SCHOOL BOND CARRIES BY BIG MAJORITY, 141-23

Interpretative Flashes

Roosevelt has signed the moratorium on farm mortgages, at the same time expressing his faith in the farmer's honesty. The moratorium provides for a suspension of payments on heavily encumbered land for a period of six years. The moratorium is not to be used promiscuously. The bill takes the form of a process similar and equal to a "temporary bankruptcy" issuance. Appraisers will be appointed to appraise the property to view the appraisals of the farmers to prevent any unfair appraisals. The bill will certainly save the farmers from thousands of foreclosure proceedings within the next six years; but the farmer who can pay his just debts will not use the privilege granted him in the moratorium. The insurance companies and credit concerns have fought such a bill upon the grounds that they would be placed in an unfair position but it is no more unfair than the position of those who own mortgaged lands. There is no class of people on earth more honest than the farmer and the ranchman. We hope, however, that from here on, the farmer and ranchman is made hesitant about mortgaging his land.

The biggest friend the American public has is the American press. It has and will always stand for those principles which are best; and it has and will always flay oppression, immorality, corruption, and "stick-in-the-mud" attitudes. A newspaper is a community's biggest public asset, the biggest factor in national development and national welfare. Now, why legislation should be passed against the freedom of an industry whose reputation is open and above board, is more than we can understand. Yet, from all reports, that very thing is being done. The press in general has given the present administration and the NRA its hearty cooperation and shall continue to do so as long as things are being done in a conservative, constitutional, progressive way. But General Hugh Johnson seems to have it in for the press because of few hard criticisms of the NRA. The truth of the matter is criticism is a purging factor. The NRA and the present administration are both good—but not perfect; nor will it ever be perfect without listening to criticism. Roosevelt has taken his criticism like a man and, in general, has profited by it; General Johnson takes his criticism like a child instead of studying the merits of a criticism, he retaliates. The freedom of the press has lost ground largely because of the NRA administrator; but we hardly think that press freedom will ever be materially handicapped. The public won't stand for it. Press criticism is usually broadminded and constructive rather than destructive, and the suppression of press criticism would mean a big drawback to the progress and development of the American nation.

Hitler is at it again. It is estimated that hundreds have been slain in Germany in the past week because they refused to bend the knee to the iron-handed dictator. Thank God, we don't have to bow to the wishes of a tyrant in this country and may the day never come when we will have to.

Dillinger, like Hitler, ruthless in all that he does is on another bloody spurge. But his days are numbered. Crime never pays, and being hunted by every officer in the United States is as bad or worse than prison itself because we imagine that the prisoner at least has the feeling that he is not being hunted anymore while the man who is being hounded by the law forces can have no peace of mind. He is wondering what moment will be his last. How anyone could enjoy a criminals life is more than we can understand.

The treasury deficit of approximately $4,000,000,000 reveals the cost of relief work. It seems that there should and could be a better way of relieving the needy people of the United States. True, they must be relieved, but "pork barrel" legislation is a mighty poor way of relieving people. There are only a comparative few people in the United States who really enjoy having anything handed to them on a silver platter. Most people justly feel a selfpride in independence. What we need is not a handout but an opportunity to be self-sustaining.

The government is studying the plans of buying old ewes in the drought-stricken areas of the United States. Such a move would be a great aid to the ranchmen of this section as the country is overstocked and feed is high. Uncle Sam is already a big cattleman now, so he might as well make a good shepherd, too, while he's at it. The government has bought a half million head of cattle from the drought area and the cattle business is on the verge of a virtual boom.

Bert Page To Resume Drilling Today;

Chances For Well Still Good

According to reports from the John M. Coopers Bert Page No. 1, drilling will be resumed on the well sometime this morning.

The well has been shut down last Friday when it was shot about 5 p. m. with 270 quarts of nitroglycerine with little results. The gas flow was increased by the shot from a gauged 3,450,000 cubic feet to a flow which gauged over six million cubic feet; but the fine spray of oil was not increased appreciably.

According to Roy Andrews, night watchman at the well, the well has been throwing a fine spray of oil at intervals during the night; but the man in charge of the day tower Thursday afternoon could not verify this report.

Because the shot of nitroglycerine did not unnecessarily delay drilling, outside of cleaning out the hole, it was decided to continue drilling rather than to treat the well with acid. The drilling contract will be fulfilled; that is, the well is to be put down to 6,500 as the contract calls for. When a plumb-line was let down after the well was shot it was discovered that the depth of the well is now 6091 instead of 5565 as was reported last week.

The chances for the Bert Page well are still good according to those who best know the oil game. The well has a much greater gas showing than any well in Schleicher county and has showed more oil than any well except the Whitten well. Formations in the Bert Page well have been running high, and all indications so far are favorable. The well was not destined to make a producer at its present depth, and it would have been setting a precedent for West Texas had it produced pay at the present depth. Another thousand feet and Schleicher can boast a good oil well.

Local Order of Masons Install Officers

The local order of the Masonic Lodge held its annual installation of officers on June 26. Judge J. A. Whitcomb was installing officer. The following officers were installed: Payne Robinson, Marshall, Will Taton, Worshipful Master; B. D. Holt, Senior Warden; C. E. Knight, Junior Warden; W. O. Alexander, Treasurer; C. L. Meador, Jr., Secretary; Tom Redford, Senior Deacon; Lester Henderson, Junior Deacon; and W. A. Mullet, Tiler.

SNELL AND OTHERS ATTEND COUNTY AGENTS MEETING

Mr. Snell, Schleicher county agent, returned from Abilene this morning where he has been attending a two day meeting of all county agents of District 3. Accompanying Mr. Snell to Abilene were B. E. Moore, Hugh McAngus, and C. L. Meador, Jr. members of the Schleicher county cotton committee, who also attended the meeting. The local men report an enjoyable trip and a profitable meeting.

SCHOOL BUILDING IS ASSURED

Here is a drawing of Eldorado's large class rooms and a gymnasium- auditorium. The building was made possible by Saturday's big majority 80 days. The building is to have eight

Land Bank Appraisers Here Last Friday

A school of Federal Land Bank men from Houston spent Friday of last week in and around Eldorado, learning to appraise and evaluate ranch lands and stock first hand. The school consists of twenty-eight men under the supervision of W. J. McAnulty, chief appraiser for the land bank.

The men, from the various ranch sections of West Texas, have been on a tour of West Texas, receiving instructions in appraising, exchanging, ideas of land value, and making practice appraisals. The men who consist this school will use their information gained on this tour for their future appraisals of land for loans. They are to work for the Federal Land Bank of Houston.

Two members of the group, O. W. Smith and W. T. Whitten are of Eldorado. Other members of the school and their traveling guests who were in Eldorado Friday were W. J. McAnulty, Houston, who is in charge of the instructions; H. C. Archison, Jr., Kerrville; M. B. Bethel, Junction; J. A. Hadelrigg, Uvalde; J. A. Handy, Boeville; V. E. Wood, Brownwood; Herbert Dodd, Langwood; L. M. Ligon, Llano; E. B. Baggett, Jr., Ozona; Ward McConnell, Brownwood; G. W. Herd, Houston; C. D. Denny, Memphis; V. L. Cory of the Ranch Experiment Station; W. T. Carter, College Station; W. D. Allen, Columbia; J. C. Smith, Coleman; S. F. Clark, Brownwood; Robert Sloan, San Saba; P. W. Chunn, Houston; R. F. Jennings, San Antonio; O. E. O'Day, Waxahachie, B. T. Corder, Ft. Stockton; B. Miller, Abilene; B. A. Wyatt, Brownwood; Max D. Menzies, Menard; W. H. Dameron of the Experiment Station; and J. L. Neill who formerly resided in Eldorado but who has recently moved to San Angelo.

The group lunched Friday at Royster's. The group was accompanied by four officials of the Land Bank. The school concluded its week's instruction in San Angelo Saturday. The men will return to their various home towns where they will take up the work of appraisal for the bank. According to the instructor of the "traveling appraisers' school," more was learned in one week's actual practice appraising than could be learned in a month's lecturing.

New Demonstration Agent To Begin Work Here Next Week

Miss Lora Farnsworth of Paint Rock is to take over the work of county demonstration agent which is now being done by Miss Mable Howell who has recently resigned. Miss Farnsworth begins her work here next week. During the past week, Miss Farnsworth has been in Eldorado becoming acquainted with our people and with her work. She states that she has been favorably impressed with Schleicher county and its people.

Miss Farnsworth, for the past several years, has been teaching home economics in Kunnels county. Last year she taught at Norton near Balingier. Formerly she taught several years at Winters.

SCHLEICHER PLACED ON SECONDARY DROUGHT RELIEF

According to Judge Frank M. Bradley, Schleicher county has been placed in the secondary drought relief area, a group of counties which are not desperately hard hit at the present time but which apparently will need relief before the year is out. The "secondary list" simply means that the county will receive aid in case it becomes necessary. The secondary relief program includes reduction of freight rates on feed, donation of cash, food, livestock feed, and the provision of employment to the residents of the county on road work, irrigation projects, and other projects such as the relief commission endorses. Secondary relief does not as yet include the purchasing of cattle.

In counties on the primary list, cattle is being bought by the government.

Contract Already Let

Last Saturday, Eldorado citizens showed their spirit of progressiveness by voting the proposed school bond 141-23. The previous election calling for a $75,000 bond issue had been nullified by the attorney-general because $30,000 of the issue was to be set aside for taking care of bonds now outstanding. The vote May 19 was 164 for and 25 against the bond issue. Saturday's bond issue was for $45,000, the amount estimated as needed for the actual construction of the building.

CONTRACT LET

The contract for the construction of the building has already been let and construction on the building will begin within the next thirty days. The contract was let to the Suggs Construction Company of Abilene for an amount of $32,323.00 Heating, plumbing, and wiring contracts have not yet been let, but the board expects to award the remaining contracts at a meeting tonight.

The new building will be a brick structure and will contain eight class rooms. Seven of these rooms will be 30x22 feet in size. The building will also contain a combination gymnasium and auditorium. The main court of the gym is to be 42x76 feet in size. The gymnasium will be surrounded by tiers of seats which are estimated to take care of about 500 people. The building will also contain showers and toilets for both boys and girls, a tool house, and a storage room. The new building is to be located immediately west of the present building.

The construction of the new building will solve Eldorado's school needs for he present and will allow our public schools to inaugurate a new and more progressive program of education. The new building is to be used for grammar school purposes alone, thus allowing the high school enough room to offer six additional vocational subjects, three in home economics and three in vocational agriculture. For a community which has never known the value of such practical courses, the value of these courses can not be realized.

Saturday's big vote for the school bond is reminiscent of the bond election of 1909 which was 77-0 in favor of building.

ELDORADO CHOSEN FOR NEXT MEET OF LIONS, GROUP 23

At the regular meeting of group 23 in San Angelo last Friday, Eldorado was chosen as the next meeting place of the Lions club, group 23. The meeting will be held in October. Seven cities in the surrounding territory are represented in group 23. They are Sonora, San Angelo, Ozona, Sterling city, Junction, Rocksprings, and Eldorado. San Angelo fostered clubs in these and other cities. The Sonora club is the largest club in group 23, San Angelo is second, and the Eldorado club is third in size in this group. The local club, however, is growing rapidly. Group 23 holds four annual meetings each year.

Lion Smith of Junction is to succeed Lion E. C. Hill of Eldorado as chairman of group 23 for the past year.

The afternoon program of the group meeting consisted of swimming, golf and softball. At 6:00 p. m. a barbecue supper was served. (When we say served we mean served.) After supper the secretaries of each club in group 23 gave a report from his club. Then chairman E. C. Hill made a report of the outstanding accomplishment of the entire group, covering the last period.

Arthur E. Baird, District Governor of district 2 A, San Antonio, gave an interesting talk to the Lions.

Plenty of music was in evidence, and the dance at the Casino ended the amusements for the day.

About 16 Lions with their wives attended the meet from here.

Humble Changes Location;

The Humble wildcat which was located last week on the T. C. Meador place has been changed, the new location being moved on the Ike Honig place, about one mile southeast of the original location. The new location is 2,640 feet from the north line and 2,650 feet from the east line of section 38, block M, G. H. & S. A. Ry. Co. survey. Water well equipment was being moved in this week and the water well will be drilled near the location of the oil well location. The drill used in putting down the water well will be used in sinking the first thousand feet of the oil well, according to report. After the first thousand feet, a rotary rig will be moved onto the location for the remaining drilling. It is estimated by those in charge that the rotary rig unit will not be brought into use for two months yet. It is thought that it will take about eighteen months to put down the deep test.

Drilling To Start Soon

The drilling contract is not limited by any certain depth and the well will be put down to any depth necessary to test the Ordovician stratum. About thirty-two men will be employed on the well, some of whom will reside in Eldorado and some of whom have decided to stay at Christoval.

SCATTERED SHOWERS FAIL TO RELIEVE DROUGHT CONDITIONS

Scattered showers, some of beneficial nature, most of them, however, very light, failed to do much toward relieving the drought conditions which prevail over Schleicher county. The W. E. Bruton place of Eldorado reported only a slight shower while the Bricker and Roach ranches reported between a half and three-quarter inches of rain. The A. N. Shipp place got one inch, according to report. Harry Freund, south east of Eldorado, reported about one-half inch. Charles Mund reported a night shower, and a light shower was reported from the Thompson Brothers ranch. The Rudd community reported only a sprinkle (due, they claimed, to Sunday goat-rappings.)

Pat Martin and Sam Williams report an inch of rain Saturday.

Petition Government To Release Lands

Mr. H. W. Finley is circulating a petition asking the government to release all lands leased by the government in Schleicher county, in order that feed may be planted in the government controlled land during the drought period. The proposed project is designed to save the government added expense in the form of relief for cattle feed in the drought stricken territory. If the drought continues, the government will necessarily have to aid the ranchman and farmers in this territory with their feed supply. Schleicher county men had rather plant their own feed and if the government will release the land, that is what they intend to do.

Sunday Mail

Inaugerated; Postal Business Increases

Sunday mail service for Eldorado began last Sunday, July 1, for the first time, regularly, in the history of the town. The service will run on the same schedule as week day service. The post office window, according to postmaster E. W. Brooks, will not open until 12:15 and will remain open only one hour. General delivery mail will be distributed at that hour and stamps may be bought at that hour, but there will be no other stamp and general delivery service Sunday. (See Sunday Mail, page 6)

RUNGE TO SPEAK HERE TOMORROW

Word has been received by the Success that Carl Runge, Mason county's entry in the race for Congressman from the 21st. District, will be in Eldorado tomorrow to speak. Mr. Runge is expecting a large crowd from all parts of Schleicher county to hear him explain his platform. Mr. Runge has a number of followers in this county and it is likely that he will not be disappointed in his expectations.

Between the dates of June 16 and July 3, by actual count, twenty-nine families and concerns became new readers of the Success. In the majority of cases, this means three or four readers to each family, making possibly a hundred new readers in all for the Success during the month of June.

We expect to continue this pace of growth for a long time; and as fast as we can do so, we intend to give you an improved newspaper in every detail. We are here to help Eldorado grow and to grow with it. Watch us grow.

Helen's Reward

A STORY BY LOCAL TALENT

SYNOPSIS

Helen Walters, whose worthless brother has spent the small fortune left her by her parents, spurns the attentions of one, Melton Elton, her brother's friend. During an argument, Helen's brother, Franklin, reveals that he has borrowed money from Melton and has mortgaged the house, the last of the family fortune. He has also made Elton a promise, the nature of which he does not reveal to Helen.

Now, on with the story.
CHAPTER III

"Oh, goodness, Frank," Helen implored as a fear burst upon her that the worst was not yet said or done, "what have you done with all the money you borrowed?"

Frank did not answer.

"You've lost it on some bet or other?" Helen continued anxiously.

"No," answered Franklin, uneasily. "I have what's left up on today's polo game."

"And what is the what's left?" Helen asked.

Frank was regaining his composure. He answered in an unconcerned manner, "Twenty-five thousand."

Helen began to cry. "It is just as I thought," she sobbed. "Oh, I shall go crazy!"

"Aw, don't cry like that, Sis. It's not lost yet."

"No, but you've never won," she retorted.

Franklin looked hastily at his watch. "Quarter after one," he commented.

"I must go. The game is called at two. I'll save that nice surprise for you when I come home this afternoon."

with the fifty grand that I am going to wag around after the game. Meanwhile, Sis, cheer up! Goodbye."

Helen was not interested in surprises. Her brother's surprises were not always pleasant. His word of cheer had failed to produce cheer and his goodbye had not so much as registered in her ears.

She left the table and sought Jennie's company, and as she had often done, she helped Jennie with the housework, more or less for consolation. She tried to forget at least a part of her troubles, but it seemed a difficult thing to do.

The conversation that passed between Helen and Jennie that afternoon sometimes bordered upon more pleasant subjects; but for the most part, it concerned the misdemeanors of Helen's brother.

The evening sport page carried the following news: "Mexican Poloists Defeat Concho Boys. Odds had previously been two to one in favor of the West Texans. The upset was a great surprise."

Franklin did not come home that night. He had lost.

"Now," thought Helen, "we have lost our home and all. Oh, Frank, whatever possessed you—Melton Elton, of course." With these thoughts on her mind, Helen once more cried herself to sleep.

At four o'clock the following day, Franklin came in, high spirited. He had drowned his troubles in some of Elton's liquor.

"Lo, Sis," he greeted, "I got good news for ya—You're gonna marry old Elton, and he's gonna help us out."

"Ugh, what a horrible thought," murmured Helen, shudderingly; then to Franklin, "That's impossible, Frank! It would never do! I could never love him, and my life is miserable enough as it is."

"Then whatcha gonna do?" Frank blurted angrily.

"You are going out on your own resources, Frank, and I on mine. I'll find work somewhere, and you will rustle for yourself from this on. I've had enough."

Helen's words were marked with determination, but in her own mind there was some doubt as to whether or not things would turn out so well.

"Shay, Sis, you can't do old Elton that way. He'll—"

"Oh, I suppose I'll have to treat him nicely, now that he owns our very home," interrupted Helen bitterly, but marry him—never!"

Franklin stalked awkwardly out of the house. He had come in Elton's car. Straight to the offices of Elton Brothers' Wool House he sped.

Once during his reckless drive, a motorcycle cop stopped him.

"For the thousandth time, I've told you now, Frank, if you don't cut out this reckless driving, I am going to turn you in," the cop grumbled.

"Small town stuff, Oscar; you wouldn't turn an old friend in. See you tomorrow," retorted Frank, as he drove on.

The offices of Elton Brothers' Wool House, one of the largest wool buying concerns in West Texas, were located in the First National Bank Building, on Main. The office rooms were neatly arranged, despite the fact that Melton Elton was hardly sober at any time. The company was well known to all ranchmen as being honest and pleasant in its dealings. Each season brought a great volume of business for Elton Brothers.

The success of the business was attributed not to Melton Elton, but to his brother, who was known as the Invisible Boss and policy director of the company. He was rarely ever seen by the company's customers, and never seen by the city's citizenship as he was always away on business. Those who did business with this company felt, however, that Melton's brother "ramrodded the business", as the ranchmen termed it, and everyone knew that it was not Melton's policies which made the company's dealings pleasant.

Those who sold wool to Elton Brothers cared little for Melton, but they did their business with the firm for the sake of doing honest business with such a fair and practical man as the Invisible Boss of Elton Brothers' Wool House.

When Franklin arrived, Melton was seated at the desk of his private office. His sleek, black mustache, one of the many features which Helen abhorred, was shining as though it were polished. His light grey business suit was neatly pressed, and for once, he showed signs of being sensible.

"Lo, Elton, ole hoss," greeted Franklin.

"Hello, Frank," Elton responded, "what's the news?"

"Oh, she says she'll get a job, but I think she'll come across, yet, Elton," Franklin was beginning to sober.

"How about a little stimulant, ole

"Bout that hour," laughed Elton, looking at his wrist-watch.

He produced a pint of Old Mexico's Best from a desk drawer, and with his pen, he marked a place on the label that would equally divide the contents of the bottle.

"Here's to your good health and beautiful sister," he remarked as he passed the flask to Franklin.

Franklin took the "prize", as he called it, and drank with gusto his portion and a part of Elton's without a recess.

"My soldier is dead," laughed Franklin, passing the remainder to his comrade.

Elton drank more conservatively. After several draughts, he laid the empty bottle in the desk drawer. The two men walked out of the office together.

SHEEP AND CATTLE SHIPMENTS SHOW DECLINE IN MAY

AUSTIN, Texas, July 7.—Shipments of livestock from Texas to the Fort Worth market and interstate points offered a drastic decline in May in comparison with the same month last year, according to Dr. F. A. Buechel, assistant director and statistician in the Bureau of Business Research of the University of Texas. Total shipments of all classes of livestock were 5,396 cars, against 7,854 cars a year ago, a drop of 32 per cent. All classes of livestock shared in the decline.

Shipments of cattle for the two periods were, respectively: 3,509 and 4,931 cars; calves, 490 and 1,037 cars; hogs, 351 and 835 cars; and sheep 956 and 1,051 cars. For the year to date combined shipments of all classes of livestock to the Fort Worth market and interstate points totaled 24,059 cars, compared with 25,760 cars during the corresponding period last year.

Individual markets showed marked changes in the number of Texas livestock received in May this year, compared with the same month a year ago. Less than half as many Texas hogs reached the Fort Worth market, and the number of sheep fell off 17 per cent. Los Angeles received about one-fifth as many cattle and half as many hogs as a year ago. Sharp declines characterized shipments of cattle and calves to the grazing land of Kansas and Oklahoma. To the former state Texas shipped only about half as many cattle and one-fourth as many calves; and to the latter about three-fourths as many cattle and a third as many calves as in May last year. More cattle but fewer calves were shipped to Colorado than a year ago; 9,621 head of sheep were shipped from Texas to Colorado whereas none was shipped in May last year.

For the convenience of users of oil, the Humble Oil Company has brought its new sealed cans of oil on the market. Both 997 and Velvet oil can be obtained from stations in Eldorado in the most convenient form—sealed cans. For long trips on hot days when a full crankcase is an essential factor in the life of a car, car owners should carry one or two extra quarts of oil with them. The most convenient way of carrying oil is the new Humble way—sealed cans. The oil can be obtained from Eldorado stations in both quart and gallon sizes.

CATTLE GOING SOUTH

Cattle in hundred thousand lots are being moved out of the drought stricken areas of the midwest and west into the well watered pasture lands of the south. Alabama, Oklahoma, Tennessee, and Virginia have already received their lot of cattle and other southern states will be in the receiving line soon. The cattle will remain on the green pastures of these states until fall when they are to be slaughtered, canned, and shipped out to the needy. We hope that in the meantime, the South will become better acquainted with this particular specie of farm and ranch product and will hereafter dilute their cotton crops with cattle.

YARD COOPERATOR MAKES ROCK WALK

One of the most unusual rock walks made this year has been made by Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Hill, Eldorado, Texas. The walk leads to the back driveway and also around to the south side, leading toward the flower bed.

Large flat rocks were secured, placed on the level of the ground, and grass planted between the rocks. Care was taken to have the sides of the rock, even and parallel and as a result a most attractive walk has been made.

CRIME

One of the outstanding problems of the United States today is her continual and ever-growing crime wave. The newspapers have, of late, been singularly free from stories of the actions of the big criminals, but how long will it be until the box-car-lettered headlines shriek out stories of the deeds of another Barrow, another Dillinger, another Floyd? We hope that it will never be again, but we are hoping in vain.

Crime costs the United States, directly, an estimated $13,000,000,000 annually—an average of more than $100 per person! It is further estimated that crime costs the tax payer twenty-five percent of each tax dollar. Indirectly, crime costs us more than that. Gangs exact uncounted tolls of indirectly, crime costs us more than license; and dishonest, corrupt, and cut-throat business practices, "a polite form of crime," costs the American people untold billions, additional.

It is an impossible task to rid a civilization of all of its criminals because so many individuals are "dormant potential" criminals; that is, they are criminals only after a certain situation has presented itself. Our crime wave, however, can and must be cut down.

Criminals arise from several different sources. Some men are criminals, being forced to crime in order to live. That sort of criminal deserves sympathy. We must do something for him. A man is not to be excused for crime, but you can't blame him for wanting to live; and if he knows no other way to live after being thrown out of a job, he must be given a job. We can provide that class of men with work and a living wage much cheaper than we can prosecute him as a criminal—and it would, at the same time, be the human thing to do. Some men are criminals because they feel that there is the thrill of adventure in crime. There are two possible ways of handling that class of people: we might provide them with a sort of work which included the thrill and adventure; or we might punish them so severely on first offense that they will count such thrill and adventure as too costly for indulgence. Dishonest, corrupt, and cut-throat individuals in business—those who somehow escape classification as criminals—must be boycotted by the American populace. By far the greater majority of criminals are those individuals who are criminally minded—habitual criminals. They must be severely dealt with.

In order to deal with crime in the United States, we must first build up a strong public sentiment against it. Any nation which condones crime can not deal with crime. We must then get the more outstanding cases of crime into the hands of the Federal government. We must create efficient bodies of national police. We must demand more convictions and fewer pardons. We must give the criminal something to regret for his crime.

The United States has been made the laughing stock of the world because of her organized crime. In one certain city in the United States, more murders are committed annually than in all the British Empire. We have a hard time getting any of our murderers convicted while England convicts the majority of her murderers. And even if other nations were as bad, or even worse, in crime waves, that would be no excuse for the United States to be as crime torn as she is. America, we must do something about our crime. As little as we realize it, crime, with its allied interests, is a factor in the cause of depressions. As for me and my house, we prefer to rid America of her crime.

SHREDS AND PATCHES

Someone asked us the other day why we didn't say more about some candidates and less about others in the columns of this paper. The truth of the matter is that we are interested in the vital points of the issues at stake—not where the candidate was born, his "cute" stunts during his school days, where he spoke last week, or how many thousands of miles he has traveled, making four to six speeches a day. Any bag of hot air can do as well; but when we check up on most of the candidates, that is just what we learn of them. Most of the candidates get so busy running their opponents down that they forget to tell us what they themselves stand for. We have just about come to the conclusion that most of the candidates are just petty job seekers who don't stand for anything—or else don't have much idea what they do stand for; and if we don't get some good statesmen, who stand for something vital, on the field within the next few election years, we are going to advocate a voters' strike. A man seeking public office should stand for something vital, and if elected, should put that something vital into a tangible form whereby the general public might be benefitted. Oh, for the good old days when men were men, statesmen were statesmen, and women were ladies. (We don't know when that was, but we would like to see it anyway.)

We had a letter from Dr. Allan L. Carter, head of the English department at Texas Technological college, last week. Dr. Carter was discussing pro and con, our recent editorial on Education. Dr. Carter thought that the theory of the editorial was excellent; but he adds, "it seems unlikely to apply to circumstances in the present." Whereupon he sets forth his argument to substantiate his views. We are forced to confess that there is much logic in Dr. Carter's viewpoint; still and all, with some modifications, we maintain our own viewpoint. You must note that we say with some modifications, because where good logic enters in, we are susceptible to modification or stand to correction. We hope never to be narrow-minded.

Dr. Carter is one of the most brilliant men we ever met. His logic runs almost to perfection; and he is as liberally minded as a man could be. Even though we differ with him somewhat in opinion, we have utmost respect for him and his ideas.

One of the most striking statements in Dr. Carter's correspondence reads, "I think life tends to escape the moulds we fashion." You have heard of statements that contain "more truth than poetry;" but what a valuable statement it is that contains both truth and poetry. There is food for thought which can hold you for a season.

What a predicament we are in when an editor is forced to run an editorial on the front page in order to get the reading public which is supposed to be interested in current topics, to read it; and then he is not so sure that it is read. It may be the editor's fault—I wonder?

Too much news! The very idea. Who ever heard of a newspaper getting too much news. But last week, we were forced to leave a few very interesting articles completely out of the paper on account of lack of space. Really, it wasn't too much news, but it came in too late. A big portion of our local items always "drag" in on Thursday afternoon, just when we are rushed most and after we have filled up a lot of our precious space with something less interesting and less important. We want every bit of the local news that we can get, and we can not tell our friends how much we appreciate what you send us. In fact we want more than we get; but we would appreciate it very much if some of our friends would get their locals, club, and party write-ups to us on Tuesday and Wednesday. We could use them all then and you would not run the risk of having them crowded out because something of less local interest had already been printed. Remember, we are trying to build up a paper of which Eldorado and Schleicher county may be justly proud; we need and we appreciate your cooperation and your friendship.

FLOW AND PLAN NOW FOR FALL GARDENS

COLLEGE STATION July 7.—With gardens cut short in a wide-spread drought it is of unusual importance this summer to plow up garden plots and keep them in good tith in anticipation of rains which will make fall gardens possible, garden demonstrators through out the State are being told by J. F. Rosborough, extension horticulturist at Texas A and M College. If weeds are kept down and the garden land kept in good condition to catch and hold moisture it should be fairly easy to get good early fall garden stuff, he thinks.

Granting rains come, fall gardens may be planted in early August in South Texas, and in late August in all the rest of Texas. The most dependable early fall garden plantings are onion sets, Swiss chard, Irish potatoes, pinto beans and radishes.

A method of saving much of the tomato fertilizer applied this past spring is offered by Mr. Rosborough. About 500 to 600 pounds of fertilizer were applied per acre on the average, he says, and 30% to 40% of this remains available in the ground. If the land is not planted fall and winter rains will leach out the fertilizer and it will all be lost. He suggests that farmers plow up and destroy the dried tomato vines to clear the land and prevent disease and insect infestation, and when rains come plant in early fall with adapted crops. The surest truck crops are Irish potatoes, beans, and fall roasting ears. If rains come very early, sweet potatoes will make a good crop.

Lady Says She Took CARDUI for Cramps Was Soon Relieved

Women who suffer as she did will be interested in the experience of Mrs. Maude Crafton, of Belleville, Ill., who writes: "For several years, I suffered from irregular trouble and cramping. There would be days when I would have to stay in bed. I would get so nervous, I was miserable. My aunt told me to try Cardui. She believed it would build me up, regulate me and help the nervous trouble. I knew after taking half a bottle of Cardui that I was better. I kept on taking Cardui and found it was doing me a world of good. I am in good health, which means a lot to me." Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. KEENEY STORES FEED
IN TRENCH SILO

Clyde Keeney of Eldorado was the first ranchman and farmer of Schleicher county to put up feed in a trench silo. He tried this method of storing feed for the first time in the fall of 1933. He dug a small trench silo that measured 50 feet long, 14 feet wide at the top, and 8 feet wide at the bottom. Both ends of the silo was sloped so that he could drive his wagon and team into the silo, which made the unloading much easier. Also this method helped to pack the feed and make it possible to store more feed in the silo.

Mr. Keeney says that cost of digging the silo was very small as it only cost him the labor of himself, one hired man, a turning plow, a scraper and his team. With this equipment, it took him one and one half days to dig his silo. He estimates that he can have the feed shocked in the field before he is ready to stack the feed in the feed lots. Mr. Keeney says that his livestock was endowed with an appetite for this silage and that his biggest trouble was keeping the cattle and livestock off the wagon while scattering the silage. We especially like the silage for his sheep as the silage will make his ewe produce more milk and make it possible for him to raise larger lambs.

Last year Mr. Keeney stored 2700 bundles of feed in his trench silo and for this year he intends to lengthen it to 100 feet and put from 10,000 to 15,000 bundles of hegarl providing his crop is not cut short from dry weather.

LAWS NOW STRESSING TIRE SAFETY

Tires Seen as Leading Factor In Motoring Security

The laws of an increasing number of states and cities are recognizing the fact that cheap and unsafe tires are the leading cause of accidents, other than those caused by careless acts of drivers.

For the past 15 years, Firestone has been vitally interested in providing the utmost safety in tires, for their tires have been on the winning cars at Indianapolis each year during that period. Firestone engineers recognized the fact that the higher speeds of modern cars would bring not only public opinion, but legal action, to bear on the importance of safe tires for all motorists.

Minneapolis and St. Paul put on extensive campaigns in which police tagged worn and unsafe tires leaving a notice for the owner to replace the tires under penalty of a fine, if further check-ups found the matter unattended to. Some New England cities have recently taken legal steps to force drivers to obtain safe equipment. England has laws covering use of unsafe tires.

A defective tire in Stockton, California recently cost the owner $13,500! A judgement for that amount was returned against this owner after a blowout caused her car to collide with another. The judge ruled that the cause, an unsafe tire, constituted negligence.

The chief cause of blowouts was found by Firestone engineers to be internal friction of the cords, causing heat. To counteract this, Firestone developed the patented Gum-Dipping process which soaks each cord in liquid rubber. This process also helps to weld the tire into one strong unit. Firestone is the only company using the process which adds eight pounds of pure rubber for every 100 pounds of cord. The proof of the effectiveness of this construction is the fact that all of the 33 racing drivers in the Indianapolis Race this year chose Firestone tires and there was not a single tire failure.

Gets the D. S. C. for the Second Time

Secretary of War George Dern (left) bestowing a pair of the Distinguished Service Cross on Capt. Albert F. Hegenberger, army air corps, as a symbol of the second award of that decoration to the officer. The ceremony was performed at the Army War college in Washington, where the captain is now stationed. The second decoration was awarded to Captain Hegenberger for "extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flights, in connection with the testing and developing of the air corps system of instrument flying and landing."

MAC'S MESSAGES

I never get any front page space for anything in this column of comment, but I would like to mention several projects our city should do something about. If any one should secure any of the below mentioned projects he would be rendering a very remarkable service to Eldorado.

First, do we need, and are we going to get any fire fighting equipment? At the present it would do just about as much good to fan the fire, as anything we can use to extinguish it.

If a burned child is supposed to fear fire, we should be plenty scared.

Second, do we need lights. I really don't have the space to explain how it can be done, but watch here next time. We must have lights. Are we progressive?

As we have a gas well, or gas wells near why not use 'em for a fuel supply? Sell some company the franchise for the gas; the company lay the pipe. All we need to do would be strike a match. Isn't that fine?

The glorious Fourth came; and went, I wondering where the independence is; we haven't had any in over one hundred and fifty years. The fourth here in Eldorado was like a tired washwoman of forty, her youth gone, and her beauty dwindled. Get it?

There is a serious state of unrest in several foreign countries. Blood is being shed, and war preparations are on an unparalleled scale. Is war inevitable? Our next war will not be between trained participants, in local places, but an engagement of universal slaughter. The women will no longer have safety at home. The next war, if allowed will be horrible. It will begin where the last one ended. Let us all think.

Texas Crops Suffer For Rain

According to a report prepared by the Santa Fe Railway, the agricultural conditions in Texas are as follows.

Unseasonably warm weather continues to prevail over practically the entire state of Texas, and crops in general are showing ill effects therefrom. Some sections, however, have received beneficial showers although a general state-wide rain is needed for best results.

Cotton has withstood best the excessive heat. However, growth is only slow to average, with some sections extremely poor. Chopping is about completed, and stands are average. Plants are unusually small, and blooming is general throughout practically the entire state. Some shedding has resulted from extreme heat and insect depredations. On the whole the crop is ten days to three weeks late.

Dry weather curtailed potato production in the Eagle Lake-Glen Flora territory and movement has entirely stopped. An increase of about 20 percent over that of last year resulted during the season just closed.

Tomato movement from East Texas territory rapidly is drawing to a close, and indications are that an increase over last year of about 50 percent will result. Growers are receiving fairly satisfactory returns.

Onions in North Texas received beneficial rains, and unit production increased considerably. Movement during the present season will amount to more than double that of last year.

Central Texas cane-bee-building firmelons are now moving to eastern markets. They are showing damaging results of extremely hot and dry weather and will need rains immediately.

Wheat harvest is well over. Yields have been fair and quality is good. The government estimate for the state is 25,000,000 bushels compared with 13,000,000 last year and an average of 39,000,000 bushels. Much of the wheat has been stored on farms and in terminal elevators.

Hot winds have hurt feed crops in the northwest.

Range conditions, while good in some areas, are extremely poor in others. The grazing area of west central Texas is in fair to good condition.

GARDEN SUB-IRRIGATION PROVES PROFITABLE

Sub-irrigation does not require nearly so much water nor labor to grow tomatoes says Mrs. J. L. McElory, co-operator of the Cliff Home Demonstration club.

Mrs. McElory brought in some tomatoes Saturday which weighed from one-half to three-fourths pounds each. She has tomatoes of the same variety and same age which are being surface watered, and as yet are not bearing.

For the past two weeks Mrs. McElory has been having plenty of fresh tomatoes and has been canning from the sub-irrigated tomatoes.

SOFTBALL

Eldorado now has a real soft ball team. After the licking we took from Sonora, all resolved to work until we had a team that could lick that town south of us until they cried calif-ropo. It really wasn't so bad, Sonora found out nearly all our players were gone, came up and let us have where it hurt. We are all ready to go now.

The games we had Sunday ended 1 to 0, first game, second 3 to 2. We lost on errors. We intend to overcome all such things by pouring syrup in our first and third basemens gloves. The game was thrilling from start to finish, and there was plenty as the last game was played 9 innings. Let back our club and make 'em win.

WOOL LEADERS URGE TEXANS NOT TO SELL

According to a report in the San Angelo Morning Times, F. R. Marshall, secretary of the National Wool Growers' Association writes to E. S. Mayer, vice-president of the Sheep and Goat Raisers' Association the following: "It looks to me as though the insistence of some Texas people upon selling (wool) at any price has at last put the market in shape to go on a much lower basis whenever any business comes along."

"I really do not know just what you can do about this, but if there is any way of explaining to some of these people that they are pulling down the entire market structure, perhaps they would take a different view."

Along with Mr. Marshall's letter were some two or three other letters with contents along the same line. One of the letters stated that the Texans should hold for 75c clean. "The Montana clip is being consigned," the letter said. "The manufacturers have just about completed delivery of their semi-manufactured goods and I do not believe they can delay purchase of raw wool much longer."

Considerable disappointment was shown in the letters because the Texas growers would not consign preferring to sell regardless of price.

One of the letters stated that Texas wool was being sold at 12c per clean pound lower than the quoted market.

It is difficult to ask a man to hold his products for a higher price when he is badly in need of money; but it certainly takes a stick-together cooperative attitude to hold the market up on any raw product because the manufacturers are going to buy as cheaply as they can. The less we cooperate on our produce, the better the manufacturer likes it, because he gets our produce cheaper. If half of us hold out for higher markets, and the other half of us sell at any price, the market will not be raised because the manufacturer gets all he needs. If we all hold for better prices, we get them because united we are powerful, and the manufacturer who must have our raw products is willing to pay our prices for them when he sees that he can't get them at his price.

OUR HERITAGE

With a general world disasters commonly known as the depression, what may we ask, is worth salvaging from our present scheme of democracy? It has been said that democracy is a gigantic experiment. Quite true, and we are now about to discover that much of that experiment has proven a failure. There are a number of things which are radically wrong with our present-day democracy. Some of them are quite obvious; some of them vague.

The greatest thing that the depression has done for us is to open our eyes to the great number of inconsistencies and mistakes in our present form of government. Should we, since we have discovered these errors, give up our hope and our dreams, unrealized, and sit down to await the outcome? Most assuredly not. Should we then turn to communism, sovietism and all the many other radical forms of government which have so recently sprung up in the world. Certainly not; but we should watch them with a critical eye; for there is something good to be got from them. We must not forget that democracy was once a radical thing within itself. Even monarchies and autocracies are now considered radical, yet they were once respected.

What now, even though we realize our failures, must we stick strictly to our present form of government? The answer is no. It will get us nowhere, except into possibly greater depressions, greater crime waves and more complex problems. What then will we salvage from the progress we have made? Must we retain our one hundred fifty year old constitution, which has at present served its time just because we must be conservative. No. It has its good points and we must accept them, but to retain it intact after we have seen its follies just because there are sentimental values attached to it would be the most unreasonable thing America could do, and we pride our selves in our reasonable, thinking population. We can build a constitution to meet our demands.

Must we still believe in the constitution's basic principle, that all men are born equal, just because we must be conservative? Far from it. We know that all men are not born equal. It is too plain when we see one man succeed while another fails. No, we can devise a new principle.

Then what is worth salvaging from the smoldering ruins of this noble experiment? What will be our heritage when the last will and testament of our present democracy is read?

DR. MOORE OPENS OFFICE TODAY

Dr. L. J. Moore is ready to do work in his new office building today. Dr. Moore's new office has a large reception room, an operating room, and a lavatory room. Later Dr. Moore plans to build a residence at the rear of his office.

In 1900, 7,000,000 barrels of gasoline supplied the world market. Today over 400,000,000 barrels are used in the United States alone.

Here is a picture of the first post office in Eldorado. News transportation was crude compared to present day. In the picture, also, is one of the first automobiles used to carry mail from Eldorado to San Angelo. This picture was taken about the year 1911.

Today we have a modern post office in every way: rapid mail service, and fine employees. Lately we obtained Sunday mail service. Uncle Sam may be agitated but he still brings our mail.

WELL TRAINED HORSE HURT ON ROAD TO STAMFORD

A well trained roping horse belonging to Aubrey Baugh was badly but not permanently injured when the trailer, in which it was being hauled, turned tippy-turvy near Abilene. The horse was being carried from Baugh's Schleicher county ranch to the Stamford cowboy reunion by Mr. Kinser, a Schleicher county rope performer. The horse was entered in the roping contests at the cowboy reunion at Stamford and high hopes were entertained for its chances at placing until the accident prevented Kinser from entering the horse.

METHODIST HOLD TRI-CITY CONFERENCE

A joint quarterly conference of Methodists from Sonora, Eldorado, and Ozona was held last Friday, June 23, at Sonora. The Sonora Methodists treated the visiting Methodists to a barbecue supper at the Sonora golf course.

Following the supper, representatives of the three cities gathered at the Sonora Methodist church for the business conference. Rev. S. L. Batchelor of San Angelo presided over the meeting. The pastors, secretaries, and auxiliaries of each church represented made reports.

Those attending the conference from Eldorado were Rev. W. H. Marshall, Mrs. J. E. Isaacs, Mrs. W. E. Cloud, Miss Pearl Smith and Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Wright.

SCHLEICHER ON SECONDARY RELIEF LIST

ment at from 12 to 20 dollars per head and sheep at about $2 per head. The government plans to buy 5,000,000 head of cattle. Cattle and sheep will be appraised by county extension agents of the department of agriculture. Cattle unfit for human use will be bought at $12 and killed; other cattle will bring up to $20, depending on its value. The government now plans to buy the cattle over two years old and the sheep over one year old.

Several west Texas counties, including Crockett county have already been placed on the primary or emergency relief roll, and many others including Schleicher, Tom Green, Sutton, Llano, McCulloch, Mason, Menard, and others have been placed on the secondary list. Several states had been receiving drought relief long before it became apparent that Texas was going to need relief. If drought conditions continue to prevail, some of the counties on the secondary list will petition the government for admission to the primary list.

ELDORADO CELEBRATES A SAFE AND SANE FOURTH

With no wild show of celebration whatever, the Fourth of July, 1934, came and went in Eldorado. Hardly a firecracker was heard on the streets. Eldorado chose to cooperate with her sister towns by attending celebrations elsewhere rather than putting on a show in competition. Our show comes later (July 26) and we expect our neighbor towns to do the same by us.

The majority of our citizens went either to Ozona or to Brady but numbers of them attended celebrations in San Angelo, Mertzon, and other places while some of them chose to do some quiet celebrating by visiting. A few of us remained at home, but the joke was on us.

Some Eldorado's business establishments remained closed all day while the majority of them remained closed a part of the day.
