For Your Information

It Texas Were A Nation

The total value of goods and services produced in Texas in 1997, the last year for which numbers were available, totalled $601 billion. That ranks Texas 9th when compared to the Gross National Product of countries throughout the world. The United States is by far the largest economy in the world at $8.1 trillion. Japan is second at $4.8 trillion and Germany is third with $2.32 trillion. Texas placed behind Brazil ($784 billion) and slightly ahead of Canada ($594 billion.)

On This Date

On this date in 1776 the second Continental Congress authorized the use of the name "United States," instead of "United Colonies," to describe the new nation. In 1841 Tom Hyer defeated George "Country" McChester in the first heavy-weight boxing match to last more than 100 rounds...it lasted a grueling three hours and 101 rounds. In 1850 California joined the union as the thirty-first state. In 1942 Japanese bombers drop incendiary bombs over Oregon in an attempt to set forest fires...the raid failed completely. In 1971 a four-day prison riot began at Attica Correctional Facility near Buffalo, New York...nine hostage prison guards and thirty-one prisoners were killed when state police stormed the complex.

Birthdays of note include: 1890 Harland "Colonel" Sanders, father of Kentucky Fried Chicken; 1754 William Bligh, English admiral who commanded the HMS bounty at the time of the celebrated mutiny. 1585 Cardinal Richelieu, chief minister to King Louis XIII of France;

Marketing Blunders

The Chevy Nova never sold well in Spanish speaking countries. "No Va" means "It Does Not Go" in Spanish.

Not to be outdone, Puffs tissues tried later to introduce its product, only to learn that "Puff" in German is a colloquial term for a brothel.

When Pepsi started marketing its products in China a few years back, they translated their slogan, "Pepsi Brings You Back to Life" pretty literally. The slogan in Chinese really meant, "Pepsi Brings Your Ancestors Back from the Grave."

County Commissioners agree on 2000 budget

The Schleicher County Commissioners Court met Tuesday, September 7th and, among other business, reached a tentative agreement on the budget for fiscal year 2000. The proposed budget presented by Judge Johnny Griffin calls for the county to spend $1,918,605.00 in 2000, approximately $40,700.00 more than the county budgeted in 1999.

Included in that amount are $100 per month pay raises for county employees and elected officials, except the County Judge, County Attorney and County Commissioners, whose pay will remain the same. Hourly employees are to receive an average pay hike of 4 percent, under the proposed budget.

Another reason the overall budget increased is the Meals for the Elderly Program which the county now operates through the county jail. However, revenue for that program has also increased since the county now receives funding directly from the Concho Valley Council of Governments (CVCOG). Previously, the county was paying Kimble County to prepare the meals with that county receiving the funds from CVCOG.

A portion of the $1.9 million budget the county will be funded through fees, sales taxes and other revenues. However, property taxes totaling $1,030,000.00 will be required to balance the books, it was explained.

To raise that amount of money, a tax rate of 81.51¢ per $100 valuation will be required. That rate is up 5.08¢ from last year. According to commissioners the decline in the price of oil and natural gas

And she walked away — A blowout reportedly caused this 1999 Ford Explorer to overturn Monday afternoon on U.S. 277 near the Schleicher/Sutton County line. Andrea Wirshing, the car's lone occupant suffered minor injuries and was taken to Hudspeth Memorial Hospital in Sonora where she was treated for a lacerated ankle. DPS trooper Donald Van Zandt investigated the accident.

Ministerial Alliance plans prayer prior to football game

The Eldorado Ministerial Alliance announced this week that its members, made up of ministers from several local churches, will recite the Lord's Prayer aloud prior to the Eagles football game with Menard this Friday night. The move is in response to a ruling by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals which held that student-led pre-game prayers are unconstitutional.

Rev. Andy Anderson, president of the group, said that after an EHS student reads a "Wish from the Heart," a moment of silence will be announced. During the moment of silence a member of the Eagle Band is scheduled to play an instrumental selection of an inspirational nature.

"Immediately following the music, we will stand and recite the Lord's Prayer," Anderson stated. "I encourage anyone who wishes to pray to stand and join us."

Rev. Anderson stated that the ministers will be voicing the prayer at each Eagles home game this year.

Up in smoke — Fire destroyed G & G Manufacturing's shop last week. Here black smoke is shown billowing from the structure moments before volunteer firefighters arrived on the scene.

G & G Manufacturing facility termed a total loss after fire

Rebuilding effort begins almost immediately

G & G Manufacturing's shop, 2 miles south of Eldorado, was destroyed by fire on Wednesday, September 1st. The blaze, reportedly sparked by a grinder, swept quickly through the metal building which housed equipment and material used in the fabrication of fiberglass tanks and deer blinds.

Doug Garvin, part owner of the business, and employee Arisdale Hernandez were the only ones present at the time of the fire and both managed to escape the building unharmed.

Eldorado Fire Chief Jerry Jones, who was driving on US 277, noticed black smoke billowing from the structure and reported the fire to the Schleicher County Sheriff's Department. Units of the Eldorado Volunteer Fire Dept. were then dispatched and arrived at the scene in a matter of minutes.

The Fire Department's new pumper truck was pressed into action as several lines were laid and firemen attacked the blaze from three directions at once. Water was hauled to the blaze by fire unit #39, a tanker truck, and a transport truck belonging to the Schleicher County Road Department.

The fire was contained to the large metal building, a smaller structure and a nearby house were spared.

Doug Garvin, who along with Richard Gibson, owns G & G Manufacturing, estimated the loss to be in excess of $50,000.00. He noted that several molds used in the fabrication of fiberglass deer blinds were lost in the blaze.

"We were lucky to have moved some stuff outside," Garvin stated. "But we lost a lot of it."

The building was a total loss, too. Minutes after the fire began, the main roof beam on the structure collapsed from the intense heat.

"It burned hot and fast," Fire Chief Jerry Jones said after the flames were extinguished. "There was lots of flammable material in there."

Garvin told the Success this week that work is already underway to rebuild. "We hope to be up and running in a week and a half to two weeks," Garvin said. "We had lots of good help out here over the weekend clearing the foundation off."

Garvin went on to express his appreciation to the Eldorado Volunteer Fire Dept., the Schleicher County Sheriff's Dept. and others who responded to the emergency. "They all did a good job and we really appreciate it," Garvin said.

Okay, where's the warranty on this cat?

I'm not sure why my family keeps insisting that we have a cat since each one we've ever owned has met with an untimely, and sometimes tragic end. The cats don't seem to learn, either. As soon as we manage to kill one off, another wanders up to our door. It's happened so often now that I've committed the routine to memory.

First, I come home from work to find my daughter, Sarah, petting a stray kitten on the front porch. "It's so cute," she says and promises to be the animal's sole caretaker.

"That's what you said last time," I tell her. "And, you remember how that deal turned out, don't you?" The question always goes unanswered.

The following day, I arrive home to see my son J.L. playing with the kitten. "Is that cat still here?" I ask.

"Guess so," he replies. "Watch this, Dad..." At that point I get to see a trick or stunt that, according to J.L., only this particular animal can perform.

On the third day, I come home to find that Kathy has been feeding the kitten...outside, of course...but only until it can find its way back home.

"Do you honestly think it will ever leave if you keep feeding it?" I ask her, but the question, like most I ask, goes unanswered.

A few more days pass and the animal has weaseled its way into the house. At this point that the family asks me to give the animal a name.

I don't remember just how the tradition began, but I've always been the one to name our pets...even the unwanted cats. I suspect my family realized, long before I did, that once I go to the trouble of naming an animal, I can't get rid of it.

Dogs have never been a problem for us. We have had four, in all. Bear, Peabody, Daisy and Gipper. The first three all lived long lives and died of old age. They are each buried near our house. Gipper, still very much alive, has been our pet for the last seven years.

Like I said, dogs don't seem to be the problem. But cats...well cats are a different story.

First, there was a gray tabby which I had named Samson. His fondness for climbing under the hoods of vehicles and going to sleep atop the engine proved to be his undoing.

There was a yellow cat named Winston, as in Winston Churchill, and another yellow cat named Tiger for the cartoon character on Winnie the Pooh. Miss Kitty was a gray tabby cat named for Marshal Dillon's true love on "Gunsmoke." Then there was Sherman. Since he was good at wrecking things around the house, I named him after the Civil War general, William Tecumseh Sherman. All of these cats died before their time.

Now, we have a cat named Pete. He, too, is named for a Civil War general. At first I couldn't think of a name for him...nothing seemed to fit, I guess. Then one day, he came running through the living room and crashed into the corner of an end table. If he had veered an inch or two to the right he would have missed it entirely.

That reminded me of Confederate General James Longstreet at the battle of Gettysburg. Longstreet, whose friends and colleagues called him Old Pete, had argued against a headlong attack during the battle, wanting instead to move his corps to the right so as to challenge the Union army's flank. But his commanding general, Robert E. Lee refused and ordered the attack anyway. It failed miserably.

One of Longstreet's subordinates, General John Bell Hood of Texas, suffered terrible wounds in the ill-fated charge. After the battle, as Longstreet knelt beside him, Hood took his commander's hand and said, "We should'a went to the right, Pete."

We had Pete the cat neutered recently. Just as he seemed to be getting over that tragedy in his life, Pete was bitten by a rattlesnake. I don't know how, but he managed to survive that, too.

For awhile, though, it looked bad for the cat. His head and neck swelled to twice their normal size and his right ear drooped down.

Certain that death would be the inevitable outcome I rubbed his Pete's swollen head and muttered to myself, "I knew it...I knew it."

Kathy overheard me and asked, "You knew what?"

"I knew as soon as we had him fixed...he'd break again."

More students taking SAT but test scores do not improve

AUSTIN — The number of Texas students from the class of 1999 who took the SAT college entrance exam reached an all-time high of 104,144, an increase of 3,727 over 1998, the Texas Education Agency reported.

Fifty percent of the estimated 208,288 seniors in Texas public and private schools in 1999 took the SAT.

"We are pleased that the number of Texas students who take college-entrance exams is increasing," said Education Commissioner Mike Moses, who left office Sept. 3 to become vice deputy chancellor of Texas Tech University System in Lubbock.

Average scores posted by Texas students were similar to national results. The average verbal score for Texas students held steady at 494 for the third year in a row, while nationally the verbal score remained stable at 505 for the fourth straight year. The average math score for Texas students fell from 501 in 1998 to 499 in 1999.

Compiled by Ed Sterling

Moses said he was troubled by Texas' decline in the average math score. Nationally, math scores dropped one point from 512 in 1998 to 511 this year.

"I hope local district officials will study their own SAT scores and determine whether any action should be taken in their schools. I am pleased but not satisfied that the average verbal scores held steady despite the large increase in test takers," he said.

Texas seniors who reported that they ranked in the top 10 percent of their graduating class scored an average 573 on the verbal section of the test and an average 588 on the math section, well above the national average on the exam.

The number of Texans who took the American College Testing (ACT) exam also rose from 64,064 in 1998 to 65,094 this year.

Redistricting Changes Eyed

In 2001, the Texas Senate will have to redraw the boundaries of state and federal legislative districts.

Based on projections by the Texas Legislative Council, the number of people in each Senate district will be 659,800; in each House district, 136,360; and in each congressional district, 639,200.

Over the last 10 years, Republican majority districts have grown faster than Democratic districts, the legislative council said, and 7 of the 10 fastest-growing Senate districts are Republican.

Texas' population is expected to swell to more than 20 million by the time the next U.S. Census is taken in April 2000. Redistricting will be based on the new census.

Protesters Sue Governor

The environmental groups Texans United and Downwinders At Risk and three demonstrators have filed a lawsuit in Travis County against Gov. George W. Bush, the Department of Public Safety and the three DPS commissioners, seeking judgments that would force the state to acknowledge the demonstrators' right to protest in front of the Governor's Mansion.

The protesters were arrested at the mansion four times last spring. In each case the Travis County District Attorney's Office dropped charges of blocking an entry way.

Welfare Caseloads Decrease

The Texas Workforce Commission reported at the end of its fiscal year last week that welfare caseloads in Texas have fallen for 43 consecutive months.

Over 130,000 cases and 359,387 Texans moved off welfare rolls since the state Welfare to Work program was launched in September 1995.

The agency's employment services assisted more than 1.4 million people last year, and over 1 million applicants entered employment.

In 1999, the agency logged more than 660,000 initial claims for unemployment insurance.

Other Highlights

In a report released last week, State Auditor Lawrence Allwin questioned criteria used by the Texas Lottery Commission in evaluating bids for the lottery operator contract in 1997. Those bids were rejected, and Gtech Corp. continued as lottery operator. Allwin said commissioners should be more involved in the awarding of agency contracts, rather than leaving such decisions to the executive director.

Texas public school officials do not consistently remove violent students to alternative education programs as the 1995 Safe Schools Act requires, according to a state audit released last week. Preliminary data shows that of the 850 acts that didn't result in expulsion to Juvenile Justice alternative education programs, 255 involved illegal knives, 218 included other types of weapons and 196 were aggravated assaults.

ROLLING ALONG

WITH TUMBLEWEED SMITH

The West in Bronze

Lisa Perry lives in Springtown where she creates sculptures and jewelry. She makes tiny gold horses for necklaces, pins and earrings. She also makes giant bronze statues 25% larger than life-size.

While she was growing up in Helena, Montana, she spent hours after school at the State Historical Museum admiring the sculptures and paintings by artist Charles Russell. After her daily museum visit, she went to the state capitol building across the street to see her father, the assistant attorney general of Montana. When he finished work, they rode home together and talked of art and horses.

Lisa studied art at Montana State University where she met her husband George, also a lover of horses. They made a living by raising bucking and racing horses and producing amateur rodeos. In the late 70's the couple moved to Weatherford where George got a job managing a ranch.

Lisa didn't do any art work for ten years after she graduated. In 1980 she found an old ball of art wax in a closet, got it out and started making something with it. That first piece was instantly popular and her second sculpture ended up being in great demand. George quit his job on the ranch to help Lisa. Income from those first two sculptures equaled his annual salary.

One of Lisa's bronze sculptures depicts an old truck. "That's based on a childhood memory," says Lisa. "One day I saw this rusty old pickup in a field. It had some goats around it and a boy was standing on the cab of the truck, reaching to get a peach off a tree."

People are always guessing what model pickup it is. "It's a 1934 Ford."

Photographs of her work have been on some prestigious magazine covers. Some of the most influential people in the world own her art, which is in several museums and galleries. Her awards indicate that she is one of the more acclaimed bronze sculpturists in the United States.

Lisa Perry's specialty is horses. Several people have her make exact replicas of horses they own. She often works on the piece while viewing the horse from an outdoor studio.

She is probably best known for two huge statues. One is the prehistoric bear commissioned by Texas Tech University. It is seven feet long and sits at an archeological site on the edge of Lubbock which has evidence of man and animals living there 10,000 years ago. She researched the subject thoroughly by examining very old skulls and bones and observing living relatives of the prehistoric animal.

The other work is of monumental proportions and sits in front of the Exchange Building at the Fort Worth Stock Yards. It depicts legendary bulldogger Bill Pickett wrestling a longhorn steer. It is one and a quarter life-size.

"He used to bite the steer on the nose to bring him down," says Lisa. "So if you look real close, you'll see old Bill's mouth open, ready to bite."

Assessing Y2K Readiness

What the FDIC and other regulators are doing to make sure banking institutions are ready

Banks and savings institutions face risks from the Year 2000 issue because so many of their transactions depend on date-sensitive computer calculations. These include posting interest to deposit accounts, crediting loan payments received, handling automated teller machine transactions, and so on.

Making sure that the more than 10,000 FDIC-insured financial institutions correct their computer systems by January 1, 2000, is a major priority for the FDIC and other federal and state banking regulators, as well as for the industry.

Big Task, Top Priority

The government and the banking industry have been working on Y2K for several years. "Assessing the Year 2000 readiness of financial institutions has been a huge undertaking and an unprecedented effort," says Frank Hartigan, the Washington-based Y2K Program Manager for the FDIC's Division of Supervision.

FDIC Consumer News wants to help you understand what the FDIC and other regulators have been doing to minimize Y2K problems for consumers. Here's an overview of the steps banking regulators have taken and will continue to take to ensure that financial institutions prepare for the Year 2000 date change:

Federal guidance on how to get ready for the Year 2000 date change.

Federal banking regulators have jointly issued guidance to all FDIC-insured institutions on meeting minimum standards for Y2K-readiness, including deadlines for testing their computer systems.

The regulators also have instructed insured institutions to plan alternate ways of providing services to customers if disruptions do occur.

Visits to every FDIC-insured financial institution to closely monitor progress in dealing with the problem.

Michael Benardo, a Y2K Examination Specialist with the FDIC in Washington, says "specially trained examiners have already performed at least two Year 2000 assessments at every FDIC-insured financial institution in the country to determine how they are doing." A program of follow-up visits will continue through the Year 2000 to make sure that institutions complete their Y2K plans.

On-site assessments of many of the companies used by the banking industry for computer products and services.

The banking regulators are also visiting many of the companies used by the banking industry for data processing and financial recordkeeping. Examiners have visited the most significant of these companies—more than 300 firms—to check whether they are correcting Y2K-related problems.

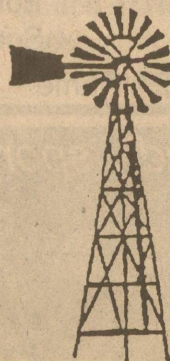

How are they doing?

Bank regulators are encouraged by what they have seen. Institutions have fixed their systems, and have put their fixes to the test. This means that banking institutions have run their computer programs using dates after January 1, 2000, to see whether the changes were done correctly.

Our assessment show that the vast majority of institutions are doing a good job getting ready for the Year 2000.

In those situations where we find that a financial institution is lagging, the institution may be subject to actions from federal and state regulators that would require corrective measures.

"The regulators will deal aggressively with institutions that should be doing more to address Year 2000 deficiencies," says Michael Zamorski, Deputy Director of the Division of Supervision and chairman of a committee that guides the FDIC's Y2K efforts.

Eagles drop opener to Dragons

Bangs 37 — Eldorado 19

The Eldorado Eagles traveled to Bangs last Friday night and lost their season opener by the score of 37 to 19. The Eagles never really got untracked offensively and gave up 16 points on special teams. Coach Fryar commented on the game, "we had several good defensive stands deep in our own territory but you can't give up the big plays to good football teams or you will come out on the short end of the scoreboard."

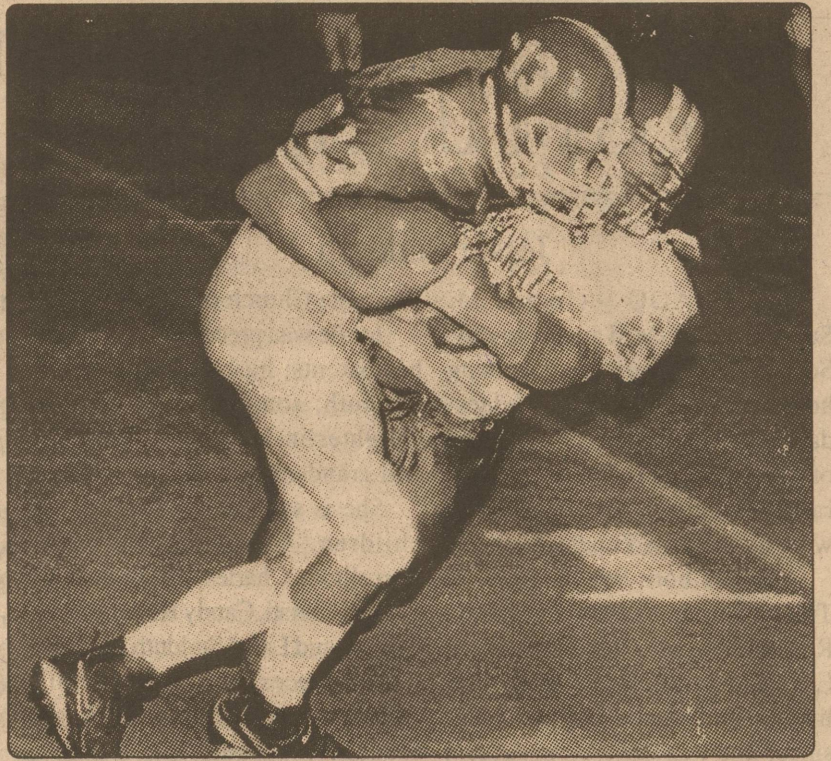

Offensively, the Eagles were led by the strong rushing of Lance Mitchel who had 125 yards on 16 rushes, while Will Robledo led the receiving corps with 60 yards in catches. Bullard was 5 of 13 for 85 yards and two interceptions. On defense Gary Gibson led the Eagles playing a very good ballgame.

The game was a close game going into half time with the Eagles only down 7 to 0. However, Bangs came away with 21 third quarter points to the Eagles 7, which wound up being the difference.

Eldorado hosts the Menard Yellowjackets this Friday night for homecoming. The Yellowjackets are coming off a 7 to 6 win over Bronte and are considered one of the best 1A ball clubs in the area. Coach Fryar commented, "Menard always plays Eldorado tough, and tomorrow night should not be any different. They are a good team and we will have to play a good ball game on both sides of the ball. And special teams have to step up. This is the second of a very tough non district schedule and should be a good ball game."

Kick off is scheduled for 8 PM at Eagle Stadium. Show your spirit and wear your green and be loud!

THE ELDORADO SUCCESS

"The Voice of Eldorado and Schleicher County Since 1901"

Eagles JV defeats Bangs 25-0

The Eldorado Eagle JV found success on both sides of the ball versus the Bangs JV Thursday night, Sept. 2, 1999. The JV's offense scored 25 points and the defense held the Dragons JV scoreless.

The Eagles moved on the ground and in the air throughout the game. Tailback Quisto Gonzales ran the ball tough all evening. Quarterback Johnny Herrera passed for 3 touchdowns and ran for another. Quisto kicked one PAT. Receivers on the end of Herrera's passes included Tony Fay (over 80 yds., receiving, 1 touchdown), Michael Ramirez (2 pass receptions, 1 touchdown), Wesley Jones (1 touchdown), Benji Gonzales (over 100 yds receiving), and David Elias (30 yds. receiving).

Also running the ball well for the Eagles were Benji Gonzales, Joe Arispe, Ramon Barrajas, Ray David Buitron, and Phillip Martinez who had 2 runs of over 20 yards each in the 4th quarter. The lineman that made this possible included Juan Diego Guzman, Ross Hodges, Jordan Fay, Chris Martinez, Scott Homer, Reese Schwiening, Jimmy Aguilar, and Frankie Estrada.

The entire Eagle defense played well with interceptions being tallied by Ramon Barrajas and Phillip Martinez. Big plays and hits were made by many players including Alberto Fuentes, Aaron Fuentes, Jimmy Joe Rodriguez, Buddy Greer, Landon Nixon and Heath Andrews.

The Eagles JV also benefited from good special teams play on kickoffs and kick-returns by Pedro Hernandez and Joe Arispe.

The game was such a lopsided affair that linemen Jimmy Aguilar and Chris Martinez even go a shot at running the football.

Following the game Coach Alan Gillespie and noted that he and Coach Molina were pleased most of the time "spirit, intensity, team play and sportsmanship."

"Our entire defensive was excellent, we bent a little but never broke," Gillespie stated.

The Eagles JV will travel to Menard this afternoon to take on the Yellowjackets JV. "They are always a tough opponent who will run a lot of option type football," Gillespie said.

The Eagles JV looks to be in good shape for the game with no injuries reported from the contest against Bangs. However, the JV eagerly awaits the return of teammates Alex Sanchez, sidelined by illness and Ryan Adame, who suffered a broken finger in practice.

Commissioners Court meeting

during 1998 caused a steep decline in property values. It was explained that the tax increase will be necessary if for the county to receive the same amount of tax revenue as last year.

Commissioners Johnny Mayo, Bill Clark, Steve Minor and Ross Whitten were present for the meeting and tentatively agreed with the proposed budget and tax rate.

A public hearing on the budget is slated for Monday, Sept. 20th at 9:00 a.m. in the Commissioners' Court Room. At that time the commissioners will seek public comment on the budget and the accompanying tax rate before voting on the measures.

In other business Tuesday, the commissioners looked over plans for a new runway at the county airport. The plans prepared by engineers with the Texas Department of Transportation (TxDOT) call for the construction of a runway 4,780 ft. long, just west of the current landing strip. Construction on the runway is slated to begin in the near future.

Deputy County Clerk Mary Ann Gonzalez then read the minutes of the previous meeting, which were approved as read.

Next, Richard Kent, owner of a local auto supply store, met with the commissioners. He told the men that he could save the county money on the purchase of oil filters and air filters and hoped the county would consider purchasing the products locally. Kent presented a price list so the commissioners so they could compare prices on the filters the county is purchasing now and those he is offering to sell the county. The men thanked Kent for his time and said they would ask Sheriff David Doran and Road Supt. Clay Burleson to purchase locally, if the price and product were competitive.

The commissioners then received bids for the delivery of one transport load each of diesel fuel and unleaded gasoline. Griffin Fuel of Eldorado submitted the only bid for unleaded gasoline at $1.052 per gallon. The men voted unanimously to award that bid to Griffin Fuel. There were two bids for diesel fuel. Griffin Fuel at 90.7¢ and Regal Oil at 87.06¢. The men voted unanimously to award the diesel fuel bid to Regal Oil.

In other business the commissioners reaffirmed their support for the Port-to-Plains initiative, a lobbying effort headed by the City of Lubbock with the goal of extending a 4-lane highway south from Lubbock, through San Angelo, Eldorado and Sonora to Del Rio.

Before adjourning, the commissioners reviewed the proposed budget and subsequent tax rate for fiscal year 2000 and scheduled the public hearing concerning the budget on September 20th.

Hunters for the Hungry to accept venison donations

AUSTIN — With deer hunting season just around the corner, it's time again for hunters to consider what to do with their game. One option is to donate deer meat to the statewide Hunters for the Hungry program.

"Last year 50,000 pounds of venison were donated to feed our fellow Texans, and this year can be even better," said Stella Rodriguez, executive director of the Texas Association of Community Action Agencies (TACAA), administrators of the program. This low-fat, nutritious meat has been greatly appreciated by the food banks and pantries that serve Texans in need. In addition to the food donation, it's also a great way for hunters to promote a positive aspect of hunting to the community at large, Rodriguez said.

It's very easy for hunters to participate. Hunters simply tag their legally harvested deer, take it to one of the participating meat processing plants around the state and pay a tax-deductible processing fee of $20 per deer. Participating meat processors handle the meat at a fraction of the usual fee, package it and distribute it to established charitable agencies, such as food pantries and soup kitchens. The food banks and pantries receive the venison in frozen plastic 2-pound packets donated by the Harbro Packing Company of Chicago. Donations are covered by the state "Good Faith Donor Act" and by the federal "Emerson Good Samaritan Act."

TACAA, with funding from the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs, has worked with Hunters for the Hungry program for almost 10 years. This includes operation of the toll-free hotline (800) 992-9767, where hunters or other interested parties can call to find the participating processors in their area, for program information, or to request a brochure about the program. Currently there are 100 participating processors, but additional meat processors are needed in many parts of the state. The hotline will also provide information to processors who are interested in joining the program.

Dr. Lee Jan, director of the Meat Safety Assurance Division of the Texas Department of Health (TDH), suggests that hunters, processors and food providers should all remember that "the objective of the Hunters for the Hungry program is to provide a healthy protein source to the less fortunate. We must rely on all participants to contribute to the assurance that the venison we distribute is indeed safe for human food."

In addition to hunters, processors and food providers, other organizations have contributed to the success of the program. The End Hunger Network of Houston, the Texas Association of Second Harvest Food Banks, the Texas Wildlife Association, the Exotic Wildlife Association, Texas Parks and Wildlife, TDH and Housing and Community Affairs all provided valuable information and support over the years. Any volunteer organizations, corporate sponsors or processors that are interested in working with the Hunters for the Hungry program are encouraged to contact either Mike Rhodes or Kerrin Lemieux of the Texas Association of Community Action Agencies at (800) 992-9767.
