luck to have a storm like this come up while my car's in the shop. And then I saw you. There wasn't anything to do but go after you."

Dana was looking about the room. It was wide and cozy, with easy chairs, a fireplace and bookshelves filled with books. An old room, Dana saw, but it had escaped shabbiness. It even had distinction of a sort, with its mellow wood paneling. The rugs were old, but they had once been good. A lamp glowed cheerfully on the table where books and magazines were scattered.

She nodded appreciatively. "It's a nice room."

Scott said, "I wanted you to like it. And now we'll have to find you something dry to get you out of those wet things. I'll build a fire to dry your dress and shoes. Then I'll call a taxi."

"Oh, no," Dana protested. "If you have a coat you can lend me I'll just slip over my dress."

"Listen," Scott said firmly. "I'm a doctor, but I don't want you as a pneumonia patient." He flung open the door of the adjoining room. "You'll find a dressing robe in the closet."

Dana found herself obeying. She stepped into the next room, caught a glimpse of herself in the mirror. Her wet hair straggling across her white cheeks, and her beret was a sodden ball atop her head. Her dress clung to her body. Water was oozing from her soaked white sandals. Scott was probably right; she might be ill if she didn't change. And besides it was mighty uncomfortable being wringing wet.

Dana emerged a few minutes later in a gayly striped dressing robe, wrapped about her slim body and securely tied. On her feet were Scott's bedroom slippers.

"I thought," she explained, "that as long as I was ordered to change I might as well put on these, too."

A grin spread over Scott's face. Dana said, a little ruefully, "I know I'm funny-looking."

"Yes, you are," Scott agreed. "But, even in that outfit you're quite adorable. I'm going now to change my suit. Luck I have another one!"

While Scott was dressing Dana spread her wet dress on the brass fender and placed her shoes near the fire.

Scott returned quickly, having contrived, somehow, to look immaculate without appearing stuffily groomed. He went to the telephone and called a number.

Dana heard his voice protesting. "But this is an emergency. I've got to have a taxi. Get one out here and I'll make it worth your while."

He hung up and called another number, with no greater success. Then he came to the door, and stood there, frowning a little.

Dana sat on a footstool near the fire, the light bringing out the bronze gleams in her hair. She looked very slight and bovish with the man's robe belted about her, her feet lost in Scott's leather bedroom slippers.

"All the taxi places say they have a waiting list a mile long. It means an hour's wait, at least."

Dana said cheerfully, "Well, that's all right—now that I'm good and dry."

"I was all kinds of an idiot to bring you here," Scott said slowly. "Regardless of the fact that you are an ornament to my hearthstone I'm going to have to get you home in a hurry. While we're waiting for your dress to dry and the cab list to shrink I'll stir up some eggs and make coffee. Sorry there's not much else to offer. The only meal I have here is breakfast, and I didn't foresee that my car would be in the shop at the same time the elements would choose to play the devil."

The elements were still playing the devil. Dana thought. Rain was pouring against the windowpanes as though a giant hand were dashing buckets of water from above. Now and then there was a roar of thunder, followed by vivid streaks of lightning. But there was a feeling of security in the cozy, unpretentious room with the firelight playing softly on the satin surface of old wood and bringing out the warm tones of the rug.

"Let me help," Dana offered. "Can you cook?"

"Try me," Dana boasted. "Nobody can make a better omelet. It's one of my specialties."

"Just for that braving I'm going to turn the kitchen over to you," Scott said.

"All right. But first I'll call Grandmother and tell her not to worry."

She got Aunt Ellen on the phone. The receiver against her ear crackled alarmingly, followed by an ominous roar of thunder.

Dana said quickly, "I'm having dinner with a friend, Aunt Ellen. I'll be home later."

It wasn't possible to go into details with a storm roaring about your ears. Besides it would require a lot of explaining to tell the whole story. No use worrying them all for nothing. When they heard just how it had all happened they couldn't blame her.

Newspapers next day were to record that the storm was one of the worst that had struck the town in years, to describe the uprooting of trees and how tops were lifted from frail houses and lines of communication blown down. Floods of water had poured tempestuously over the city.

Scott and Dana gayly prepared their "breakfast dinner." Scott discovered some strawberry jam in the icebox to add to the meal of eggs, coffee, bacon and thin golden toast.

A terrific crash of thunder, following a vivid streak of lightning, sent Dana running to Scott. For a moment her head was hidden against his shoulder.

"Steady, there!" came Scott's reassuring voice, his arm tightening about her.

Dana lifted a white face. "And I've always said I liked Mother Nature in any old mood," she said.

"Mother Nature's got a jag on tonight," Scott said thoughtfully. He still had his arm around her, but dropped it abruptly. "The old girl's drunk with power. It has just occurred to me that I didn't put my house number on that milelong list—though I doubt if taxis will be navigated in a storm like this."

He was gone quite a while. When he returned his expression was sober.

"The phone's out," he said. "Dana, I'm afraid this is serious. If the storm doesn't let up—"

"Don't worry," Dana said, trying not to reveal her own concern. "It can't be very late. It can't keep up much longer."

"You'd think it would have blown itself out long ago with such violence. But you never can tell—"

There wasn't a doubt that Scott was worried, Dana thought. And it was all her fault. Aunt Ellen had warned her there was likely to be a storm but she had ignored the warning.

Scott said dryly, "Storm or no storm, folks aren't very charitable."

"Gossip, you mean?" "Gossip, scandal — whatever you want to call it. That wouldn't be so very nice for you, Dana."

"Or for you," Dana said gravely. "After all, you're starting a career and people might be prejudiced again a doctor mixed up in a scandal."

Scott shook his head. "That's all right—but the worst of it would fall on you." He considered her, frowning.

Dana's natural optimism came to her rescue. "Let's not get upset before we've eaten dinner. Anyway, it just isn't possible for such a torrent to last much longer."

They drew the table before the fire which was still burning brightly, the wood crackling merrily as though in defiance of the gloomy elements.

Later they washed the dishes, dried them, and then came back to the living room.

Scott tried the telephone again and reported failure. Meanwhile Dana had put on her dress and sandals, which she declared were perfectly dry.

Once Scott opened the front door but met such a wild reception from the black furies outside that he closed it quickly. He came over to the fire and sat down near Dana. She looked sweet and courageous, he thought, seemingly unconscious of her roomy frock, her lovely eyes calmly. Any other girl in a similar situation would have hysterics.

Scott said slowly, "A taxi couldn't get here could call one. The weather this hurricane may last all night."

Postmaster Requests Daily Mailing of Christmas Gifts

"The idea that Henry Read and employees of the local post office are putting into the local public mail boxes during the holiday time the volume of mail increases approximately 50 percent. It is a physical impossibility to handle this volume of mail matter efficiently unless it is mailed promptly within a few days before Christmas. Read said that the use of air mail stamps will assure delivery of Christmas cards, letters and packages on Christmas Day, the day after the shop and mail early."

he said. Christmas shopping should be done early enough that gifts, greetings and letters to relatives, friends and loved ones can be mailed at least a week or ten days before Christmas, according to the distance. This will not only make it certain that they are received before Christmas Day, but will be a great aid to the postal service and postal employees and enable them to spend the Christmas holiday with their families. Mr. Read stated.

The local Postmaster urged the use of air mail in getting tomorrow's mail today. It saves time, commands attention and receives preferential handling and treatment, it was said. The use of a "special delivery" stamp will assure delivery on Christmas Day, as only special delivery matter will be delivered here on Christmas Day. Pamphlets, bearing out the thought of shopping and mailing early, are being sent out to local merchants and citizens by the post office organization here. Large placards have been set up in the post office, and they arrest the passer-by's gaze with "Shop Now and Mail Early."

A few packages have been mailed at the local post office already. Memphis merchants are also joining in the Christmas campaign and have decorated their business establishments with yuletide decorations and have started advertising their Christmas wares for sale.

Seventh Dist. Takes Honors

Mrs. Edg. T. Neal, Chairman Press and Publicity, Seventh District

Twenty five delegates and many visitors from seventh district attended the 38th annual state convention Texas Federation of Womens clubs at Austin, November 11th to 16th.

Mrs. W. P. Avriett, Lamesa, president seventh district, gave a report before the state convention that reflected great credit upon her district, her personal service and the cooperative spirit of the club women of this district, which includes a large area, embracing 48 counties in west Texas. The objective announced for the past two years was growth—and Mrs. Avriett's report verified the literal realization of the slogan.

She said in part, "Last year we had the largest district meeting that could ever be put over, but this year we forgot we were a district, and grew into the size of a state meeting, with 662 delegates and visitors registering. One hundred and thirty-two clubs and fifty district chairmen gave reports. Thirty six new clubs have been added to our roster since last state meeting. Many new subscriptions have gone in for Federation News; 34 clubs and seven individuals have made pledges to permanent headquarters, and in the last few weeks we have raised over $200 to place our beloved Phebe K. Warner's name on the "In Memoriam" roll at permanent headquarters, and sent $60 for chairs to go in the auditorium.

"On Woman's day we again carried off all honors. We had more clubs participating (128 clubs) raised more money, ($860.70) and made more pledges than all other districts put together (34 pledges). We have turned into the treasurer of permanent headquarters more than $1,100 since last state meeting, and this in the face of the worst drought, sand, and dust storms, and then floods West Texas ever saw. Each of our nine departments has grown this year and put over a splendid program."

The following awards at state convention, for seventh district have been announced: Best district art report; (7.00) Mrs. W. H. Lynn, Wellington; largest number new clubs to federate (36) seventh district, ($5.00); largest number county federations (2) ($10.00); best clippings book, Junior Study club, Littlefield, ($5.00); best one act play, Memphis ($10.00). Second best poem, Amarillo, subscription to State Federation News; best health report, Twentieth Century club, Borger, silver tray with name engraved; best individual club art report for club with less than twenty members, Art Guild, Snyder, picture painted by Texas artist; second best individual club art report, for club with 25 members, Delphia club, Lamesa, picture by Texas artist; largest number clubs paying one cent per member to Penny art fund (136 clubs) $34.90, picture painted by W. H. Lynn, goes to Mrs. E. G. Rice, Quitaque, chairman Penny art fund, seventh district. A signal honor was accorded Mrs. Joe Caten of Snyder by the announcement from the platform at convention headquarters that she was voted the best junior chairman in the state.

Two college presidents from seventh district were speakers before the state convention: Dr. Bradford Knapp, Texas Technological college, and Dr. Hill, Canyon, president, West Texas Teachers college.

Rev. J. P. Cole was a Memphis visitor from Plaska yesterday.

SOCIETY CALENDAR

FRIDAY
The Bluebonnet Needle Club will meet with Mrs. A. A. Kinard, 822 Cleveland Street, at 3:00 o'clock.

BY MARY E. DAGUE

SEA Service Staff Writer
THE U. S. Bureau of Fisheries points out that cod, smelts, halibut, haddock, turbot, scallops, oysters and clams are at their best and cheapest during the winter months.

Scallops contain no waste and are easily cooked in the home kitchen.

With cod and halibut steak there is a small center bone but the waste is negligible. These fish contain no small bones and consequently you need have no worries when serving to children.

Haddock generally is sent to market in filets. These are free from skin and bone and can be cooked in numerous ways.

Fish chowder is satisfying on a cold day and uses left-overs.

Baking, broiling, deep-fat frying, pan-frying, steaming and boiling are used for different varieties of fish.

The serving of fish is half the battle. Not broken pieces tumbled onto a platter but neat whole servings, garnished with wedges of lemon are most appetizing. If you find it impossible to turn a whole or half a fish when broiling it, cut it in pieces that can be handled.

The recipe that follows is especially good for children because the fish is baked. The addition of tomato adds much to the savoriness of the dish.

Dried apricot pudding makes an excellent dessert for a fish dinner.

Delphian Club Meets

The Delphian Club met Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the home of Mrs. J. W. Stokes.

Due to the absence of the president, Mrs. W. R. Cabaness, Mrs. J. W. Stokes, vice president, took charge of the business session assisted by the secretary, Mrs. Jack Poone. Roll call was Religion of the World. Mrs. Candler Hawkins acted as guide for the program and introduced the program, "Religion in America." Mrs. E. E. Roberts gave an interesting discussion on "The Lost World," which told of the pagan religion in Germany, Italy, Egypt and other foreign countries. "Other Religions" was told by Mrs. O. K. Webb. She thoughtfully discussed the other religions found in China, Japan, Finland, Africa and the American aborigines.

The topic "Catholic" was given by Mrs. Jack Boone, who told of their belief and of some of the religious leaders. Frankie Barnes concluded the program with a Christmas story entitled "The Christmas Angel."

At the close of the meeting it was decided not to present the book studied for the day to the Public Library, due to the unsatisfactory knowledge.

Those present were: Miss Frankie Barnes, Mrs. J. L. Barnes, Mrs. Jack Boone, Mrs. Alan Brown, Mrs. R. A. Cole, Mrs. W. C. Davis, Mrs. Otho Fitzjarrald, Mrs. Hal Goodnight, Mrs. Candler Hawkins, Mrs. Kennon Hillver, Mrs. J. C. Linn, Mrs. John Lofland, Mrs. V. L. McGlocklin, Mrs. J. S. McMurry, Mrs. Maud Milam, Mrs. Z. A. FLUSH OUT 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES

Medical authorities agree that your kidneys contain 15 MILES of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy.

If you have trouble with too frequent bladder passages with scanty amount causing burning and discomfort, the 15 MILES of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes and dizziness.

If kidneys don't empty 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste, poisonous matter may develop causing serious trouble. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS, which have been used successfully by millions of people for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help to flush out the 15 MILES of kidney tubes. Get DOAN'S PILLS at your druggist.

Woman's Culture Club

The Woman's Culture Club met in regular session yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. Z. Stidham, 700 North Tenth.

The president, Mrs. W. A. Howard presided over a short business session.

The study for the afternoon was a book review of "Pink" by Charles A. Wells and Elizabeth Boykin. This was interestingly presented by Mrs. J. H. Norman and Mrs. R. E. Clark. Mrs. W. L. Wheat gave a sketch of the writers life, preceding the book review. Miss Boykin was born in Memphis and graduated from the Memphis High School and Mrs. Wheat told of her travels abroad which "proved interesting, more so, since she was a Memphis girl."

During the social hour the hostess served a delectable salad course to the following members: Mrs. W. L. Wheat, Mrs. A. W. Howard, Mrs. R. L. Madden, Mrs. Claud Johnson, Mrs. Ira W. Neely, Mrs. W. C. Hamilton, Mrs. J. H. Norman, Mrs. J. C. Wells, Mrs. Roy R. Fultz, Mrs. D. J. Morgensen, Mrs. R. E. Clark, Mrs. G. W. Sexauer and Mrs. G. L. Tipton.

Work To Start—

jects call for the graveling of four miles of road near Plaska, the graveling of one and a half miles of road near Brice, and the spreading of top sand near Lakeview.

Work on the projects will start Monday. Employment will be furnished 48 men, members of the county relief roll, in Precinct No. 2. Twenty-eight of the men will work on the Plaska-Brice project, a blanket project, and 20 men will be used on the Lakeview work. Men will be assigned to the jobs Friday, F. N. Blevins, NRS head here, who will have charge of the labor, stated.

The Plaska-Brice project calls for the spending of $9,659.40, which has been allotted by the WPA. A sum of $1,776 has been provided by the WPA for the Lakeview work.

A. R. McMasters, commissioner of Precinct 2, will supervise the entire work.

Wilbur Ash of Memphis has been named as foreman and timekeeper, and J. C. Wilcox will likely be project supervisor.

Five trucks will be placed on the Plaska-Brice graveling job. No trucks will be used on the Lakeview work, as operations there will be confined to filling in .6 of a mile of topping sand.

The wage scale is the same as other WPA projects here, $23 a month, with 140 working hours comprising a month.
